The Urban Coalition / Federal Bar Building West / 1819 H Street, N.W. Washington, D. C. / 20006

Steering Committee Co-chairmen: Andrew Heiskell / A. Philip Randolph

October 28, 1967

Mr. Edwin Stanfield
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsythe Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Ed:

Thanks for your clip on the Atlanta Coalition. I understand that the situation is scheduled to improve with the addition of other people to the steering group.

Keep me posted.

Cordially,

John Feild
National Coordinator

National Coordinators: John Feild / Ron M. Linton
Telephone 293-1530

National Steering Committee

I. W. ABEL, President, United Steelworkers, Pittsburgh

THE HONORABLE IVAN ALLEN, JR., Mayor of Atlanta

ARNOLD ARONSON, Executive Secretary, Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, Washington, D.C.

ROY ASH, President, Litton Industries, Beverly Hills

THE HONORABLE JOSEPH M. BARR, Mayor of Pittsburgh; President, U. S. Conference of Mayors

THE HONORABLE JEROME P. CAVANAUGH, Mayor of Detroit

FREDERICK J. CLOSE, Chairman of the Board, Aluminum Company of America, Pittsburgh

THE HONORABLE JOHN F. COLLINS, Mayor of Boston

THE HONORABLE RICHARD J. DALEY, Mayor of Chicago

THE MOST REV. JOHN F. DEARDEN, Archbishop of Detroit

GILBERT W. FITZHUGH, President, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, New York

DR. ARTHUR FLEMMING, President, University of Oregon, President, National Council of Churches, New York

HENRY FORD II, Chairman, Ford Motor Company, Detroit

THE HONORABLE MILTON GRAHAM, Mayor of Phoenix

ANDREW HEISKELL, Chairman of the Board, Time, Inc., Chairman, Urban America Inc., New York

JOSEPH D. KEENAN, Secretary, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Washington, D.C.

THE REV. DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR., President, Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Atlanta

THE HONORABLE JOHN V. LINDSAY, Mayor of New York

GEORGE MEANY, President, AFL-CIO, Washington, D.C.

J. IRWIN MILLER, Chairman, Cummins Engine Company, Columbus (Indiana)

THE HONORABLE ARTHUR NAFTALIN, Mayor of Minneapolis

GERALD L. PHILLIPPE, Chairman of the Board, General Electric Company, New York

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, President, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, New York

WALTER REUTHER, President, United Auto Workers, President, Citizens Crusade Against Poverty, Detroit

DAVID ROCKEFELLER, President, Chase Manhattan Bank, New York

JAMES ROUSE, President, The Rouse Company, President, Urban America Inc., Baltimore

RABBI JACOB P. RUDIN, President, Synagogue Council of America, New York

THEODORE SCHLESINGER, President, Allied Stores Corporation, New York

ASA T. SPAULDING, President, North Carolina Mutual Insurance Company, Durham

DAVID SULLIVAN, President, Service Employees International Union, Washington, D.C.

THE HONORABLE JAMES H. J. TATE, Mayor of Philadelphia, President, National League of Cities

JOHN WHEELER, President, Mechanics and Farmers Bank, Durham, President, Southern Regional Council

ROY WILKINS, Executive Director, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, New York

WHITNEY YOUNG, JR., Executive Director, National Urban League, New York

JOHN FEILD, U. S. Conference of Mayors, National Coordinator

RON M. LINTON, Urban America Inc., National Coordinator

The Urban Coalition / Federal Bar Building West / 1819 H Street, N.W. Washington, D. C. / 20006

Steering Committee Co-chairmen: Andrew Heiskell / A. Philip Randolph

December 29, 1967

Dear Friend:

You have already received an invitation to attend the one-day planning conference on Mobilization of Urban Coalitions which The Urban Coalition is convening on January 12, 1968 at New York University-Loeb Student Center (566 LaGuardia Place, Washington Square, New York City).

The program will include the following:

8:30-9:30 am — Registration - Loeb Student Center

9:30-10:15 am — Opening General Session

Presiding: Andrew Heiskell

Speaker: James F. Oates, Jr.
Chairman of the Board
Equitable Life Assurance Society

10:15-12:00 pm — Mobilization Workshops

All workshops will deal with the same series of topics. The morning workshops will deal with methods of organizing local coalitions.

12:15 pm — Luncheon Session

Presiding: A. Philip Randolph

Speaker: Honorable John V. Lindsay
Mayor, City of New York

National Coordinators: John Feild / Ron M. Linton
Telephone 293-1530

2:00 pm	Mobilization Workshops The afternoon workshops will deal with the development of task force activity at the community level in counterpart to the national level task forces on specific urban problems.
4:15 pm	Concluding General Session
5:00 pm	Adjournment

Chairing workshops and acting as resource panel members will be leaders from business, labor, civil rights, local government, and religion such as Andrew Biemiller, Legislative Director, AFL-CIO, Arnold Aronson, Executive Secretary, Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, Dr. Kenneth Wright, Vice President-Chief Economist, Life Insurance Association of America, and Gloster B. Current, Director of Branches and Field Administration, N.A.A.C.P.

To assist us in completing conference arrangements, we would appreciate your notifying us via the enclosed card if you will be attending. We need to receive such notification no later than Tuesday, January 9, 1968.

We hope to see you in New York.

Sincerely,

Andrew Heiskell

Andrew Heiskell
Co-Chairman

A. Philip Randolph
Co-Chairman

Encl: RSVP Card

EASTERN REGIONAL CONFERENCE
"MOBILIZING URBAN COALITIONS"
NEW YORK UNIVERSITY, Loeb Student Center
566 West Broadway, Washington Square, N.Y., N.Y.

( ) I will attend the Conference on Friday, January 12, 1968.

NAME: _____

FIRM: _____

ADDRESS: _____

_____

PLEASE REPLY NO LATER THAN JANUARY 9.

FIRST CLASS
Permit No. 37078
Washington, D. C.

BUSINESS REPLY MAIL
No Postage Stamp Necessary if Mailed in U.S.

Postage will be paid by

The Urban Coalition

Federal Bar Building West / 1819 H Street, N.W.

Washington, D. C. / 20006

agency file - URBAN COALITION

The Urban Coalition / ACTION REPORT

Federal Bar Building West / 1819 H Street, N.W. / Washington, D. C. / 20006
National Coordinators: John Feild / Ron M. Linton

January 2, 1968

The Urban Coalition ends 1967 -- and the first four months of its existence -- with a feeling of solid accomplishment and a high degree of optimism for the future. The Washington office has been established and staffed ... Task Forces, manned by many of the country's most talented and concerned people, are already producing effectively ... Local coalitions have been formed, or are being organized, in many critical areas ... press and public support of the concept of the Coalition and its goals are strong. For many people the Coalition has become a symbol of hope; others remain skeptical. Everyone is waiting to see if the powerful forces represented in the Coalition can indeed "turn the country around" and solve the crisis in the cities. We think they can, and will. We can report that in the dead of winter the individuals who came together in a common commitment in the heat of August have lost none of their concern, determination and sense of urgency. The hard work of program building goes on. The country watches -- and waits.

PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT AND ENTREPRENEURSHIP

More than 200 participants met in Atlanta on December 13 for a very successful one-day session on private employment. Businessmen from eastern and southern states had been invited to exchange information and practical program ideas. They heard Gerald L. Phillippe, chairman of the board of the General Electric Company and co-chairman of the Task Force deliver a forceful address on the responsibility of private business in providing jobs and training for the so-called "unemployables". Other general session speakers included Mayor Ivan Allen, Jr. of Atlanta, William Flynn, director of the STEP Program for the National Association of Manufacturers, Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick, executive director of the Opportunities Industrialization Center Institute of Philadelphia, and Augustus H. Sterne, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

A similar regional meeting will be held in Phoenix, Arizona on January 17. The meeting date for the regional meeting in Kansas City, Missouri has been changed from January 24 to February 21.

PUBLIC SERVICE EMPLOYMENT AND URBAN LEGISLATION

Millions of people tuned in to President Johnson's television interview on all three major networks on December 19 heard the President make a strong plea for job opportunities for all Americans through a combination of private and public programs. We thought you would be interested in comparing the President's statement with the goal contained in the Urban Coalition's Statement of Principles adopted at the Emergency Convocation:

The President	Coalition Goal
There are some half million unemployed, hard-core unemployed, in our principal cities. We just have to go and find jobs for them. I am going to call in the businessmen of America and say one of two things have to happen: You have to help me go out and find jobs for these people, or we are going to have to find jobs in the Government for them and offer every one of them a job. I think that is one thing that could be done. I think that will have to be done, as expensive as it is.	Government and business must accept responsibility to provide all Americans with opportunity to earn an adequate income. Private industry must greatly accelerate its efforts to recruit, train, and hire the hard-core unemployed. When the private sector is unable to provide employment to those who are both able and willing to work, then in a free society the government must of necessity assume the responsibility and act as the employer of last resort or must assure adequate income for those who are unable to work.

The press interpreted the President's statement as an important new policy position on the government's responsibility. At a press conference the following day, Rep. Carl D. Perkins (Ky.), chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee said he would support whatever bill in the field of employment the President sends to Congress next year. Providing jobs for those who can't find private employment, he said, "is the proper role for government".

EDUCATIONAL DISPARITIES

Despite bad weather that closed the Detroit airport for several hours on December 18, seven members of the Educational Disparities Task Force were able to get together for a scheduled meeting. They held a spirited discussion of the problems which exist in this area and began concentration on those which they felt the Coalition could effectively combat. The Task Force will meet again at 2:30 p.m. on January 8 at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington.

LOCAL COALITIONS

Encouragement and assistance in the formation of local urban coalitions continues to receive high priority. During December Washington D. C., Boston, Baltimore, Plainfield, N. J., Stanford and Bridgeport, Connecticut announced plans for local coalitions.

Washington Mayor Walter E. Washington said in a public announcement that citizens have called for the organization of a local coalition "in terms of urgency" generated by the August Emergency Convocation. He emphasized that the local effort must have the support and participation of the Virginia and Maryland suburbs.

The next regional mobilization conference will be held in New York City on January 12 -- at New York University's Loeb Center.

EQUAL HOUSING

Plans are in progress for a National Action Session on Equal Housing Opportunities to be held in Chicago at the Conrad Hilton Hotel on January 18. The Task Force has concentrated on the completion of program development papers.

COMMUNICATION AND PUBLIC SUPPORT

Two well-illustrated publications are in the works and will soon be mailed to those interested in the work of the Coalition. The first is a report, including the texts of major addresses, on the Mobilization Conference held in Chicago on October 17. The second will be a similar publication reporting on the Private Employment Conference held in Atlanta on December 13.

HOUSING, RECONSTRUCTION AND INVESTMENT

Progress continued on the major working paper being prepared by the Task Force as a guide for the Coalition in the development of a long-range program.

STEERING COMMITTEE

Unavoidable scheduling problems for several of the principals on the Steering Committee resulted in a postponement of the meeting scheduled for December 18 in Detroit to January 8 in Washington, D. C. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Mayflower Hotel.

(agency) URBAN COALITION

Vol. 1 • No. 6 • February 1968

THE URBAN COALITION ACTION REPORT

Published by The Urban Coalition • Federal Bar Building West • 1819 H St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006

Coalition Urges Congress

Move Now on Urgent City Problems

Andrew Heiskell (center) answers question at Washington press conference. Other Coalition participants were (left to right): Arnold Aronson, executive secretary, Leadership Conference on Civil Rights; Joseph D. Keenan, secretary, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Norman Hill, representing Coalition Co-Chairman A. Philip Randolph; Mayor James Tate of Philadelphia; and Christian Herter, Jr., chairman of the New York Urban Coalition and vice president of Mobil Oil Company.

Spokesmen for The Urban Coalition urged the Administration and Congress last month to "move without delay" on a wide range of programs to ease the crisis in the cities.

Coalition Co-Chairman Andrew Heiskell, chairman of the board of Time, Inc., called a Washington press conference to emphasize 1968 legislative goals.

In a statement, also signed by Co-Chairman A. Philip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO, Heiskell said "the needs are massive and urgent, the hour is late, and the times are perilous."

In response to a question on where Congress would find money for needed programs, Heiskell said; "It would be cheaper to do it now than to wait for the cities to to blow next summer."

Text of Statement

The text of the legislative statement follows:

"Specifically, we call upon the Congress and the Administration to move without delay to provide solutions to urgent problems in the following areas:

"Definite steps should be taken now to assure a job for every citizen able and willing to work. We endorse and strongly support a three-part approach to this national challenge:

"(1) Private employers must greatly expand their efforts to employ and train the so-called "unemployables." The Urban Coalition will intensify its efforts to enlist business and industry in this effort.

"(2) The federal government and private employers acting in expanding partnership must provide jobs for the unemployed and better opportunity for the underemployed. We would support, for example, the President's current proposal to more fully reimburse employers for the additional expense of employing and training the hard-core unemployed. We emphasize, however, that this measure is only a partial solution to the problem and that much more must be done.

(3) Congress must pass legislation in this session to provide government-generated employment to every citizen able and willing to work but unable to find private employment—not make-work but meaningful, socially useful jobs, which would provide public services now lacking in hospitals, libraries, recreation programs and other civic services.

The Administration's Open Housing legislation should be enacted into law now.

The Administration's Safe Streets and Crime Control Act and Juvenile Delinquency amendments were drastically altered in the House of Representatives last year to channel the programs and funds through a state planning and allocation process which would delay and frustrate their effectiveness. The original Administration version of these bills should be passed by the Senate so as to mount an efficient and effective attack on the root causes of violence, crime and delinquency, coupled with the development of improved local law enforcement.

A supplementary appropriation bill should be immediately introduced and enacted to fund fully the anti-poverty programs as authorized for this fiscal year.

"The needs are massive and urgent, the hour is late, the times are perilous"

Programs for low and moderate income housing, urban development, model cities, mass transportation and community facilities should be extended, expanded and adequately funded now.

The repressive welfare program amendments enacted last year, penalizing children born into one-parent homes and shifting the financing burden to local government, should be repealed immediately.

We know these legislative aims are more easily stated than accomplished. But we also know the needs are massive and urgent, the hour is late, and the times are perilous.

The substantial number of communities forming counterpart Urban Coalitions in all parts of the country is strong evidence that the citizens of our urban areas share the Urban Coalition's concern and its commitment.

With the commitment of its citizens, this nation has the capacity now to resolve its urban problems. A reordering of priorities and a renewal of national commitment to the well being of all citizens is overdue. We pledge our full support for the legislative action required.

300 Attend National Action Conference On Open Housing

Daley

Young

Cook

More than 300 people attended a National Action Conference on Equal Housing sponsored by the Coalition in Chicago last month.

Major speakers were Mayor Richard J. Daley, James W. Cook, President of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company, and Whitney Young, Jr., Executive Director of the National Urban League.

Concurrent workshop sessions were devoted to Fair Housing Legislation, Suburban Housing Development for Low and Moderate Incomes and the Role of Voluntary Programs to Achieve Fair Housing.

At the concluding afternoon general session, the Conference adopted recommendations from the Workshops to:

★ Express support for Fair Housing legislation now before the U.S. Senate (S. 1358), and for state and local Fair Housing legislation.

★ Urge The Urban Coalition to call on Congress to expand funding for rent supplements and use them in conjunction with Federal low market rate interest programs.

★ Urge the Federal government, in cooperation with state governments, to pass legislation to permit funding of tax abatements, with the Federal government assuming up to 50% of the tax abatements necessary to develop 221 (d) (3) housing.

★ Urge federal and state governments to provide seed money to non-profit entities to initiate housing development, and seek waiver of "Workable Program" requirements for suburban developments.

★ Urge The Urban Coalition to call on federal and state governments to adopt legislation modifying zoning laws to permit construction of low and moderate income housing in the suburbs.

The Action Conference was coordinated by Edward Holmgren, executive director of the Chicago Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities.

Executive Committee to Meet in New York City

The new Executive Committee of the Coalition Steering Committee will hold its first meeting on February 9 in New York City.

The Steering Committee action in establishing the Executive Committee specified the proportionate representation of each segment of the Coalition, but permitted each group to select its own individual members.

The Steering Committee also stated that each of those designated to serve on the Executive Committee should subscribe to three methods of solving urban problems: What the private sector can do on its own; what the private sector can do in concert with government; and what the government must do to meet needs beyond the reach of private efforts.

The Executive Committee was instructed to consider the permanent organizational structure and program of the Coalition and make appropriate recommendations to the Steering Committee.

Following are the individuals designated to date to serve on the Executive Committee:

Business: Joseph H. Allen, president, McGraw-Hill Publications; Frederick J. Close, chairman of the board, Aluminum Company of America; J. Irwin Miller, chairman of the board, Cummins Engine Company; and Theodore Schlesinger, president, Allied Stores Corporation.

Labor: George Meany, president, AFL-CIO; and Walter Reuther, president, United Auto Workers.

Church: Dr. Arthur Fleming, president, National Council of Churches; two additional church representatives are to be named.

Civil Rights: Arnold Aronson, executive secretary, Leadership Council on Civil Rights; and Whitney M. Young, Jr., executive director, National Urban League.

Local Government: Mayor Joseph M. Barr of Pittsburgh; and Mayor James H. J. Tate of Philadelphia.

The Co-Chairmen of The Urban Coalition, Andrew Heiskell and A. Philip Randolph, are ex-officio members of the Executive Committee.

"In his NEW YORK TIMES column of February 1, Tom Wicker described The Urban Coalition as "A group of the most powerful and public-spirited private interests in the nation." He added that the Coalition "is certainly on sound ground in urging immediate, emergency action to cope with the hard-core unemployed.""

Coalition Holds Meetings In New York and Phoenix

Mayor John Lindsay addresses luncheon session at New York meeting. At left is Vernon Jordan, session chairman and executive director of the Southern Regional Council's Voter Education Project.

In New York City last month, at a regional meeting on mobilizing local urban coalitions, three nationally-known leaders in different fields made striking statements on the urgency of city problems:

James F. Oates, Jr., chairman of the board, Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States: "Now is the time to act. Decisively. To cut through red tape. When human lives hang on whether or not there is a roof or shelter, how can we, the richest people in the world, let more time run by."

Mayor John Lindsay of New York: "It will make little difference what we do abroad, what we do about balance of payments, what we do in Vietnam, if the country is burning down at the edges."

Whitney Young, Jr., executive director of the National Urban League: "As important as is our pledge, far more important will be our performance. It will not be our promises that history will hold us accountable for. It will be our deeds."

The New York meeting attracted leadership from 82 cities in 21 states, despite near-zero weather.

In Phoenix the following week 175 people registered for a Western regional action meeting on expanding private employment. During the concentrated one-day session businessmen from seven states exchanged experiences and probed for answers to the problems of hiring and training the so-called "unemployables".

The Phoenix meeting was the second in a series of three dealing with private employment. The first was held in Atlanta on December 13 and the third will be held in Kansas City on February 21.

"The Country Watches . . . And Waits"

At the beginning of last month, The Urban Coalition National Coordinators, Ron Linton and John Feild, began their weekly report to the Steering Committee with the following evaluation:

"The Urban Coalition ends 1967—and the first four months of its existence—with a feeling of solid accomplishment and a high degree of optimism for the future. The Washington office has been established and staffed . . . Task Forces, manned by many of the country's most talented and concerned people, are already producing effectively . . . Local coalitions have been formed, or are being formed, in many critical areas . . . Press and public support of the concept of the Coalition and its goals are strong.

"For many people the Coalition has become a symbol of hope; other remain skeptical. Everyone is waiting to see if the powerful forces represented in the Coalition can indeed 'turn the country around' and solve the crisis in the cities.

"We think they can, and will. We can report that in the dead of winter the individuals who came together in a common commitment in the heat of August have lost none of their concern, determination and sense of urgency. The hard work of program building goes on. The country watches—and waits."

The Administration's decision to cut $75-million from last year's program for providing summer jobs for youth in the slums was announced on the same day the Youth Opportunity Conference sponsored by the President's Council on Youth Opportunity opened in Washington.

COALITION STAFF CHANGES

The Coalition has announced two staff changes, effective February 1.

John Feild, who has served as one of the two National Co-Coordinators, resumes his full time duties as Director of the Community Relations Service of the United States Conference of Mayors. Feild had been on loan to the Coalition from the Conference.

Ron M. Linton, will continue to serve as National Coordinator.

Christopher Mould becomes Deputy National Coordinator and Staff Director. Mould, who holds a Doctor of Law degree from the University of Chicago, joined the Coalition staff in September, 1967 as Associate National Coordinator.

Local Coalitions Being Organized In 27 Cities

Local urban coalitions have been organized, or are in the process of being organized, in 27 cities. Many other cities have expressed active interest and have requested information and help.

These are the 27: Atlanta, Ga., Baltimore, Md., Boston, Mass., Bridgeport, Conn., Dayton, Ohio, Denver, Colo., Detroit, Mich., Fresno, Calif., Gary, Ind., Huntsville, Ala., Indianapolis, Ind., Joilet, Ill., Kansas City, Kan., Kansas City, Mo., Los Angeles, Calif., Minneapolis, Minn., New York, N.Y., Norfolk, Va., Oakland, Calif., Pasadena, Calif., Plainfield, N.J., Riverside, Calif., Saginaw, Mich., San Diego, Calif., Stamford, Conn., Tacoma, Wash., Washington, D.C., and Winston-Salem, N.C.

THE URBAN COALITION ACTION REPORT

Federal Bar Building West
1819 H Street, N.W.,
Washington, D.C. 20006

BULK RATE
U.S. POSTAGE
PAID
Washington, D.C.
PERMIT 43234

Edward Stanfield
Dir. of Field Activities
Southern Reg. Council
5 Forsyth St., N.W.
Atlanta. Ga. 30303

CR

Agency file URBAN COALITION

Vol. 1 • No. 7 • March 1968

THE URBAN COALITION ACTION REPORT

Published by The Urban Coalition • Federal Bar Building West • 1819 H St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006

John Gardner New Head of Urban Coalition

Former HEW Secretary Takes Executive Post

Co-Chairmen Andrew Heiskell and A. Philip Randolph announced last month that John W. Gardner had accepted the Executive Committee's request that he become chief executive officer of the Urban Coalition.

Mr. Gardner, who recently resigned as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, assumed his Coalition duties on March 1. He will serve concurrently as a consultant to the Carnegie Corporation of New York, with offices in Washington, but will be on loan to the Coalition, to which he will devote a major portion of his time.

In their announcement, the Co-Chairmen said the Coalition's Executive Committee agreed "enthusiastically and unanimously" to ask Mr. Gardner to take the new position. Of Mr. Gardner, they said: "Only a man with the exceptional stature and the rare combination of executive ability, intellect and idealism of John Gardner can provide the leadership needed to achieve the Urban Coalition's goals."

Mr. Gardner said he had discussed the new position with President Johnson and "he urged and encouraged me to accept." The day following the announcement, the President said he was "gratified" by the new appointment and had assured Mr. Gardner of White House cooperation.

The new Coalition executive was president of the Carnegie Corporation at the time of his appointment to the Cabinet by President Johnson on July 27, 1965. A native Californian, he holds A.B. and M.A. degrees from Stanford University, a Ph.D. degree from the University of California, and honorary degrees from a number of other colleges and universities. Before World War II he taught psychology at the University of California, Connecticut College for Women and Mount Holyoke College.

Mr. Gardner has been chairman of a number of Presidential task forces and commissions. He holds the U.S. Air Force Exceptional Service Award and the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the highest civil honor in the United States.

He is editor of President John F. Kennedy's book To Turn the Tide, and is the author of the books Excellence and Self-Renewal.

John W. Gardner

TEXT OF GARDNER STATEMENT

Mr. Gardner issued the following statement after accepting the Urban Coalition position:

"The hour is late. It is time for a major mobilization of private sector leadership to cope with the troubles that afflict the Nation.

"Every serious American understands the gravity of the problems confronting our cities today. Every thoughtful person comprehends the social consequences of violence and destruction on the scale of last summer's riots.

"Turning our backs on the problem won't help. Business as usual won't help. Neither hatred nor coercion on either side of the conflict will move us toward a solution.

"The cities cannot solve their problems without better mobilization of the talent, resources and leadership that exist in the cities themselves. We need new forms of collaboration between the various leadership elements in the city—city hall, business, labor, minority leadership and so on. The most significant effort to produce such collaboration today is the Urban Coalition."

President Johnson Proposes Multi-Billion Dollar Urban Program

On February 22—Washington's Birthday—President Johnson sent his "Crisis of the Cities" message to Congress. It called for a multi-billion dollar program to attack basic city problems.

The heart of the President's message was a proposal for enactment of a "Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968". This Act would set as a national goal the construction of 26 million new homes and apartments over the next 10 years.

Six million of these would replace what the President called "the shameful substandard units of misery where more than 20 million Americans still live". This would be 10 times the replacement rate of the last 10 years.

The President asked for authorization for only the first five years of the program—covering the construction and rehabilitation of 2.35 million units with $2.34 billion of contracting authority.

For fiscal 1969, 300,000 units benefiting one million people would be authorized. (See table for a breakdown of these units by type.)

Breakdown of 300,000 low and moderate-income housing units projected for fiscal 1969 in President's Message on the cities, Feb. 22, 1968.

Home ownership
Proposed new interest rate subsidy sales program, Sec. 235:	85,000
Rehabilitation loans and grants	15,000
	100,000	100,000
Public Low-rent Housing:		75,000
Rent supplement housing:		35,000
Rental
Existing below-market interest rate program, FHA:	38,000
Proposed new interest rate subsidy rental program, Sec. 236:	40,000
Direct loans for elderly:	12,000
	90,000	90,000
		300,000

An estimated 54,000 units would be through rehabilitation, the balance through new construction.

Private Sector Involvement

Most of the proposals in the Act are keyed closely to the cooperation of the private sector.

The President called for "a new partnership between business and Government" and called the commitment of the life insurance industry to set aside one billion dollars of investment funds for low-cost housing a "first outline" of that partnership.

The government's role, the President said, is to stimulate private energy and local action, provide capital where needed, guarantee financing and offer other assistance.

The message also asked Congress to authorize:

- $2 billion for fiscal 1970 and 1971 for model cities grants. The model cities request for fiscal 1969 is only $500 million.
- $1.4 billion for urban renewal projects in fiscal 1970, with an increase of $350 million in fiscal 1969 for urban renewal related solely to model cities programs.

Other Features

The President again asked for passage of his temporary tax surcharge proposal, strongly supported his funding request for the Office of Economic Opportunity, and again asked for passage of fair housing legislation.

One of the new proposals in the message called for the establishment of a cooperative federal-state-industry program to provide adequate "inner city" insurance protection.

The President also covered urban transportation problems in the message. He recommended an authorization of $230 million for fiscal 1970 "so cities can begin now to plan the improvement of their mass transit systems and service to the people."

He said he would shortly submit a reorganizational plan transferring to the Department of Transportation the major urban transit grant, loan and related research functions now in the Department of Housing and Urban Development. This plan, however, would retain HUD responsibility for transportation planning at the local level.

Despite the scope, cost and complexity of the proposals, the President did not claim they would cure the ills of the cities.

He said: "no one can say how long it will take, or how much of our fortune will eventually be committed."

COALITION PLANS NATIONAL CONFERENCES

The Urban Coalition is making plans for a national conference of local coalitions in Washington on April 2, with tentative plans for a national legislative conference on employment the following day.

All cities which have formed local coalitions are urged to send representatives to the first day's conference. It is designed to provide an interchange of information, experience and problem-solving techniques in the development of local coalition programs, and also to provide an opportunity for the locals to select representatives to the Coalition steering committee.

Local coalition representatives will be invited to join those from other segments of the Coalition for the proposed legislative conference.

The theme of the legislative conference would be the necessity of legislation to bring about full employment opportunities. Included in the consideration would be legislative proposals for full-time and summer employment.

Both conferences would be held at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington.

Coalition Holds Private Employment Meeting in Kansas City

More than 200 people from 13 states participated in a one-day action conference on private employment in Kansas City, Mo., this week. The meeting was the last in a series of three dealings with private employment problems and opportunities.

J. A. Hosford, general manager of Western Electric Company's plant at Lee's Summit, Missouri, described the imaginative employment program being carried out by the Kansas City (Missouri and Kansas) Urban Coalition. It features pledges by major employers to hire and train "marginally-qualified" people. The goal is about 1000 jobs for such people each year.

Both Hosford and Francis Keppel, chairman of the board of General Learning Corporation, pointed out that there is some degree of risk for business in carrying out such employment programs. But Keppel added: "The disadvantaged residents of the big city ghettos are proving that underneath all of that misery and desperation lies a great deal of intelligence and latent ability just yearning for a chance to express itself."

Mayors Ilus W. Davis of Kansas City, Missouri, and Joseph H. McDowell of Kansas City, Kansas, welcomed the delegates.

J. A. Hosford

Mayor Davis

Francis Keppel

Participants in Kansas City meeting included (left to right): Christopher Mould, the Urban Coalition; Rev. Thomas J. Ritter, Opportunities Industrialization Center; and William Flynn, National Association of Manufacturers.

Action Notes . . .

James F. Oates, Jr., chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States has accepted an invitation to become a member of the Urban Coalition Steering Committee. The press of other commitments has made necessary the resignation of Steering Committee member Gilbert W. Fitzhugh, president, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

* * *

Plans for a "Rural Coalition", described as a counterpart to the Urban Coalition, were discussed at a recent meeting of the newly-organized National Conference of Anti-Poverty Agencies at Columbia University in New York.

* * *

The Boston Urban Coalition reports good progress. At a February meeting, Robert Slater, president, John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, was elected chairman, three task forces were named, and a committee appointed to recommend a permanent organizational structure.

* * *

Mitchell Sviridoff, vice president and director of the Division of National Affairs, the Ford Foundation, described the responsibility of foundations in the urban crisis in a recent New York Times interview. Foundations, he said, must be "active participants, supplying not only financing but becoming actively involved in new enterprises". He said the Urban Coalition offers "our greatest hope today, not only in the city, but nationally". Mr. Sviridoff assumed the Ford Foundation post on January 1, after serving as New York City's Human Resources Administrator.

Coalition Business Leaders Support Civil Rights Bill

The following is the text of a telegram sent to each member of the Senate on Monday morning, February 26, prior to the vote on the motion to invoke cloture in the civil rights debate:

"URGE YOU VOTE FOR CLOTURE AND SUPPORT PASSAGE OF CIVIL RIGHTS BILL WITH FAIR HOUSING AMENDMENT. OPPOSE ANY EFFORT TO PUT ASIDE BILL BEFORE SENATE HAS OPPORTUNITY TO VOTE ON MERITS."

Signed:
Joseph Allen, McGraw-Hill Publications
J. Irwin Miller, Cummins Engine Company
James F. Oates, Equitable Life Assurance Society
James Rouse, The Rouse Company
Asa T. Spaulding, North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company
Business Members, The Urban Coalition Steering Committee.

The effort of the businessmen gave strong support to other segments of the Coalition who have been leading the fight for civil rights and fair housing.

Co-Chairman Andrew Heiskell addressed a two-day organizational meeting of the Philadelphia Urban Coalition last month and National Coordinator Ron Linton spoke to the Tacoma, Washington, Coalition. Latest city to report the formation of a local coalition is Englewood, N.J.

THE URBAN COALITION ACTION REPORT

Federal Bar Building West
1819 H Street, N.W.,
Washington, D.C. 20006

BULK RATE
U.S. POSTAGE
PAID
Washington, D.C.
PERMIT 43234

Edward Stanfield CR
Dir. of Field Activities
Southern Reg. Council
5 Forsyth St., N.W.
Atlanta, Ga. 30303

Forming Urban Coalitions

U.S. IMPLEMENTING MODEL CITIES BILL

URBAN PROBLEMS

Communities May Apply for Project Planning Funds

1/12/67

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE Jr.

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11—The Administration's major program to improve life in the cities—the Demonstration Cities Act of 1966—got under way today with the announcement that communities may now begin applying for planning funds.

The announcement was made at a news conference called by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Robert C. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver also released detailed guidelines setting forth the aims of the program and the criteria that cities must meet in order to qualify for funds.

The guidelines, which also include instructions on how to prepare a proposal, are being mailed, in the form of a 31-page pamphlet, to 3,500 public officials who have expressed an interest in the program.

Housing officials predicted that applications would begin arriving at the department in early February, and that the housing agency would probably begin approving them in April.

Roughly 350 cities have expressed strong interest in participating in the program so far, and officials are preparing for applications from these and perhaps as many as 1,000 more.

However, the program is geared to accommodate 70 to 80 cities at the outside. These will be selected not on a "first come, first served" basis but on the basis of the excellence of their plans.

H. Ralph Taylor, assistant secretary in charge of the program, emphasized that initial grants would be for planning purposes only.

Congress appropriated $11-million for this purpose for the fiscal year 1967, which ends next June 30. It authorized $900-million covering the fiscal years 1968 and 1969 for "execution" funds to carry out the plans, but so far none of this has been appropriated.

President Johnson said in his State of the Union message last night that he hoped Congress would appropriate the $400-million authorized for fiscal 1968. Congressional observers have predicted that he may have a difficult time getting it, given the somewhat more conservative disposition of the present Congress and the cost of the War in Vietnam.

Under the Demonstration Cities Act—known in Administration circles as the "model cities" program—communities select one or more badly blighted neighborhoods and submit a plan for its rejuvenation.

The plan is supposed to include not only housing for different income groups, with emphasis on those at the lower end of the scale, but also the health, welfare, recreation and other social services necessary to change the total environment of the neighborhood's residents.

The New York Times

KICKS OFF PROGRAM: Robert C. Weaver, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, announced communities could now apply for funds under demonstration cities program.

URBAN PROBLEMS

City Will Relocate Its Business Area

By DICK HEBERT

One major Georgia city is about to uproot its entire downtown business district and plant it back down somewhere else.

The word came from Georgia State College professor Dr. Robert K. Brown in a talk to a day-long meeting of city planners and builders trying to find a way to save the cities of the state.

But Dr. Brown wasn't telling anyone where the Georgia city is, or when it will happen. "I think it's still confidential," he told a reporter. "But I can tell you it isn't a Blakely" — or any other comparable town.

He had used the city-uprooting example to demonstrate the threat of numbers pressing American cities. He said that 225 million Americans will live in cities by the turn of the century, more than double today's number, and these people will need 41 million acres of city land — more than the total acreage of New England.

The South, he said, will get the "greatest absolute increase" in the coming years and not all will come to "the Atlantas, the Houstons, the Jacksonvilles."

He said it is the smaller cities which are blessed by having a chance to prepare for the growth. So far the bigger cities "have been lucky" but can't count on it much longer.

Dr. Brown's was one of a long parade of urgent addresses calling for action to make the downtown at least as appealing as the suburbs now thriving with shopping center activity.

Savannah was repeatedly cited as an example of the best possible city planning when it was planned back in the early 1700s. And by contrast, Marietta was used as one of several examples of "creeping ugliness" by Hubert B. Owens, Landscape Architect Department head at the University of Georgia.

Georgia Tech assistant professor Joseph Smith said city businesses must start offering the same services, accessibility, parking, and "clean, well-lighted" environment that suburban shopping centers do.

Paul Muldawer, an architect and urban designer, said people want to move back downtown from suburbs but must be offered a variety of living spaces and services.

The symposium, at the Marriott Motor Hotel, was sponsored by the Georgia Urban Design Council.

Ben Austin fits another Beltone
JA. 5-8336
..Hearing Aid..

URBAN PROBLEMS

Metropolitan Detroit Branch

American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan

Policy Statement

RE

DETROIT HOUSING COMMISSION POLICIES

AFFECTING APPLICANTS AND TENANTS

Submitted by Committee on Civil Liberties of Children and Youth, Agencies and Institutions Sub-Committee

Prepared by: Allan Becker, Thomas Melican, Abbie Nevison and Joseph Vileno, jr.

Reviewed by: Adrienne James and David Wineman

Date of Submission: March 29, 1967

Adopted April 11, 1967, ACLU Detroit Board

Statement of the Civil Liberties Issues

There exists a lack of procedural safeguards for persons applying for admission to public housing in Detroit. The rights of applicants and tenants are often ignored in the eligibility process. Applicants do not know the specific criteria necessary for determining eligibility for public housing, other than low-income standard. The tenant selection policy contains conditions governing eligibility in addition to the low-income standard, and these conditions are not known by applicants and are often an unwritten part of housing policy.

Complaints have been taken by this Committee from persons who have been rejected because they have children born out of wedlock. Sometimes a mother with one illegitimate child is accepted for public housing, while a mother with two or more illegitimate children is rejected. The consideration of illegitimacy is a regular, though unwritten, part of public housing policy governing tenant selection. Also complainants allege that a prior juvenile record or adult court record is deemed sufficient to disqualify one for public housing. One section of the tenant selection policy lists a lengthy number of adult offenses which disqualify an applicant from admission. Juvenile records are employed in like manner. Another complainant alleged he had been rejected for housing because of his undesirable military discharge. This complaint has since been adjusted after negotiations with housing officials, who advise that consideration of military records is not an official part of tenant selection policy.

When reasons other than overstandard income are the basis for rejecting an applicant, he is not advised officially of the specific grounds for rejection. Sometimes an applicant or tenant is told "off the record" why occupancy is being denied, while often he is not told at all. The absence of an official reason for denial of occupancy makes it very difficult to appeal the decision. In addition to lack of official notification, there is no opportunity for an impartial review of an unfavorable decision as no appeal machinery exists in the selection process, other than to appeal through the levels of officialdom in the housing commission. The experience in the past, admitted by housing officials, is that decisions made on lower levels are usually confirmed at higher levels. Administrative uniformity in tenant selection decisions usually prevails.

Income considerations aside, admission to public housing in Detroit is dependent on the housing officer's subjective assessment of personal or family histories or characteristics of applicants or tenants, without benefit of fair recourse for the aggrieved party.

There are serious civil liberties implication in much of the policy that is used in judging applicants and tenants for occupancy.

The screening procedures which are used by the housing agency, i.e., contacting social agencies, courts, hospitals, etc., to obtain information ignore privacy rights of the applicant. The application form for public housing does not request that a person grant permission to inquire into family background. Yet social agency information, juvenile court information and even police files information is made available to housing officials upon request. Furthermore, during the application period, improper questioning of applicants often occurs. The complainant whose military record was questioned was required to bring to the housing office a transcript of his military court-martial and was also asked by the housing officer why he thought he had a right to be a concientious objector while in the service. We submit that this line of inquiry and curious invasion of privacy has no place in the eligibility process and tends to make personal belief a condition of eligibility.

Mothers with illegitimate children are placed in the position of self-incrimination by disclosing whether their children are illegitimate, the identity of the father and whether a legal marriage is in effect or not. By admitting illegitimacy, they are depriving themselves of admission to public housing. This denial of housing on the basis of illegitimacy compounds injury already done to a child who is branded as a second class citizen at birth. A mother of an illegitimate child is often told that housing is being denied because she has "socially illegitimate children" or because her family is "morally" or "socially" "unstable".[1] In families where all the children are not illegitimate, the child or children who were born out of wedlock, becomes in effect, the reason for the rest of the family being denied decent housing. By what measure can one determine the psychological damage done to such a child within his own family? The societal prejudice against illegitimate children hardly needs the added weight of public agency censure.

Applicants with illegitimate children, by being denied public housing, are deprived of their right to equal treatment under the law that is guaranteed to all citizens.

From a civil liberties point of view, the tenant selection practices of the Detroit Housing Commission often fail to provide equal protection since they submit eligibility to an arbitrary standard that is unclear. Furthermore, due process considerations are ignored in the eligibility determination process. The specific issues are:

1. Arbitrary and vague criteria is often used by the Detroit Housing Commission in determining eligibility for housing.

2. A rejected applicant is not advised officially (either verbally or in writing) of the specific basis for rejection and the application period often takes months before the decision is made.

---

[1]The term "socially illegitimate" refers to a child born to a woman whose legal husband is allegedly not the natural father of said child.

3. A rejected applicant does not have the opportunity for an impartial review and an appeal. (We have recently received assurances from the Detroit Housing Commission that an appeal board would soon be set up.)

4. The investigation process often entails improper questioning and solicitation and gathering of information which constitutes an invasion of privacy rights.

These issues should concern ACLU because they bear directly on the question of rights of persons receiving benefits from government programs. Furthermore, since families with children are beneficiaries of government housing programs, the Committee feels that the civil liberties issues directly involve the rights of children to a decent home. This is especially true in light of the crucial importance of environment in the development of children.

Position of National ACLU

Individual rights to those benefits offered by the government at various levels are of major concern to National ACLU. In June of 1966 at the Biennial Conference held at Stoney Brook, Long Island, the National ACLU in a Plenary Board meeting went on record in opposition to deprivation of rights of beneficiaries of government benefits and applicants for such benefits, including but not limited to:

> The arbitrary deprivation of benefits on grounds of race, size of family, illegitimacy, etc.
>
> Also the lack of procedural safeguards such as:
>
> > Inaccessible regulations
> > No statement of reasons for agency action
> > Lack of fair hearing
> > Denial of appellate review

Some Consideration on Public Housing

Public housing is the difference between decent shelter and sub-standard shelter for many low-income families. Because the poor really have no freedom of choice about the quality of housing they can afford, it is imperative that the precious access to public housing be open to them. Furthermore, the human problems in public housing projects may have been prevented or ameliorated if keener foresight were evidenced in planning housing developments. According to Staughton Lynd, "Some very small changes in Federal regulations regarding physical aspects of public housing projects could make possible some very big changes in their attractiveness".[2]

Housing officials are sensitive to the public's negative view toward housing projects. But Lynd states that:

> "The deepest reason for the public rejection of public housing lies not in its physical inadequacies--after all these pale beside those of the slum--but in the spirit of its administration. The complex requirements for admission, which in some cities extend to inspection of the applicants housekeeping ability; the reporting of changes of income and snooping into bank accounts; the manager's ability to walk into any project apartment at any time; the tenants' inability to do the smallest remodeling of his apartment without official permission; these make the project tenant feel he is treated like a child. Living in a housing project has become one more badge of inferior low-income status along with the drab waiting room of the public clinic, the overcrowded 'shift' at the local public school."[3]

Apparently, the morale of people in public housing will remain poor until low-income families can feel they will be treated with dignity. There exists now a distrust between many people living in public housing and those responsible for management. The continued use of complicated admission requirements, sometimes extending for a period of months before a decision is made and the continued use of exacting and complicated tenancy requirements, only serve to deepen the existing distrust between tenants and management.

We recognize the heavy responsibility charged to those who manage public housing to maintain the best possible living environment for tenants. But we contend that this responsibility should not conflict with nor be met at the expense of, the needs of many low-income persons and families merely because they have other problems. The poor are not merely without sufficient income. Many have personal and social problems that cannot be ignored if meaningful opportunity is to be made available to them. Refusing housing to them because of their concomitant difficulties is clear evidence of a failure to fully appreciate the life-style of many of America's poor who look to government and the larger society to provide an opportunity for a decent life.

The vague criteria and complicated requirements utilized in determining eligibility for public housing often encourages arbitrary decision making by housing officials when assessing applications.

---

[2] Staughton Lynd, "Urban Renewal for Whom", reprint from Commantary (1961) in New Perspectives on Poverty, Shostak and Gomberg, eds., Prentice-Hall Inc., Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey, 1965, p. 116.

[3] Ibid.

Applicants possessing the problem characteristics such as illegitimacy, court records, etc. are often refused merely because they do not fit into the "desirability" pattern which is part of the process of determining who will get along best in public housing projects. This process as noted previously contains arbitrary judgments about personal worth and is not a part of written public housing policy and gives rise to semi-judicial thinking without sufficient evidence.

Furthermore, a tax based public institution can hardly make discriminatory judgments with propriety unless those judgments are supported by hard facts or evidence to indicate that an applicant for instance, for public housing, will be a detriment and danger to his neighbors. The use of a desirability yardstick requires caution and prudence if it is to be used at all, lest it grossly fail to recognize the true needs of those persons whom public housing was initiated to serve and who sorely need decent shelter. At a time when vast urban renewal efforts are forcing many low-income persons into public housing, rigid and inequitable procedures deny occupancy to many.

Mitchell Gordon in his book Sick Cities in speaking of America's urban problems mentioned the St. Louis experiement in screening applicants for public housing. Though St. Louis found fewer social problems were evident because tenants were screened, the editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Russell H. Amberg, noted that the practice of screening was questionable. He stated "that public housing should not be selective, that those excluded were after all often in greatest need of shelter".[4] The New York City relocation program demands that public housing should be available to all who qualify on the basis of income and that efforts should be made to assist problem families to qualify by offering service to them. Dr. Harmon Putter, Ph.D., director of Social Services in New York's relocation program writes "there should be a re-examination of the content of the desirability standard for public housing and consideration should be given to an assessment of potential problems if any, and to assure that necessary services are provided. The Department of Relocation staff seeks to identify problems that prevent acceptance to public housing".[5]

While progressive approaches are called for by many persons involved in housing and serving the poor, the "desirability" standard still prevails. Moreover, it is unclear who is desirable for public housing. It appears that public housing agencies strayed from their original purpose, i.e., providing decent housing for those whose income is insufficient to furnish decent private shelter. This failure to meet professed goals, however, is a characteristic of many bureaucracies who as Selznick says "come to consume an increasing proportion of time on internal activities which, from the point of view of actual behavior, are substituted for professed goals".[6] We submit that "substitution of goals" tends to occur in public housing to the point that having tenants with fewer problems becomes more important to managers then providing housing equally to all who need it.

---

[4]Mitchell Gordon, Sick Cities, MacMillan Co., New York, 1965, p. 392.

[5]"Relocation Demonstration Program", Journal of Housing, vol. #3, March, 1966. A publication of the National Association of Housing and Re-Development Officials.

Tenants are often evicted with good cause if their behavior is clearly disruptive to other tenants. We recognize that such evictions are a necessary part of the housing manager's responsibility to maintain an orderly community. Our contention is that some of the reasons for rejecting such as illegitimacy and a possession of a court record should not be invoked as a basis for rejection before they actually prove to be troublesome. It is reasonable for housing commission to expect that tenants should maintain a decent home and be respectful of their neighbor's rights as well as their own but no amount of screening or "weeding out" is a good substitute for meaningful social services to families with problems if project areas are to ever be satisfying communities.

This is perhaps a crucial time for clarifying the rights of persons living in public housing. As more public housing becomes available to fill the existing shortage, an enlargement of the social and legal privileges of tenants should be affirmed now to prevent future violations.

State of Litigation and Preliminary Comments

For the most part, the courts have followed the pattern of agreeing with decisions made by housing officials on the basis that public housing agencies have "a power to protect" tenants already in housing projects from undesirables. The issue is whether "power to protect" necessarily gives "the protector" the right to deprive others not only of their access to enjoyment of benefits but their civil guarantees as well. A question no doubt pertinent to this issue is whether housing officials alone can determine which individuals are a detriment to the safety and morals of the surrounding community.

Of interest in this regard is the case of Richardson vs the Housing Authority of New Bern, North Carolina, (Civil Action #678, E.D.N.C., 1966) in which the Federal District Court issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting further evictions from public housing, pending trial on the merits of the case. The housing authority in this case was charged with denying admission to and bringing eviction proceedings against mothers with illegitimate children. The tenants were required to sign a "covenant" in their leases that provided that 30 days after the birth of an illegitimate child to the tenant or a member of the tenant's family, the tenant would have to move from the housing project, would waive all notices required by law and would waive all legal proceedings to recover possession. This covenant was enforced by requiring tenants to either move out or to pay a $50 fine upon the birth of an illegitimate child. When the tenants protested the housing order, the authority removed the fine and announced that automatic eviction would take place in the future.

---

[6] Philip Selznick, "An Approach to a Theory of Bureaucracy", American Sociological Review, VIII #1, February, 1943.

The attorneys for the tenants and applicants argued that a fair hearing is required before eviction. The housing authority on the other hand asserted that a lack of federal jurisdiction existed as they had not denied any right or privilege guaranteed by the Constitution. This case is an action involving tenants who have actually not been evicted but tenants who have been threatened with eviction and applicants who have been rejected because of illegitimate children. Decision in this case is pending.

In the case of Manigo vs the New York City Housing Authority (Sup. Ct., Spec. Term. Part 1, New York County, Index #2197, 1966) the Legal Services Unit of Mobilization for Youth filed a complaint against the New York City Housing Authority to obtain admission to public housing for a family who claimed that it was found ineligible on account of a prior record of the husband as a juvenile delinquent. The petitioner alleged she was told "off the record" that she would be denied public housing on account of her husband's record of three minor offenses at ages of 10, 15 and 18. Her application was allowed to expire and she received no formal denial by the Housing Authority on her application. The petition further argued that in practice the Authority did not make its determination of ineligibility known to the applicant nor was she given an opportunity to contest the adverse decision. The Housing Authority's right to deny admission was upheld by the New York Supreme Court. An appeal to the New York Court of Appeal's is planned to test whether or not this decision is consistent with the prohibitions in New York Law against forfeiture of any right or privilege because of an adjudication as a youthful offender.

Of timely importance is the case of Thorpe vs the Housing Authority of Durham, North Carolina, now pending review by the United States Supreme Court.[7] Mrs. Joyce Thorpe received an eviction notice from public housing the day after she was elected president of a tenant's council. North Carolina Supreme Court issued an injunction against the Housing Authority preventing eviction until the Supreme Court passes on a petition for writ of certiorari. Attorney for Mrs. Thorpe argued that the case is of great importance due to its effects "on the rights of persons in public housing". They stated in their briefs that the power "to evict without a hearing and for no reason or at the unbridled whim of housing officials, runs directly contrary to the purposes of insuring low-income citizens a decent place to live and of promoting security and stability in the poor families". The brief went on to state "the broader question is involved of the rights of persons receiving any public welfare benefits to at least a bare minimum of procedural protection before the necessities of life are taken from them".

[7] The court has recently granted certiorari in this case, 87, S. Ct. 515 (1966). This is the first case involving rights of tenants in public housing to be heard by the Court.

Other Legal Implications

The Thorpe Case capsules the contention that denial of adequate appeal or the absence of an adequate appeal procedure is a violation of the guarantees to due process found in the Constitution. It is significant that public housing legislation on the federal level makes no mention of appeal rights but leaves tenant selection up to the local authority. Not so with benefits offered under the Social Security Act, where the rights of beneficiaries are asserted in the Act, and local and state governments are required to develop appeal machinery as a condition to receiving the federal funds. Hence, the decision to terminate or deny occupancy in public housing unlike other federally funded programs, leaves eligibility decisions solely in the hands of local administration. Since the process of termination or denial of public housing consists of determination of factual matters regarding eligibility and applying legal criteria to them, it is a judicial or quasi-judicial function of a government agency. If decisions are then to be made in this semi-judicial setting, it is imperative that persons affected by such decisions have the opportunity to reply and to have the decision reviewed.

See also Williams vs Ypsilanti (Civil Action No. 28936, E.D. Michigan, September, 1966).

Conclusions

1. Tenant policy of the Detroit Housing Commission fails to provide equal protection under the law for all applicants and tenants. The arbitrary decision making in selecting tenants denies public housing to many citizens who need and have a right to it. In order to insure that applicants and tenants know all the eligibility requirements, policy should be clearly spelled out and made available to them.

2. Applicants for public housing and tenants therein should have a right to be officially notified of the specific grounds for denying occupancy. The refusal of such notification by the housing agency violates due process protections and makes appeal difficult, if not impossible.

3. Persons living in or applying for public housing should have a right to appeal an administrative decision that is unfavorable, and an impartial and adequate review procedure should be set up to insure that appellants are fairly considered. The use of the appeal procedure by a tenant or applicant should in no way be construed to mean a surrender on his part of other privileges such as the right to bring counsel or assistance into an appeal hearing.

This position recognizes the public housing agency's right to a tenant policy but also guarantees the rights of applicants and tenants and provides them with safeguards and access to review. This position also expresses ACLU concern for the right of children to realize their full potential as they are affected by the activities of parents undertaken in their behalf.

The Committee on Civil Liberties of Children and Youth proposes to take the following kinds of actions in order to effect elimination of unconstitutional practices by the Detroit Housing Commission: Make the ACLU position known to the housing commission; process and investigate complaints; negotiate with housing officials and other affected persons or organizations; and, if necessary, represent appropriate persons in court.

Recommendations

The Committee on Civil Liberties of Children and Youth through its Agencies and Institutions Sub-Committee recommends that the Detroit ACLU:

1. Reaffirm the position of the National ACLU (as quoted above) regarding the rights of persons receiving public benefits.

2. Recognizes that there are issues of civil liberty concern in the current practices of the Detroit Housing Commission with respect to selection and eviction of tenants.

3. Authorize the Committee on Civil Liberties of Children and Youth to intervene appropriately.

Maddox Steps Up Fight on City Tax

URBAN PROBLEMS

ATC 7/13/67

By REMER TYSON

Gov. Lester Maddox stepped up his opposition Wednesday to a proposal to allow cities and counties to levy a sales tax, but House Speaker George L. Smith said he hopes a modification of a bill defeated last year will be adopted by the next legislature.

At a speech to the Rotary Club in Summerville, Maddox said, "This is a fight that I am bringing to the people of the state of Georgia today, and this is the beginning."

Smith guided a bill through the Georgia House to permit cities and counties, if they chose to do so, to levy a 1 per cent local sales tax. This local tax would have been collected by the state along with the 3 per cent Georgia sales tax. One per cent of this total would have been refunded to cities and counties in which it was collected.

The Georgia Senate rejected the bill at Maddox's insistence.

Wednesday, Smith proposed that city and county governments be permitted to decide whether to levy a sales tax. The state would collect the local levy, then remit the funds to cities and counties on a per-capita basis.

As part of the bill, Smith proposed that state grants to cities and counties be discontinued. This year the legislature appropriated $12 million to cities and $11 million to counties.

Smith said he thought that if his proposal were adopted by the next legislature, which meets in January, and if the state tightens its financial belt "we might get by the present administration without a rise in taxes."

Atlanta in particular has been pressing for legal authority, which must be given by the state legislature, to adopt a local sales tax.

In his speech, Maddox said:

"It is suggested that the state collect this additional money and return it to local authorities to be spent as they desire, without regard to what produced the tax in the first place.

"That would mean that when you go to Atlanta to purchase

Continued on Page 11, Column 2

Governor Pushes Fight On City Tax

Continued from Page 1

some of your needs, this extra 1 cent would be collected and find its resting place in Atlanta, never to return to your community . . .

"That group in Atlanta seems to think that your local government should be run from Atlanta's city hall, their local newspaper office, and the offices of the financial czars which surround Five Points.

"I want to tell you . . . that this will not happen while Lester Maddox is governor — not by the hair of my chinny, chinny chin."

At a press conference earlier Wednesday, Maddox said he had been unjustifiably criticized as being responsible for a property tax increase in Fulton County.

"It is a new twist to now accuse me of having the responsibility for a tax raise here in Atlanta which was imposed before the governorship was resolved, and before I assumed office."

Speaker Smith said, "I regret that the governor has made such a strong stand (against the local sales tax). I still hope in the next session we can work out a local sales tax."

Of his proposal to remit a local sales tax on a percapita basis, rather than return the actual amount collected in a city or county, Smith said, "It would cost Atlanta some money, but they'd be getting so much more than they're getting now."

Asked if his proposal would not force cities and counties to adopt a local sales tax if state grants were discontinued, Smith said, "It would if they want any money."

COALITION URGES U.S. ACT TO SPUR JOBS IN THE CITIES

URBAN PROBLEMS

Conference of 800 Leaders Calls for New Priorities — Housing Drive Backed

NYT 8/25/67

PRIVATE ROLE STRESSED

Remarks and Statement Hint Delegates' Dissatisfaction With Johnson Programs

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE Jr.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—A convocation of more than 800 mayors and business, labor, church and civil rights leaders called on the Government today to "reorder national priorities" and develop "an emergency work program" to provide jobs in the nation's riot-torn cities.

The group, which calls itself the Urban Coalition, held a one-day meeting at the Shoreham Hotel here. I sought solutions to the urban crisis and, in the words of its keynote speaker, Mayor Lindsay of New York, to forge "a national coalition of those with a stake in the city and its people."

In a statement of "principles, goals, and commitments," which was adopted by a rousing voice vote shortly before noon, the coalition pledged itself to work for better urban conditions on a variety of fronts.

An Appeal to Washington

The statement also urged Congress and the Administration to do the following:

¶Provide at least one million "meaningful" and "socially useful" jobs immediately, concentrating on "the huge backlog of employment needs in parks, streets, slums, countryside, schools, colleges, libraries and hospitals."

¶Develop a closer-working relationship with the private sector and, through incentives, encourage industry to create vast new programs of job training.

¶Undertake "bold and immediate steps" to provide a decent home for every American, "including the goal of at least a million housing units for lower-income families annually."

Although neither the statement nor the speakers mentioned President Johnson by name the tone of the remarks

Continued on Page 20, Column 4

Coalition Urges Government to Spur Jobs in Cities

Continued From Page 1, Col. 1

and the substance of the document strongly suggested that the delegates believed the Administration's response to the urban crisis had been insufficient.

The President has indicated several times in recent days that he plans no major new programs this year, arguing instead that his primary mission is to persuade a reluctant Congress to provide money for programs enacted last year.

But the coalition and its leaders clearly felt that additional measures were necessary now, even if it meant a reassessment of the nation's other commitments.

Mr. Lindsay won the day's biggest applause when he stated that the American commitment abroad "should not be allowed to weaken our resolve at home." Later he added:

"If our defense commitment, our commitment to space, or any other commitment made before our urban areas were beset by agony is blocking a vigorous effort to end those agonies, those commitments should be reassessed."

The statement of principles adpoted this morning declared:

"We believe the American people and the Congress must reorder national priorities, with a commitment of resources equal to the magnitude of the problems we face," the statement said. "The crisis requires a new dimension of effort in both the public and private sectors, working together to provide jobs, housing, education and the other neds of the cities."

The coalition grew out of a yearlong effort by the big-city mayors to overcome what they felt was "citizen indifference" to city problems. But it did not become a reality until July 31, when, in response to the riots in Newark and Detroit, a decision to call today's meeting was made by the National League of Cities, the National Conference of Mayors, and Urban America, Inc., a nonprofit group.

The participants at the meeting today included well-known leaders from nearly every major field.

There were some notable absentees — no governors, no members of the Federal Government, and, with the exception of a small group from Rochester, N. Y., very few of the poor.

'Dial With All Segments'

The absence of the poor themselves was not a matter of public comment until the closing moments of the session when Andrew Heiskell, board chairman of Time, Inc, who was co-chairman of the meeting, invited final comments from the delegates.

The last to speak was Marion Barry, former leader of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Coordinating Committee in the capital, who is now active in other civil rights grounps here. Dressed in a green T-shirt and wearing sunglasses, Mr. Barry, who said he had not been invited, moved to the rostrum and warned the coalition not to overlook the poor.

"You've got to deal with all segments," he said, including those "not accustomed to coming to the Shoreham Hotel and fussing round. They don't understand all this hifalutin talk.

"And when you hold these meetings, please don't have them out here at the Shoreham. Hold them down where the people are, get down there and try to get to the nitty-gritty. When that time comes we'll begin to scratch the surface of the urban problem."

Randolph Is Co-Chairman

The other co-chairman of the meeting was A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. Both he and Mr. Heiskell were members of a 32-man steering committee that hammered out the statement of principles in a three-and-a-half-hour session last night.

Other members of the steering committee included Henry Ford 2d, chairman of the Ford Motor Company; David Rockefeller, president of the Chase Manhattan Bank; George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations; Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers.

Also, Whitney M. Young Jr., executive director of the National Urban League; Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; the Most Rev. John F. Dearden, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Detroit; Rabbi Jacob P. Rudin, president of the Synagogue Council of America, and the mayors of several major cities.

'A Lot of Plain Talking'

In the opinion of many of the participants, the meeting served several useful purposes apart from the fundamental objective of dramatizing the crisis in the cities.

In the steering committee sessions last night and the panel sessions this afternoon, "a lot of plain talking was done and a lot of problems were finally brought out on the table," one participant told a reporter.

Sources reported, for example, that in last night's meeting, which was closed to the press, Mr. Meany and Joseph D. Keenan, secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, agreed to make a serious, sustained effort to end restrictive admission practices in the building trades unions and cooperate in promoting new and perhaps quicker methods of construction.

A PAMPHLET URGING VIOLENCE IS MAILED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23 (AP) — A publication of a fugitive American Negro in Communist China that advocates violence in United States cities and advises Negro G.I.'s to "eliminate" their white comrades in Vietnam has been carried in the mails.

The 12-page folder, stating it was published in Peking by Robert F. Williams, contains in the latest edition available here tips for clogging sewer lines and highways, burning public facilities and smashing windows without getting caught.

It also urges that American Negroes refuse to fight in Vietnam. But it says those who are "trapped into" serving should "throw a monkey wrench into those murderous operations."

Postal, Customs and Justice Department officials said their power to police the import of foreign propaganda had been sharply restricted in recent years by Supreme Court decisions dealing with the First Amendment's guarantees of freedom of speech and press.

A Customs spokesman said propaganda was barred at ports of entry only if it was treasonable or advocated overthrow of the Government or assassination of the President.

Williams fled to Cuba six years ago allegedly to avoid a charge of kidnapping during a racial disturbance in his home town of Monroe, N.C.

1967

URBAN PROBLEMS

CITIZENS' ROLE IN ST. LOUIS MODEL CITIES PROGRAM DESCRIBED

A. Donald Bourgeois, Director, St. Louis Model City Agency, explained the St. Louis approach to citizen participation at an October 10 general session at which H. Ralph Taylor, Assistant Secretary for Demonstrations and Intergovernmental Relations, Department of Housing and Urban Development, gave the federal view on how citizens should be involved in model cities program planning (see page 616). In picture left, Secretary Taylor; session chairman Robert B. Pease, Executive Director, Urban Redevelopment Authority of Pittsburgh; Mr. Bourgeois

Citizen participation has come to have a meaning that changes from one part of the country to another. Indeed, the official federal labels differ from one Washington bureau to the next. In the Office of Economic Opportunity, for example, it is "maximum feasible participation of the poor," while the Department of Housing and Urban Development speaks of "widespread citizen participation." In their preciseness, these phrases are rivalled only by that notorious slogan coined by the Supreme Court in 1954 — "with all deliberate speed." In that case, some states moved immediately, while others, 13 years later, are still being "deliberately speedy."

In the same way, there has been a variety of forms of citizen participation across the country. Each variety is associated with a different goal, usually implicit. In my travels, I have visited and seen different forms of citizen participation in different cities. Clearly, all of these cities and all of the programs conducted by agencies with OEO funds are charged with the same kind of maximum feasible participation but, nevertheless, have come out with different kinds of products. I found citizen participation in Chicago quite different from that in Newark; Houston quite different from Syracuse; and San Francisco in a bag all its very own.

I don't expect anyone to come down from the mountain with a new set of tablets detailing in what form citizen participation should be, or the methods by which citizens ought to be involved, or who is to be excluded, or who included, but I do think that exchanging views on what is or what ought to be can go a long way toward establishing a Bible of citizen participation.

Participation Comes in Many Forms

I think that, first, citizen participation differs according to the type and extent of "sponsorship" involved.

Political Sponsorship. One pattern has been to develop citizen participation directly or indirectly sponsored by the political structure of the community. In this case, citizen representatives and groups are supported by elected officials and ward political workers and, therefore, remain loyal to them. The attitudes expressed by these citizen participants may safely be expected to reflect those of an incumbent political machine, rather than those of the neighborhood residents they allegedly "represent." The implied goal of this sort of citizen participation is to provide "grass-roots" legitimacy for the attitudes and plans of elected officials.

Public Agency Sponsorship. Another type of sponsorship is that of public social service agencies. With a specific mandate from OEO to involve the poor, the Community Action Program (CAP) agencies are the most frequent sponsors of this type. Here, the agency seeks to create citizen committees to advise it in its work and, consequently, the committees owe their very existence and sole function to the CAP. Resident leaders are selected out and given "leadership training" by the staff, with the result that they perform in predictable ways.

Elevated to prominence in their neighborhood, the citizen leaders are flattered by the amount of attention they are getting from important people downtown and have less and less time to spend with their neighbors. Never too trusting of public agencies, the neighbors now become suspicious of their representatives and, in rare cases, may even try to replace them in a reform campaign at the next election of advisory committee members.

At this point, however, the agency staff, whose jobs are threatened by an unfriendly advisory committee, give their full support to the incumbent, "cooperative" citizen candidates. In the face of competition with a paid professional staff, backed up by a variety of tangible agency resources, the reform slate is doomed from the start. In future elections, dissident citizens stay home and the agency-sponsored slate is reelected year after year. In return for this support, the advisory committee gratefully endorses every program or progress report put before it by the staff. "Maximum feasible citizen participation" is thus faithfully adhered to and professional jobs and authority remain secure.

The goal implied in the above instance is "maximum feasible friendly citizen participation"—sometimes also described as "responsible" — which is a middle-class establishment adjective for citizen groups that may be trusted never to challenge or embarrass those whom they are permitted to "advise."

Techniques of Participation

Citizen participation also varies according to what is meant by "participation." Minimally, a questionnaire may be designed and a survey of citizen attitudes conducted. The survey has been a favorite tool of physical planners concerned with freeway construction or urban renewal projects. Thus, monumental urban projects are frequently mounted, with their planners secure in the knowledge that they have been approved by a survey of a 2 percent sample (elegantly designed) of citizens whose lives will be affected.

An alternative procedure for these planners is to hold an open hearing. Though it is more vulnerable to citizen opposition, the public hearing is still a comfortable device for professional planners, since citizens are limited to approving or disapproving a single pre-designed and usually quite complicated plan. The survey and the public hearing are both favored by those who view planning as a highly technical and even mystical labor, to be performed only by duly-certified professionals.

A more recent view of "participation" is that held by most social service agencies, in which citizen representatives are invited to "advise" professional staff. In some cases this takes the form of one or two seats on a 15-member board that meets once or twice a year and participates in agency policy or management about as much as do the stockholders of General Motors Corporation at their annual meeting. Poverty program advisory committees are more daring, meeting usually once a month, and constituted completely of poor citizen-clients. While these committees can and occasionally do "raise a fuss" with professional staff, they have no real power to make policy and are, in any case, usually meek and cooperative before their agency-sponsors. One small fight is about all it takes for these committees to recognize the real limits of their power, in spite of the official verbiage about the neighborhood advisory committee's "central role in the local poverty program."

In both of these types of participation, the goal is primarily to satisfy, at the least possible cost to the public agency or commission, a federal requirement for citizen ratification of any federally funded program. Responsibility for blunders is thus transferred from either the federal or local agency to an amorphous citizenry, who "participated" in the planning.

It is clear that none of these familiar versions of citizen participation has brought citizens very close to the planning or decision-making process. Could this possibly be related to the frequency with which freeway and urban renewal projects are beset by delays, embarrassments, and even total failure? Or to the pitifully few victories in the war on poverty? There is a growing suspicion that the relationship is more than accidental.

St. Louis Approach

The St. Louis Model City Agency also attempts to involve citizens. Our agency has recently celebrated its tenth anniversary, 10 months, that is, for we were organized on December 1, 1966. At that time we, rather naively, believed that it was just a matter of days, weeks at most, when some cities would be named to participate in the federal model cities program and we, hopefully, had included ourselves in the first generation.

We established a planning process that can be best described as a "dumbbell planning process." We call it the top-down and the bottom-up form of planning. The top-down version consists of gathering together the power structure of a particular area of concern, or subsystem, as we call it, and gathering them together to examine what has been done, what needs to be done, what resources are available to carry off the program, and what resources need to be made available.

We gather people on the local level who are in charge of planning for some specific program. For example, with respect to employment, our subsystem committee consists of the head of the CAP, the director of the Urban League, the work experience program people, and the regional industrial development committee. From the state, we get the employment service and the division of welfare heads and from the regional federal level we get staff from the departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare.

In 14 instances, we have brought such people together for 14 different subsystems—to plan from a top-down fashion what needed to be done.

The bottom-up version of the planning was accommodated by sending into the field interdisciplinary teams of hardware and software planners. We sent architects, real estate economists, social scientists, and community organizers and charged them with the responsibility of serving the people, of being the people's professionals.

To insure that what we got back was genuinely from the people, we have had each professional write out in advance his "ideal" or his optimum neighborhood and then we have sent him forth. These people we call our subcity teams. They are persons required to implement our bottom-up planning.

During the past year, we haven't been just marking time and waiting for the model city money to come. For example, one top-down group developed a program that was funded by the Economic Development Administration to perform a study within the "model city" neighborhood of what needs to be done in order to create new business and industry there. In addition, EDA is about to fund a program designed to put teams of experts right in the neighborhoods to carry out the action portion of the program, that is, creating new businesses and new development companies in the neighborhoods.

Our transportation subsystem group put together a program, which was funded by HUD in the sum of $1,125,000, that will run special bus lines from the ghetto directly to the centers of employment outside the central city.

We have also spun-off a Metropolitan Housing Corporation, a not-for-profit organization designed to provide simultaneous job and housing opportunities for central city residents not included in the designated model city area.

The bottom-up planning has produced certain other kinds of plans: a grass roots organization has developed its own housing program and various other types of programs designed to meet emergency needs have been created.

Participation Goals

There are three distinguishable goals that urban planners today profess.

One, we should involve the greatest number and variety of residents in the planning process.

Two, we should provide a means through which residents' hopes and plans are not merely included in the final plan but are influential in drawing it, in other words, residents should have meaningful access to the final decision-making process in "model city" planning.

Three, we must insure that the impact of "model city" planning upon the target area population is such that residents learn how to control their own environment, to "work the system" in a metropolitan community, with or without the assistance of model city staff or even model city funds.

While our present citizen participation model could probably achieve the first goal, that of involving the greatest possible number and variety of residents, a year of experience with this model has demonstrated to us in St. Louis that it is not at all clear how this model will provide means through which residents' plans can be included in the final plan or insure that the residents do, in fact, learn how to control their own environment. We have thought of our subcity teams as "advocate planners" but no amount of protestations of good intentions can hide the reality of their being on the model city payroll and primarily accountable, therefore, to the Model City Agency. At points where residents' needs and desires conflict with the needs and desires of the agency, it is obvious where the loyalty of the subcity team would ultimately lie. Moreover, the subcity team, so conceived, amounts to yet another injection of outside influence in the ghetto, with or without invitation. Not only do we decide rather paternalistically that the subcity negihborhoods need a subcity team composed of specified professionals, but we also choose the individuals to man the team positions. The team is, then, at a possible disadvantage to begin with, having to spend time gaining the acceptance of people who never asked for them in the first place.

It is not clear, either, just how the plans laid in the subcities are realistically to "influence" the final planning downtown. Resident access to the final decision-making, as provided for in our present plan, smacks of tokenism more than anything else—I refer here to the ritualistic inclusion of a few residents on the subsystem advisory committees and on the steering committee. Even more remote is the systems analyst and his "program-planning-budgeting system," his cost effectiveness analysis, and his single criterion. The danger is very real, in the way our proposal now reads and in the way we describe the planning process to ourselves, that these technical niceties will be used to force decisions and choices on the neighborhood residents that are dictated by us, our agency pals, city hall, and the rest of the establishment.

In any case, the beauty of systems analysis is its very inaccessibility to the nonexpert, most notably our target area residents. As for their advocate planners, the limitations noted above are recalled, plus the fact that there is nowhere in our plan a provision for guaranteeing access of subcity teams to the final decision-making.

In the case of the third goal, that of giving residents control of their environment, target area residents will learn to do no more than participate in model city planning (a very future-oriented, frustrating process) in our present scheme. While policy has favored the support of subcity team-members in short-range, immediate neighborhood programs during the planning year, such programs are going to have to be limited to what the larger community is ready to support. Such projects will most likely amount to activities that are unobjectional to the city fathers and that, therefore, may expect to receive financial support. It is considerably less clear how the advocate planners on the payroll of a city agency can help residents to bargain aggressively with the larger community for the resources so long denied to ghetto neighborhoods.

New Method Under Test

For these reasons, a new model of citizen participation needs to be tested. This model, which the St. Louis Model City Agency endorses, might more descriptively be termed "citizen initiation." Here, neighborhood residents are encouraged to form their own community organization and to incor-

MODEL CITIES REQUIRE NEW APPROACH IN RELATIONSHIP OF PLANNER TO CITIZENS

At the general session at which the citizen participation statement by A. Donald Bourgeois that starts on page 613 was made, H. Ralph Taylor, assistant secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development for demonstrations and intergovernmental relations, discussed the new partnerships between citizens and public agencies that is to be required for model cities planning. Following is a nonverbatim report of Mr. Taylor's remarks prepared by Erwin Farley, executive director of the Richmond, California redevelopment agency and official reporter for this particular session of the conference.

Mr. Taylor's main message was that we should be ready and willing to accept the inevitability of change and that the patterns of relationship between professional planners and residents of any neighborhood require new approaches.

In regard to model cities programs, he said the policy of HUD is to set performance standards, not detailed procedures. Nevertheless, these programs must remain accessible to residents of the model city area in both the planning and execution stages so that residents may join in the decision-making process or leave it when appropriate. Information must also be made available to them so that they may react intelligently to proposals put forth by the professional planners. This does not mean, Mr. Taylor explained, there should be an adversary relationship between residents and planners but rather a self-supporting relationship.

In respect to insuring citizen participation, Mr. Taylor said that HUD expects a sort of "self-policing" of model cities programs, because citizens, especially those in the model city neighborhoods, will know what is going on. In addition, HUD is looking to city hall and top elected officials to become directly involved in the decision making. The department hopes thereby to promote a two-way process by which city hall and the neighborhoods become better able to understand each other's problems. He called this process "understanding in depth."

The key to model cities planning, Mr. Taylor concluded, is that the people in the neighborhoods have to feel a part of it. It's their plan. This active involvement may slow down progress but, said the assistant secretary, if we are to achieve our model cities' goals, it is essential.

porate it for the purpose of going into the neighborhood improvement business on their own. Nonprofit corporate status would enable them to seek and receive funds to design and operate their own programs. In this case, the "advisory" shoe is on the other foot; the neighborhood corporation hires professional consultants to provide technical assistance where needed. In such programs, initiative for defining problems and designing solutions is entirely with the citizens. Such programs produce significantly more "bang for the buck." More important, poor people can help themselves, drawing upon a richness of experience and imagination within the ghetto.

This approach is dramatically different from the pervasive emphasis upon deficits within the ghetto that logically calls for an injection from the outside—the "patronizing dole" model, which is both more expensive in terms of professional staff required and more destructive to the self-image of the target population. Indeed, the latter approach only reinforces the ghetto residents' paralyzing self-image of worthlessness and inadequacy.

The St. Louis Model City Agency is, therefore, altering its citizen participation model in the following manner.

First, we will develop in each of the five subcity neighborhoods a nonprofit, neighborhood corporation that will be representative of the whole neighborhood and all of its existing groups and leaders and capable of receiving funds.

Second, we will seek funds from governmental agencies to supplement our planning grant, to be given to the neighborhood corporations for the purpose of hiring their own technical assistants or professionals, principally, although not exclusively, to be their advocates in the model city planning process.

Third, we will trim our projected subcity team staffs down to one or two liaison persons, accountable to the chief planner, who will "float" among the neighborhoods and assist the neighborhood corporation staffs, as well as coordinate their model city planning efforts.

Fourth, we will provide training for the neighborhood corporation staff and officers—primarily to teach them the rules of our model city planning game.

Fifth, we will provide for numerically equal representation of target area residents on all Model City Agency decision-making committees—possibly officers of the neighborhood corporation or elected delegates. Although we have to concede that the final approval or veto belongs to the mayor and board of aldermen, minimally we will be willing up to that level to guarantee a major role to our clients (or sponsors)—the poor—in all decision-making.

Problems

Several problems in these suggestions are recognized.

1—How are we going to develop a "representative" neighborhood corporation in each subcity without alienating some groups, leaders, and other agencies? We propose that where there is more than one resident group, the neighborhood corporation should take the form of a "congress" of all groups. In addition, special care will be taken to approach all groups and also all agency sponsors in the neighborhood, for without their support we will only be creating new conflict and cleavages. Church groups must be included, as well as social and fraternal groups. The neighborhood corporation will also be formed around a limited, common-interest goal, such as model city planning, so that it will be less threatening to existing groups whose identity may be based upon some special interest or function over which they claim exclusive rights. The identity of member groups in the neighborhood corporation will be protected, where possible, so that an organization whose special project has been tutoring programs, for example, would be given a leading role in the neighborhood corporation's education planning for the model city program. The neighborhood corporation will be encouraged and assisted to seek funds for well-worked out program proposals of member groups and such groups will be allowed to run their programs, once funded.

We also intend to give the neighborhood corporation all possible support and assistance in achieving some short-range program goal — such as rerouting of bus lines through the neighborhood — so that the special advantages of such a corporation can be demonstrated to residents early in the year. It is important, however, that such short-range goals be broad, neighborhood-wide goals that do not duplicate or preempt the special function of a member group.

2—How do we insure the desired degree of coordination and competency in model city planning, when control over subcity teams is out of our hands?

We can provide each neighborhood corporation with a list of recommendations for the staff they hire. This might best be augmented by some recommendations from other sources, such as HUD or OEO. Through the training we provide their staff and officers, we will be able to insure some standardized knowledge of our planning program. In short, we think we can teach all the neighborhood corporations the rules of our game.

In addition to the training, we will have to communicate honestly and effectively to the neighborhood corporations the potential rewards of the model city program, as well as the fact of competition for these rewards. If we do a good job of training and communicating about potential rewards, we can safely expect that the neighborhood corporations will be highly motivated (for the right reasons) to play and to win our game by our rules. This means they will be seriously concerned about meeting planning schedule deadlines and submitting their plans in the form we recommend. Under these conditions, the failure of any subcity neighborhood to "stay in the game" can most safely be interpreted as a decision of the residents and their paid staff to opt out of our model city program. Most importantly, such a decision would be a well-informed, "realistic" type decision on their part.

Our liaison persons in the field should provide some measure of coordination. They should be able to monitor on-the-spot the progress of each neighborhood corporation, on a daily or at least weekly basis. And they should be able to communicate to each neighborhood corporation its progress relative to the other neighborhood corporations and the overall model city planning program. They will also be responsible for setting up meetings, upon request, between the neighborhood corporations' staff and/or officers and members, between the neighborhood central staff, or between other neighborhood corporations.

3—How will we avoid duplication of effort among neighborhood corporation staff and agencies in the neighborhood and the consequent threat to agency staffs? To reiterate, it will be absolutely necessary to seek the support of agencies in the neighborhood, especially those that sponsor a resident organization or "constituency." Furthermore, there is no reason why the neighborhood corporation, if it chooses, cannot hire some of the staff of neighborhood agencies.

The neighborhood corporation and its staff must be defined in terms of neighborhood-wide needs that are not presently being met or attempting to be met by some other organization or agency. If possible, its staff should be defined to other agency staff as individuals who are free to champion the cause of the neighborhood, to bargain aggressively with city hall and others, thus fulfilling a function that the agency staffs are restrained from fulfilling.

Change Ahead . . .

The above suggestions constitute a fairly simple but admittedly controversial change in our citizen participation model. They are advocated for practical reasons in that our accumulated experience suggests these methods will be more effective in achieving the goals of the model cities program.

They are also advocated for moral reasons. Given the assumption that all of us in the urban development field have the best of intentions, can we really say that we have extended ourselves to realize them. We have been meticulously and realistically thorough in our involvement of and assurances to the establishment in all its manifestations. All facets of the establishment are well represented in all of our decision-making bodies. But when it comes to our clients, our raison d'etre, we have been cautious to the point of being niggardly. We are forever going to "look out for their interests" but it seems we will do this in our way and without much sacrifice. Who, indeed, if not us, is going to look out after their interests? And doesn't this include giving them a voice and a vote on our own decision-making bodies?

Further, with such a fat pot of planning money (don't laugh), shouldn't we seek assiduously to leave a lasting mark upon our target neighborhoods? Planning, per se, will have an impact whether we wish it or not. In view of this, why not seek to use this money to produce, through model cities planning, neighborhood organizations with the savvy and the resources to bargain effectively in the metropolitan community?

If we will do this, we need no longer worry whether implementation money will be sufficient or even forthcoming, for we will have helped to develop organizations in the ghetto that look upon federal money as only one resource among many available to them, just as they view the ephemeral model cities program as one among many programs.

22 Leading Citizens Discuss Answers to Problems of Cities

URBAN PROBLEMS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 31—Twenty-two men representing many facets of American life sat down tonight to seek answers to the problems of cities.

The group, which was called by Mayor Joseph M. Barr of Pittsburgh and Mayor Lindsay of New York, went to work on a nine-point agenda in the board room of the modern home of Urban America, Inc., on Massachusetts Avenue, about six blocks north of the White House.

The meeting was closed to newsmen.

One item on the agenda was "meeting with the President and Congressional leaders." That was an objective that was "being worked on," an official source said.

The agenda also called for an "assessment of the national crisis" by Andrew Heiskel, chairman of the board of Time, Inc., and chairman of Urban America, Inc.

Other items included discussions of long-range goals and immediate measures of immediate demands on Congress and of possible strategies to mobilize public support and to stimulate greater private and government action at local levels.

Those attending were:

I. W. ABEL, president, United Steelworkers of America, A.F.L.-C.I.O.

ARNOLD ARONSON (representing Roy Wilkins), executive secretary, National Leadership Conference on Civil Rights.

MAYOR JOSEPH M. BARR, president, United States Conference of Mayors.

ANDEW J. BIEMILLER (representing George Meany), legislative director, A.F.I.-C.I.O.

THE REV. WALTER FAUNTROY, (representing the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.), Washington representative, Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

JOHN FEILD, director of community relations for the Conference of Mayors.

HAROLD FLEMING, president of the Potomac Institute.

JOHN J. GUNTHER, executive director of the Conference of Mayors.

ANDREW HEISKELL, chairman of the board, Time, Inc., and chairman of Urban America, Inc.

JOSEPH KEENAN, secretary-treasurer, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, A.F.L.-C.I.O.

MAYOR JOHN V. LINDSAY executive committee, Conference of Mayors.

MAYOR ARTHUR NAFTALIN of Minneapolis, chairman, Community Relations Committee, Conference of Mayors.

GERALD PHILLIPE, chairman of the board, General Electric.

WALTER P. REUTHER, president, Citizens Crusade Against Poverty, and president, United Auto Mobile Workers, A.F.L.-C.I.O.

DAVID ROCKEFELLER, president, Chase Manhattan Bank.

RABBI JACOB P. RUDIN, president, Synagogue Council of America.

BAYARD RUSTIN (representing A. Philip Randolph), executive director, A. Philip Randolph Institute.

WILLIAM L. SLAYTON, executive vice president of Urban America, Inc.

THE MOST REV. PAUL TANNER (representing The Most Rev. John Deardon), general secretary, National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

JOHN WHEELER, president, Mechanics and Farmers Bank, Durham, N.C., and president, Southern Regional Council.

WHITNEY M. YOUNG Jr., executive director, National Urban League.

sent by Larry Caughron, chm.
Sou. Illinois Student Committee letter: Research, Gen. requests, Jan. 1963

U + I Gen.

CAIRO ACTION REPORT

August 17, 1962 was a day of anguish for the Negro people of Cairo, Illinois. The events of the day speak for themselves:

Trial for nine Negroes--charged with blocking the entrance to the Cairo public pool on July 14--was delayed from several times set in the morning until one p.m. and was changed to County Court from the police magistrate's office. While these delays were occuring, 13 year old Willie Taylor drowned in the Ohio River. It is ironic that this should happen on the day that people were being tried for the offense of attempting to integrate a place where people can swim safely.

The trial finally got under way at around two p.m., with no explanation of the further delay. It was soon obvious that, although some obstruction of the pool entrance did have taken place, many of those on trial had not taken part in said obstruction, nor had they seen it. But the point made by attorney-for-the-defense Harth was that, according to precedent set by a previous Chicago case, as long as the demonstrators have been quiet and orderly, the alleged obstruction because of discrimination is justified. Also, Mr. Harth pointed out that the "disorderly conduct" ordinance under which the defendants were arrested makes no mention of obstructions of this type. Judge White repeatedly argued that the racial issue is a separate one that must be divorced from the case. At one time he stated, "If we introduce the racial issue, we'll be here all evening." Perhaps the judge's purpose, then, was not to consider that the discrimination was the original breach of the peace and the cause of the problem in question, but to limit the testimony to save time. In this time saving manner, the nine were ruled guilty and fined $35 plus court costs each.

Later in the afternoon, in a meeting of the Cairo Non-Violent Freedom Committee (CN-VFC), it was decided that demonstrations would be carried out as previously planned. A quiet "stand-in" was held at the swimming pool and the Wonder Market was picketed. Plans were continued for demonstrations at the T-Wood Roller Bowl later that evening.

At about 8:40 p.m., a group of thirty-eight students, both Negro and white, arrived at the skating rink to protest the discrimination there. The group arrived in five cars and formed a single line to walk around the front of the building to the entrance, finally forming a single line along the front wall of the building. Charles Koen, 17 year old leader of CN-VFC, was at the head of the line. He reported having heard an older white man in the crowd that was waiting say, "I'm going to get some black meat tonight," as Charles led the group to the entrance.

The line remained in place and was peaceful and very quiet. The usual catcalls and anti-integration remarks were made by the young toughs in the crowd. In a dialogue between two of them one asserted that getting his white shoes dirty would be "almost as bad as integration." Another said, "Leave them niggers and get the whites," referring to Linda Pearlstein, Mary McCollom, and Larry Caughron. The young toughs started to converge around these individuals. The man who had instigated the move said, "Go on and get them; we'll back you up." When nothing happened, he went inside and the doors of the Roller Bowl were closed completely for a period of about ten minutes.

Charles Koen, Charles Neblett, and Willy Bingham explained why they were there in a quiet conversation with some of the whites near the doorway. A few seconds before the attack, an elderly instigator had come back outside and was standing with his hands behind his back. As Koen turned to speak to someone in the line, the man swung a blackjack and struck a vicious blow to Koen's forehead. He then proceeded to "fan" the others, striking Charlene Williams on the head, shoulders, right arm, and back as she placed herself in front of Koen, who had received a gash above the right eye that required thirteen stitches to close.

Linda Pearlstein, who was also near the front of the line, sustained a hard blow on the back. She leaned against a car to recover, and was deliberately struck with a club on the back of the head and again on the back.

The rest of the line dispersed through small spaces between parked cars, while a few were left to try to protect those who were already under attack. The small groups that filtered into the space in the center of the parking lot tried to unify, for unity was their only defense. In attempting to return down the highway to their cars one group of about ten was confronted by an aggressor who pulled a chain from his back pocket. Others were coming from the lot, throwing stones and yelling, "Get that white. . ." This group fled toward the drive-in theatre with the chain-wielding white in pursuit. Debbie Flowers was struck hard on the back of the leg, and when she fell down, her attacker grabbed her feet, twisted her around, and yelled, "I got me a nigger now." He let her loose without harming her further and chased the others for a short distance.

The group that had escaped tried to re-unify to return to their cars, but a car came across the drive-in lot and across the adjacent grass toward them. The group separated, some going up the highway, others through yards.

Charles Koen and Linda Pearlstein were rushed to the hospital by other members of CN-VFC. The Sheriff arrived and was asked by Mary McCollom to help find those who had run away. He replied, "I don't want any woman telling me what to do." Miss McCollom and several others went out on their own and found one person north of the theatre. As they went, several shots, apparently from a .22 rifle, were fired in their direction. Upon returning, Miss McCollom again asked that the Sheriff send some men out to find the boys. After getting the same reply, "You're a woman and I object to your leading this; I'm going to talk to somebody about this," John Lewis also asked for help in the search. The Sheriff's reply was, "I won't send men out on foot." Two of the Sheriff's auxiliary police left in a car and returned shortly. When Sgt. Simons of the State Police was asked to help, her referred them back to the Sheriff, saying, "We can't do anything without Sheriff's orders." The searchers went out a second time, but found no one. A small group of those who had escaped were given a ride back to the scene. With them was Ronnie Hale, who had been hit in the stomach with a piece of pipe and was vomiting. The State Police were asked to help in getting some of the others to the hospital because no other cars were available that were not blocked in by spectators' cars. Their reply was, "You got them here, you get them back." They did offer to call an ambulance. This has been explained as "policy." Also, the Sergeant in charge of the State Police stated that they were there at the request of Sheriff Clutts, and that if he needed them, he'd tell them what to do. Later the Sergeant came over to the group and said, "We're here to preserve the peace,"then returned to lean against his car, watching, but doing nothing.

Many of the attackers went into the Roller Bowl. The Sheriff was asked to get the attackers out and arrest them. He asked for descriptions and went in without witnesses to aid in the identification. There were several bitter complaints against the Sheriff's behavior. He came back out, asked a question, and went back in. Mr. Thistlewood, proprietor of the Roller Bowl, would not admit anyone capable of identifying assailants. The State Police were asked to help get witnesses in and to prevent the escape of assailants through a rear door. They refused, saying that the Sheriff had things well in hand. After some discussion, they did move in the direction of the rear entrance.

When the Sheriff went into the Roller Bowl the second time, a Clifford Jones, who had taken part in the attack, stood at the entrance with a pistol pointed at the group of Negro witnesses who had collected there. When the Sheriff came out and was told this, he replied, "I don't see no pistol," and ignored the incident. He took two men back in with him, about ten minutes after his first entrance, and young Jones again held the pistol on the group. After arresting four men inside, the Sheriff came out and seemed very reluctant to arrest Jones, although the pistol had been in plain sight. He insisted that Jones had no pistol until it was almost picked up and handed to him from where Jones had laid it inside a car. The Sheriff then examined the pistol for some time, completely ignoring Jones, who was walking around the car. Charles Nebiett called this to the Sheriff's attention; finally Jones was arrested.

Meanwhile, one boy who had returned led some of the demonstrators to a house about three-quarters of a mile away, where they found four more boys hiding. They were taken back to the scene, where they were very eager to do some identifying. Also, while the Sheriff had wasted so much time, the Rev. Blaine Ramsey, of the Ward Chapel A.M.E. Church, arrived with Dr. L. C. Holman, State President of N.A.A.C.P., Mr. Harth, defense attorney for the students in that day's trials, and others who had remained at the church. They were, of course, quite indignant at the complete breakdown of law and order that had taken place. Without their urging, there might have been no arrests of the white attackers made.

A Mr. Lang told the Sheriff that his wife had been "insulted" by several of the demonstrators. This was later changed to "assaulted," when he claimed that his pregnant wife had been brutally dragged from the car and hit several times. There are witnesses to the fact that she got out of the car by herself, and that she had not been touched. The Sheriff, without having seen any of this, was immediately willing to arrest Attorney Harth, even though witnesses contested the accusation. Warrants were sworn out for Harth and two others.

Justifiably angry Negroes, including relatives of some of those who had been injured, massed around Mr. and Mrs. Lang and others of the white agitators, although no effort at aggression was made. They were dispersed by the CN-VFC leaders and placed in cars for their safe return to the church.

Mr. Thistlewood, who had threatened two Negro youths (20 and 17 years old) with murder during the fracas, was regarded by the Sheriff as an objective source of information on the evenings happenings. Later, Mr. Thistlewood put up the bond for the attackers. Said bond was $500 per person, the same amount that had been set for some of the demonstrators who had been arrested on preceeding dates for quietly standing in protest. The charge for three of the white assailants is "aggravated assault." A fourth was charged with assault with a deadly weapon.

Ages of those attacked who were injured seriously enough to be taken to the hospital: Charles Koen--17, Linda Pearlstein--22, Charlene Williams--15, Ronnie Hale--17, Debbie Flowers--13, Francis Williams--15. Linda Pearlstein was not released from the hospital until Sunday, August 19.

Clip

Autopsy Lays JFK Death To Second Assassin Bullet

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (UPI) The autopsy performed on President Kennedy was reported Wednesday to show that he was killed by the second bullet that struck him, but could have survived the first wound.

The Washington Post, in a dispatch signed by its medical writer Nate Haseltine, said this was the "as yet unofficial" finding of the team of pathologists who performed the autopsy at Bethesda Naval Hospital on the night of Nov. 22 after the President's body was brought back to Washington from Dallas.

The hospital, the Pentagon and the White House refused to comment on the Post story Tuesday night. White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger, asked to comment on the report, said, "I'm not going to discuss it."

THE PATHOLOGISTS were reported to have found that the first bullet struck the chief executive high in the back of the shoulder, about 5 to 7 inches below the line of his collar and became imbedded deep in his shoulder.

This was said to have caused "a hematoma, a pooling of blood, inside the neck and shoulder muscles, but no critical harm," according to the Post report.

The post-mortem examination was said to show that the second bullet which struck the President tore the right rear portion of his head so destructively that "it was completely incompatible with life," according to the newspaper.

IT WAS a deflected fragment from this second bullet that passed out through Kennedy's throat, just above the collar line, giving rise to speculation that the President may have been shot from two angles, the newspaper said.

The autopsy seemed to end speculation about the angle from which the two bullets were fired. It said both bullets struck the President from behind. Accused assassin Lee Harvey Oswald allegedly fired shots at Kennedy and Texas Gov. John B. Connally from his vantage point in the Texas School Book Depository building just after the presidential motorcade passed on the street below.

Because of the throat wound, questions had been raised as to whether Oswald's bullet could have inflicted it.

THE PATHOLOGISTS were quoted as saying that the second bullet inflicted such irreparable damage that such a wound is normally considered as causing instant death. However, doctors at Dallas' Parkland Hospital reported earlier that they noted some outward manifestation of life when the President was brought into the emergency room.

Dr. James Carrico, a resident surgeon at Parkland who first examined the President, said Kennedy was on his back from the time he arrived at the hospital until the body was covered with a sheet and removed, preventing any search for a back wound.

Carrico earlier had reported that the President's eyes were open but the pupils were dilated and apparently sightless when he was brought into the hospital. Such a condition is often called a "death stare."

The New Republic
12/21/63
V+I Ben.

Seeds of Doubt

Some Questions About the Assassination

by Jack Minnis and Staughton Lynd

On December 3, newspapers reported that the Federal Bureau of Investigation would confirm in all essentials the version of the President's assassination previously presented by the Dallas police and by Gordon Shanklin, FBI agent in charge in Dallas. According to these accounts the FBI will state that: (1) Lee Oswald, without accomplices, fired three shots at President Kennedy from a sixth-floor window of the Texas School Book Depository Building; (2) about five and one-half seconds elapsed between the first shot and the last; (3) all three shots came from behind and slightly to the right of the President's car; (4) the same weapon fired all three shots.

It has not been announced how long the Presidential commission of inquiry will take to reach a finding, but meanwhile certain questions pose themselves:

(1) How Lee Oswald, from a position behind and slightly to the right of President Kennedy, fired a shot which entered the President's neck just below the Adam's apple; (2) how Oswald, using a bolt-action rifle, fired three shots with deadly accuracy in five and one-half seconds at a target 75-100 yards away moving about 25 miles an hour; (3) how the three shots could have produced four bullets; (4) how Lee Oswald did all the things he is supposed to have done in the 15 or 30 minutes (there are two different accounts) between the time the President was assassinated and the time Oswald allegedly ran into his apartment four miles away.

The Target

On page 15 is a rough diagram of the assassination scene constructed from a map of the area printed in The New York Times of November 23 and from the pictures of the scene found in other newspapers.

The leading vehicle in the motorcade was the Presidential limousine with Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy in the rear seat, the President on the right. On jump seats facing forward, were Mr. and Mrs. Connally, Governor Connally on the right. The second car was filled with Secret Service men. The third car carried Vice President and Mrs. Johnson and Senator Ralph Yarborough. In the fourth car were Secret Service agents protecting the Vice President.

At about 12:30 p.m., November 22, the President's limousine made the turn at Elm and Houston Streets into the approach to the underpass leading to Stemmons Freeway. The car was traveling about 25 miles an hour, or about 12 yards per second. The distance between the turn at Elm Street and the underpass is about 220 yards. Thus at the speed at which most witnesses agree the motorcade was traveling, the maximum time it could have consumed traversing this distance would have been 20 seconds.

It is difficult to determine, with precision, the exact point in the traversal of the 220 yards at which the shooting occurred. However, some definite limits can be set. Experienced newsmen reporting in The New York Times, The New York Herald-Tribune, The Washington Post, The Atlanta Constitution, and for both Associated Press and United Press International, estimate that the President's car was 75-100 yards past the turn at Elm and Houston when the first shot was fired; others, persons on the spot at the time, say the President's car was midway between the turn and the underpass; Mrs. Connally says the car was almost ready to go underneath the underpass; Governor Connally says the car had just made the turn at Elm and Houston.

A reader, making use of the tree, the lamp post, and the ornamental wall shown in pictures on pages 24, 25 and 32H of Life magazine for November 29, can approximately identify for himself the point at which the President, smiling, waving and looking straight ahead as the limousine moved away from the Depository Building and toward the underpass, suddenly made a "clutching movement toward his throat."

John Herbers, writing in The New York Times of November 27, comments on the 15-second movie sequence of the assassination taken by an amateur photographer (from which the pictures in Life magazine were selected). He says five seconds elapsed from the first shot until the President's car disappeared into the underpass. If the President's car continued at 25 miles an hour after the first shot, then it traveled about 60 yards during this five seconds and, therefore, must have been about 160 yards from the turn at Elm and Houston when firing commenced. If, as most witnesses believe, it accelerated rapidly after the first shot, then it traversed considerably more than 60 yards during those five seconds. On the evidence of the movie, we would estimate the distance between the turn at Elm and Houston and the site of the first shot at something less than 160 yards, not appreciably out of line with the estimates of witnesses and newsmen, and the anticipated conclusion of the FBI report.

Having established, with some certainty we think, the fact that the Presidential car was approximately 100 yards past the turn at Elm and Houston when the first shot was fired, we can move to a consideration of the wounds themselves.

The Wounds

Tom Wicker, in The New York Times of November 23, wrote that Doctors Malcolm Perry and Kemp Clark, who attended Mr. Kennedy in the emergency room of the Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas immediately after the shooting, described the President's wounds thus: "Mr. Kennedy was hit by a bullet in the throat, just below the Adam's apple. . . . This wound had the appearance of a bullet's entry. Mr. Kennedy also had a massive, gaping wound in the back and on the right side of the head." Dr. Perry was the first physician to treat the President. Dr. Clark was summoned and arrived in a minute or two.

We saw nowhere in the newspapers nor heard in any of the earlier radio or TV accounts any attempt to reconcile a wound in the front of the President's throat with the theory that the shots came from the Texas School Book Depository, 75-100 yards to the rear of the President at the time the first shot was fired. Nor did we see or hear any suggestion that the original accounts of where the President's car was at the time of the shooting might be inaccurate. This could, perhaps, be attributed to the fact that identification of the throat wound as one of entry was tentative, and that it would be reasonable to suppose a bullet entering the back of the President's head, fired from an angle of about 45 degrees above him, might exit at the Adam's apple. The examining doctors, as they were quoted in the early press accounts, seemed to be unsure as to whether one bullet or two had inflicted the head and throat wounds of the President.

However, John Herbers, in a follow-up story in the Times of November 27, cleared this up. Herbers quotes Dr. Kemp Clark, the Dallas surgeon who pronounced the President dead, as saying that two bullets hit the President. One entered through the throat just below the Adam's apple and ranged downward, without exiting. The other struck the right side of the back of the President's head tangentially (that is, it smashed in and out, traveling on a tangent to his head).

From this description, it would seem that one bullet was fired from in front of the President. Herbers tries to reconcile the frontal wound with the supposed position of the assassin in the School Book Depository Building by suggesting that the gunman could have fired as the President's car was approaching the building, then swung the gun through an arc of almost 180 degrees and fired twice more. But this reconciliation ignores the uncontroverted accounts of many eyewitnesses as to where the President's car was at the time the first shot was heard. It appears well-established that the first shot was fired only after the President's car was more than 75 yards past the building. Indeed, Herbers' own interpretation of the 15-second movie sequence supports this. In order for the assassin, from his supposed position in the building, to have wounded the President frontally, he would have had to fire while the Presidential car was entering the turn at Houston and Elm, or before the car had halfway completed the turn. By all accounts this would have been six to eight seconds before a shot was heard. According to a New York Times dispatch from Dallas dated November 27, the Secret Service conducted a re-enactment of the assassination that day. The dispatch reported that "the consensus was that the shooting began after the President's car had made the turn."

JACK MINNIS did graduate work in Political Science at Tulane University and now works in the South. STAUGHTON LYND received his Ph.D. in History from Columbia University. His articles and reviews have appeared in Commentary, the Political Science Quarterly and the William and Mary Quarterly.

We see no way to reconcile the conclusion attributed to the forthcoming FBI report, that "it has been established that all three shots came from the same direction, behind and slightly to the right of the President's car" (AP dispatch datelined Washington, Atlanta Journal, Dec. 3), with the statement of Dallas doctors that one bullet struck the President at about the necktie knot "in the mid-section of the front part of his neck" (New York Times, Nov. 24 and 27). Indeed, the bullet that struck the President's throat was sufficiently frontal that Dr. Clark at first thought the same bullet might have entered through the throat and exited through the upper rear of the President's head. (See "The Kennedy Wound," New York Times, Nov. 24, for an account based on this supposition.)

On December 5, 13 days after the assassination, "federal investigators" were still simulating the crime with car, camera and surveyor's transit on Elm Street in Dallas, in an attempt to answer the question "how the President could have received a bullet in the front of the throat from a rifle in the Texas School Book Depository Building after his car had passed the building and was turning a gentle curve away from it" (Joseph Loftus in the New York Times, Dec. 6).

Finally, what is the explanation of the reports of Frank Cormier of the AP and of Richard Dudman of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of a small hole in the windshield of the President's limousine?

The Weapon

First press accounts quoted various members of the Dallas police force as saying the assassin's weapon was a .30-caliber Enfield and a 7.65mm Mauser. One Secret Service man said he thought the weapon was an "Army or Japanese rifle" of .25 caliber. The same accounts reported that the rifle was found on the second floor of the building by a window, in the fifth-floor staircase, by an open sixth-floor window, and hidden behind boxes and cases on the second or sixth floors.

It was not until the FBI said it had discovered that Oswald had purchased an Italian-made 6.5mm rifle from a Chicago mail-order house that the confusion was dispelled. Then all accounts and all sources agreed: The former .30 caliber-Enfield-7.65 Mauser was now a 6.5mm Italian-made rifle with telescopic sight. It was also at this time that all sources began agreeing that the gun had been found on the sixth floor – though some still held out for the open-window location, while others argued for the buried-behind-the-boxes theory.

We did not at that time have a very clear idea of the precise number of seconds within which the shots had occurred, but we were uneasy about anyone's having got off the reported three shots with a bolt-action rifle from that distance at a target moving 12 yards a second, with that accuracy and quickly enough to have created such confusion about who got hit first, the President or the Governor.

On November 25 The New York Times reported that "a group of the nation's most knowledgeable gun experts, meeting in Maryland at the time of the shooting, agreed that, considering the gun, the distance, the angle and the movement of the President's car, the assassin was either an exceptional marksman or fantastically lucky in placing his shots." The Times account does not indicate whether the experts also considered the extreme rapidity with which the shots were fired.

Then on November 27 the Times ran another story telling about tests which had been conducted by a "firearms expert from the National Rifle Association" in Washington. The expert had used a "Model 1938 6.5mm bolt-action rifle." His target had been 50 feet away. He was able to get off three shots in 11 seconds and they struck within a one-inch circle. On a second try the expert was able to get off three shots in eight seconds with comparable accuracy. Using this performance as a basis for speculation, the expert reasoned that a person well-practiced with the use of the gun could have done as well or better under the conditions of the assassination in Dallas. (The story did not indicate whether or not the target used in these tests was stationary or moving.)

Others did not agree with this expert. The Italian newspaper Corriere Lombardo of Milan said, as reported in the same Times story, that if the Model '38 were used and that if more than one shot had been fired "there must have been a second attacker." In Vienna, the Olympics champion shot, Hubert Hammerer, said that the initial shot could have been made under the conditions in Dallas when Mr. Kennedy was killed, but he considered it unlikely that one man could have triggered three shots within five seconds with the weapon used.

All these judgments were made on the theory that the shots were fired as the Presidential car sped away from the gunman, with the gunman having to allow only for the forward movement of the car. This supposition, of course, takes no account of the marksman himself having to move in order to swing the gun through an arc of 180 degrees.

These experts were also proceeding on the theory that Lee Oswald was a crack marksman. However, Oswald was only an "average" marksman in the Marines (Laurence Stern and Alfred E. Lewis, writing in The Washington Post, December 1). Of course, he could have improved with practice since his Marine service. On December 9, Fred Powledge, reporting from Dallas to The New York Times, quoted several persons as saying they had twice seen Oswald firing at a practice rifle range within three weeks of the assassination. One remembered him coming "alone in a battered automobile." But Mrs. Michael Paine, with whom Lee Oswald's wife had been staying, is quoted as saying that "in late October or early November she tried to teach [Oswald] how to drive her car in a parking lot, but that [he] did not even learn to park it."

The Bullets

There is general agreement among the witnesses and newspaper accounts that three shots were fired. Typical is Senator Ralph Yarborough's description, quoted by The Washington Post of November 23: "I heard three loud explosions that sounded like shots from a deer rifle. You could smell powder."

Yet there appear to be four bullets involved. In The New York Times of November 25, Fred Powledge's story from Dallas lists as part of the evidence supporting the Oswald-School-Book-Depository-Mannlicher-Carcano theory: "A bullet that Secret Service men removed from a stretcher at Parkland Hospital after the shooting, and two bullet fragments removed from the Presidential automobile matched bullets fired by the rifle [FBI] agents found inside the [warehouse]." Powledge cites Gordon Shanklin, FBI agent in charge in Dallas, as his source of information. This it would appear accounts for two bullets. In the Times of November 27, John Herber's story from Dallas says: "Three shots are known to have been fired. Two hit the President. One did not emerge. Dr. Kemp Clark, who pronounced Mr. Kennedy dead, said one struck him at about the necktie knot. 'It ranged downward and did not exit,' the surgeon said." Thus there is the bullet from the stretcher, the bullet which was found fragmented in the car, and the bullet that did not exit from the President.

An AP dispatch from Dallas in The Atlanta Constitution of November 23 quoted Dr. Robert R. Shaw, attending physician for Governor Connally: "[The Governor] seems to have been struck by just one bullet. . . . We know the wound of entrance was along the right shoulder. He was shot from above. . . . [The bullet] entered the back of his chest and moved outward. . . . It emerged from his chest and struck his wrist and thigh. . . . The bullet is still in his leg."

Now we have the stretcher bullet, the fragmented bullet, the bullet that remained in the President, and the bullet in the Governor's leg. Herbers, in the Times of the 27th, presumes "that the bullet that struck the President's head was the one recovered from the stretcher that bore the President into the hospital. He doesn't theorize about how the bullet got onto the stretcher. Dr. Clark stated that the bullet went "in and out" of the President's head. We assume this to mean that there was an exit as well as an entry wound in the President's head. Furthermore, it would seem rather likely that the fragmented bullet would be the one which made the head wound. LeMoyne Snyder, forensic medicine specialist, in his book Homicide Investigation, writes: "When a lead bullet is fired into the skull at an angle, it will sometimes fracture the skull bone in such a way that a sharp edge of bone is presented to the bullet. As a result, the bullet is cut in two lengthwise. . . . It is not likely to happen if jacketed ammunition is used."

It should be noted here, too, that while Herbers identifies the stretcher from which the bullet was removed, Powledge's story of two days earlier, in which he cites FBI agent Shanklin as his source, merely says: "A bullet the Secret Service men removed from a stretcher [our italics]."

We have no way of knowing whether the bullet remained inside the body of the President and was buried with him, or whether it was removed for evidence. Dr. Clark, in Herbers' story of the 27th, merely says that the bullet did not exit of its own accord. Then Herbers writes: "The bullet that did not exit from the President's body may have since been removed in an autopsy, but the Parkland Hospital said no autopsy was performed in Dallas." An AP dispatch in the Dallas Morning News of November 27 states that "the White House has so far declined to say whether an autopsy was performed on the body of slain President John F. Kennedy. For approximately nine hours, the body was at Bethesda, Md., Naval Hospital last Friday night and early Saturday morning [November 22 and 23]." An AP dispatch which appeared in the Pine Bluff [Ark.] Gazette of November 27 stated that "doctors at the Bethesda [Maryland] Naval Hospital made a post-mortem examination of Kennedy's wounds."

The hospital authorities also stated, according to Herbers, that "the medical report of President Kennedy's assassination, written in longhand by Dr. Clark, chief of neurosurgery at Parkland, had been given to the Secret Service and the hospital had no copy."

Another puzzling fact is that apparently the two bullets with the cloudiest pedigree are the ones that link the shooting to the gun the investigators finally settled on. Powledge's story of the 25th, quoted above, states that the stretcher bullet and the fragmented bullet matched bullets fired by FBI men from the rifle found inside the building. The rifle (identified variously as an Enfield and a Mauser) was found early in the afternoon of November 22. So were the two bullets. They were in the possession of the Dallas police and the FBI presumably, from then on. Sometime on November 23, the rifle became a Mannlicher-Carcano. Is it the custom of Italian rifle-makers to leave their names off their products, so that they cannot be identified immediately? We don't know.

We do know that the more damage done to the surface of the bullet, the more dubious becomes the accuracy of laboratory comparison with other bullets to determine which gun of a given make it was fired from, even if the make of the gun can be determined. Thus the identification of the gun that supposedly fired the assassination bullets seems to rest primarily, not on the fragmented bullet, but on a bullet allegedly found by a Secret Service man on a stretcher in Parkland Hospital, Dallas, after the President was shot.

It is not clear at this point just where this bullet came from and how it came to be on "a stretcher."

The Murderer

The way the supposed assassination gun is linked to Lee Oswald is somewhat curious, too. Powledge's story of the 25th states: "The FBI agent [Gordon Shanklin] said the young man ordered a 6.5mm rifle with telescope sight from a Chicago store last spring. The rifle was sent to an 'A. Hidell,' at Oswald's post office box here. It arrived by parcel post on March 20. Samples of Oswald's handwriting were sent yesterday to the FBI laboratory in Washington where they were found to match the handwriting in the letter ordering the rifle." In his story of the 26th, Powledge again refers to the gun: "The district attorney said the police had traced the serial number of the murder weapon, an Italian rifle with a telescopic sight, to the Chicago mail-order house that had sold Oswald a rifle last spring." Thus all the FBI and the Dallas police appear to claim so far is that the gun which fired the stretcher bullet and the gun they say Oswald ordered came from the same mail-order house.

Moreover, in the early accounts it was being said that the gun, with telescopic sight, was purchased for $12.78. But on November 25 The New York Times reproduced an advertisement from a mail-order house showing clearly that $12.78 was the price of the gun without telescopic sight. Subsequently it was reported (UPI dispatch of November 29, Atlanta Journal) that, in addition to $12.78 for the gun, Oswald paid $7.50 for the sight. Was the sight ordered in a separate letter, also in Oswald's handwriting and also signed "A. Hidell"? Was there one money order signed by Hidell for $12.78 and another for $7.50? And if so, why was the latter information held back at the time the former was announced?

In his news conference of November 24, District Attorney Wade said that Oswald's palmprints were on the gun found in the warehouse. However, first he called them fingerprints, then palmprints. And on November 27, "Edward Bennett Williams, one of the nation's leading defense lawyers . . . said the police's purported discovery of Oswald's palmprints in the room where the assassin lay in wait was not necessarily incriminating. 'Palmprints are not nearly as conclusive as fingerprints,' he said." (New York Post, November 27)

In other parts of his November 24 conference, District Attorney Wade seemed so confused that we must question whether he really knew much about the evidence against Oswald at the time. As an example of his confusion, note the following exchange referring to the reported attempt by Oswald to shoot an arresting officer in the Texas Theater (taken from transcript of the news conference published in The New York Times, November 26):

Q. Why didn't it go off?
A. It snapped. It was a misfire. Then the officers subdued him – some six officers – subdued him there in the theater, and he was brought to the police station here.
Q. Mr. Wade, why didn't the gun fire?
A. It misfired, being on the – the shell didn't explode. We have it where it hit it, but it didn't explode. It didn't fire the shell.
Q. There was one officer who said that he pulled the trigger, but he managed to put his thumb in the part before the firing pin. It didn't . . .
A. Well . . .
Q. . . . strike the – the bullet didn't explode. Is that it?
A. I don't know whether it's that or not. I know he didn't snap the gun is all I know about it.

Now, either Wade had, as part of the evidence, the misfire bullet from the pistol, with a mark on it made by the pistol's firing pin, or he didn't. He didn't seem to know whether he had it or not.

All in all, it is hard to see how the District Attorney felt able then to conclude: "I would say without any doubt he is the killer," particularly in view of the fact that some of the evidence – such as the alleged statement by Mrs. Oswald that her husband had a rifle in their garage on the night before the assassination but that it was gone the next day – would never have been admissible in a Texas court, as the police readily admitted.

We will remark on only one other aspect of the case. Dallas District Attorney Wade offered to newsmen and to the public, as one of the links in the chain of evidence against Oswald, the fact that Oswald went to his home in Oak Cliff, changed his clothes hurriedly, and left (Wade's November 24 news conference as printed in The New York Times, November 26). According to a UPI dispatch datelined Dallas in The Atlanta Journal, November 23, "Mrs. R. C. Roberts, who works for the Johnsons [from whom Oswald rented a room in Oak Cliff], said that at about 12:45 p.m. [Dallas time] Friday she had just learned that Mr. Kennedy was shot. In rushed Oswald, 'On the dead run,' she said. 'He ran to his room, came running back with a gray zipper jacket and out the door'."

The assassin's bullets were fired between 12:30 and 12:31 p.m. (Dallas time). Oswald supposedly fired them from the sixth floor of the building where he worked. Then, supposedly, he hid the rifle behind some books and packing cases and made his way to the second floor of the building. Roy S. Truly, TSBD manager, and a policeman ran into the building immediately after the shots were fired. "The two men scrambled up the stairs to the second floor. As they made their way to the back stairway, the policeman saw Oswald standing beside a soft-drink machine, sipping from a coke bottle" (Washington Post, December 1). According to the New York Post (November 27) two noted criminal lawyers have puzzled over this account. Maurice Edelbaum said: "The main incongruity I see is the report of Oswald's swift descent from the sixth floor. The moment a policeman rushed into the building Oswald was there." Raymond Brown asked: "How did he get down? Were there steps or an elevator from the sixth floor? Did anybody see him?"

Then, according to Wade, Oswald left the building and walked four blocks west to Lamar Street where he boarded a bus. He rode the bus an undetermined number of blocks and then got off. He hailed a taxicab and rode four miles to his room in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas. He arrived, according to Mrs. Roberts, just 14 minutes after the assassination. Now if the taxicab was able to average 20 miles an hour, which we think would be a maximum, the taxi ride would have taken 12 minutes. This leaves Oswald with just two minutes to shoot the President and Governor Connally, clean and hide the gun, run down four flights of stairs, search his pockets for coins, get a coke from the machine, open it, engage in some conversation with Mr. Truly and the policeman, make his way from the second floor out of the building, walk four blocks to the bus stop, board the bus and ride several blocks, and get off the bus and hail a taxi.

On December 1, however, The Washington Post quoted housekeeper Roberts as saying: "He came dashing in about 1 o'clock." This second version created new difficulties, for these reporters refer to "the floundering of the bus in the choked downtown traffic," and to the fact that Oswald "told the [cab] driver to drop him off at a corner five blocks beyond his rooming house." If the traffic was "choked" we probably need to cut in half the estimated average speed of the taxi over the four miles to Oswald's rooming house. At an average speed of 10 miles an hour, it would have taken the taxi 24 minutes to cover the distance. This would leave Oswald five minutes to shoot the President and Governor Connally, clean and hide the gun, run down four flights of stairs, search his pockets for coins, get a coke from the machine, open it, engage in some conversation with Mr. Truly and the policeman, make his way from the second floor out of the building, walk four blocks to the bus stop, board the bus and ride several blocks, and get off the bus and hail a taxi. And if we accept this version, we must allow, within the five minutes left to Oswald, the time necessary to walk the five blocks back to his rooming house from the corner to which the taxi took him.

Conclusion

Since the bulk of this analysis was written, the newsmagazines – Time, Life, Newsweek, and US News and World Report – have made public their versions of the assassination. They help add to the confusion. For example, Time (December 6) has Oswald buying rifle and sight for $19.95, while according to Newsweek (December 9) he paid $12.78. All early accounts of the assassination put the speed of the President's limousine at about 25 miles per hour, but now it has slowed to 15 miles per hour (Life, November 29), "no more than half the 25 miles per hour first estimated by authorities" (Newsweek, December 9), and 12 miles per hour (US News and World Report, December 9). The latter magazine comments: "If President Kennedy's car had been moving even 20 miles an hour, the experts say, it might have made the lead time too difficult a problem for the sniper."

The central problem – the fact that the President was wounded in the front of the throat, "the midsection of the front part of his neck," according to "staff doctors" at Parkland Hospital on November 23 (New York Times, November 24) – remains. Life and Newsweek place the President's car 170 feet and 150 feet past the turn at the time of the first shot: a shorter distance than our estimate, but much too distant from the window for a shot through the front of the neck. Life (December 6) recognizes the problem, but solves it by saying that the President was turning far to the right at the moment of impact. This explanation appears to fail for two reasons. First, Life's own pictures of the event in the issue of November 29 show the President looking straight ahead. Second, Elm Street curves left as it passes the warehouse building (see the picture on page 32H of Life, November 29), in such a way that when the first bullet struck, the President's back was to the window. In order for a bullet to have entered "the mid-section of the front part of his neck" the President would have had to turn completely around just before the shot was fired.

V+2

Negro Leader Dies In Exploding Truck

2/28/66

NATCHEZ, Miss. (AP)—A Natchez Negro leader died Monday night after an explosion ripped through his truck.

The cab of the pickup truck was blown away by the blast.

Chief of Police J. T. Robinson said his officers believed a bomb was placed beneath the cab.

Wharlest Jackson, 36, treasurer of the Natchez branch of the NAACP, was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital minutes after the blast.

Robinson said the explosion occurred on Minor Street 10 blocks from the Armstrong Tire and Rubber Co. plant where Jackson worked.

Jackson punched his card out on the plant's time clock at 8:01 p.m. (CST), Robinson said. The report of the explosion came to police headquarters 10 minutes later.

The truck's gasoline tank did not explode, said Robinson, and there was no fire. The truck struck a utility pole, splintering it and breaking lines.

Eighteen months ago, another NAACP leader here was seriously injured when a bomb exploded beneath his car.

George Metcalfe, local NAACP president, has recovered from the injuries. The blast occurred when Metcalfe turned the ignition switch on his car, parked outside the Armstrong plant.

Metcalfe was also an employe of the rubber plant.

"When are they ever going to stop? When?" said Charles Evers, state NAACP field director, when he learned of Jackson's death.

"It's a nasty night and raining," said Robinson. "We're conducting an investigation and we probably won't have anything until morning."

Robinson said the wreckage of Jackson's truck was impounded as evidence.

Civil rights forces staged a massive economic boycott in Natchez in 1965, ending it just before Christmas after wringing concessions from white leaders.

The historic Mississippi River city was tense during most of 1965 because of civil rights confrontations.

Last year the bullet-riddled body of an elder Negro man, who was not connected with civil rights activities, was found in a creek near Natchez. Authorities later arrested three white men—two of them identified as Ku Klux Klansmen—and charged them with murder in the slaying of Ben Chester White.

Jackson's death in Natchez was the first major racial violence in Mississippi this year.

Evers, who spent most of 1965 here directing the civil rights boycott, is the brother of Medgar Evers, Negro leader killed from ambush in Jackson in 1963.

U.S. Says Ex-Deputy Beat Negro Who Died

1/18/67

By GENE ROBERTS

Special to The New York Times

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 17 —The Department of Justice accused a white former deputy sheriff today of having beaten a Negro who was later taken dead from his jail cell last November in nearby Wetumpka.

Acting hours after an all-white Elmore County grand jury declined to return an indictment in the case, the department declared that the former deputy, Harvey Conner, "did willfully assault, strike, beat and injure" James Earl Motley, who died in jail Nov. 20.

Under the Government's charges, Mr. Conner faces a maximum penalty of one year's imprisonment and a $1,000 fine. The case against him is based on a Federal "color of law" statute — one of several civil rights laws passed by Congress

Continued on Page 27, Column 4

VIOLENCE + INTIMIDATION

U.S. Accuses Alabama Ex-Deputy of Beating Negro Who Died

Continued From Page 1, Col. 5

during Reconstruction — making it a misdemeanor to deprive a citizen of rights guaranteed him by the Federal Constitution.

One of these rights, the department said today, is the right not to be punished without a trial.

Mr. Conner was serving as a deputy in Elmore County, eight miles northeast of here, as recently as yesterday, when a new sheriff, Sidney Thrash, assumed office and did not reappoint him.

Three young Negroes had said in interviews that Mr. Conner had beaten Mr. Motley severely before taking him to jail. And the undertaker who took the body from the jail said it was covered with blood and the skull was fractured.

The Elmore County grand jury had it in its power, if it felt the facts warranted it, to charge Mr. Conner with assault or with murder, which can be punished by death in Alabama.

Jury Refuses to Indict

However, late last night it returned a "no bill" (a decision not to indict) in the case.

Although the grand jury gave no reason for its decsion, Dr. Joseph R. Benson, the county coroner, said last week that he had issued a formal opinion that the death was "accidential" and had informed the grand jury of his opinion.

He said law enforcement officers had told him that Mr. Motley, a construction laborer, had fallen while entering the jail, and fallen again from his bunk in the cell.

but The Alabama Journal, an afternoon daily in Montgomery, reported recently that it had located a witness, whom it did not name, who gives a different account of Mr. Motley's entry into the jail.

This witness, the Journal said, contends that Mr. Motley did not walk into the jail, but was dragged by a law enforcement officer.

Investigation by U.S.

A spokesman for the Justice Department said by telephone from Washington that the department had investigated the case for several weeks before bringing charges against Mr. Conner here today in United States Middle District Court.

He said Mr. Conner had been served with a copy of the charge, and must appear before the court on Mar. 1, when an arraignment date will be set.

The spokesman added that the department had initiated legal action against Southern law enforcement officers about 50 times in recent years, but had yet to win a conviction.

According to three Negro witnesses who were with Mr. Motley at the time of his arrest, their car was stopped by Mr. Conner and ann unidentified white man—apparently for a routine license check.

The witnesses said Mr. Conner asked if they had been drinking and Mr. Motley protested that they were on their way to Wetumpka from Montgomery, and that the deputy had no authority over what might have oocurred in Montgomery.

The witnesses added that two state patrolmen soon appeared on the scene, and that the deputy then began beating Mr. Motley while the troopers stood by.

Mr. Conner has declined to comment.

The year of

V + d

FBI Probes Incidents in 2 Dixie States

LIBERTY, Miss. (UPI)—A bomb heavily damaged a local Project Headstart office early Monday and federal agents also were sent to investigate possible arson in fires which destroyed a Negro church and an anti-poverty headquarters in Lowndes County, Ala.

Authorities said the blast was caused by an "explosive device" hurled through a front window. It went off about 4 a.m. Jimmy Sharp, a local appliance dealer who owned the small building, said the front was "blown out." A number of windows were shattered.

The office served three southwest Mississippi counties and had been in the building less than three months.

At almost the same time, the Macedonia Baptist Church 300 miles away in Fort Deposit, Ala., went up in flames. Less than 24 hours earlier, a former Episcopal church in Hayneville, about 20 miles from Fort Deposit, also burned to the ground. It was the office of the controversial anti-poverty organization called the Lowndes County Christian Movement for Human Rights, Inc.

Cosmopolitan
HEALTH CLUBS INC REDUCE

VIRGINIA 2/12/67

VIRGINIA GIVES UP VOTING ACT FIGHT

Democrats' Efforts Called Futile by Governor

Special to The New York Times

RICHMOND, Feb. 11 — Virginia Democrats virtually abandoned this week their efforts to remove the state from the provisions of the Federal Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Gov. Mills E. Godwin Jr. told the chairman of two legislative committees that had been seeking methods to circumvent the act that the matter apparently was futile.

Virginia, five other Southern states and some counties in still other states came under the terms of the law passed two years ago. The act, aimed at Southern states deemed to have discriminated against Negro voters, affects any state in which less than 50 per cent of the voting age population was registered for or voted in the Presidential election of 1964.

Virginia voting, though it set a record of 1,042,267, failed to reach 50 per cent that year.

Literacy Test Nullified

The main effect of the law in Virginia has been to nullify the state literacy test and permit registration of illiterates. As long as Virginia comes under the act, no changes in state election laws can be made without the approval of the Federal authorities.

The two legislative committees met twice last month to study methods by which Virginia might escape from the act's provisions.

Subsequently, Representative William M. Tuck, Virginia Democrat in the United States House of Representatives and a former Governor of the state, wrote to the Virginia Attorney General that any efforts seemed futile.

Mr. Tuck wrote that he had discussed the matter with the Acting United States Attorney General, Ramsey Clark.

"I got the definite impression," Mr. Tuck wrote, "tha he was determined not to mak any concession that would i any way impair the full effe tiveness of the present votin rights act" as it affects Vi ginia.

"Of course," Mr. Tuck con tinued, "the Congress has th power to remove Virginia fro the act, but, as you know, whe the bill was being considere several amendments were intr duced which would have th effect of relieving Virginia fro it, but they were voted dow overwhelmingly both in the Se ate and in the House."

'We Are Ensnared'

Mr. Tuck shared the view o most of Virginia's politician that the state should not b under the act.

"We are ensnared," he wrot "by the talons of this viciou law simply by the apathy of ou people and their failure to g to the polls and vote. We ar not charged with any overt act or wrong-doings."

This week, a Negro delegatio went to Washington to persuad the Justice Department tha Federal registrars should b sent to some sections of Vi ginia to accelerate Negro regis tration. The act provides fo such registrars, but none ha been assigned to Virginia.

Stevenson Institute to Get $5-Million From Ford Fun

CHICAGO, Feb. 11 (UPI)— The Ford Foundation announce by telegram last night that i would contribute $5-million t the Adlai E. Stevenson Institut of International Affairs as soo as $5-million had been given b other sources.

The donation was disclosed b Donald Graham, head of a driv to raise $10-million for the in stitute, named for the la United States Representative t the United Nations and sched uled to be established at th University of Chicago.

Mr. Graham said $2-millio had already been donated, in cluding contributions from th Field Foundation of Illinoi ($250,000), the Field Founda tion of New York ($250,000 and anonymous donors ($500 000).

VIRGINIA

Human Relations Intergroup - HRC

Combs Resigns Council Post

Richmond Va. Times-Dispatch 3-29-67

RICHMOND (AP)—The Rev. Robert Lee Combs has resigned as executive director of the Virginia Council on Human Relations, a post he has held since February 1965, it was reported Tuesday.

The Rev. Mr. Combs reportedly stepped down Friday, the Richmond Times - Dispatch said, in the wake of a feeling among some members of the council's Board of Directors that he was devoting too much time campaigning against the Ku Klux Klan.

He said Tuesday night he had resigned to rest and to take a vacation. Asked if he had accepted another position, he said he has no plans.

M. C. Martin of Danville, council president, will meet here Thursday with a small group of board members to discuss a possible successor, but a definite choice reportedly will not be made at that time.

Bailey G. Wharton, associate director of the council, is serving as director on an interim basis. The council describes itself as an agency that seeks through fact - finding, discussion and action to attain equal opportunity for all people in Virginia.

The council is concerned primarily with educational problems, public accommodations, equal job opportunities, fair housing and voter registration.

The Rev. Mr. Combs has been an avid campaigner in recent months against the Klan. One board member who asked not to be identified said there was a feeling he concentrated his efforts in this direction at the expense of more positive steps to achieve equal opportunities for Negroes.

The Rev. Mr. Combs came here two years ago from Norfolk, where for eight years he had been pastor of Squires Memorial Presbyterian Church.

cas.

Intergroup - HRC (RC) (ES)

Minister Cites 'Left' In Resigning

3-29-67

Richmond News Leader

The Rev. Robert Lee Combs said today that "an emphasis on the far left in the civil rights movement" was a factor in his resignation as executive director of the Virginia Council on Human Relations.

He added that he was particularly disturbed by the scheduled appearance here next month of Stokely Carmichael, an outspoken advocate of "black power," under the sponsorship of the Richmond chapter of the council.

The Rev. Mr. Combs said some members of the council's board of directors had told him they felt he was devoting too much time to campaigning against the Ku Klux Klan in Virginia.

"I felt that it was my responsibility," he added, "to keep on all extremist groups, whether they were on the left or right."

Bailey G. Wharton, associate director of the council, will serve as director on an interim basis until a successor for the Rev. Mr. Combs can be selected.

The Rev. Mr. Combs, who assumed his duties as executive director here in 1965, said he had no immediate plans for the future. He formerly served as pastor of Squires Memorial Presbyterian Church in Norfolk.

Job Program Set For Returning GIs

Richmond Newsleader 1/27/68

VIRGINIA

A statewide program to help discharged servicemen obtain jobs, housing and education when they return to Virginia was announced today by the Virginia Council on Human Relations.

Plans for the "Homeward Bound" project were revealed at the council's annual state meeting at the Hotel John Marshall.

A council spokesman, Carl E. Auvil, said the program would operate in cooperation with the defense department's "Project Transition," which helps prepare servicemen for readjustment to civilian life.

Auvil, who is from Fairfax County, is Middle Atlantic region administrator for the Job Corps. He said the council will work through its 28 biracial local councils "to make sure . . . veterans get the help they need at the place it counts most — at home."

"White and Negro Virginians have come to know one another in wartime as they seldom have . . . in our largely segregated way of life," he said. "Many will be satisfied with nothing less than equal opportunity upon return to civilian life."

He said the council will work with "transition" centers established in Virginia at Ft. Lee, Ft. Eustis, Ft. Myer, Ft. Belvoir, Langley Air Force Base, Quantico Marine Base, and Norfolk Naval Base.

The program calls for development of job-related assistance for veterans in Virginia industry, in labor unions, public agencies and private organizations. The ex-servicemen also will be advised of their rights under the so-called "GI Bill."

The council elected Auvil president in an election today.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Carolyn Worrell of Charlottesville, first vice president, and three other vice presidents, John A. Lapp of Harrisonburg, Mrs. George A. Mattes of Blacksburg, and State Sen. Henry E. Howell of Norfolk. The Rev. E. M Gregory of Richmond was elected treasurer and Mrs. Lyle Jones is the new secretary.

Two Richmonders, the Rev. J. G. Carpenter and Andrew C. Epps III, were elected to the board of directors.

Other board members elected were Mrs. Henry Borne of Danville, Drewry Brown of Charlottesville, Robert Heifetz of Peninsula, Mrs. Lyle Jones of Petersburg and Mrs. Isaac White of Franklin, Mrs. Curtis Heath and Donald Banks, addresses not listed.

State Council Initiates Program for Returnees

Richmond T.-D. 1/28/68

VIRGINIA

The Virginia Council on Human Relations announced yesterday the start of a "Homeward Bound" program to aid discharged servicemen in finding educational opportunities, jobs and housing when they return home.

The program would operate in conjunction with a similar Defense Department program called "Project Transition."

Two speakers at the first day of a two-day meeting of the VCHR outlined the plans for the local and federal programs.

At a banquet last night Alfred B. Fitt, assistant secretary of defense for manpower, outlined the basic components of the Defense Department project. Counseling, skill training, education and placement will be used in aiding the returned veteran to adjust.

Fitt told the council "hundreds of thousands of men can be salvaged from the blight of poverty, and the Defense Department—with no detriment to its primary role—is particularly well equipped to salvage them."

He said some 750,000 men are returned from the service to private life annually, and that some 50 per cent of the men about to leave the services "need and want some degree of help to make the transition to a productive civilian life."

Project Transition is a voluntary program for men with 30 to 180 days of service time remaining.

Reiterating the fact that the primary responsibility of the Defense Department is the nation's security, Fitt said "in the ultimate analysis, the foundation of our nation's security is a stable structure. We intend to do our full part in building and preserving that foundation."

In an afternoon meeting, Carl E. Auvil, a Job Corps official from Fairfax County who was elected yesterday as president of the council, said the council's Homeward Bound program was one of the major programs for which the council was appropriating money this year.

Continued on Page 2, Col. 8

Returnee Program Is Begun

Continued From First Page

The program, he said, was designed to see that "all veterans, particularly Negro veterans, receive a fair shake and an opportunity when they return home."

Auvil said the council will work through its 28 biracial councils on the program and with the seven Defense Department centers set up in Virginia as part of Project Transition.

The centers are at Norfolk Naval Base, Quantico Marine Base, Langley Air Force Base and Fts. Lee, Eustis, Myer and Belvoir.

Discriminatory practices in newspapers were among topics discussed at afternoon workshops. Classified advertising that distinguishes between "colored employment" and other employment and between "colored real estate" and other real estate was sharply criticized.

Raymond H. Boone, editor of the Richmond Afro-American, said, "I contend that newspapers constitute one of the most discriminatory organs in the world."

Boone said a "lily-white reporting staff can only breed discriminatory reporting." He said that Richmond Negro councilmen should bring before the public such discriminatory reporting in the publications of Richmond Newspapers, Inc.

The workshop participants discussed means of organizing community news letters for poverty areas in Virginia. The letters were visualized as a "household tool" for interesting and organizing poverty [illegible]

The council adopted several resolutions last night, including supporting pending legislation for free textbooks for the primary and secondary school students of Virginia, welcoming the initiative taken toward open housing ordinances in Northern Virginia, Richmond, Fredericksburg and Portsmouth, encouraging similar ordinances and legislation throughout the state, and urging the General Assembly to adopt legislation prohibiting continued discrimination in housing and employment throughout the state.

Staff Photo

Carl E. Auvil of Fairfax Greeted by Henry L. Mar

Auvil Is Head of Council on Human Relations

Kiwanis Club

Greg Lynn Bamford of Haxtun, Colo., president of the Future Farmers of America, will speak at the 12:45 p.m. meeting tomorrow of the Richmond Kiwanis Club at Hotel John Marshall.

Lions Club to Meet

The Richmond Lions Club will meet at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Hotel John Marshall. William [illegible] Coppage will discuss the program of the Virginia Commission for the Visually Handicapped.

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

August 13, 1969

#14662US Quilting Cooperative

VISTA volunteer Kenneth Gladston requested VITA assistance in helping a group of thirty low-income women in Rose Hill, North Carolina who were trying to start a quilting co-op. Assistance was needed in designing quilt patterns and in the marketing of the quilts when they were completed.

Mrs. Laura Hawks, a VITA volunteer who had experience in starting a sewing co-op in Puerto Rico produced a set of patterns and quilt designs along with basic sewing instructions.

Additional advice on production and design of quilts came from volunteer W. Leonard Reed. Reed also suggested several possible markets for the co-op's products.

At present the co-op is being formed and the first quilt samples are in production.

Inquiry Received: May 22, 1969

Case Closed:

ESD:GM/gml

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

August 15, 1969

Boston #42 Day Care Center Rehabilitation Advice

Roughly two years ago a group of women, most of them mothers, many on welfare, met to plan a day care center, one which would incorporate their ideas for a parent-run, parent-controlled day care center serving a racially and economically integrated community.

VITA-Boston received a request from this group, Neighborhood Involvement for Children's Education (N.I.C.E.), for architectural advice about a two story building on the grounds of the New England Hospital which they were interested in leasing. Their major concerns:

1. Is the building structurally sound and therefore suitable for rehabilitation?

2. What major renovations need to be made to meet state and local health and public safety standards?

3. What is a reasonable estimate of rehabilitation costs? (The women have a firm commitment from the Boston Model Cities Administration and Neighborhood Board to subcontract to N.I.C.E. one of the agency's demonstration day care centers.)

Architects and VITA volunteers, Mark Dooling and Scott Smith, had an opportunity to study the building and to get specific technical information from N.I.C.E., the hospital's deputy administrator and its chief engineer, together with volunteer Ralph Lebeau, another architect. They have been discussing with N.I.C.E. a wide range of construction problems and options and have helped to pose a number of questions for the day care group, the Model Cities Agency, and the hospital to consider.

Since its initial meetings with the team of architects, N.I.C.E. has made significant inroads in its negotiations with the hospital trustees and Model Cities personnel. And although final details have yet to be worked out, the members of N.I.C.E. are presently able to follow-up more knowledgeably possible designs and contracts for the building because of the assistance of the VITA volunteers.

Inquiry Received: June 10, 1969

Case Closed:

ESD/cmv

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

September 2, 1969

Boston #60 - Tutorial Program Development

Mike Jeffries, a VISTA Volunteer assigned to the Neighborhood Service Center of Boston State Hospital, has asked VITA-Boston for technical assistance in strengthening a community-based tutorial program with which he is working. The project is designed to utilize college students as volunteer tutors and ultimately to involve parents and adults in the community in similar roles. To judge more accurately the individual student's needs, Mike has asked VITA for help in obtaining and/or designing good reading and math skill development tests which can be administered and evaluated by non-professional tutors for students in grades 1 through 6.

The staff recruited John O'Bryant, a Boston Public School guidance counselor and member of the VITA-Boston Community Advisory Committee, to work in a face-to-face situation with Mike, his tutors and the initial 25 first through third grade tutors recruited for the program. In addition, VITA-Boston has utilized the international roster to receive by-mail assistance from VITA Volunteer James Showkeir in Flint, Michigan.

The combination of direct and by-mail aid should ultimately provide a variety of significant testing options for the tutors to choose from.

Inquiry Received:

Case Closed:

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

October 1, 1969

#15293-US Analysis of Communications Firm

Does VITA have a volunteer who can determine whether a Black communications firm has the management and technical capabilities to produce phone sets under government contract and make a profit? That was the question posed for VITA by Mr. Benjamin S. Jinx, a Loan Services Officer with the Interracial Council on Business Opportunity (ICBO) in New York.

VITA did have such a volunteer in the person of Reinhard Herink, a systems engineer at IBM-Newark. IBM granted paid leave to Mr. Herink so that he could meet with Frederick Barrett, President of Barrett Inter-Communication Products Co., Inc. and examine the company's facilities.

Barrett Inter-Communication Products is located in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn. They presently manufacture portable, hand-held, P.A. systems in a third floor rented loft space.

Herink determined that because the phone sets to be assembled and tested would not be more complex than the P.A. systems, Barrett's present employees could easily handle the product. He was also impressed by Barrett's management capabilities. In his report Herink recommended that ICBO go ahead with arranging financing for plant expansion to be able to meet the two year contract.

All parties were pleased with the VITA volunteer's assistance. ICBO stated, "Mr. Herink was a most cooperative and conscientious consultant," and that he showed an "understanding of (the) problem of minority businessmen."

Inquiry Received: August 21, 1969

Case Closed: October 1, 1969

ESD/cmv

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

October 7, 1969

#15032US Drug Retail and Wholesale

Mr. Donald Lebell, a consultant with Engineers and Scientists in Encino, California, has been working with the Economic Resource Corporation of Watts. Lebell gives free time to ERC and is now researching the possibilities of getting local Black people into the wholesale and retail marketing of pharmaceuticals.

He requested VITA's help in obtaining information on franchise operations and in contacting trade associations interested in helping minority businessmen. VITA's own library produced much of what was needed, and a volunteer, Dr. Charles Gibbons, was contacted for additional details. Dr. Gibbons serves as Administrative Consultant to the President of the Upjohn Company, a leading drug firm.

Mr. Lebell was pleased with the response and commented, "Many thanks for your instantaneous, very useful input which just arrived..."

If, once the information is evaluated, a decision is made to proceed with encouraging Black entrepreneurship in pharmaceuticals, then additional and potentially much more significant VITA assistance may be required. Already a number of other calls for VITA assistance have begun as requests for written information but eventually developed into much deeper VITA involvement, including one or more short term assignments. Often VITA's first task is to help the client better define his problem, then to follow up with additional inputs to the problem solving process itself.

Inquiry Received: July 31, 1969

Case Closed: August 13, 1969

ESD:cmv

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

October 8, 1969

14365US Day Care Center

Help in developing a community day care center was the request for VITA aid which came from John Coffin, Acting Director of Southeastern Vermont Community Action, Inc. in Bellows Falls. The town to be served by the center was Brattleboro, a labor-scarce community with jobs available but no child care facilities for low income working mothers.

Mary Gray, a Schenectady volunteer with extensive experience in launching and managing local day care centers, traveled to Brattleboro to evaluate the resources available and to discuss the proposal in detail with Mr. Coffin. Following her consultation Mrs. Gray prepared a five page report for Mr. Coffin listing several alternative approaches to funding, organizing, and operating a center in Brattleboro.

She also provided valuable tips on problems which might be encountered.

Coffin was so pleased that he labeled Mrs. Gray's service "fantastic" and stated that he found it hard to believe anyone could have come up with a person with so much expertise.

Additional VITA assistance may be required as plans for the Brattleboro center proceed. Locating sufficient operating funds continues to be a problem, but efforts to generate adequate support from the community continue.

Request Received: March 18, 1969
Case Closed: Hold status pending decision by requester for additional volunteer assistance

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

October 17, 1969

BAR-86 Recreation Planning Advice

On September 8, 1969, VITA-Boston received a request for recreation planning advice from Mrs. Ellen Hafer, a member of the Area I Recreation Committee of the Boston Model Cities Neighborhood Board. Although this community planning and review sub-committee has direct access to the skills of the City Demonstration Agency's staff as well as those of the Department of Parks and Recreation, they were particularly interested in obtaining independent opinions about other possible recreation options available to the community. In addition, they were vitally interested in obtaining assistance in helping their sub-committee to think through possible alternative uses for the expected H.U.D. and Urban Beautification funds which have been allocated for Boston.

It is significant that the VITA input has been complex, varied and responsive to the growing sophistication of the group. Because of prior research that VITA Volunteer Joan Godsman and other members of the VITA Playground Design and Development Group had done, Ellen Hafer and Nancy Flory of the Model Cities Recreation Committee had an opportunity to survey the playground library materials already on hand at the VITA office and to borrow the playground slide bank which VITA Volunteer Archie Arpiarian had collected to complement the written materials. Then, because the Education Development Center's Early Childhood Education Study Dept. had run a fairly successful three week Summer Design Workshop on play and playground materials, VITA was able to arrange a half-day workshop at E.D.C.'s Newton office for seven members of the Area I group with Allen Leitman and members of his staff who had worked on the summer project. Simultaneously, volunteer landscape architect Dick Brooks has been working closely with Mrs. Hafer on possible site plan sketches and a draft recreation proposal to be submitted to the Neighborhood Board.

This is still a very open request and a great deal more work has yet to be done. But VITA's ability to respond in a variety of ways that are meaningful to the requester will in this case be crucial.

Request Received: September 8, 1969

Case Closed:

ESD/gml

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

October 24, 1969

#13735US Urban Development Project

The case began with a letter to VITA from Mr. Dwight Wiebe, Associate Secretary of the Board of Missions and Services of the General Conference of the Mennonite Brethren Churches in Hillsboro, Kansas. Mr. Wiebe asked for assistance in advising the Board of organizations and agencies interested in assisting the Board in developing a community center and housing renewal project in a Black ghetto in Omaha, Nebraska. VITA referred Mr. Wiebe to three groups in other parts of the United States with experience in similar projects. Then, two VITA Volunteers in Omaha, Mr. & Mrs. Carl Swanson, Jr., were contacted to see if they would be interested in working with the project. Mr. Swanson, a senior process engineer with Allied Chemical Corp., and his wife, who is a lawyer, contacted the Rev. John Kliewer, Program Coordinator with the Fontenelle Memorial Community Center in Omaha. As a result of his initial meetings with Mr. Wiebe and Mr. Kliewer, Mr. Swanson determined that VITA's initial contribution should be a study of the need of the community for the proposed urban renewal housing project. Mr. & Mrs. Swanson also met with Jack Clayter, Director of the Omaha Urban League, and Nate Goodwin, head of the Urban League Housing Foundation.

The Swanson's report, which was submitted to the Mennonite Board of Missions on August 10, concluded that low-cost housing in the proposed area was urgently needed. They further recommended that housing should be integrated into a planned program for urban redevelopment in the community and that local Black people should be substantially involved in the undertaking.

Using the Swanson's report as supporting evidence, a formal request was made by the Urban League Housing Foundation to the Mennonite Church for a grant in the range of $130,000 to $160,000 which would assist low-income buyers in making settlement deposits and to provide the Foundation with a revolving fund to be used in pre-financing the projects as an interim loan until the regular government bank financed monies become available.

At present the decision of the church to provide the loan money is still pending. Its outcome will determine whether further VITA involvement is required.

Inquiry Received: October 19, 1968

Case Closed: September 30, 1969

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

October 24, 1969

#15239US Health Care Program

Eric Geiger, a VISTA Volunteer serving in New Richmond, West Virginia, wrote to VITA in June on behalf of the Wyoming County Community Health Council, a group of citizens interested in medical and health care for low-income families. Wyoming County people wanted to see the establishment of several community health centers in the area because of the extreme shortage of private facilities and medical personnel. Mr. Geiger stated, "what we desperately need is some technical assistance in determining just what our facilities should include and what the cost of the operation would be". He went on to say, "we feel that on the spot consultation would be of great benefit, as we are all lacking in the necessary technical knowledge. It seems that sometimes we don't even know what questions to ask".

VITA's search for an appropriate volunteer to fulfill this assignment produced Dr. David B. Starkweather, an Assistant Professor in the Program in Hospital Administration at the University of California at Berkeley. Dr. Starkweather, whose credentials include a Doctor of Public Health degree from UCLA seemed eminently qualified for the task and when contacted by VITA showed great enthusiasm for the assignment. VITA then arranged to have Dr. Starkweather get in touch with Eric Geiger and members of the council and to prepare a report with his recommendations.

Dr. Starkweather's visit took place, and his report is now being completed. Mr. Geiger feels that Starkweather's presence was of great value to the council. They now have a much clearer idea of how to proceed to attack the problem. He said Dr. Starkweather had "shown the way". As soon as the report is received the interested community groups will be brought together to begin making a proposal for funding of the health centers that will then be forwarded on to OEO.

Dr. Starkweather will be giving additional advice as plans for the health centers proceed and may even be called on to make a second visit if that appears to be necessary.

Inquiry Received: June 25, 1969

Case Closed:

Cal
for your case study book

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

November 14, 1969

14487US Janitorial Methods

The Jack of All Trades Service Corporation, a group of low income men doing contract janitorial work in Bennington, Vermont, received significant VITA assistance thanks to Volunteer E. Richard Bowen in Schenectady, N.Y. In April VITA received a call from VISTA Volunteer Frank J. Scanlon, who was assigned to the Bennington Community Action Center. Scanlon hoped that VITA assistance could improve the quality of Jack of All Trades' work and hopefully help the men expand their business.

In the course of four visits to Bennington Bowen trained the men in all phases of floor maintenance, recommended the correct use of machines and supplies, and helped the clients to canvass the area for new accounts. In reporting to VITA on Bowen's work, Frank Scanlon stated that he "did a very fine job working with our people and his technical assistance was invaluable. We are keeping in contact with Mr. Bowen as he has volunteered to come back to Bennington any time we run into a problem or require additional help. Our first experience with VITA has been a very good one for which we are grateful."

Bowen has continued to visit the Jack of All Trades Corporation and as a result of his continuing effort, JAT's business has improved along with the quality of the service they provide.

Inquiry Received: April 11, 1969

Case Closed: July 14, 1969

ESD/gml

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

November 14, 1969

15673US Wild Rice Processing Plant Study

Sue Jennings, a VISTA Volunteer working with the Duluth Indian Action Council, called on VITA to provide a volunteer skilled in the intricacies of financing, capital structure, and marketing and who could give advice on the feasibility of the Council's proposal to establish a wild rice processing plant to (1) increase incomes and job opportunities for both reservation and urban Indians, (2) promote cooperation between urban and reservation Indians, and (3) introduce new private industry into a economically depressed area.

Wild rice grows on several reservations in Minnesota, Michigan, and the Dakotas, a prior attempt was made to set up a processing plant on one of them. Although this first effort was a failure, Ray Murdock, President of the Indian Action Council, believed that a plant owned and operated by the Indians themselves would be successful and that a greater effort would be made by them to systematically harvest the crop and bring it to the processing plant.

Three volunteers were selected for the assignment: James MacFarland with Telex Corporation in Tulsa, Oklahoma, Robert Reuss, an employee with Dairy Queen International in Minneapolis, and Sharon Voss, a food technology expert with the Northern States Power Company, met with Sue Jennings, her husband Mike, and representatives of the Council. As a result of the successful meeting, MacFarland will do a cash flow analysis for the group and Reuss will continue with his research in the marketing area. As the project progresses Mrs. Voss will give additional assistance in the area of marketing and consumer relations.

This case illustrates VITA-USA's increasing use of volunteer teams to help define and solve complex problems.

Inquiry Received: October 3, 1969

Case Closed:

ESD/gml

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

November 18, 1969

BAR-92 Educational Space Planning

How do you make the best use of limited space and a very small budget to transform a church community center into suitable quarters for a tutorial program? At the same time, how do you make the space flexible enough to become a teenage lounge on Friday evening and church school classrooms on Sunday mornings? This is the problem volunteer Ed Cassidy was asked to tackle when VITA received a request for architectural assistance from Marilyn Carrington at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in the South End of Boston. An activist church deeply involved in the low-income community around it, St. Stephen's had been approached by the Youth Alliance to be one center for a city-wide coordinated tutorial program for teenagers. The church's Community Center staff was interested, but their facilities were inadequate for individualized learning.

Working closely with the staff, and at times, with the teenagers, architect Cassidy has had an opportunity to assess the available space; to attend church services; to meet with the parish council and hear their views; to attend several other meetings with the staff, teenagers, and church members who have volunteered to do the manual labor involved; and to generally get a feel for the politics of the situation among competing factions - young vs. old - in parish. Ed has also prepared two groups of drawings for the basement space, and is in contact with two VITA acoustical engineers whose advice he has asked for in developing plans for room partitions. His challenge is to design plans which meet the needs of the people and not just appeal to aesthetic tastes of the architect alone. To date, the men and women involved with the St. Stephen's project have been extremely pleased with the work which Ed Cassidy has done and with the commitment he has shown to the community's wishes. The way in which he has gone about his task is a good example of the value of combining the right technical skills with a sensitivity to, and appreciation of, the people served by the project.

Request Received: September 12, 1969

Case Closed:

ESD/gml

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

November 30, 1969

BAR-14 Fund Raising and Planning

This is another innovational educational project controlled and operated by inner-city parents. VITA staff were originally approached to help with planning and developing program descriptions for the project, which was operating on a deficit budget and unable to implement a number of its proposed programs. VITA has provided technical assistance in a range of areas subsequently, from building and lighting problems to assistance in the planning of a new teacher training program.

Since its original request to VITA, the project has received grants from several Boston and New Hampshire foundations, from various individuals, and is very close to receiving a substantial grant from a national foundation to support its ambitious teacher training project. Here again, the local people have acquired a number of important skills; they have created unique teacher training program designed and operated by inner-city people for urban teachers; they have called on VITA at several crucial periods in their development.

Request Received: February 12, 1969

Case Closed:

HP:cmv

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

November 30, 1969

BAR-19 Day Care Center Funds

Neighborhood Involvement for Children's Education (N.I.C.E.) is a parent-initiated and parent-operated organization, operating out of a Jamaica Plain public housing project. Over the course of the past six months they have requested VITA technical assistance in a number of areas crucial to getting their ambitious project off the ground: building selection, building redesign, parent training, planning, negotiating the "system" required to pass inspections, acquire financial support, etc.

The parents have acquired a number of important skills while doing the planning and preparation work necessary for starting a pre-school project from scratch, have already funded and operated a training program, acquired funds to maintain an office, and have been designated as a recipient of Model Cities day care support.

When these parents first approached VITA staff, it was with the germ of an idea. They are now close to the point of establishing and operating their own center. When the center goes into daily operation, they have indicated that they will also want to utilize VITA's educational and recreational resources in organizing and operating a high quality program.

Request Received: April 2, 1969

Case Closed:

HP:cmv

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

November 30, 1969

BAR-48 Community Educational Center

This is a proposal planned by the education director (former neighborhood worker) of a Boston APAC (CAP sub-agency) to establish an experimental bilingual education program for recent immigrants from Spanish and French speaking areas of Latin America.

With VITA support the client developed a complete proposal under the Office of Education guidelines for Section 309 of the Adult Education Act, met the November 14 deadline, negotiated the "downtown" system through which such proposals must be submitted, and developed a number of useful future skills and contacts in the process.

If the proposal is successful, VITA will have participated in the crucial formative stage of an important new approach to providing basic skills to this population. Even if the proposal fails, the project is now more likely to be tried under other sponsorship, and the client now feels "far more capable" of pursuing similar ventures in the future. The client is currently utilizing the services of a Washington VITA contact who is helping her learn how to keep track of the progress of her proposal through the federal system.

Request Received: June 20, 1969

Case Closed:

HP:cmv

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

November 30, 1969

BAR-67 Experimental Arts Program

This is an independent, parent-controlled school for more than 200 children from ages 4 to 15 in a low income area of Roxbury. VITA has helped to plan and build an outdoor recreational facility for the school (along with hundreds of parents, teenagers, etc.), has provided local consultants to staff members in a range of areas (testing, planning an experimental arts program), and provided technical assistance in a number of other areas.

The school has received financial support from a number of sources (Cabot Foundation, Blanchard Foundation, etc.) which staff people believe would not have been forthcoming without VITA technical assistance. Several staff members and parents have developed their own fund raising skills as part of this process. The teachers now have an outdoor recreational facility which they were sorely lacking last year - a facility which would not exist if the school had not found out about VITA's design and development work in outdoor recreation. The school itself is part of an important new development in urban education: a high-quality, experimental school "owned and operated" by the people most affected by its success - the parents of the children and community members of the staff.

Request Received: July 17, 1969

Case Closed:

HP:cmv

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

November 30, 1969

BAR-68 Young Women's Leadership Development Project

The client, Operation Exodus, Inc., requested assistance in planning and finding financial support for a large, 24 hour facility to meet the needs of black teen-age girls. This is both a residential and non-residential project providing health, counseling, educational and recreational services to girls who often have nowhere to turn at the moment.

It is a large, ambitious project. It meets a crying need identified by local people; the request was made at a time when VITA support could be crucial to its success; VITA has already been able to help the planning director, who is a local non-professional, find information and develop skills necessary to the success of the project. The project has already received support from foundations and individuals through contacts which VITA helped to initiate. VITA has also helped connect the project up with technical assistance provided by a local university in pursuing federal funds and provided consultation about other federal sources of support.

Request Received: July 28, 1969

Case Closed:

HP:cmv

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

December 23, 1969

BAR 91 - Heating System Advice

Fred Washington, Director of Hawthorne House, Inc., a community educational complex in Boston, called on VITA after he had learned of its services through the Fundraising Workshop sponsored by the Boston Office. Hawthorne House was plagued with a faulty furnace which heated unevenly in the winter, would not ignite properly, and even exploded from time to time.

Three local volunteers offered assistance: David Emerson, a physics teaching assistant at Boston University; Robert Johnson, field engineer with Vappi and Company, and Dov Glucksman, an engineer with Flowtron, Inc. Working as a team, the volunteers replaced crumbling fire bricks, adjusted the thermostat and checked for maladjustment in the fuel ignition cycle.

Results of the assistance included saving the requester sorely needed funds and making him more knowledgeable about the problem.

Inquiry Received: September 12, 1969

Case Closed: (open)

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

January 21, 1970

BAR #53 Plexiglass Coating Research

Not often are gifts of extra space troublesome additions to the operations of a low-budgeted social service agency, but the Cambridge Neighborhood House has been plagued with some very special problems because of its white elephant. A few years ago the Neighborhood House was picked as the site for the construction of an experimental building, 12' x 12', whose sides and roof were made of plexiglass. It presently serves as an annex to the central facility. Although the parents, staff, and board had hoped to use the structure for a variety of community activities, it was quickly discovered that the building had one serious drawback: the transparent walls failed to provide any privacy for the participants within the building, particularly during the evening.

Dick Franke, program director of Cambridge Neighborhood House, asked VITA for help in finding a coating which

1. would not crack or peel due to weather changes
2. would not damage the plexiglass
3. would permit natural light to pass through but would obstruct the vision of people outside the building, and
4. would be inexpensive.

VITA Volunteers Dick Maehl, head of the chemistry department at Suffolk University, and Allen Smith, General Manager of Metal Hydrides Operations for Ventron Corporation, provided technical assistance for this request and made several recommendations. Dick Franke is currently trying out two of the options which the volunteers suggested on test pieces of plexiglass.

Inquiry Received: July 8, 1969

Case: Open

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

January 30, 1970

#15958US Robinson Water System

Robinson, Pennsylvania is a community of about 500 families, many of whom have never had a regular water supply. VISTA Volunteer Mike Cunningham, who is assigned to the local Community Action Agency, asked VITA to provide a consultant who could survey the existing water system and make recommendations for improvement and expansion. That man turned out to be Edison, New Jersey town engineer John Zimmerman. Zimmerman accepted the assignment enthusiastically, and, just two weeks after the original request was received, he made a two-day visit to Robinson to collect data and to meet with Cunningham, several other VISTAs involved in the project, and Edward Rugh, Vice-President of the Mace Springs Water Company, the utility which serves Robinson

On December 1 Zimmerman submitted a preliminary review to Cunningham and Rugh, which was followed by a detailed engineering report on December 16. It included four alternative approaches to the problem, aimed at both short-term improvements of the existing system through the use of booster pumps and new lines, and a more permanent solution incorporating the use of a storage tank or reservoir to adequately increase the water supply. Cost estimates were provided for each alternative.

Another important contribution made by Zimmerman was in bringing the VISTAs together with officials of the water company for the first time. This provdied an opportunity to discuss mutual problems and led to greater cooperation between the company and the community.

Cunningham priased Zimmerman's enthusiasm, thoroughness and professional competance. "We have a place for VITA and Mr. Zimmerman in our hearts," he said.

On January 7 a meeting was held ("the best this community had had in 25 years," according to one person) to discuss the course of action. A decision was made to go ahead with the most badly needed improvements, and work is expected to begin by April 1.

Inquiry Received: November 7, 1969

Case Closed: Open

ESD/gml

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

January 30, 1970

#16125US Shasta County CAP Management

Taking advantage of VITA's availability as a resource to Community Action Programs, Paul "Ed" Forbes, Executive Director of the Shasta County Community Action Project in Redding, California, called on VITA-USA for help in organizing his office staff to work as an efficient unit. He needed assistance in program linkage, administrative work, organizational structure, filing, and message systems, and secretarial training. Total personnel involved in the operation were six working in the CAA office and an additional 25 in the field.

For the assignment, VITA called on volunteer Harry Snyder, a Universal City, California resident who is a management consultant at Cal-Tech. Cal-Tech agreed to grant Snyder leave with pay so that he could travel to Redding for two days of consultation.

Snyder was well received by Forbes and his staff. His recommedations were detailed and comprehensive. Although most of the suggestions for management improvements were given to Forbes verbally during Snyder's visit, he also submitted a ten page written report following his assignment. Snyder performed, in Forbes' words, "a marvelous job". The recommended changes are now being instituted.

Inquiry Received: November 19, 1969

Case Closed: Open

ESD/gml

VITA

VITA-USA CASE STUDY

April 3, 1970

WASH-56 Information Pamphlet

This request for information on lead poisoning in children led to a group project. A pamphlet was developed by a committee composed of representatives of two D.C. social organizations, two VITA volunteers, and VITA-DC staff. The final pamphlet was written and designed by VITA volunteer, Mrs. Walterine Swanston. It describes the general symptoms of lead poisoning, where to go in D.C. for medical attention, and offers some tips on prevention.

On April 4, 1970 four community organizations, all of whom are VITA requesters, will start distribution of the pamphlets in various sections of the D.C. community as follows: MBRI Health Center (100 pamphlets), U.P.O. Office of Volunteer Services (500), Y.O.U., Youth Organizations United, working through Black Brothers of the Ghetto (100), and NCHA's Division of Community Organizations and Social Services (100).

Y.O.U./BBG is one example of how distribution will be carried out. Four teams with 25 pamphlets each will make door to door (face to face) distribution in a selected area. Each team is composed of two teenagers, one boy and one girl. On March 31 Y.O.U. participated in an hour long broadcast over radio station WWDC. They made significant comments on lead poisoning during the broadcast.

An interesting but tragic side note is that one of the participating organization representatives has a child who has been damaged by lead poisoning.

BRIEFING PAPER

VITA-USA DIVISION PLAN, 1970

A. Results of First Eleven and One-Half Months' Operation

1. General Conclusion

The program has been sufficiently successful to say that the major hypothesis of the demonstration has been proved:

> "that VITA's volunteer force, which has been utilized effectively in aiding developing countries, can be applied to help solve problems of poverty in the USA."

The VITA-USA program is unique in its ability to mobilize and apply volunteers for use in urban and rural poverty settings and on a national scale. The basic principles that have led to acceptance by community people needing help are:

- being responsive; we assist those who request help and in the way they desire

- performing well; capable staff is essential to handle volunteer selection, logistics of volunteer assignments, follow-up, etc.

Chapter Projects are needed to assist programs in metropolitan areas where manpower resources covering a broad skill spectrum can be mobilized.

The National Consulting Service is needed mostly by small cities and rural areas.

2. Quantity of Effort

During the 11½ months since the VITA-USA program was launched, 505 requests were received by the program. Responding to them, over 500 volunteers contributed 11,500 hours.

The program start-up was smooth, with top-notch staff being recruited within target dates. (Interestingly, six of the staff are ex-Peace Corps volunteers.) Methods and procedures have been developed, and an on-going evaluation permits continual improvement of these procedures.

Voluntary technical assistance is extremely economical since the consulting time is free.

3. Quality of Effort

Evaluation of the Boston Project and the National Consulting Service include the following conclusions on operating procedures:

- The requesters give VITA-USA high marks on volunteer selection and speed of response.

- VITA-USA cases involve mostly "soft technology" and are much more complex than previous international requests. They require more in-depth, on-site help and follow-up.

- Volunteers want feedback on results of their projects.

- For National Consulting Service: in 25 of 43 cases sampled VITA provided valuable input. VITA was of no help in two cases. The results of other cases are pending or not known.

- People do not clearly understand VITA-USA services from the literature. Communication about VITA's services must be improved.

Unique Characteristics

Evaluation interviews with requesters and volunteers point out some very special qualities of volunteer consulting:

a. Flexibility and Concern. Frequent personal involvement is possible. Other sources of help cannot do this easily because of "red tape".

b. Bridge to other private or governmental resources.

c. Availability. For the first time in many communities VITA represents a source of free technical assistance. Too often in the past community projects needing such assistance have gone without and failed.

d. Objectivity. Volunteers serve as objective outsiders; advice can be used publicly or privately to help the requester achieve his goals.

Examples illustrating these points:

- An objective study by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Swanson, Omaha volunteers, is being used by the Urban League there to secure a $160,000 housing grant. Swanson is a senior process engineer with the Allied Chemical Co., and Mrs. Swanson is a lawyer.

- A California Community Action Agency director reports valuable assistance in changing organization structure and personnel methods as a result of management analysis by VITA Volunteer, Dr. Carl Berger, who owns Electrolyte Technologies, Inc., Santa Ana, California. This case is still active after five visits and as many reports by the volunteer.

- Reflecting on VITA's assistance, a CAA director in West Virginia commented:

  "I had contacted OEO in Washington and was told that the chances of getting a consulting firm were very dim. I contacted VITA but did not expect any results....VITA provided the assistance asked for and more....provided a stimulus to the project when many were discouraged and about to give up hope. Dr. Starkweather has shown the way. We have hired a health specialist and are preparing the proposal for funding." (VITA Volunteer David Starkweather is a professor of Hospital Administration at U. of California at Berkeley.)

- "We didn't realize volunteers could do such a tremendous job", was the comment made by the Black Economic Union of Cleveland. VITA, through a volunteer in California, made contact with the Association of Systems Management in Cleveland and secured a local volunteer to assist B.E.U. in instituting a records and reporting system for its contracted consulting service to CAAs in Region IV.

Areas of Greatest Contribution

VITA has identified five areas of special expertise where volunteer consultation has been particularly effective in stimulating successful projects. They are, with examples:

a. Management Methods and Systems

VITA Volunteer Dave Briscoe (Lear Siegler, Oklahoma City) applied his experience in management systems to the problem of designing a manpower management plan for a voluntary services program of Dallas' CAA. The assistance included advice on recruiting, assigning, motivating, training, and administering volunteer workers. Mrs. L. Griffin, the CAA's volunteer director, instituted the system and now has eight volunteer coordinators utilizing hundreds of volunteers.

The development of a community services referral center for a Minnesota Model Cities Program is being aided by volunteer James Vint (J. C. Penney, Milwaukee), who has been asked to establish a comprehensive records and recording system for the project.

b. How to Obtain Financial Support

YOU, an amalgamation of over 200 youth gangs, needed assistance in costing projects and writing proposals for business ventures and community projects. VITA Volunteer Don Roha, an employee of VITRO, advised YOU on negotiating and handling subcontracts and on structuring a management development and training program for YOU staff. He developed business forms, prepared a manual for writing proposals, and conducted staff seminars. VITA's impact on YOU is demonstrated by the fact that after coaching by Mr. Roha and others the group successfully negotiated three contracts, with a fourth expected to be approved soon.

VITA-Boston is running a series of workshops to assist community groups in securing funds through private and public sources and to give expertise in this area to additional VITA volunteers so that they can be prepared to assist requesters, not only in Boston, but also in other locations through the National Consulting Service. To date, five community projects have received 13 grants totaling $263,500, partly as a result of VITA's help.

c. Education of the Economically Disadvantaged

Leila Robbins, a Commonwealth Service Corps volunteer who works at the CAA neighborhood center in Dorchester, Mass., asked for help in setting up a summer tutorial program for children. The VITA-Boston staff member selected to coordinate this request was particularly qualified to help, having once been a director of a tutorial program. The Storefront Learning Center (SLC) in the local area, itself a former requester, was asked to assist, and Mrs. Robbins was able to attend the SLC training program. Four VITA volunteers then conducted a workshop for Mrs. Robbins' staff and recruited teaching candidates for the program.

Help in developing a community day care center in southern Vermont was provided by VITA Volunteer, Mrs. Mary Gray. Thanks to Mrs. Gray's extensive experience in the area and her detailed recommendation, community support and facilities for the center are now being developed. The requester labeled her service "fantastic" and stated it was hard to believe that anyone could have found a person with so much expertise.

d. Recreation and Playgrounds

Boston VITA volunteers, working in the Chapter's Design and Development group, were asked to develop a playground for the Highland Park Free School. Participating in the design effort were members of the Institute of Art and the requesting parents. The one day "build-in" by VITA volunteers, parents, and children resulted in construction of a variety of structures that are very popular with the children and that would have cost about $5500 if they had been built commercially. The prototypes developed are being used by VITA to learn lessons for future playground projects. Already the Boston group has used its experience to assist playground design requesters in Cambridge, Mass. and Washington, D.C.

e. Business Development, Particularly in Rural and Small Town Areas

"Jack of All Trades Service Corporation", a maintenance business formed by the Bennington-Rutland Opportunity Council, Inc., received twelve visits from volunteer Richard Bowen (Stanley Home Products, Schenectady, N. Y.) on systems of floor maintenance, equipment procurement, job bidding. "Mr. Bowen brought over a floor machine and worked day and night to train the men. He visited our customers and set up a program of cleaning for each. He also helped with calls on new customers, increasing business." Sales of $10,000 in six months have been realized; much of this flowed to those previously out of work.

A Kentucky requester, working with a crafts project, stated, "VITA provided the assistance needed to this small agency which had neither funds nor confidence to seek elsewhere. In areas where volunteers were not available, excellent referrals were made, quite unlike others I have dealt with." Special praise was given to two volunteers, Malcolm Benjamin, an expert in product design for the United Nations, and Jean Godsman, public relations assistant with Hugh Stubbins and Associates (architects) in Boston. As a result of VITA's help in costing and market sources, a grant providing initial capital has been obtained and a market established in Washington, DC. Sixty people are involved.

4. VITA-USA has developed a model for establishing a nationwide network of effective urban chapter programs. Whereas one chapter program was the goal for the first year, two staffed projects have been started. The Boston Project is already up to over 500 volunteer man hours per month being devoted to projects with high success potential. The District of Columbia Project, though only four months old, has reached 250 volunteer hours, matching so far the growth experience in Boston.

B. Program Objectives for 1970

1. Scale up the demonstration program.

Targets: 32,000 volunteer man hours
Volunteers involved: 2500
Requesters directly affected: 25,000+

2. Increase impact of volunteer effort through specialization and in-depth involvement in high priority cases. At least ten priority centers of expertise will be developed by the end of 1970.

3. Focus on problems of larger urban areas through VITA chapter programs.

Targets:

a. Select and initiate staffed projects in five new locations. Selection of sites will be based on need, competing resources, availability of leadership and volunteers, opportunity to get information on new variables, such as the ethnic groups served, size of metropolitan area, representation of several parts of country.

b. Expand Boston Project to a steady state operation, handling at least 650 volunteer man hours/month. At least 40 cases will have 4 or more consultants (a rough index of significance of VITA's involvement). Workshops will be held and packets of useful materials developed for at least 2 specialty areas.

c. Expand DC-Are Project to at least 500 volunteer hour/month level. Uncover at least 5 major program opportunities for national program as a result of DC location.

d. Begin the move to privately finance chapter programs; chapter income target: $30,000.

4. Focus on problems of small cities and rural areas through the National Consulting Service. Experiment with a Rural Field Specialist to provide the kind of on-the-spot assistance in problem definition, volunteer support, and recruitment that has made chapter programs so successful.

5. Communicate more effectively to: recruit volunteers in needed specialties, tell potential requesters what VITA can do, foster interchange of information on problems and their solution.

6. Mount continuing research and evaluation efforts to learn about the technical assistance and voluntary action processes. Data from these studies will make it possible to determine best areas for future VITA emphasis and will be a major input to VITA's continuing long range planning activity.

7. Establish contact with key personnel in at least 25 major corporations to enlarge VITA's capability for getting volunteers on leave with pay for short term assignments.

13797 U.S. Airstrip Orientation

Having learned of VITA's services through a friend, VISTA volunteer, David P. Cluchey wrote asking for advice on construction and proper orientation and maintenance for an airstrip near a small Aleut Village located on the southwestern end of Kodiak Island, Alaska. Because of heavy winds and rough seas, seaplane landings were often impossible, and the village was frequently forced to depend on Coast Guard helicopters in emergencies. In keeping with VITA's practice of including interesting problems in its newsletter to generate responses and to maintain volunteers interested in the VITA program, the December VITA Newsletter carried a summary of Cluchey's request. The response from volunteers was widespread and immediate. Several of them recommended articles and government manuals which VITA obtained for Mr. Cluchey. He was also provided with contacts in Alaska.

Using a small tractor, some 3,000 feet of the runway were cut this spring. The village plans to continue working on the airstrip through the summer so that it can be ready for surfacing in the fall.

An important outcome of the request is the development of a special "Airstrip Handbook" by the VITA Chapter at Lockheed of Georgia. Several Lockheed volunteers had already begun work on the handbook when Cluchey's request arrived, but his call for help has stimulated efforts to complete the project. Through VITA's publications office the handbook will be available to others with similar problems throughout the world.

TAR-3 HOTEL EMPLOYEE TRAINING
TAR-12 HOTEL TRAINING

On February 6 VITA volunteer, Richard Pew from the School of Hotel Administration, University of New Hampshire, spent the afternoon counseling members of the firm, Massachusetts Achievement Trainers (MAT) of Dorchester, Mass.

MAT is a pioneer business venture started by seven negroes who at the time of the firm's founding could claim more prison years than school years. Professor Pew visited in answer to MAT President, Robert McCowan, who asked for someone to give them guidance regarding career ladders, employment pitfalls, and other characteristics of the hotel business. MAT was about to run a Labor Department financed motivational training program for so-called "hard core" unemployed who would be hired by the hotel industry. MAT personnel were pros in the motivational training field but needed exposure to the hotel field to make their sessions more effective.

Mr. McCowan was so pleased with the VITA help that he decided to become a VITA volunteer and help others. In July Mr. McCowan will go to Liberty, New York on his first short term assignment. He will help the Neighborhood Youth Corps of Sullivan County to determine the feasibility of starting an on-the-job training program for "hard core" unemployed in the area's hotel industry.

June 1969

BAR-45 TUTORIAL STAFF TRAINING

Leila Robbins, a neighborhood worker from the Commonwealth Service Corps, is setting up and operating a summer tutorial program for children, kindergarten through sixth grade. She requested help in planning the program, recruiting volunteers to help train her staff prior to its beginning, and for teachers who would volunteer from two to four mornings per week to teach English and math as a part of the program.

The VITA staff provided some immediate planning assistance (one staff member is a former director of a tutorial program) and then got help from one of our other requesters, the Storefront Learning Center (SLC), who made it possible for Mrs. Robbins to participate in the SLC training program. VITA has contacted four volunteer specialists who have agreed to run a series of training workshops for her staff. VITA is now reviewing qualifications of several candidates for the English and math volunteer teaching assignments.

Fast, helpful response leads to more requests. About three days after starting work on this case, a second request came from another neighborhood worker in the Dorchester APAC. The requester and her boss have visited the VITA office to see what kind of help might be provided in establishing a consumer program.

A NOTE ON COMPLETING YOUR VITA RESUME

VITA Volunteers are selected for work on inquiries and other projects according to "key words:--specific descriptive terms--listed on their resumes under EDUCATION and EXPERIENCE. Therefore, the words you use in completing your form will, in large measure, determine your own participation.

Specific subject fields are generally more useful than operational functions as key words. That is, words like ABRASIVES, LEATHER, DEHYRATION and PUMPS are more helpful to us than PLANNING, TESTING, or PRODUCT EVALUATION.

The attached key word list from past VITA inquiries will also help relate your experience to the questions we most frequently receive. Please circle the areas in which you are proficient.

Under Item 2 would you indicate also what areas within the U.S. you might have special knowledge? Under SPECIAL INTERESTS please indicate also if you would be available for short-term assignment within the United States. Back of resume may be used for additional information.

PLEASE ADVISE US OF ANY CHANGE IN YOUR ADDRESS

VITA Volunteers for International Technical Assistance, Inc.

College Campus
Schenectady, New York 12308

OFFICE USE

Received:

Class:

PERSONAL RESUME

Please fill out this form carefully. The data you furnish will help us to use your talents most effectively.

PLEASE PRINT OR TYPE

MR. _____
Last First Middle Date of birth

HOME ADDRESS _____
Number & Street City State Zip Code Telephone

BUSINESS _____
Employer Position

ADDRESS _____
Number & Street City State Zip Code Telephone

EDUCATION: (Specify School, Degree(s), Field of study)

_____

_____

EXPERIENCE: Briefly describe areas in which you have had experience or study. (Technical, Business, Teaching, Skills, Hobbies, other interests.) Use additional sheet if necessary. If you have a spare business resume form, it would be helpful if you could attach a copy for our use as a source of additional key words.

_____

_____

_____

_____

PROFESSIONAL SOCIETIES: _____

_____

KNOWLEDGE OF LANGUAGE AND OTHER COUNTRIES:

1. Language Ability to translate: (writing) ENGLISH into _____; _____ into ENGLISH
_____; _____
_____; _____
_____; _____
_____; _____

Speaking ability in:
_____
_____
_____
_____

2. Of what countries or areas other than the U. S. do you have specialized knowledge? (Indicate extent of familiarity with each country) _____

_____

_____

3. Do you travel abroad? _____ If so, to where? _____

SPECIAL INTERESTS: Please indicate those activities which might be of interest to you as a VITA volunteer.

____ Answer specific inquiries
____ Write & edit reports
____ Illustrate publications
____ Perform library searches
____ Translate
____ Develop a retirement hobby
____ Work in a leadership capacity

____ Construct models & prototypes
Wood
Metal
____ Participate in a design and development project
____ Consider a temporary overseas assignment

(others)
_____
_____
_____
_____
_____
_____

Please return completed form to the above address

for office use

FOR OFFICE USE

(do not write below this line)

		PARTICIPATION		SPECIAL NOTES
Prob.	Date

DESCRIPTIVE TERMS FOR RESUMES
(Please add specific terms where applicable)

Administration & Management
- MANAGEMENT ENGINEERING
- SAFETY
- OTHER

Agriculture/Biology
- AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTRY
  - Fertilizers, Hydroponics,
  - Pesticides, Soil Analysis,
  - Weed killers
- AGRICULTURAL ECONOMICS
  - Conservation, Land Management
- AGRICULTURAL ENGINEERING
  - Buildings, Equipment,
  - Machinery, Tools
- ANIMAL HUSBANDRY (Temperate/Tropical)
  - Cattle, Poultry,
  - Other animals
  - Animal diseases
- BIOLOGY
  - Ecology, Genetics,
  - Marine Biology
- FISHERIES
  - Fish Culture: Temperate/Tropical
  - Fishing: Commercial/Hobby
- FORESTRY
- PLANT SCIENCE (Temperate/Tropical)
  - Grain crops, Fiber crops,
  - Fruits, Root crops, Vegetables
  - Plant diseases
- PEST CONTROL
  - Bats, Birds,
  - Insects, Rodents, Weeds

Arts and Crafts
- GRAPHIC ARTS
  - Block-printing, Painting,
  - Photography, Silk-screening
- JEWELRY
  - Gems, Metal
- LEATHERWORK
- METALWORK
- MUSIC
- POTTERY
  - Clays, Glazes, Kilns
- WEAVING
  - Dyeing, Sewing, Spinning
- WOODWORKING
- OTHER CRAFTS

Building and Construction
- BLOCKS
  - Brick, Concrete, Earth
- BUILDING MATERIALS
  - Concrete, Earth, Wood
- DESIGNS

Chemistry
- BIOCHEMISTRY
- INORGANIC
- ORGANIC
- PHYSICAL CHEMISTRY

Civil Engineering
- SANITARY ENGINEERING
  - Sewage treatment, Toilet facilities
- SOIL MECHANICS
- TRANSPORTATION
  - Bridges, Roads, Waterways
- WASTE DISPOSAL
  - Sanitary, Industrial
  - (also see Water)

Development
- COTTAGE INDUSTRIES
- INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT
- SMALL BUSINESS
- URBAN PLANNING

Economics
- ACCOUNTING
- COMMERCE
  - Export-Import, Marketing,
  - Market Surveys
- COOPERATIVES

Electrical & Electronic Engineering
- BATTERIES
- COMMUNICATION EQUIPMENT
- COMPUTERS
  - Data Processing, Programming
- GENERATORS
- MOTORS
- POWER DISTRIBUTION

Food and Nutrition
- BEVERAGES
  - Distillation, Fermentation
- FOOD PROCESSING (Mechanical)
  - Grinding, Shelling, Husking
  - Oil presses, Butchering
- FOOD PRESERVING
  - Canning, Drying, Freezing
  - Salting, Smoking, Additives
- NUTRITION
  - Diets, Food Values, Mass Feeding

(over)

DESCRIPTIVE TERMS FOR RESUMES
(continued)

Geology and Mineralogy
- MINERAL RESOURCES
- MINERAL PROCESSING
- MINING ENGINEERING
- (also see Water)

Home Economics
- CLEANING & LAUNDRY
- CLOTHES MAKING
- COOKING DEVICES
- HOUSEHOLD EQUIPMENT

Library Science
- BIBLIOGRAPHIES
- LIBRARY SEARCHES
- TECHNICAL INFORMATION CENTERS

Medicine
- CONTRACEPTION
- EQUIPMENT
- SUPPLIES
  - Drugs
- TROPICAL MEDICINE
- PARASITOLOGY
- PUBLIC HEALTH

Power Sources (Non Electric)
- ANIMAL & HUMAN POWER
  - Harness
- FUELS
  - Charcoal, Coal, Fuel Cells, Gas, Oil, Wood
- SOLAR POWER
  - Heating, Motors, Distillation, Cooling
- WATERWHEELS
- WINDMILLS

Social Sciences
- ANTHROPOLOGY
  - Effect of Technology on Culture
- EDUCATION
  - Administration, Recreation, Primary, Secondary, Higher, Teaching Aids, Training Programs
- PSYCHOLOGY
  - Personnel Relations, Therapy
- SOCIOLOGY

Special Applications - such as:
- COOLING & VENTILATING EQUIPMENT

Special Knowledge of Materials - such as:
- ADHESIVES & SEALS
- COATINGS & FINISHES
- COSMETICS
- FIBERS
  - Animal, Synthetic, Vegetable
- LEATHER
  - Tanning
- OILS & LUBRICANTS
  - Fish, Petroleum, Animal, Vegetable
- ORGANIC MATERIALS - such as:
  - Bagasse, Coir, Copra, Waxes
- PAPER PRODUCTS
- PETROLEUM PRODUCTS
- PLASTICS
- RUBBER
- SOLVENTS, CLEANERS, ABRASIVES
- TEXTILES
- WOOD & WOOD PRODUCTS

Water
- PURIFICATION
  - Algae Control, Distillation, Chlorination, Filters
- SOURCES
  - Ground Water, Surface Water, Well Construction: Deep, Shallow, Dams, Ponds, Reservoirs, Fresh water from the ocean
- WATER SUPPLY
  - Pumps: Commercial, Deep Well, Simple, Hydraulic Rams
- IRRIGATION & DRAINAGE

Writing
- JOURNALISM
- TECHNICAL WRITING
  - Instruction Manuals

Vehicles
- AUTOMOTIVE
- ANIMAL-DRAWN
- SHIPS & BOATS
- TRAINS

VITA-USA

technical and professional volunteers available to those attacking the problems of poverty in the u.s.a.

A Division of: VOLUNTEERS for INTERNATIONAL TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE, Inc.

what is VITA?

VITA is a privately sponsored, international organization, providing technical and professional assistance to raise living standards in developing areas of the world. Work is accomplished by an expanding roster of more than 6000 volunteers. VITA talents embrace a broad spectrum of experts:—accountants, architects, engineers, businessmen, educators, and other professionals.

Perched atop a simple, easy-to-build playground module, two Boston residents survey the results of a one day build-in. Using plans produced by the Design and Development Group of VITA's Boston Chapter, two "instant" playgrounds have been created in communities where recreation facilities for children were sorely lacking. Playground plans and other materials produced by VITA are available free to self-help projects throughout the country.

effective response

Since 1960, more than 15,000 requests for assistance have been serviced. VITA consultants have devised solar cookers for fuel-starved areas, bridges for Guatemala, rice cleaners for Ghana, water systems for India, pottery business in Cameroon, and better plow points for Philippine farmers.

VITA-USA division

VITA's international performance prompted a grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity "To bring a new dimension of private voluntary effort to bear on the problems of poverty in the U.S.A." VITA-USA was established to fulfill this commitment .

types of service

Upon request, VITA Volunteers contribute technical, or professional aid to any anti-poverty program, public or private. Assistance may take one of several forms:

consulting by mail

VITA'S traditional form of overseas assistance, consulting by mail, is used for many USA requests as well. This has included providing information on cooperatives, establishing cottage industries, design of a small plane airstrip, and plans for playground equipment.

on-the-spot consultation

Some assignments require volunteers to give full-time short-term assistance to an anti-poverty effort. Travel expenses are paid by VITA, and the volunteer's employer makes an important contribution by continuing his salary during the consultation period. A recent example: an Oklahoma City Volunteer is helping the Dallas Community Action Agency develop a volunteer manpower management system.

community involvement

Many VITA chapter members are responding to requests from their own communities. Usually, this does not require full-time absence from their jobs. A pilot project in Boston has been established with a small staff to coordinate and augment the work of VITA's chapter members there. Similar pilot projects in other cities are planned. Requests have included contract review advice for a Washington youth organization's business venture and development of self-help housing plans for a farm laborers' group in Long Island.

---

who may apply for VITA aid

Requests for assistance are encouraged from any individual, or from any private, community, or government sponsored, anti-poverty enterprise. Inquiries are welcome from community-action agencies, neighborhood councils, members of VISTA, small businessmen, model cities programs, and other self-help developments, urban or rural, public or private.

how to apply

Please follow these directions in your letter of request for aid.

1. Describe your project in detail. Include rough sketches when helpful.

2. List any special requirements, or limitations that apply.

3. Indicate deadline for action; also urgency of project.

4. If project requires an on-the-spot consultation, please add reasons; also estimated days required, and most convenient dates for visit.

5. Describe results and benefits expected.

Be sure your letter shows complete address, zip code and telephone number. Indicate your affiliation with an agency or business, if any.

Mail your request to:

VITA-USA

College Campus, Schenectady, N.Y. 12308

Telephone: 518-372-5696

NON-PROFIT

The services of VITA are free. The cost of administering VITA's programs are met by tax-deductible contributions from individuals, foundations, corporations, and by government grants.

board of directors

Chairman—THEODORE D. LOCKWOOD, President, Trinity College
President—BENO STERNLICHT, Chairman of the Board, Mechanical Technology, Inc.
Vice President—ROBERT G. LUCE, Manager, Advanced Development Activity, General Electric Company
Secretary—DANIEL JOHNSON, Design Engineer, General Electric Company
Treasurer—ARTHUR A. BIANCHI, C.P.A., Charles L. Marvin & Company
HARVEY BROOKS, Dean, Division of Engineering and Applied Physics, Harvard University
HARRISON S. BROWN, Foreign Secretary, National Academy of Sciences, and Professor of Geochemistry, California Institute of Technology
*HENRI G. BUSIGNIES, Senior Vice President, International Telephone & Telgpragh Corporation
*WALKER L. CISLER, Chairman of the Board, Detroit-Edison Company
MITCHELL T. CURTIS, Chairman of the Board, Mitchell T. Curtis & Company
CLARENCE E. DAVIES, Secretary Emeritus, American Society of Mechanical Engineers
A. LAWRENCE ELDER, former Director, Institute of Nutrition, Corn Products Company
JAMES M. GAVIN, Chairman of the Board, Arthur D. Little, Inc., Cambridge, Mass.
*ROBERT M. GOLDHOFF, Manager, Metallurgical Applied Research, General Electric Company
ALBERT S. HARTHEIMER, Hartheimer Associates
WILLIAM B. HILLIG, Manager, Composite Materials Program, General Electric Company
CLARENCE H. LINDER, President, Engineers Joint Council; Vice President (retired), General Electric Company
WALTER LOWEN, Union College (on leave). Serving as Director, School of Advanced Technology, State University of New York
HAROLD C. MARTIN, President, Union College
*JAMES D. PALMER, Dean of Engineering & Science, Union College
DANIEL PARKER, Chairman of the Board, Parker Pen Co.; Chairman of the Board, National Association of Manufacturers
WILLIAM W. PENN, JR., former President, DATA International Assistance Corps
GERARD PIEL, President & Publisher, Scientific American, Inc.
MILLARD H. PRYOR, Chairman of the Board, Barnes Manufacturing Company
FREDERICK SEITZ, President, Rockefeller University
H. MYRL STEARNS, Director and Consultant, Varian Associates, Palo Alto, California
DOUGLAS STRAIN, President, Electro-Scientific Industries, Portland, Oregon
*HOBART TAYLOR, JR., Attorney, Washington, D. C.
ROBERT M. WALKER, McDonnell Professor of Physics and Director, Laboratory for Space Physics, Washington University
JOHN W. WIERSMA, Consultant

advisory council

OWEN CHAMBERLAIN, Lawrence Radiation Laboratory, University of California, Berkeley (Nobel Laureate)
FREEMAN DYSON, Institute for Advanced Studies, Princeton, N. J.
AUGUSTUS B. KINZEL, President, Salk Institute for Biological Studies
WILLIAM PERSEN, Senior Vice President and Editorial Director, Business International DAEL WOLFLE, Executive Director, American Association for the Advancement of Science staff

CHARLES E. LAWSON, Vice President for Development
KENNETH G. KALB, Executive Director, VITA International BENJAMIN P. COE, Executive Director, VITA-USA

*VITA-USA ADVISORY COMMITTEE

10M-8/69

Nearly All on Relief Are Unemployable

WELFARE

AC 4/20/67

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE JR.

(Copyright 1967 by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—Less than 1 per cent of the 7.3 million Americans on public welfare are capable of getting off the relief rolls and going to work, according to a government analysis.

The results of the analysis—representing the first systematic attempt to identify the actual number of "employables" on welfare — were disclosed Wednesday night by presidential adie Joseph A. Califano Jr. in a speech to the Washington chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, a fraternity of journalists.

One effect of the study may be to help dispel the notion that the relief rolls, in the words of one official here, "are full of able-bodied men sitting around drinking beer." Califano asserted that at any given moment only 50,000 of the 7.3 million on welfare are "capable of being given job skills and training that will make them self-sufficient."

NEW SYSTEMS

Califano, regarded as President Johnson's top aide on domestic matters, used the welfare study to illustrate what he called the administration's new "systems" approach to familiar problems such as transportation, urban blight and education.

In a long and at times philosophical dissertation on what he termed the "largely unwritten" story of the administration, Califano said Johnson's willingness to "ask the hard questions" and seek new "alternatives" to old ways of doing things had "led us to abandon many old slogans and to conduct our national dialog on the basis of facts."

The welfare study stemmed from precisely this search for new answers, Califano said. He suggested that the study had already produced one major casualty—the notion that there are "many millions" on welfare who are capable of working.

THE BREAKDOWN

Of the 7.3 million on the welfare rolls, he said:

—2.1 million, mostly women, are 65 or over, with a median age of 72.

—700,000 are either blind or "so severely handicapped that their work potential, if any, is extremely limited."

—3.5 million are children whose parents cannot support them.

—The remaining one million-plus are the parents of those children — about 900,000 mothers and 150,000 fathers.

ABOUT FATHERS

Of the 150,000 fathers, Califano said, two-thirds are incapacitated. Only about 50,000 "are capable of being given job skills and training that will make them self-sufficient," he said.

The analysis — which consists essentially of a new compilation and interpretation of scattered statistics that have become available in the last year or two — grew out of a luncheon discussion between Califano and William Gorham, assistant secretary for program planning in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Both Gorham, who helped conduct the study, and Califano are graduates of Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara's team of computer-oriented "whiz kids."

"All the New
That's Fit to Pr

VOL. CXVI....No. 39,

U.S. FINDS ONLY 1% ON WELFARE LISTS ARE ABLE TO WORK

Aide to Johnson Discloses New 'Systems' Study of 7.3 Million Getting Help

WELFARE

'INNOVATION' STRESSED

NYT 4/20/67

'Revolution in Management' of Government Ascribed to the Administration

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE JR.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 19 — Less than 1 per cent of the 7.3 million Americans on public welfare are capable of getting off the relief rolls and going to work, according to a Government analysis.

The results of the analysis—representing the first systematic attempt to determine the number of "employables" on welfare—were disclosed tonight by a Presidential aide, Joseph A. Califano Jr., in a speech prepared for delivery to the Washington chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, a fraternity of journalists.

Mr. Califano asserted that at any given moment only 50,000 of the 7.3 million on welfare are "capable of being given job skills and training that will make them self-sufficient."

Mr. Califano, generally regarded as President Johnson's top aide on domestic matters, used the welfare study to illustrate what he called the Administration's new "systems" approach to familiar problems such as transportation, urban blight and education.

In a dissertation on what he termed the "largely unwritten" nalists.

Mr. Califano asserted that at any given moment only 50,000 of the 7.3 million on welfare are "capable of being given job skills and training that will make them self-sufficient."

Mr. Califano, generally regarded as President Johnson's top aide on domestic matters, used the welfare study to illustrate what he called the Administration's new "systems" approach to familiar problems such as transportation, urban blight and education.

In a dissertation on what he termed the "largely unwritten" story of the Administration, Mr. Califano said Mr. Johnson's willingness to "ask the hard questions" and seek new "alternatives" to old ways of doing things had led "us to abandon many old slogans and to conduct our national dialogue on the basis of facts."

Notion Termed a Casualty

The welfare study stemmed from this search for new answers, Mr. Califano said. He suggested that the study had already produced one major casualty — the notion that "many millions" on welfare are capable of working.

Of the 7.3 million on the rolls, he said:

¶2.1 million, mostly women, are 65 or over, with a median age of 72.

¶700,000 are either blind or "so severely handicapped that their work potential, if any, is extremely limited."

¶3.5 million are children whose parents cannot support them.

¶The million others are the parents of those children—about 900,000 mothers and 150,000 fathers.

Of the 150,000 fathers, Mr. Califano said, two-thirds are incapacitated.

"Only some 50,000 are capable of being given job skills and training that will make them self-sufficient," he said.

The analysis — which consists essentially of a new compilation and interpretation of scattered statistics that have become available in the last year or two—grew out of a luncheon discussion between

Continued on Page 30, Column 3

Welfare Survey Finds Only 1% on Rolls Employable

Continued From Page 1, Col. 1

Mr. Califano and William Gorham, Assistant Secretary for Program Planning in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Both Mr. Gorham, who helped conduct the study, and Mr. Califano are graduates of Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara's team of computer-oriented "whiz kids."

Mr. Califano acknowledged that the "difficult task will be to resolve the issues such an analysis raises." One task, he said, would be to figure out "how to reach, how to motivate this proportionally small target of 50,000 fathers and how to educate the American people to recognize and accept this target."

Another would be to determine how many mothers could be moved off the relief rolls if special child-care centers and training programs were established—and, indeed, to answer the prior question of whether "it is desirable to take two or three hundred thousand mothers away from their minor children."

These and other questions, the Presidential aide said, can be answered only by further application of the systems approach—which he defined as a four-stage process of assembling data, setting objectives on the basis of that data, identifying all alternative means of reaching those objectives and presenting these alternatives clearly so that the President can select "the best option."

The "largely unwritten" story of the Johnson Administration,

The New York Times

Joseph A. Califano Jr.

Mr. Califano said, consisted of two main elements: "The politics of innovation and the revolution in Government management that it has inspired."

He defined the politics of innovation as a new attempt to deal with problems not on a piecemeal basis, with specific pieces of legislation, but in "their total context."

"The question," he sa'd, "is no longer whether there should be handouts to the poor, but how to break the poverty cycle; the question is not how to move more cars by more roads, but how to develop new transportation techniques that adjust to the whole urban environment."

This "innovative" approach, in turn, has produced a Government-wide "revolution in management," he said, in which the systems technique is playing a large role.

"The thrust of that revolution," he said, "is to mobilize the powerful new means of processing and communicating information and to develop modern analytical techniques to deal with problems in their entirety."

Although "the classic application" of these new techniques is to be found in the Defense Department, Mr. Califano said, the Administration has made "preparations to handle problems in their total context" in many other major areas.

One example, he said, was the establishment of the Department of Transportation—an attempt to pull together "fragmented and uncoordinated" forces and competing interests in the transportation field.

Another was the model cities program — an attempt to pull together existing Federal programs, local resources and talent and private industry in a "total" attack on urban slums.

Coincidentally, some of Mr. Califano's statements were echoed today on Capitol Hill. Te fying before Senator Abraham A. Ribicoff's subcommittee investigating the Federal response to urban problems, several top planners, architects and scientists — including Jerome B. Wiesner, a former science adviser to President Kennedy — criticized the Governmnt for its "chaotic" approach to city problems.

But all the witnesses applauded the model cities program as a healthy and overdue step towards a more coordinated attack.

The Johnson Administration has been criti ized by Republicans and Democrats as failing to manage effectively the rapid proliferation of Federal programs. Mr. Califano said that Mr. Johnson recognized as well as anyone else the need for modern management.

For on that approach depends the confidence of the Congress essential for appropriations and new legislation," he said. "On that approach depends the confidence of the American taxpayer, who is entitled to the most effective programs his tax dollars can buy."

WELFARE FAILING, GINSBERG ASSERTS

Continued From Page 1, Col. 2

way or the way Senator Kennedy did yesterday, or you may get it thrown out right now," Senator Javits said sharply, adding:

"When you make sweeping, sensational, categorical statements like that, there are many who would be delighted to vote against the bill now in Congress to provide matching funds, by quoting you and Senator Kennedy."

Two Senators Clash

Senator Clark, a Democrat, interrupted his Republican colleague, saying: "As chairman of this committee, I intend to keep order, and you are taking off on the other Senator from New York in a way that is obviously going to make headlines."

Angrily demanding "the courtesies of a United States Senator," Mr. Javits shot back: "It is not keeping order in my judgment to break off questioning that may be provocative."

At this point Mr. Ginsberg protested: "I said in my statement that there are 630,000 people in the city who have to be taken care of, who need this program to exist. I have no illusion that these reforms will take place immediately."

Later Mr. Ginsberg told reporters: "If Congress gets upset because I'm critical, well, I'm sorry. It seems to me judgments have to be made on what the situation is, rather than what somebody would like it to be."

In his testimony, Mr. Ginsberg said the present system could be improved by the following steps:

¶Using a declaration of need rather than an investigation system to determine eligibility.

¶Encouraging welfare recipients to get jobs, by allowing them to keep part of their earnings.

¶Expanding training and employment facilities.

¶Greatly increasing day-care facilities so mothers can work.

¶Spreading welfare centers into poor neighborhoods and integrating them with health and educational services run by other agencies.

¶Seeking the advice and involvement of welfare recipients in running the system.

Further Steps Urged

Commissioner Ginsberg said the city was experimenting with some of these approaches, but called for the substitution of these steps:

¶Guaranteeing employment, with the government as the "employer of last resort" for all those seeking jobs.

¶Placing elderly, disabled and blind people under the Social Security system rather than the welfare, to remove the stigma of welfare and to lessen administrative costs.

¶Giving automatic allowances to families for each child, as is done in several European countries.

¶Setting up a "residual" public-assistance program to aid those now on welfare who would not be helped by the changed system. He estimated this would apply to about 5 per cent of all those on the present rolls.

¶Providing an expanded public service system for housing, health, day care and education, which would be available regardless of income.

Governor Rockefeller said that Senator Kennedy was "uninformed" about the state's role and asked:

"What did he recommend? What are his alternatives? It's easy to criticize, but the important thing is to have alternatives and then judge if the alternatives can be more effective.

"Congress sets the standards. Why doesn't he suggest some new legislation? We have been improving welfare for a long time, but it's only Congress that can change it."

Senator Kennedy's office immediately issued a lengthy rebuttal, saying that the Senator "regretted the Governor's intemperate reaction." The Senator, the statement went on, could "only assume that his statement was the result of haste and a lack of time to study the problem and the statements that have been made on this matter."

In contrast with Monday's hearing, which received little advance notice and was attended mainly by government officials, about 100 Negroes were in the folding chairs yesterday at the Cooperative Auditorium, 551 Grand Street.

It was the second and final session held here by the subcommittee, which is preparing for Congressional debate on continuation of the antipoverty program. Panels presented testimony on the city's problems and on programs in welfare, health services and education.

Senator Kennedy, sitting yesterday as a member of the subcommittee, read from a report that said that health services in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn were "segregated and deteriorated" and that "the poor wait eight to 10 hours for emergency care and three to four hours for clinic appointments." There was a murmur of 'that's right" from Negroes in the audience.

Welfare in U.S. Is 'Bankrupt,' Ginsberg Tells Senators Here

NYT 5/10/67 WELFARE

By JOHN KIFNER

Welfare Commissioner Mitchell I. Ginsberg called yesterday for a complete revision of the nation's welfare system, which he told a Senate subcommittee was "bankrupt" as a social institution.

Mr. Ginsberg made recommendations for reform, including a new approach to aiding the hard-core poor. He gave his views at a hearing of Senator Joseph S. Clark's subcommittee on poverty, employment and manpower.

The hearing, held here, was marked by several sharp exchanges between the Senators and witnesses.

Senator Jacob K. Javits, in questioning Mr. Ginsberg, took issue with Senator Robert F. Kennedy's sweeping criticism on Monday of the welfare system. Mr. Kennedy had said in a speech to the city's Day Care Council that welfare "destroyed family life" and that education, health and urban-renewal programs were eradicating "any semblance of human dignity" among the poor.

Governor Rockefeller, interviewed yesterday at an air-pollution conference in the Statler Hilton Hotel, was also critical of Senator Kennedy's remarks.

Commissioner Ginsberg told the panel that "as long as public assistance does not perform its relief function in such a way as to free the poorest of the poor, rather than to lock them in dependency, it has failed as an antipoverty weapon."

"It is my conviction that public assistance has largely failed in this regard," he added.

Mr. Ginsberg also said that the present system must be "thrown out."

Senator Javits said that he was "disturbed" to hear the Commissioner say the welfare system should be "thrown out."

"You'd better not be in too much of a hurry to talk that

Continued on Page 50, Column 3

POOR WILL STAGE A PROTEST TODAY

WELFARE

Thousands Over Nation to Demand 'More Money Now'

6/30/67

By BEN A. FRANKLIN

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 29 — Thousands of the urban poor in 57 cities across the country will stage coordinated demonstrations tomorrow for "more money now" and against "poverty level" payments to the 8.5 million Americans on public assisttance.

ance.

the National Welfare Rights Movement, leaders of the newly organized Federation of Local Welfare Protest Groups said the first nationally organized day of protest would be "only the beginning" of a summer-long campaign of marches, picketing and demands for action by thousands of poor people who have never before participated in protest movements.

Edwin Day, associate director of the National Welfare Rights Movement, predicted that "organized welfare recipients will become an important political force." Mr. Day, 27 years old, called welfare practices "a corrupt and lawless force against human health and decency."

"We are going to make the country aware of the incredible condition of welfare recipients," he declared. "We are going to make the country take this tiger by the tail."

Second Protest July 14

A second national day of protest by welfare recipients is scheduled for July 14, and Mr. Day said the headquarters office here would then convene a national convention of the poor in Washington on Aug. 19 to draw up a "permanent national organization of card-carrying, dues-paying members."

Membership cards, bearing the names of both a local affiliate group and the National Welfare Rights Movement, are to cost $1, Mr. Day said. Dues will be $1 a month. A major part of the summer program is to be a campaign for memberships in an organization Mr. Day described as "both a union and a civil rights group.'"

Plans for the locally directed demonstrations tomorrow call for members of affiliated welfare protest groups to file with city or county welfare agencies thousands of "basic need forms," prepared by the national office here. Signers of the prepared forms will be demanding increased welfare grants "within two weeks.""

Basic Minimum Lists

The forms include blank spaces for listing basic minimum requirements for rent, food, clothing and furniture. Mr. Day said "decent minimums" were not being met by welfare programs. The form says in part:

"Federal and state laws require that families be provided with welfare benefits adequate to insure a minimum standard of health and decency. Contrary to these laws, I do not get enough money in my welfare grant to meet my family's basic need."

The forms are available in Spanish for Puerto Rican and Mexican-American welfare recipients, who Mr. Day said already comprised a major segment of the national organization's affiliated groups.

"Welfare grant levels are a guarantee of poverty," Mr. Day declared in an interview. "The grants are systematically below the poverty level and below the minimums required by law. Local groups have been springing up across the country to protest what is essentially a poverty-breeding violation of the welfare laws. We have merely linked together these isolated groups to get action."

The National Welfare Rights Movement was organized during the last year by Mr. Day and Dr. George A. Wiley, its director. Dr. Wiley, 35, is a Negro who was once a chemistry professor at Syracuse University. He was formerly associate national director of the Congress of Racial Equality.

According to Mr. Day, former national business manager of CORE, the movement got its start following a welfare protest march from Cleveland to Columbus, Ohio, last June 30.

According to a list distributed here today, welfare protest demonstrations are to be held tomorrow in the following cities:

Selma, Ala.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Fresno, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Richmond, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Francisco, San Jose and Santa Rosa, Calif.; Wilmington, Del.

Also, the District of Columbia; Gainesville and Miami, Fla.; Atlanta; Chicago, and Waterloo, Iowa.

Also, Wichita, Kan.; Covington, Lexington and Louisville, Ky.; New Orleans; Baltimore and Boston and Pittsfield, Mass.

Also, Bay City, Detroit, East Lansing and Flint, Mich., Minneapolis; Jackson, Miss.; St. Louis, Omaha, Newark and Paterson, N. J., and Albuquerque, N. M.

Also, New York City, Mount Vernon, Rochester, Syracuse and Yonkers; Columbia and Durham, N. C.; Akron, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo, Ohio; Tulsa, Okla.; Portland, Ore.; Lancaster, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, Pa.; Providence, R. I.; Seattle and Milwaukee.

I.C.C. Unit Backs Rate Rise

WASHINGTON, June 29 (AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission's Board of Suspension allowed another in a string of increases in truck freight rates today—this time in the Southwest. The board permitted a 6 per cen increase on less-than-truckload cargoes, effective July 4 for the Southwestern Motor Freight Bureau.

WELFARE

NOW!

DEC. 8 1967

about the

National Welfare Rights Organization

What Is The National Welfare Rights Organization?

THE NWRO IS A NATIONWIDE ORGANIZATION OF WELFARE RECIPIENTS and other poor people. It is made up of affiliated local welfare rights organizations from coast to coast. At present there are over 100 affiliated local groups in 22 states, and another 150 local groups in various stages of formation and affiliation.

THE NWRO IS A MEMBERSHIP ORGANIZATION. There are presently over 5000 dues paying members (families), and the NWRO directly represents the over 20,000 welfare recipients in these households. The majority of its members are families receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

MOST NWRO GROUPS ARE LOCATED IN THE GHETTOS AND BARRIOS of major U.S. cities, but there are also groups located in rural areas of the South, Appalachia, and the Mid-West. NWRO includes substantial numbers of low-income whites, Puerto Ricans, and Mexican Americans, as well as Negroes in its membership.

How Did The NWRO Come Into Being?

OVER THE PAST SEVERAL YEARS welfare recipients in communities around the country have been organizing to protect themselves against the injustices of welfare, and to seek ways to help themselves and to change the welfare system.

IN MAY, 1966, THE POVERTY/RIGHTS ACTION CENTER was formed in Washington, D.C. and began contacting local welfare rights groups, supporting local organizing, and encouraging cooperative action among the groups.

SEVERAL NATIONAL MEETINGS AND WORKSHOPS were held and a National Coordinating Committee of Welfare Rights Groups was formed. On June 30, 1967 a major nationwide demonstration for welfare rights was held, with over 5,000 recipients in 40 cities uniting under the common banner of the National Welfare Rights Movement.

AUGUST 25-28, 1967 THE FIRST NATIONAL WELFARE RIGHTS CONVENTION was held in Washington, D.C. More than 300 delegates of local WRO's attended. A constitution establishing the National Welfare Rights Organization was written and adopted, national officers elected, and a platform of goals agreed upon.

What Are The Goals Of The NWRO ?

NWRO's GOALS ARE: jobs or income now--decent jobs with adequate pay for those who can work, and adequate income for those who cannot work.

1. ADEQUATE INCOME: A system which guarantees enough money for all Americans to live dignified lives above the level of poverty.

2. DIGNITY: A system which guarantees recipients the same full freedo rights and respect as all American citizens.

3. JUSTICE: A fair and open system which guarantees recipients the full protections of the Constitution.

4. DEMOCRACY: A system which guarantees recipients direct participation in the decisions under which they must live.

How Is The NWRO Organized ?

THE NWRO'S TOP POLICY-MAKING BODY is its annual National Convention made up of locally elected delegates from each affiliated group. Between conventions the NWRO is guided by its National Coordinating Committee which consists of the National Officers, elected at each convention, and one representative from each state with affiliated local WRO's, selected by the local groups.

THE POVERTY/RIGHTS ACTION CENTER SERVES as the NWRO National Headquarters. The Center is a private, independe,t non-profit organization, directed by Dr. George A. Wiley, who formerly served as Associate National Director of CORE.

THE NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS PUBLISHES the twice monthly NWRO National Welfare Leaders Newsletter, and other informational materials and pamphlets on welfare rights. The Headquarters assists local groups with research, legal backup, and organizing help.

Who Can Become A Member ?

INDIVIDUALS BECOME MEMBERS OF THE NWRO BY JOINING AN AFFILIATED LOCAL welfare rights organization. To affiliate with the NWRO, local group must have at least 25 members, a majority of whom must be current welfare recipients, and the rest immediate past recipients, or low-income persons, with no more than 10% "other" persons. The group mus be an independent group, or if part of a larger organization, able to function independently with regard to welfare rights issues.

OTHER PERSONS WISHING TO SUPPORT the welfare rights movement may become members of a "Friends of the Welfare Rights Movement" group, now being formed in local communities in cooperation with the NWRO Headquarters.

How Is The NWRO Financed?

MEMBERS OF LOCAL GROUPS PAY $1.00 as a joining fee with $1.00 per month dues recommended. Most of this money stays with the local group, with small portions going to the support of citywide, statewide, and national headquarters.

HOWEVER, THE NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS AND LOCAL GROUPS DEPEND on contributions from private individuals, churches, unions, social worker groups and other friends as a major source of financial support. The National Headquarters also obtains some funds from foundation grants, and sales of the NWRO Newsletter, informational pamphlets, and greeting cards.

YOUR SUPPORT AND CONTRIBUTIONS ARE NEEDED AND WELCOMED!!!

How Can I Obtain Additional Information?

Further information can be obtained by contacting:

POVERTY RIGHTS ACTION CENTER, Headquarters
National Welfare Rights Organization
1713 R St., N.W. Washington, D.C. 20009
Telephone: (202) 462-8804

ADDITIONAL NWRO PAMPHLETS AVAILABLE FROM NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS:

"How to Link Up with the National Welfare Rights Organizaton"
"A Brief History of the National Welfare Rights Organization"
"How to Start a Local Welfare Rights Organization"
"Welfare--Guaranteed Poverty"

NWRO National Officers

CHAIRMAN: Mrs. Johnnie Tillmon, Los Angeles

First Vice-Chairman: Mrs. Etta Horn, D.C.

2nd Vice-Chairman: Mrs. Carmen Olivo, N.Y.C.

3rd Vice-Chairman: Mrs. Beulah Sanders, N.Y.C.

Treasurer: Mrs. Marian Kidd, Newark, N.J.

Rec. Sec.: Mrs. Edith Doering Columbus, Ohio

Corres. Sec.: Mrs. Dorothy DiMascio, Rochester, N.Y.

Financial Sec.: Mrs. Dovie Coleman, Chicago, Illinois

Sargeant-at-Arms: Mrs. Alice Nixon, Pittsburgh, Penn.

WELFARE

NOW!

National Welfare Leaders Newsletter Vol.1 No.23 December 8, 1967

Anti-Welfare Bill Goes To House-Senate Conference

SENATE OK's KEY LIBERAL AMENDMENTS

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION National Welfare Rights Organization Headquarters: Poverty Rights Action Center
1713 R Street Northwest, Washington, D.C. 20009 Telephone: (202) 462-8804

NATIONAL WELFARE RIGHTS ORGANIZATION

Dec. 6, 1967

TO WELFARE RIGHTS LEADERS AND FRIENDS:

We won an important victory in the Senate. Most people thought that the coalition of 15 Senators rallied by Robert Kennedy to oppose the mandatory work provisions had little chance to win.

NWRO lobbying, letter writing, and our demonstrations on November 21st undoubtedly played an important role in getting the message to the Senate.

Despite the Senate victory, prospects for a decent version of H.R. 12080 to be agreed upon by the Senate and House in conference committee are not good. None of the liberal Senators who fought to improve the bill are on the conference committee. And Wilbur Mills, who regards the anti-welfare bill as "tough but fair" will be hard to deal with.

Whatever the outcome all welfare rights leaders and friends must remember that this year has been a defensive battle--a fight against bad welfare legislation. We must continue to organize--sign up new members and build new support so that we can press for positive change in America's terrible welfare system.

Our next steps will be decided upon at the NWRO Steering Committee meeting in Chicago February 3-4, 1968. Be sure your group is represented.

In the Struggle,

George A. Wiley

George A. Wiley, Director
National Headquarters
National Welfare Rights Organization

National Headquarters
POVERTY/RIGHTS ACTION CENTER
1713 R Street, N.W.
Washington, D. C. 20009
Tel: (202) 462-8904
George A. Wiley, Director

NATIONAL WELFARE RIGHTS ORGANIZATION

Chairman:
MRS. JOHNNIE TILLMON
Los Angeles, Calif.

First Vice-Chairman:
MRS. ETTA HORN
Washington, D.C.

Second Vice-Chairman:
MRS. BEULAH SANDERS
New York, N.Y.

Third Vice-Chairman:
MRS. CARMEN OLIVO
New York, N.Y.

Treasurer:
MRS. MARIAN KIDD
Newark, N.J.

Recording Secretary:
MRS. EDITH DOERING
Columbus, Ohio

Corresponding Secretary:
MRS. DOROTHY DIMASCIO
Rochester, N.Y.

Financial Secretary:
MRS. DOVIE COLEMAN
Chicago, Ill.

Sergeant-at-Arms:
MRS. ALICE NIXON
Pittsburgh, Penn.

Key Victories In Senate !!!

IN A SERIES OF DRAMATIC, CLOSE VOTES, on November 20th and 21st the Senate added important safeguards to its version of H.R. 12080. A bipartisan coalition rallied and led by Senator Robert F. Kennedy of New York carried the fight which focused on the mandatory work provisions of the bill

Senator Kennedy introduced two amendments adding important safeguards to the mandatory work provisions:

1. Makes clear that mothers with preschool children may not be required to work.

2. Provides that mothers with school age children may only be required to work during the hours the children are in school.

These amendments also added language intending to "strengthen and maintain family life". Chey also modified provisions requiring protective or vendor payments in the case of mothers refusing work and gave the Secretary of H.E.W. power to set additional criteria by which states may determine that mothers should not be forced to work.

Kennedy's amendments also added support payments as a source of income eligible for exemption (the first $50 andl/2 of any additional court ordered support payments).

The key vote on these amendments was 41 to 38.

YEAS—41
Bartlett	Hartke	Moss
Bayh	Hollings	Muskie
Boggs	Inouye	Nelson
Brewster	Jackson	Pastore
Brooke	Javits	Pell
Burdick	Kennedy, Mass.	Prouty
Case	Kennedy, N.Y.	Proxmire
Church	Kuchel	Randolph
Clark	Magnuson	Ribicoff
Fulbright	McIntyre	Spong
Gore	Metcalf	Tydings
Gruening	Mondale	Williams, N.J.
Harris	Montoya	Yarborough
Hart	Morse
NAYS—38
Aiken	Ervin	Monroney
Allott	Fannin	Morton
Anderson	Griffin	Pearson
Baker	Hatfield	Percy
Bennett	Hickenlooper	Russell
Bible	Hill	Smathers
Byrd, Va.	Hruska	Smith
Byrd, W. Va.	Jordan, N.C.	Stennis
Cotton	Jordan, Idaho	Symington
Curtis	Lausche	Thurmond
Dominick	Long, La.	Williams, Del.
Eastland	McClellan	Young, N. Dak.
Ellender	Miller
NOT VOTING—21
Cannon	Hayden	Mundt
Carlson	Holland	Murphy
Cooper	Long, Mo.	Scott
Dirksen	Mansfield	Sparkman
Dodd	McCarthy	Talmadge
Fong	McGee	Tower
Hansen	McGovern	Young, Ohio

Senator Fred Harris of Oklahoma introduced an amendment requiring all states to aid children with unemployed parent (AFDC-UP). This won. 39-36.

The Senate version of H.R. 12080 passed the Senate on Wednesday, November 22nd. Only six Senators voted against it (not because of welfare issues).

Also Some Key Losses...

SEVERAL IMPORTANT AMENDMENTS WERE DEFEATED:

1. A Kennedy amendment which would have required all jobs created under the work incentive program to pay minimum wage rates. (Defeated 40-31).

2. A Javits amendment which would have required states and local welfare departments to establish advisory councils of recipients and to take their views into account in administering welfare programs. (Defeated 64-11).

3. A McGovern amendment which would have provided for a $4. per month per person increase in AFDC grants (Defeated by voice vote).

Where Things Stand Now

THE SENATE BILL IS BETTER THAN THE HOUSE BILL IN THESE IMPORTANT WAYS:

▶ It would add vital safeguards against forcing mothers to work outside their homes.

▶ It would require all states to aid children with unemployed fathers and eliminate bad House eligibility requirements.

▶ It would eliminate the freeze.

▶ It would shift work and training programs to the Labor Department and provide for creating some jobs.

Both the House and Senate versions contain punative provisions, requiring welfare departments to work closely with the courts and police, dangerous expansion of protective and vendor payments, and serious suggestions about expanding the use of foster homes. (Although Kennedy was able to clarify and specify the intent of these provisions).

NEITHER BILL REQUIRES STATES to meet 100% of the minimum need they set (a key Administration proposal).

The Future Of H.R. 12080

The House and Senate bills now go to a joint conference committee where the outlook is very bad. None of the Senators who fought to improve the bill in the Finance Committee or on the floor are on the conference committee.

HOUSE-SENATE CONFERENCE COMMITTEE ON H.R. 12080:

House	Senate
Mills (D-Arkansas)	Long (D-Louisiana)
King (D-California)	Smathers (D-Florida)
Boggs (D-Louisiana)	Anderson (D-New Mexico)
Karsten (D-Missouri)	Gore (D-Tennessee)
Herlong (D-Florida)	Talmadge (D-Georgia)
Byrnes (R-Wisconsin)	Williams (R-Delaware)
Curtis (R-Missouri)	Carlson (R-Kansas)
Utt (R-California)	Curtis (R-Nebraska)
Betts (R-Ohio)

ACTION!

TELEGRAMS TO CONGRESSMAN WILBUR MILLS AND SENATOR RUSSELL LONG AND OTHER CONFERENCE COMMITTEE MEMBERS URGING THAT THE SENATE CHANGES BE KEPT IN THE FINAL BILL MAY HELP.

THE CONFERENCE COMMITTEE IS SCHEDULED TO MEET THIS WEEK (DECEMBER 4-8) BUT AGREEMENT ON A FINAL BILL MAY NOT COME QUICKLY.

GRIN AND BEAR IT BY LICHTY

"I mean my new welfare bill to be very tough, gentlemen! . . . The law must teach people that it doesn' pay to be poor!"

WRO's in ACTION

☆ WASHINGTON, D.C.
"Friends of the Welfare Rights Movement" group has been formed in Washington, D.C. It is seeking to involve additional people as volunteers and supports of the NWRO. A very successful "fund raising" party was held in November.

☆ ARIZONA
The Airzona WRO held their first annual forum on public welfare: Social Welfare and the Law, on November 10. Professor Charles A. Reich of Yale Law School was the featured speaker. The luncheon was catered by the ADC Mothers Clubs of Phoenix.

☆ FLORIDA
The Liberty City Community Council WRO of Miami is taking leadership in development a county-wide welfare rights organization. A recent Dade County "welfare congress" was attended by 200 recipients.

☆ MASSACHUSETTS
The Brockton Mothers for Action have developed a do and don't rule sheet for the welfare department. Excerpt: STOP using the word "illegitimate". START assuring young men and women that they no longer have to quit school for lack of school clothing.

☆ CALIFORNIA
The Carmelitos Welfare Rights Organization of Long Beach sparked an October 20 picketline demonstration against their housing project management on "the cockroach issue"!

San Diego WRO reports action on their basic needs campaign: "We are getting money for members, like $90.00 for a regrigerator, $40.00 for bunk beds, etc."

☆ KANSAS
The Wyandotte County Welfare Council of Kansas City met with their Board of Supervisors to present specific grievances and general demands on November 14.

Coast-to-Coast

RECIPIENTS SPEAK OUT

On November 21st, across the country welfare recipients once more demonstrated their anger against being made scapegoats for poverty.

They served notice on the Congress that anti-welfare attacks will be resisted and welfare recipients will fight for adequate income, dignity, justice, and democracy.

In Brooklyn, 200 welfare recipients marched by candlelight and in Los Angeles recipients and social workers burned candles in front of the welfare department.

Demonstrations were also held in Modesto, California; Hartford, Connecticut; Gainesville, Florida; Chicago, Illinois; Des Moines, Iowa; Washington, D.C.; Kansas City, Kansas; New Orleans, La; Detroit, Michigan; Lansing, Michigan; Hattiesburg, Mississippi; Kansas City, Missouri; St. Louis, Missouri, Newark, N.J.; and Columbus, Ohio.

Despite rain and cold these NWRO members were out again "telling it like it is". Some Senators got the message. Other people say they are tired of demonstrations. Well, there will be a lot more action because folks are tired of being hungry in this rich country.

☆ DELAWARE

150 Delaware welfare recipients demonstrated at the state capitol at Dover on November 3rd. They presented 20 demands for welfare changes and helped bring about a State Senate vote to investigate Delaware welfare practices.

☆ MISSISSIPPI

NWRO National Chairman Mrs. Johnnie Tillmon spoke at a statewide welfare rights meeting at Mt. Beulah on November 18. The program included workshops on: organizing local groups, political and direct action, goals for better welfare, and commodities, food stamps, and school lunches.

★ NEW WRO's ARE NOW FORMING IN: DENVER, COLORADO; TROY, NEW YORK; ROSEDALE, MISSISSIPPI; ARLINGTON, VIRGINIA; GARY, INDIANA; BLUEFIELD, WEST VIRGINIA; AND DES MOINES, IOWA.

NWRO Coordinating Committee To Meet February 3 & 4 In Chicago

Major decisions about NWRO strategy will be made at the NWRO Coordinating Committee meeting now scheduled for the weekend of February 3 and 4 in Chicago.

The agenda will include:

--review of the fight against the anti-welfare bill and next steps;
--discussion of the basic needs and fair hearing campaigns;
--reports on membership and organizing;
--discussion of new action strategies and plans.

The NWRO Coordinating Committee consists of the nine national officers (elected at the NWRO convention) and one representative from each state with affiliated local WRO's, selected by the local groups.

If your state has not yet selected its NWRO Coordinating Committee representative it is very important that this be done at once!!

A state meeting (or other method of selecting a representative) should be planned for early January. National Headquarters will provide a list of all affiliated groups in your state upon request.

For further information about this important meeting write National Headquarters, 1713 R St., N.W., Washington, D.C.

NATIONAL WELFARE LEADERS NEWSLETTER IS PUBLISHED TWICE MONTHLY BY THE POVERTY/RIGHTS ACTION CENTER, HEADQUARTERS OF THE NATIONAL WELFARE RIGHTS ORGANIZATION. SUBSCRIPTION RATES: $10.00 PER YEAR; $25 FOR FIVE SUBSCRIPTIONS IF MAILED TO THE SAME ADDRESS. GROUP RATES AVAILABLE. EDITOR: EDWIN A. DAY. PRODUCTION STAFF: SHARLENE KRANZ AND CURTIS R.D. COLBERT. YOUR SUGGESTIONS ARE INVITED.

MOVING? PLEASE SEND THE NEWSLETTER YOUR NEW AND OLD ADDRESS SO WE CAN SEND YOU YOUR NEWSLETTER WITHOUT DELAY.

WATERLOO DAILY COURIER, WATERLOO, IOWA
TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1967.

March on Courthouse

Moms Protest Job Requirement

Irate mothers receiving Aid to Dependent Children grants had a sympathetic ear at the Social Welfare Office in their protest of proposed changes in alloting ADC funds Tuesday.

The group of about 35 mothers, accompanied by some 15 children, was objecting to an amendment to the law governing ADC grants which would make some ADC mothers work and leave care of their children to a foster home.

Is Before Senate

The proposed amendment, part of an effort by Congress to reduce welfare costs, is now in hearing before the U.S. Senate.

Charles Wallin, director of the Black Hawk County Social Welfare Department, talked to the delegation in his office and agreed with it that the proposed change is unjust.

He said a petition bearing their names would be sent to their congressmen and he urged them to write as individuals.

Wallin Backs Demands

Wallin said he is unhappy with the proposal to put some ADC mothers to work as part of their eligibility for receiving ADC grants, about half of which is furnished by the Federal government.

Earlier, he said, "If this goes through as written, we will be hurting for welfare workers in this county as it would be impossible to work with these restrictions."

He said that, at the same time the government is proposing to put ADC mothers to work, the federal government has plans to reduce funds for the work experience training project which likely would cut the number taking such training here by half.

The women who made the call on Wallin Tuesday were representing the Mothers for Adequate Welfare, an organization formed here last July.

Its president, Mrs. Gertrude Moll, of 422 Logan Ave., said Monday afternoon that an ill child would keep her home. She said the march was part of one called across the nation by the Welfare Rights Movement, with national headquarters in Washington, D. C. Women who spoke to Wallin said they believe a mother's role in the home is more important than getting a job in most cases.

Crime Threat Seen

One said that if mothers were taken out of the house all day it would mean that the costs of running reform schools, jails and homes for unwed mothers would increase because youths without supervision would be more apt to get in trouble.

One of the women said she'd looked for work but couldn't find a job that paid more than 75 or 80 cents an hour.

"How are you going to raise five or six kids on that?" she asked.

MISSISSIPPI AND OHIO WRO'S DEMAND HEW ACTION ON FAIR HEARINGS

THE Hinds County Welfare Rights Movement in Jackson, Mississippi and the Ohio Steering Committee for Adequate Welfare have both charged the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare with failure to require states to obey federal fair hearing regulations.

Mrs. Geraldine Smith, Hinds County Welfare Rights Chairman recently wrote H.E.W. Secretary John Gardner demanding that H.E.W. enforce its regulations and pointing out that the group had received only a "we are looking into the matter" response to its earlier complaints.

Mrs. Marian Hall, Ohio Steering Committee Chairman, called for immediate H.E.W. investigation of Ohio fair hearing practices.

NWRO National Headquarters is backing up these demands with direct Washington pressure on H.E.W.

All WRO's are urged to write National Headquarters if local welfare departments are not obeying state and federal fair hearing regulations. It is important that all groups with experience with fair hearings report to NWRO on victories and problems so that all possible legal support can be developed.

Next steps in the fair hearing campaign strategy will be discussed at the NWRO Steering Committee meeting February 3-4 in Chicago.

HELPFUL MATERIALS NOW AVAILABLE FROM NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS:

WELFARE LAWS AND WELFARE HANDBOOKS: two brief explanations developed by the Columbia University Center on Social Welfare Policy and Law 10¢ each

GUARANTEED POVERTY: facts and tables on welfare--50¢ each

CARE AND FEEDING OF SOUTHERN WELFARE DEPARTMENTS: experiences of a welfare rights organizer in the South--25¢ each

HOW TO PUT OUT COMMUNITY NEWSPAPERS: an instruction manual developed by Southern Conference Educational Fund--25¢

FLASH FLASH FLASH FLASH FLASH FLASH FLASH

ANTI-WELFARE BILL DECEMBER 8

CONFERENCE COMMITTEE KILLS SENATE AMENDMENTS: KENNEDY STILL FIGHTING

The House- Senate Conference Committee on H.R. 12080 has sold out the key liberal Senate Amendments referred to in this newsletter. This will be the final bill unless this conference report is defeated in the Senate. It will:

1. Include the freeze
2. Not protect mothers against forced work
3. Not require states to aid children of unemployed fathers.
4. Have the lower House earnings exemptions: $30 and 1/3 vs. $50 and 1/2

Senator Robert F. Kennedy is fighting to get the Senate to reject this conference and defeat the bill unless the freeze is dropped and other bad features changed.

ACTION

Kennedy's fight to defeat the conference report needs your immediate public support. All Senators should be contacted at once to encourage them to speak out and vote against the committee report.

The conference committee report will be voted on this week--Dec.10-15. Action must be NOW!!!

Call National Headquarters for full information and to let us know of your efforts!!

St. Louis, Missouri

By a Post-Dispatch Photographer

Welfare recipients marching outside the Missouri Welfare Division office today to protest against welfare restrictions pending in Congress. The office is at 627 North Euclid avenue.

30 Picket State Welfare Agency's Office Here

Members of the League for Adequate Welfare picketed the St. Louis office of the Missouri Division of Welfare today to protest against welfare sections of the Social Security bill pending in Congress.

About 30 persons, nearly all of them women, took part in the picketing. They represented several chapters of the League, a welfare recipients' organization.

Similar demonstrations were conducted in other cities around the country. The National Welfare Rights Organization of Washington, which promoted the demonstrations, contends that some of the welfare provisions are coercive.

The bill would freeze at current levels the number of children who could benefit from the Aid to Families of Dependent Children program and would cut off federal aid to all recipients over 16 years old, including mothers with small children, who do not accept work or job training.

The omnibus Social Security bill is being debated in the Senate.

'If the Book Says I

By MICHAEL CLENDENIN and DONALD SINGLETON

Second of three articles

THE woman with the white hat sat heavily on a rickety folding chair beside a rickety folding table that was covered with stacks of mimeographed forms, newspapers, pencils and legal pads. The table was on the sidewalk outside one of the city's 34 welfare centers.

"Okay, honey, here's your list," the woman with the white hat said to the thinner woman. "Now you sit right down here and check off everything you don't have. And when you get it all done, you go in there and tell them you want it. If they give you any trouble about it, you just come out and let me know. I'll go in there with you and squeeze it out of them people."

DAILY NEWS SPECIAL FEATURE

The woman with the white hat was an officer in one of the city's more than 100 welfare client organizations. And she was doing her part in a nationwide campaign designed to "bring the welfare system to its knees, right now."

Her group had mimeographed a list of more than 200 items of clothing, furniture and household equipment, items which must, according to state law, be given to every individual who is receiving public assistance.

On the woman's list, for example, the following appear under the heading, "Cooking Equipment":

"Double boiler; saucepan & cover (sm); saucepan & cover (lg); frying pan; roasting pan; muffin pan; mixing bowls; measuring cup, spoons; butter dish & cover; paring knife; spatula or turner; potato masher; egg beater; strainer; refrigerator dish; dish pan (plastic); garbage can & cover; shopping cart . . ."

The recipient is told to check off which items she needs, indicating how many of each, and to give the list to the Welfare Department.

Form Letter Included

The list is headed by a letter which reads: "Dear Sir: I would like to request the following for my family. I would appreciate it if you would grant this request as quickly as possible, so that we may at least have the minimum standards that the welfare regulations provide for."

Of course, there is nothing extravagant on the list. And the city's welfare laws state that each relief recipient should be given those items he lacks at the time he comes onto the relief rolls.

But as a matter of fact, only between 2% and 3% of all welfare clients in the city are completely up to standard, and if the 97% or 98% who lack certain items should demand those items en masse—which they now are doing—the system could be financially brought to its knees.

Tens of thousands of the client groups' lists have been circulated throughout the city by groups affiliated with City Wide Coordinating Committee of Welfare Groups, whose headquarters is a tiny office on the second floor of an Episcopal Church at 514 W. 126th St. in Harlem.

City Wide's chairman, Mrs. Beulah Sanders, and its director, Hulbert James, sat in the office one day last week and explained how the organization is trying to do its job.

"We simply want to make sure that every single person who is entitled to be on welfare is receiving assistance," said James, an energetic young Negro who is a disciple of Dr. George A. Wiley and Dr. Richard A. Cloward, two college professors who are the intellectual leaders of the national Poverty/Rights Action Program.

The local community organizations have flooded the city's ghetto areas with leaflets explaining welfare eligibility requirements, minimum standards, appeals procedures.

Space Near Most Centers

The groups have set up information tables outside of most of the city's welfare centers, where prospective relief recipients are pre-interviewed and apprised of their legal rights. In at least two centers, the client groups were given space in the centers' intake sections, alongside the regular caseworkers.

The organizations also have provided hundreds of reliefers with legal assistance in preparing for "fair hearings," appeals based on complaints of unfair treatment.

One lawyer representing welfare clients reported that he has been winning special grants of $300 to $1,000 for each client who appealed on the ground that the Welfare Department has failed to enforce its minimum standards of assistance.

In most of the cases, the lawyer said, a mimeographed list prepared by one of the client groups was used to get the extra money from the department.

Miles & Miles of Red Tape

The State Department of Social Services, which conducts all fair hearings, has had to hire additional hearing examiners to cope with the massive new demand for hearings, and the snarl of red tape has backed up all the way to Albany.

Should Have It, I Want It

Organization Name

Date
Welfare Center
Address
No. in household 5 Adults 1 No. of Bedrooms 1
Ages Girls 2 Ages
Dear Sir:
I would like to request the following for my family. I would appreciate it if you would grant this request as quickly as possible, so that we may at least have the minimum standards that the Welfare regulations provide for:

Living room

On hand		Needed
0	Couch	1
0	Upholstered Chair	2
	Hi-Riser
0	Straight Chairs	2
0	Table Lamp	2
	Table (DropLeaf)
0	Table (end)	1
0	Lamp shades	2

Bedroom #1 #2 #3

On hand		Needed
	Double bed
	Single bed
12	Bunk bed	1
	Folding cot
	Mirror	1 per bed room
	Wardrobe	1
	Chest of Drawers
0	Rug	1

Kitchen

On hand		Needed
0	Table	1
0	Dinette Set	1 set
	Chairs(add.)
	Cabinet(storage)	2

Household Linens

On hand		Needed
0	Bedspread	2
	Couch Cover
	Blankets
	Pillow
	Sheets(double)	3
	Sheets(Single)
	Sheeting (rubber)
	Pillow cases	4 per person
	Hand towels	1 per person
	Washcloths	2 per person
	Kitchen towels	1
	Bath towels	2 per person
	Dish towels
	tablecloth(cotton)	1
	Tablecloth(plastic)	1
	Curtains	4
	Shower curtains	1

Dishes

On hand		Needed
	Dinner plates	4 per person
	Soup bowls
	Sauce dishes	4
	Cups and saucers
	Serving bowl

Cleaning & Laundry Equipment

On hand		Needed
0	Dustpan	1
3	Broom	1
0	Utility pail	1
0	Mop	1
1	Electric iron	1
0	Ironing board(pad&Cover	1
0	Whisk broom	1
0	Toilet brush	1

Cooking Equipment

On hand		Needed
	Double boiler	1
	Saucepan & cover	1
	Saucepot & cover	1
	Frying pan	1
	Roasting pan	1
	Muffin pan	2
	Mixing bowls	3
	Measuring cup,spoons	1
	Butter Dish & cover	1
	Paring Knife	1
	Spatula or turner	1
	Potato masher	1
	Egg beater	1
	Strainer	1
	Refrigerator dish	1
	Dish pan(plastic)	1
	Garbage can & cover
	Shopping cart	1

General Furnishings

On hand		Needed
0	Window shades	4
0	Window screens	4
0	Curtain rods	4
0	Towel rack	1
0	Toilet tissue holder	1
0	Alarm clock	1
	Electric bulbs	4

Linoleums

On hand		Needed
	Living room
	Bedroom#2	Bedroom#1 1
	Kitchen	Bedroom#3

Other

JAMAICA WELFARE LEAGUE
7-17 159th STREET
CA, NEW YORK 11433

ator

nter

DATE June 6, 1

owing clothing items for my family.
ld grant this request as quickly as least the minimum standards that

Boys	Girls
raincoat(1)	coat
jacket (1)	spring (1)
light	raincoat(1)
suit (1)	sweater(1)
sweater(1)	blouse(1)
shirts (3)	skirt (1)
polo shirts(2)	polo shirts(2)
trousers(1)	slippers (1)
winter	dress coat
rousers	dressy
summer(1)	dungarees(1)
garees(1)	playshorts(1)
y shorts(2)	swim suit(1)
suit (1)	Panties (3)
rshirts(3)	girdle (3)
rshorts(3)	undershirts
as win(2)	pajamas,sum
as sum(2)	bras (2)
be (1)	bathrobe(1)
(3)	stockings
(1)	socks (3)
s(2)	slips (3)
(1)	shoes (1)
1)	sneakers(1)
hat(1)	rubbers (1)
(1)	winter coat(1)
1)	gym suit (1)
1)	pajamas-win hat (1) galoes
	sk. (1)
	ts(1) robe (1)

s (1)
(3) ers (1)
's (1)
es (1)

Mimeographed lists distributed by welfare client groups urge relief recipients to demand items they are entitled to under welfare laws. Reliefers who filled out above forms left few items unrequested.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1967

New York Times

Law

Welfare In Court

By FRED P. GRAHAM

WASHINGTON — Despite the time-honored admonitions that one should not bite the hand that feeds him nor look a gift horse in the mouth, welfare clients are suddenly suing welfare officials at a record clip.

Until two years ago, it was virtually unknown for a person on welfare to sue the officials who were paying for his bed and board. But since that time, in a number of test cases that have been brought in courts across the country, welfare recipients have challenged the way in which they are being treated by those who sign their relief checks.

Several forces appear to to have triggered this burst of litigation: the attention that the "war on poverty" focused on the plight of the poor, the availability of Federal funds to pay lawyers for poor people, and the creation of legal research units that specialize in welfare law—notably welfare law centers at Columbia and New York Universities.

Request for Stay

The results were apparent last week when Alabama authorities asked Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black to stay a lower court decision that had declared unconstitutional the state's controversial "substitute father" welfare rule.

This regulation—and similar ones in 18 other states—denies welfare benefits to the children of women who engage in extramarital sexual relations, on the theory that any man who enjoys such domestic privileges should pay the household bills.

By invoking this rule, Alabama had cut its aid to dependent children lists by almost one-fourth in three years. Now that a court has ruled that the state cannot punish the children for the sins of the parents, the state claims that it cannot meet its other welfare obligations.

It is appealing to the Supreme Court, in the first high Court test of the "substitute father" rule.

A number of other welfare test cases are now before lower courts and are certain to be appealed to the Supreme Court, regardless of which side wins.

Test Cases

They include a claim that a welfare recipient must be given a hearing before benefits are revoked, a charge that mothers of young children on relief cannot be forced to accept full-time work, suits that challenge the right of welfare workers to pry into clients' premises and private lives, and a case that questions the right of welfare officials to make a welfare client pay back the amount of his benefits if he ever becomes solvent.

Taken together, these and other pending cases assert a "bill of rights" for welfare clients.

The theory is that although the Constitution does not require that the Government provide welfare, once a system is established, clients have a right to receive their benefits without interruption except for good cause and after a fair hearing, free of intrusion by welfare officials into their private lives, and without discrimination.

These are novel assertions, and as the shibboleths of American folklore suggest, are alien to the national traditions of self-reliance and free enterprise.

Yet the clients are winning almost all of their cases in the lower courts—perhaps because there are no precedents to bind the judges—and it is already apparent that, barring a stunning series of reversals in the Supreme Court, the welfare clients' "bill of rights" will be transformed from a theory to a fact in a few years.

Binghamton, N.Y.

Welfare Mothers Campaign

THIS SECTION SAYS . . .—Officers of recently formed Binghamton Mothers Welfare Rights Group discuss Social Security bill passed by House and now being considered by Senate.

Left to right: Mrs. Jessie Goulet, publicity chairman; Mrs. Eleanor Gray, recording secretary; Mrs. Elaine M. Hughes, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Dolores H. Monta, chairman. Mrs. Kathy Krise, not shown, is treasurer.

By PHIL BOOKMAN

A couple of dozen Binghamton mothers are campaigning against what they regard as unfair proposals, at the federal level, to restrict welfare benefits.

The women say they have joined together to protect their rights, as Americans, to bread and justice for themselves and their children.

Their organization is the Binghamton Mothers Welfare Rights Group, which this week held its first public meeting in a basement room of North Presbyterian Church in Chenango Street. The members are recipients of public assistance.

The group was formed in conjunction with the national Poverty-Rights Action Center, founded in Washington last May.

THEY ARE QUIET, but serious and determined.

If their goals of bread and justice are in essence simple ones, the paths leading to them, according to the mothers, are complex.

As they explain, they are not willing to sell their rights as American citizens — the rights to dignity, justice and democracy — for the food, clothing and shelter that age, disability, the absence or death of the family breadwinner, lack of economic opportunity or society have made them unable to provide.

Approximately 25 persons attended the meeting, about half of whom were advisers. With three members joining this week, there are now 25 members in the organization. Chairman of the group is Mrs. Dolores H. Monta.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss and take possible action on the administration's Social Security bill with its controversial welfare proposals. The bill already has passed the House of Representatives by a wide margin and currently is being considered by the Senate.

It was decided by the group to conduct a neighborhood campaign urging the public to write to representatives in Washington to work for defeat of the bill

The meetings of the organization are held every other Monday at the North Presbyterian Church.

DETROIT'S DAILY EXPRESS

'Humane' Social Legislation Is Goal of Picketing Mothers

by SHARON NELTON
Daily Express Women's Editor

An ADC mother broke into tears when a man, walking through a welfare demonstration at the Federal Building Tuesday, hurled an insult implying she and the other mothers were nothing but factories for the production of illegitimate children.

"My children are legitimate," she said. "Too many people think that our children are illegitimate and it is not true."

Her own husband had deserted her and left her with the care of three youngsters.

"I was working, and I want to work again," she said.

* * *

SHE AND ABOUT 30 other mothers from families on Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) were joining in a nationwide effort to gain "humane" social legislation. This, they said, would include their right to decide it is in the best interest of their children if the mothers remain in the home or take jobs outside.

Tuesday's demonstration was one of many such demonstrations in cities across the country, mobilized by the National Welfare Rights Organization (NWRO), an organization of welfare recipients.

Locally, the welfare rights demonstration was also supported by professional social workers belonging to the National Association of Social Workers (NASW) and the Welfare Employees' Union (WEU). Representatives of these groups marched in line with the ADC mothers, carrying signs with such slogans as "Let Mothers Stay Home" and "Let's Fight for Our Rights."

* * *

CURRENT chief goal of the rights organizations is to see that the welfare portions of the House-approved Social Security amendments do not become law.

The version of the bill that came out of the Senate earlier in November is more acceptable to the mothers.

But the mothers and the social workers supporting them do not feel it goes far enough.

NASW, she said, would uphold the changes made in the Senate Finance Committee's bill.

"But we think the Senate has not gone far enough in removing some of the repressive amendments made by the House," Miss Mahaffey continued. She said that the House bill, for example, made it much easier for children to be removed from their own homes and put in foster care--which, she added, would be more expensive than rehabilitative services for families and would exert emotional hardships on welfare families.

* * *

THE MOTHERS would like to see Congress adopt what they consider a more humane and less punitive amendment proposed by Sen. Robert Kennedy, D-N.Y. and co-sponsored by Michigan Democratic Senator Philip A. Hart.

"I think legislators should spend their trying to get better facilities than anti-human facilities," said Mrs. Marjorie Coklow, 3950 Field.

Express Photos by VINCE WITE

Mrs. Mamie Blakely: Marching for mothers' rights.

Support Your Welfare Rights Movement

Sell NWRO GREETING CARDS

The beautiful NWRO Greeting Card is now ready for shipment. You can buy it in quantity and sell it to raise money for your group. Friends of the welfare rights movement can use the card to begin to educate other folks and recruit them as supporters of NWRO.

Sell NWRO

national welfare leaders newsletter

The twice monthly NWRO Newsletter is a "must" for keeping up with the action in welfare rights. $10.00 a year to anyone--even welfare departments are subscribing!!

For each subscription that NWRO members sell we will credit your group with $2.00 towards your group's NWRO dues OR for each two subscriptions you sell we will give a free subscription to a member of your group.

— GROUP ORDER FORM —

National Welfare Rights Organization GREETING CARDS

GROUP _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

OFFICER PLACING THIS ORDER _____

NUMBER OF CARDS _____

AT $ _____ PER _____

ENCLOSED PLEASE FIND $ _____

MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO POVERTY/RIGHTS ACTION CENTER.

NWRO GROUPS
100 for $5.00
500 for 20.00

OTHER GROUPS
100 for $10.00
500 for $40.00

NWRO national welfare leaders newsletter

SUBSCRIPTION ORDER FORM

SEND THE N.W.R.O. NEWSLETTER TO: (Please print)

NAME _____ ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

NAME _____ ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

ENCLOSED PLEASE FIND $ _____ ($10 per one-year subscription)

LOCAL WRO _____ CITY _____

ADDRESS _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

☐ Credit our group with $2.00(per subscription)

☐ Count toward FREE subscription for our members. (One FREE subscription for each two sold)

POVERTY/RIGHTS ACTION CENTER
National Headquarters of the Welfare Rights Movement
1713 R Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C.
20009

Phone: (202) 462-8804

WASHINGTON
D C

First Class Mail
U.S. POSTAGE
PAID 10¢
PERMIT 42976

FIRST CLASS MAIL

WELFARE

NOW!

National Welfare Leaders Newsletter Vol.1 No.23 December 8, 1967

To: Welfare Mothers And Children

From: U.S. Congress

NATIONAL WELFARE RIGHTS ORGANIZATION
Headquarters: Poverty/Rights Action Center
1713 R St. N.W. Washington, D.C. 20009 · 462-8804

NATIONAL WELFARE RIGHTS ORGANIZATION

December 29, 1967

Today NWRO sent the following telegram to President Johnson:

> The NWRO has been fighting the 17th-Century welfare provisions of the 1967 Amendments to the Social Security Act ever since they were introduced last July. We tried to tell Congress how this bill would increase the hardship and suffering of 5 million women and children on AFDC and how it would deny welfare aid to millions more who are desperately poor but receive no aid at all; we tried to tell them how this bill gives federal sanction to lawless and irresponsible welfare practices which starve, degrade and harass the residents of the ghettoes and barrios of our cities.
>
> But few Congressmen listened. We now ask you to veto this bill. Thirty million poor people are watching you. If you sign this bill we will know you, too, are selling us out.

I am sure the President plans to sell us out. What will happen then?

H.E.W., The Labor Department, state and local welfare departments will then begin to carry out this cruel attack on poor people.

Welfare rights groups must continue to fight against this terrible law. We must inform ourselves and all poor people of our rights and learn the ways to resist this attack.

Congress, in passing this bill, and the President, by signing it, are telling welfare recipients and all poor people: "ORGANIZE OR STARVE"!

LET'S ORGANIZE!!

George A. Wiley

George A. Wiley, Director
National Headquarters
Welfare Rights Organization

National Headquarters
POVERTY/RIGHTS ACTION
1713 R Street, N.W.
Washington, D. C. 20009
Tel: (202) 462-8804
George A. Wiley, Director

NATIONAL WELFARE RIGHTS ORGANIZATION

Chairman:
MRS. JOHNNIE TILLMON
Los Angeles, Calif.

First Vice-Chairman:
MRS. ETTA HORN
Washington, D.C.

Second Vice-Chairman:
MRS. BEULAH SANDERS
New York, N.Y.

Third Vice-Chairman:
MRS. CARMEN OLIVO
New York, N.Y.

Treasurer:
MRS. MARIAN KIDD
Newark, N.J.

Recording Secretary:
MRS. EDITH DOERING
Columbus, Ohio

Corresponding Secretary:
MRS. DOROTHY DIMASCI
Rochester, N.Y.

Financial Secretary:
MRS. DOVIE COLEMAN
Chicago, Ill.

Sergeant-at-Arms:
MRS. ALICE NIXON
Pittsburgh, Penn.

Congress Passes Anti-Welfare Bill

On December 15 the Senate passed the Anti-Welfare Bill and sent it to the President. The House had passed the final version of the bill on December 13th.

As soon as the President signs the bill it will become law (but most of it will not go into effect until July). A complete summary of the bill is enclosed in this newsletter.

All of the important Senate amendments fought for by Senator Robert F. Kennedy were knocked out of the final bill agreed upon by the House-Senate Conference Committee. Led by Congressman Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas, the House Ways and Means Committee representatives made the Senate accept all of the major original House provisions. The final bill thus:

1. Includes the freeze on AFDC Federal aid.
2. Does not protect mothers against forced work.
3. Does not require states to aid children of unemployed fathers and adds narrow and harsh eligibility rules for AFDC-UP.
4. Includes new punative provisions on neglect and illegitimacy and encourages more use of foster home placement.

KENNEDY FILIBUSTER FIZZLES

As soon as the Conference Committee report was released Robert Kennedy attacked it on the Senate floor and began lining up support to try to defeat the bill or force the Conference Committee to accept the Senate amendments.

Congress was rushing to go home for Christmas and for a while it seemed that the Kennedy forces might be able to hold up the bill until Congress returned in January.

Their strategy was simple--just keep talking and keep the Senate from voting--a liberal filibuster. The newspapers called it a "minibuster'. But Senator Russell Long of Louisiana is an experienced filibuster man. He has filibustered against civil rights bills and knows how it is done. While the Kennedy forces weren't watching and with only three Senators on the floor he cleverly called for a vote and the bill was passed. Oh, there was a lot of talk about how Long had "broken his promise" and not acted like a gentleman but he didn't worry about that--he flew off to Louisiana for Christmas and left the liberals crying and complaining.

When a formal vote was taken the next day 14 Senators voted against the bill on principle. And there was talk of trying to change the bad welfare provisions when Congress returns in January, but for 1967 the battle was over and the poor were the losers.

What They Said About The Bill

SENATOR ROBERT F. KENNEDY
*a disgrace to all Americans
*a retreat into brutality

FREDERICK SOLOMON, M.D.
Medical Committee on Human Rights
*unspeakably cruel

SENATOR FRED HARRIS
*at the next session we shall look for every opportunity to repeal the anti-poor provisions

GEORGE MEANY, PRESIDENT, AFL-CIO *absolutely inadequate *deplorable attack on the poor
*a travesty on America's image as a compassionate and humanitarian nation

NEW YORK TIMES
*a harsh assault on the welfare...of the country's poorest families

SENATOR WALTER MONDALE
*one of the worst pieces of legislation I've seen in a long time

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF SENIOR CITIZENS
*We cannot and will not turn our backs on the millions who would become victims of the harsh repressive welfare features of the bill.

CONG. WILBUR D. MILLS
We are not striking at anybody but there is a desire to help

SENATOR RUSSELL LONG
*I am very much pleased
*This bill must rank with the greatest of Social Security bills

SENATOR ROBERT BYRD
*a good bill *positive, progressive legislation

MARY SWITZER. HEW WELFARE HEAD
*I am absolutely committed to make this bill work

HONOR ROLL: SENATORS WHO VOTED AGAINST THE BILL OR PAIRED AGAINST THE BILL:

Brooke, Mass.	Mansfield, Mont.
Case, N.J.	Metcalf, Calif.
Clark, Pa.	Mondale, Minn.
Gruening, Alaska	Nelson, Wisc.
Harris, Okla.	Proxmire, Wisc.
Hart, Mich.	Tydings, Md.
Javits, N.Y.	Williams, N.J.
Kennedy, Mass.	Yarborough, Tex.
Kennedy. N.Y.

REP. BURKE OF MASSACHUSETTS was the only Congressman to vote against the bill because of the anti-welfare provisions.

WASHINGTON REPORT

An appeal to veto the Social Security bill

The President,
The White House,
Washington 25, D.C.

Dear President Johnson:

December 15, 1967

In behalf of the members of the UAW I am writing to urge you to veto HR 12080, the Social Security Amendments of 1967, and to request the Congress to pass a new bill which would provide more adequate benefits and eliminate the punitive and regressive welfare amendments which are part of the measure now on your desk.

I make this recommendation only after careful consideration of its implications. I recognize as I know you do, the critical need to improve the cash benefits for the elderly, the disabled and the others who are almost wholly dependent upon Social Security payments for their existence. The adoption of this bill, however, will not meet their needs in a significant way. It will prove to be a cruel disappointment, for our senior citizens will not receive the increases they need and deserve.

Raising the minimum benefit from $44 to $55 and providing for a 13% across-the-board increase in benefits falls substantially short of your own recommendations to the Congress and objective estimates of what is really required to bring the elderly poor to a minimum decent level of existence, as I have outlined in testimony to both the House and the Senate.

In terms of purchasing power—what our aged citizens can buy with their 1968 dollars—the cash benefits provided by the bill on your desk represent a 4% increase compared with the 1954 benefits.

When one considers the fact that nearly two-thirds of single people past 65 and a third of those living in family units are classed as "poor or near poor," a 4% increase will obviously be nothing more than tokenism.

The decision of the House-Senate conferees to reject the Senate passed proposal and instead to raise the Social Security contributions base to only $7800 continues the regressive nature of Social Security taxes. Those who can least afford to, workers with low incomes, will be paying proportionately more of their wages in Social Security taxes than the middle and upper income groups who are far more able to pay the increases.

Mr. President, this bill is an important test of the firmness of this nation's determination to stamp out poverty in America. You have forcefully and properly expressed the country's concern over the growing alienation of millions of the poor in the ghettos and slums in America. Those who are close to the problems, mayors of our major cities, representatives of the poor, social scientists and social welfare experts have testified that the welfare provisions of this bill are likely to add to the alienation and resentment of those whom this bill aims to help.

To cite only two of a number of the welfare provisions which are repugnant to those who wish to help and not punish the poor:

1. Imposing a freeze on Federal matching funds for aid to families with dependent children so that the proportion of children in each state cannot exceed that of January 1, 1968 defies rational analysis. Certainly no serious claim can be made that such a proposal will reduce illegitimacy or poverty. Rather it appears to be aimed at saving Federal funds by punishing the unfortunate children or passing on new welfare payment burdens to the states and counties, which in many instances they cannot or will not assume.

2. Requiring that mothers of children in AFDC programs, as a condition of continuing to receive relief, be required to go to work or take training for work is a negative and self-defeating device. Denying these mothers the right to free choice as to whether or not they shall be separated from their children can only further underline the growing belief held by many of the poor that they are in fact second class citizens. The proposal turns its back on a much older and more fundamental law—that children, particularly those without fathers, need the care of a mother and homemaker if they are to grow into decent and constructive citizens. The discretionary provisions in this measure will not be meaningful for those states where welfare standards are lowest, and administration harshest, are least likely to grant the exceptions the measure permits.

Mr. President, I am keenly aware of the serious implications of a veto. This, however, is a bad bill. It cannot be defended on either economic or moral grounds.

Certainly none of us wishes to see the elderly deprived of added cash income.

A veto need not deprive them of new benefits.

On the contrary, it would be an act of courage and of faith that the Congress would and could promptly enact a new measure with more adequate benefits and without the provisions which will punish and further alienate the poor of our country.

Walter P. Reuther, President, INTERNATIONAL UNION UAW

Welfare: The Question

Last July, the Social Workers Union, Local 535, and the ACLU of Southern California joined forces to poll the 2800 social workers in Los Angeles county. The questionnaires returned by 436 of the workers constituted the first survey of the day-to-day practices of an enormous bureaucracy which disburses $368 million each year to more than 222,000 cases. From the returns—which represent an unbiased cross-section of all social workers in the county—it was clear that there was an enormous variation from office to office, and even within offices in the routine treatment of applicants and recipients. Despite a shelf-long library of regulations, departmental memos, laws, and guidelines, the bureaucracy of welfare was unable to assure equal treatment of recipients.

The life of a welfare recipient is precarious. The monthly budgets are tightly figured, barely adequate grants based upon family size.

Emergencies—an illness, a broken refrigerator, an unexpected school expense—are magnified out of all proportion. When no money has been budgeted, even the few dollars required to buy gym clothes, or replace broken dishes are hard to come by.

To meet these emergencies and unexpected, unbudgeted drains upon limited incomes, case workers may secure special grants for the recipient. The clients' welfare must be jeopardized before the special need will be met, and to a very large extent, the granting of the need is discretionary with the case worker and his immediate supervisors.

This discretion reflects the individual interpretation of the policy manuals by the administration of 28 local offices of the county's Department of Public Social Services, as well as unwritten policies reflecting the attitude of the highest echelon.

If the granting of needs is discretionary, and such needs in some instances are never met, there is no constitutional issue involved. But when discretion is arbitrary, and decidedly variable from office to office, when a need for a bed will be met at almost always in one office, and rarely in another, then serious constitutional issues are raised.

The workers were asked in the questionnaire: "In cases where the clients' welfare requires it, I am able to budget allowances for the following special needs." There followed a list of 23 separate items for which funds may be granted by the Department of Public Social Services (DPSS). These 23 ranged from such necessities as refrigerator and stove to money to attend remedial and trade schools. Five of the 23 special needs on the list were of a sort which would eventually remove a family or an individual from the welfare rolls: tuition to remedial schools; tuition to trade schols; tuition to college; school expenses, books, and supplies; work clothes, union dues, and tools for a definite job; and car or truck purchase if necessary for employment or a rehabilitation plan.

Twenty-Three Items

For each of the 23 items, the workers were to indicate whether they "always," "sometimes" or "never" obtained approval from supervisors for the special need. Then for each office—21 of the 28 DPSS offices were represented in the returns—a "chance-of-obtaining" percentage was computed.*

Clearly, some offices of the DPSS are more "liberal" in interpreting need, do so in a more uniform fashion, and would seem to more fully comply with the law. Comparatively, some offices would seem to be niggardly, the decisions of supervisors made with an eye upon the personal philosophy or whims of office directors.

Much depends upon the district in which a welfare recipient lives. She would have between a 15 percent chance of having the funding request for a refrigerator granted in the Beverly office to a 92.3 percent chance of having that same need met in the Watts office.

If she needed a bed and lived in El Monte, she would have a one in four chance of receiving enough money to buy a used bed. But if she lived in Watts, she would have better than a nine in ten chance of obtaining money for that used bed.

If she needed blankets for the bed and she lived in the area serviced by the Glendale office, she would have a 16.7 percent chance of obtaining the needed blankets. If she lived in that portion of the South-Central ghetto served by the Holmes and Gage sub-office, she would have approval than 62.5 percent of the time.

These were not the most extreme ranges in the percentages. From office to office, policy varied as much as 75 percent in the granting of supplementary funds to buy used washing machines. The range was even more extreme, 77.3 percent, in providing money for refrigerators; 81.3

*The method of computation is described in the full report. The range in variation discussed here is actually an adjusted range, the highest and lowest scores eliminated so as to minimize the chance that all of the workers from a given office responded in a manner hostile to DPSS administration. In fact, the actual range is significantly greater than reported here.

of Unequal Protection

percent in providing money for child care if a mother sought to take a job or attend job-training classes; 61.3 percent in requests for funds to buy a used kitchen table and chairs.

These are not frills, or even the amenities of life. These are basic items required to create just the semblance of a normal home. While the DPSS spent some $3 million in county funds during 1966 for these special needs, the money was hardly spent frivolously, nor fraudulently. (Despite the hue and cry about welfare fraud, the rate of fraud runs much less than one percent. The county spends a good deal more on fraud detection than is ever recovered from those who have actually defrauded the welfare department.)

Based upon the 436 responses, these "chance-of-obtaining" ranges and the average for the 21 offices, item by item, were computed:

Refrigerator	15.0 - 92.3	58.0
Stove	16.5 - 92.3	57.8
Washing Machine	8.4 - 83.5	46.9
Dryer	3.1 - 50.0	24.9
Bed	25.0 - 95.9	60.1
Chairs and Table	16.5 - 77.8	45.3
Dishes	23.1 - 75.0	39.4
Blankets	16.7 - 62.5	43.4
Telephone	10.0 - 60.4	36.7
Special Diets (Medical)	33.3 - 93.8	72.2
Housekeeper	50.0 - 87.5	74.9
Attendant Care	55.0 - 87.5	72.9
Child Care	10.0 - 91.3	65.1
Transportation	66.8 - 86.9	78.3
Tuition	3.3 - 72.1	45.7
Tuition (Trade School)	12.5 - 66.0	39.9
Tuition (College)	7.2 - 59.5	29.0
School Expenses	9.0 - 76.9	43.1
Moving Expenses	31.3 - 87.5	50.5
Work Clothes, Union Dues	33.3 - 85.3	58.4
Car or Truck	20.0 - 74.5	47.8
Car Repair	33.0 - 75.0	48.4
Medical Not Covered by Medi-Cal	12.5 - 58.4	34.1

The narrowest gap, or the item which reflects the most uniform practice throughout the county, is in providing money for emergency transportation—to a doctor, to look for work, to visit a DPSS office. There the spread is but 20.1 percent, and the practice would seem to be one of providing these needed moneys throughout the county. The county-wide average, at any rate, is 78.3 percent, the highest such average among the 23 items about which information was sought in the questionnaire.

Subjective Evaluation

These figures, based on specific answers, are reinforced by the more subjective evaluation sought in the final question: "In securing approval for special needs, office policy seems to vary not at all——, from supervisor to supervisor slightly ——, or greatly——." Only 7.7 percent of the 332 who answered the question could say the intra-office policy varied not at all. Against these 26 social workers are the 124 (37.6 percent) who said office policy varied slightly from supervisor to supervisor, and the 182 (54.8 percent) who said it varied greatly.

Not only will a client's welfare depend upon where he lives, but which social worker and supervisor he will draw. If the supervisor is unduly harsh, the recipient may go without a bed, or make the old one do until she is transferred to another case worker with a different supervisor. (Such transfers happen frequently due to the high turnover in the DPSS.) Then, with the new supervisor's approval, she may get the needed bed.

Life on welfare is a grim, close-to-the-margin existence keyed to the twice-monthly checks when for a few days the family eats well. That existence is not made easier by the vagaries and whims of departmental administrators who giveth and taketh away anonymously, arbitrarily, and probably illegally.

The welfare system is a bureaucratic maze of regulations and varying administrative policies confusing to social worker, administrator and recipient alike. It is hardly made less confusing by the idiosyncratic interpretations of individual supervisors.

OPEN FORUM
Published by the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1967

In The Nation

The Right to Income

By TOM WICKER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—A lot of people suddenly are talking about the welfare program, but few of them agree on what to do about it. That is because they do not agree on what is wrong with it.

Congress, apparently, thinks the welfare program costs too much. Its new amendments to the basic Social Security laws require mandatory work-training for mothers receiving aid for their dependent children, and freeze the level of Federal participation in the dependent children program. These are efforts to cut costs, not to do anything about the needs of poor people.

The Republican Coordinating Committee, representing a party which has seldom shown anything but indifference to the welfare program, has discovered that in the hands of the Democrats, welfare is now in an "ugly crisis of failure." This, to judge from the "new approach" the committee outlined this week, is because the program does not do enough to get poor people on somebody' private payroll, and therefore "open wide the doors of participation in our affluent society."

Ford Executive's View

With more perception than either Congress or the Republicans, President Arjay Miller of the Ford Motor Company recently endorsed the idea of a negative income tax as an alternative to welfare. His major complaint about the welfare program was that it does not do the necessary job; less than eight million needy people get any help from it, although there are perhaps 30 million low-income Americans.

Despite Congressional concern about aid to dependent children, for instance, only about 1.2 million poor families headed by females are assisted by A.D.C., although there are at least two million such families in the country.

But the trouble with welfare is broader even than Miller suggested in his notable speech. Not only do miserly eligibility requirements prevent many of the poor from receiving assistance; grudging rules of administration also subject the poor to such indignities that many of them refuse help rather than submit to them; and although Congress in the new bill permitted recipients to retain some of what they might earn for themselves, the program still impairs their incentives to help themselves.

Above all, however, the amount of aid that is given to eligible persons, and for which their behavior is so strictly policed, is pitifully inadequate and a disgrace to those who offer it. It is a miserly dole, in most states, that barely enables the poor to hold body and soul together, and even for this subsistence living they are investigated like criminals against the possibility that someone may "cheat" the taxpayers.

Thus, neither Congress nor the Republican Coordinating Committee nor Arjay Miller have come to grips with the full range of what needs to be done, what ought to be done and what could be done.

Continuing Need Noted

Really compassionate and effective reforms to do something about poverty in America would have to recognize, first, that large numbers of the poor are always going to have to be helped. Whether for physical or mental reasons, because of environmental factors, for whatever cause, they cannot keep pace with an industrialized, technological society. Thus, the aim of getting everyone off the welfare rolls and into "participation in our affluent society" is unreal and a pipe dream.

Second, both for these and for those others who may, through job training and other assistance, ultimately become self-sufficient, there ought to be a decent standard of living. This is not only a matter of human compassion; it is also in itself "an incentive" because people who are well-fed, well-clothed and able to take advantage of whatever opportunities exist are more likely to "improve themselves" than those in grinding and hopeless poverty.

Finally, this decent standard of living ought to be made available not just to an eligible few but to everyone, and without degrading restrictions and police-like investigations.

Enlightened Program Possible

These principles would create something like a "right to income" for everyone and that is the only way, in the long run, that poverty can be eliminated in America. And curiously enough, even though Congress appears to have moved in the opposite direction in its last session, a more enlightened welfare program of this kind does begin to seem vaguely possible.

The sympathy of a major business figure like Arjay Miller is bound to carry weight. The Republicans, at least, are now talking about improving welfare rather than cutting it back. Proposals like the negative income tax devised by James Tobin and Joseph Pechman are beginning to get intense study. Working from the viewpoint of the poor themselves, the National Welfare Rights movement is active in 60 or so big cities, where the problem is most acute.

The difficulty remains immense. A "right to income" still seems to most Americans a wicked violation of the ethic of self-reliance upon which a pioneer nation once prided itself. But the inescapable truth is that the day of the self-reliant pioneer is at least a half-century in the past.

WRO's in ACTION

★ BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

The newly established Brooklyn Welfare Action Council (a coalition of more than 25 local groups) demonstrated for special Christmas grants. More than 175 recipients picketed, marched, and sang outside Brooklyn welfare centers and then held their own "Christmas Party" sit-in on December 18. At midnight officials gave up and 15 BWAC members got emergency checks totaling more than $1200! Other recipients served notice that they will spend rent money for a decent Christmas for their children and BWAC groups plan action to force the welfare department to replace this money in January.

★ DETROIT, MICHIGAN

On December 9, 100 members of the Westside Mothers confronted Wayne County Welfare officials to demand money for winter clothing. "How can you buy a winter coat with $5.00 that has already been spent for heat?" they asked. Follow up with requests for fair hearings was planned.

★ OHIO

Leaders from Ohio welfare rights groups met recently with an official representative of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to protest unequal treatment of OHIO welfare recipients and to present complaints about Ohio's failure to abide by federal fair hearings rules. NWRO Headquarters helped set up this meeting and NWRO General Counsel Carl Rachlin attended. Full followup pressure on HEW is planned to see that they make Ohio obey the law!

★ WASHINGTON, D.C.

National Welfare Rights Organization Director George A. Wiley, speaking before public welfare officials from all over the country at the American Public Welfare Association conference told it like it is: "You people are the enemy".

★ CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

The T.W.O. Social Welfare Union went to the Illinois state capitol at Springfield to testify before the legislative Advisory Committee on Public Aid. Mrs. Annie Jackson, the group's president, called for "a public aid system meant for humans, not animals." State Representative Robert E. Mann got the message, "The problems of the poor will not advance through wishful thinking or punative legislation. Meanwhile, the poor are organizing in order to have a more effective voice in Springfield and Washington. Why not!"

FIGHTING THE SYSTEM FOR FUN AND PROFIT

$23,000 in Back Pay

An Alameda county social worker who once refused to join in pre-dawn bed checks of welfare recipients, yesterday received a check for almost $23,000 from his employer.

Benny Max Parrish was fired in January, 1963, when he refused to check on recipients. Yesterday, the Alameda County Welfare Department paid him wages for the 50 months since his dismissal.

Parrish had appealed the firing in a four-year legal battle. A State Supreme Court decision announced last March ordered his reinstatement and the payment of $22,921.78 in lost wages.

The 33-year-old social worker had refused to join in early morning raids to determine if "unauthorized" men were living with recipients. Such raids are now forbidden by State and Federal laws.

BENNY PARISH
He refused orders

Berkeley attorney Al Bendich, who fought the legal battles, presented the check to Parrish on the department's steps, at 401 Broadway in Oakland.

"Parrish proved that one man can vindicate the rights of everybody," said Bendich. "A public employee does not have to take orders without question."

Parrish, who has a wife and child, said he had been unemployed or about two years since the dismissal. He will resign from the welfare department and return to school, he said.

SHOW THIS CLIPPING TO SOCIAL WORKERS WHO TELL YOU "I AM JUST DOING MY JOB." REMIND THEM OF WHAT HAPPENED TO THE NAZIS WHO HAD THIS ATTITUDE. SHOW THEM WHAT THEY COULD ACCOMPLISH IF THEY HAD COURAGE, GUTS, AND BACKBONE LIKE BENNY PARRISH!

NATIONAL COORDINATING COMMITTEE MEETING SET FOR FEBRUARY 3-4 in CHICAGO

The NWRO National Coordinating Committee will meet in Chicago the weekend of February 3-4. The National Coordinating Committee is made up of NWRO officers and one representative from each state with an NWRO affiliate group.

New welfare rights groups may make special arrangements to send representatives to participate in the briefing and training workshops which will be held at the same time as NCC sessions. Contact National Headquarters for information.

NOW!

National Welfare Leaders Newsletter

ACROSS THE NATION WELFARE RECIPIENTS ARE ORGANIZING for adequate income, dignity, justice, and democracy. The result: a dynamic, growing building movement and the first nationwide organization of poor people since the 1930's--the National Welfare Rights Organization.

AS THE MOVEMENT'S KEY COMMUNICATIONS LINK, the NWRO's National Welfare Leaders Newsletter brings up-to-the-moment information to welfare rights leaders and supporters.

PUBLISHED TWICE MONTHLY FROM THE NATION's CAPITOL, EACH ISSUE features:

--a round-up of current welfare rights action across the nation;
--in-depth analyses of important welfare issues;
--the latest developments on Capitol Hill and at the federal agencies.

THE NATIONAL WELFARE LEADERS NEWSLETTER IS A READING MUST for people related to the welfare field, or concerned with the struggle for human rights!!

SUBSCRIBE!

PLEASE ENTER MY ONE YEAR (24 ISSUES) SUBSCRIPTION TO THE NWRO NATIONAL WELFARE LEADERS NEWSLETTER:

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

ORGANIZATION (?) _____

☐ ENCLOSED IS MY CHECK FOR $10 ☐ PLEASE BILL ME

POVERTY/RIGHTS ACTION CENTER
National Headquarters of the Welfare Rights Movement
1713 R Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C.
20009

Phone: (202) 462-8804

WASHINGTON
D C

First Class Mail
U.S. POSTAGE
PAID 10¢
PERMIT 42976

FIRST CLASS MAIL

NOW!

DEC. 29 1967

The 1967 Anti-Welfare Social Security Amendments Law

A SUMMARY

National Welfare Rights Organization Headquarters: Poverty Rights Action Center
1713 R Street Northwest, Washington, D.C. 20009 Telephone: (202) 462-8804

90th Congress
1st Session

DECEMBER 1967

SUMMARY OF

PUBLIC WELFARE

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1967

JOINT PUBLICATION

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE

OF THE

U.S. SENATE

AND

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

OF THE

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Prepared by the staffs of the Senate Committee on Finance and the House Committee on Ways and Means

PUBLIC WELFARE AMENDMENTS

Work Incentive Program for AFDC Families

The amendments establish a new work incentive program for families receiving AFDC payments to be administered by the Department of Labor. The State welfare agencies would determine who was appropriate for such referral but would not include (1) children who are under age 16 or going to school; (2) any person with illness, incapacity, advanced age or remoteness from a project that precludes effective participation in work or training; or (3) persons whose substantially continuous presence in the home is required because of the illness or incapacity of another member of the household. For all those referred the welfare agency will assure necessary child care arrangements for the children involved. An individual who desires to participate in work or training would be considered for assignment and, unless specifically disapproved, would be referred to the program.

People referred by the State welfare agency to the Department of Labor would be handled under three priorities. Under priority I, the Secretary of Labor, through the over 2,000 U.S. employment offices, would make arrangements for as many as possible to move into regular employment and would establish an employability plan for each other person.

Under priority II all those found suitable would receive training appropriate to their needs and up to $30 a month incentive payment. After training as many as possible would be referred to regular employment.

Under priority III, the employment office would make arrangements for special work projects to employ those who are found to be unsuitable for the training and those for whom no jobs in the regular economy can be found at the time. These special projects would be set up by agreement between the employment office and public agencies or nonprofit private agencies organized for a public service purpose. It would be required that workers receive at least the minimum wage (but not necessarily the prevailing wage) if the work they perform is covered under a minimum wage statute (and in applying the minimum wage law, their welfare grants would be counted). Moreover, the work performed under special projects must not result in the displacement of regularly employed workers and would have to be of a type which, under the circumstances in the local situation, would not otherwise be performed by regular employees.

The special work projects would work like this: The State welfare agency would make payments to the employment office equal to: (1) the welfare benefit the family would have been entitled to, or, if smaller, (2) a portion of the welfare benefit equal to 80 percent of the rates which the individual receives on the special project.

The Secretary of Labor would arrange for the participants to work in a special work project. The amount of the funds paid by him into the project would depend on the terms he negotiates with the agency sponsoring the project. The amount of funds put into the projects by the employment office could not be larger than the funds sent to the Secretary of Labor by the State welfare agency.

The extent to which the State welfare expenditures might be reduced would depend upon the negotiating efforts of the Secretary of Labor. If he is successful in placing these workers in work projects where the pay is relatively good, the contribution the State must make into the employment pool would be less and there would be a savings to both Federal and State Governments.

Employees who work under these agreements would have their situations reevaluated by the employment office at regular intervals (at least every 6 months) for the purpose of making it possible for as many such employees as possible to move into regular employment.

An important facet of this suggested work program is that in most instances the recipient would no longer receive a check from the welfare agency. Instead, he would receive a payment from an employer for services performed. The entire check would be subject to income, social security, and unemployment compensation taxes, thus assuring that the individual would be accruing rights and responsibility just as other working people do. In those cases where an employee receives wages which are insufficient to raise his income to a level equal to the grant he would have received had he not been in the project plus 20 percent of his wages, a welfare check equal to the difference would be paid. In these instances the supplemental check would be issued by the welfare agency and sent to the worker.

A refusal to accept work or undertake training without good cause by a person who has been referred would be reported back to the State agency by the Labor Department; and, unless such person returns to the program within 60 days(during which he would receive counseling), his welfare payment would be terminated. Protective and vendor payments would be continued, however, for the dependent children to protect them from the faults of others.

The States would have to meet 20 percent, in cash or in kind, of the total cost of the program (excluding amounts paid on special work projects, priority III, which would come from the employer and the transferred welfare payments).

Earnings Exemption

Under the present aid to families with dependent children program, the States, at their option, may disregard not more than $50 per month of earned income of each dependent child under age 18 but not more than $150 per month in the same home in computing the family's income for public welfare purposes. The States also have the option of disregarding $5 of income from any source before applying the child's earned income exemption.

Under the amendments earned income of each child recipient who is a full-time student or is a part time student not working full time, will be excluded in determining need for assistance. In the case of any other child or an adult relative the first $30 of earned income of the group plus ⅓ of the remainder of such income for the month would also be exempt. The prior provision exempting $50 a month of a child's income would be superseded by these provisions.

Dependent Children of Unemployed Fathers

The amendments provide that under State programs of aid to families with dependent children of unemployed parents, Federal matching would be available only for the children of unemployed fathers. Under present law States may include children on the basis of the unemployment of mothers, as well as fathers. The amendments also provide that the Secretary will prescribe standards for the determination of what constitutes unemployment. The term is defined by the States under present law.

Under the amendments, State plans would have to provide for the payment of assistance when a child's father has not been employed for at least 30 days prior to receiving aid, if he has not refused a bona fide offer of employment or training without good cause, and if he has had a recent and substantial connection with the labor force. Assistance would be denied if the father is not currently registered with the public employment office in the State, if he refuses without good cause to undertake work or training, or refuses without good cause to accept employment, of if he is receiving unemployment compensation.

The States would have to refer the fathers to work incentive programs with 30 days after first providing them with welfare assistance.

States which are operating programs for the children of unemployed parents as provided for under present law would not have to add any additional children or families as a result of the new provisions prior to July 1, 1969. However, the amendment establishing criteria for persons covered would be effective January 1, 1968, and no Federal matching would be provided for persons who do not meet these criteria.

Limitation on Federal Matching in AFDC Program

The amendments sets a limitation on Federal financial participation in the AFDC program related to the proportion of the child population under age 18 aided because of the absence from the home of a parent. Federal financial participation would not be available for any excess above the percentage of children of absent parents who received aid to the child population under age 18 in the State as of January 1, 1968.

This limitation will be effective after June 30, 1968.

Federal Payments for Foster Home Care of Dependent Children

Effective July 1, 1969, States would have to provide AFDC payments for children who are placed in a foster home if in the 6 months before proceedings started in the court they would have been eligible for AFDC if they had lived in the home of a relative. The provision would be optional with the States before July 1, 1969. Under present law, children in foster care are eligible for AFDC payments only if they actually received such payments in the month they were placed in foster care. Federal matching would be available for grants up to an average of $100 a month per child.

Emergency Assistance

The amendments authorizes up to 30 days of emergency assistance during a 12-month period to a child under 21 and his family, but could not be extended to a family for refusal (without good cause) to accept work or training under the work incentive program. This emergency aid could also be extended to migrant workers who have dependent children.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Protective or Vendor Payments

The amendments increase the limitation of recipients for whom protective payments could be made because they were unable to manage their funds from 5 percent to 10 percent but excludes from this overall limitation those recipients for whom such payments have been made because of the refusal without good cause, of an individual to work, register for work, or to participate under a training or work program.

Single Organizational Unit for Child Services

The amendments provide that child-welfare services and services to children receiving AFDC shall be provided by the same organizational unit at the State and local level, except that in those instances where such services were provided by separate State agencies or separate local agencies on the date of enactment of the amendments, they may continue to be provided by such agencies.

Pass Along

The amendments expand the provision enacted in 1965 which allows the State to exempt up to $5 a month of any type of income in determining eligibility and the amount of assistance. Effective upon enactment, the States would have the option of exempting up to a total of $7.50 a month for the aged, blind, and the totally and permanently disabled.

Increased Authorizations for Child Welfare Services

The amendments increase child welfare authorizations from $55 million for fiscal year 1969 to $100 million, and from $60 million for later years to $110 million.

Provision of Family Service State Plan Requirement

There is a provision in present law requiring State welfare agencies to make a plan for providing welfare services for each child in an AFDC family. Under the amendments, the plan must also provide for welfare services for the adults in the family.

Use of Subprofessional and Volunteer Staff

The amendments require States, effective July 1, 1969, to train and use subprofessional staff, with particular emphasis on the use of welfare recipients and other persons of low income, as community service aides for the kinds of jobs appropriate for them in the public assistance, child welfare, and health programs under the Social Security Act. The amendment also directs States to use volunteers in the program both for the provision of services to recipients, and for the assistance of advisory committees.

Parent Involvement in Day Care—Day Care Standards

The amendments add a State plan requirement to the child welfare day-care provisions for development of arrangements for the more effective involvement of parents in day care programs. Also, the day care standards in the child welfare services programs will be made applicable to day care provided to AFDC children.

Repatriation Extension

The amendments extend for 1 year, through June 30, 1969, the temporary legislation which authorizes assistance to needy Americans needy who have been repatriated to the United States by the Department of State from foreign countries.

Demonstration Projects

Two million dollars annually is currently available to encourage the States to develop demonstrations in improved methods of providing service to recipients or in improved methods of administration. The amendments increase this amount to $4 million annually.

Payment for Home Repairs

The amendment for the cash public assistance programs, allow 50 percent Federal matching for repairs (up to $500) of homes owned by recipients if to do so would be more economical from the standpoint of the program.

Purchase of Social Services

The amendments permit the purchase by welfare agencies of child care and other services under the public assistance title of the act. Such services may now be provided by welfare agency staff but existing law does not permit their purchase except from other State agencies.

Social Work Manpower and Training

The amendments authorize $5 million for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969, and $5 million for each of the 3 succeeding fiscal years for grants to public or nonprofit private colleges and universities and to accredited graduate schools of social work, or an association of such schools, to meet part of the costs of development, expansion, or improvement of undergraduate programs in social work and programs for the graduate training of professional social work personnel. Not less than one-half of the amount appropriated would have to be used for grants for undergraduate programs.

Location of Absent Parents

The amendments provide that in those instances in which welfare agencies have been unable to locate absent parents of children receiving AFDC through all sources available to them, including records of the Social Security Administration, the Internal Revenue Service will make available any information concerning their whereabouts that it may have.

Family Planning

Family planning expenditures are now made under the maternal and child health program in title V and through medical assistance under title XIX, as a medical services expenditure. States are free to offer family planning services to AFDC recipients under title IV, but there are no Federal requirements. Under the amendments, States will be required to offer family planning services to all appropriate AFDC recipients. Federal matching of these expenditures will be provided. In addition, authorizations for the maternal and child health programs are increased, and 6 percent of the appropriated funds are earmarked for family planning. (An estimated $15 million would be spent for that purpose under the 1969 authorization, with increases thereafter). Demonstration projects would need to be developed for the provision of family planning services for mothers in needy areas.

Language is included to clarify that the acceptance of family planning services is voluntary and not a requisite for the receipt of assistance.

Training of Personnel for Health Care and Related Services for Mothers and Children

The amendments will direct the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare "to give special attention to" programs providing training at the undergraduate level in making grants for training of such personnel.

Consoliadation and Increase of Child Health Authorizations

The amendments consolidate the existing separate child health authorizations into one single authorization with three general categories. Beginning with 1969, 50 percent of the total authorization would be for formula grants, 40 percent for project grants, and 10 percent for research and training. By July 1972 the States would have to take over the responsibility for the project grants, and 90 percent of the total authorization would then go to the States in the form of formula grants. Total authorizations would increase from $250 million in 1969 to $350 million in 1973 and thereafter.

Additional Requirements on the States Under the Formula Grant Program—Child Health

State plans must provide for the early identification and treatment of crippled children. Title XIX is amended to conform to this requirement. The States must also devote special attention to family planning services and dental care for children in the development of demonstration services.

Optometric Services Under Child Health Programs

Persons receiving health services under child health programs will be free to utilize the services of optometrists when appropriate.

Maintenance of State Effort

Present law contains certain provisions which in effect require that the additional Federal dollars States received as a result of the Social Security Amendments of 1965 are passed on to recipients or are otherwise used in the State's welfare program, for a period ending July 1, 1969. The amendments adds to the kinds of expenditures States may count (from July 1, 1966) in determining whether they are satisfying the maintenance of effort provisions. The maintenance of effort provision as amended would terminate July 1, 1968.

Use of State Agencies To Assist Health Facilities To Participate in the Various Health Programs Under the Social Security Act

States will receive 75-percent Federal matching for services which State health agencies perform to help health facilities qualify for participation in the various health programs under the Social Security Act (including medicare, medicaid, and the child health programs) and to help these facilities improve their fiscal records for payment purposes. Similar provisions in the medicare program (which finances such services on a 100-percent basis from the Federal hospital insurance trust fund) are repealed effective July 1, 1969, when this provision goes into effect.

Project Grants—Child Health

Until July 1972, the amendment authorizes project grants (1) to help reduce the incidence of mental retardation and other handicapping conditions caused by complications associated with childbearing, and to help reduce infant and maternal mortality; (2) to promote the health of children and youth of school and preschool age; and (3) to provide dental care and services to children. Beginning July 1972, responsibility for these projects will be transferred to the States.

The fiscal year 1968 authorization for maternity and infant care special projects grants is increased from $30 to $35 million.

Limitation on Federal Participation in Medical Assistance (Medicaid)

States will be limited in setting income levels for Federal matching purposes to 133⅓ percent of the AFDC payment level. (For the period July–December 1968, the percentage is 150, and for calendar year 1969 it is to be 140 percent.)

Skilled Nursing Home Standards Under Medicaid

States are required, as a condition for participation in the medicaid program, to place assistance recipients only in those licensed nursing homes which meet certain conditions. The conditions include requirements which relate to environment, sanitation, and housekeeping now applicable to extended care facilities under medicare, as well as fire safety standards of the life safety code of the National Fire Protection Association (unless the Secretary finds that a State's existing fire code is adequate).

States will also have to have a professional medical audit program under which periodic medical evaluations of the appropriateness of care provided title XIX patients in nursing homes, mental hospitals, and other institutions will be made.

Effective July 1, 1970, States which provide skilled nursing home care under medicaid will also be expected to provide home health care services.

Federal Matching for Assistance Recipients in Intermediate Care Facilities

Under current law, vendor payments may be made with Federal sharing only in behalf of persons in medical facilities, such as skilled nursing homes. There is no Federal vendor-payment matching for people who need institutional care in the intermediate range between that which is provided in a boarding house (for which eligible persons may receive a money payment under the money payment programs), and those who need the comprehensive services of skilled nursing homes.

The amendments provide for vendor payments in behalf of persons who qualify for OAA, AB, or APTD, and who are living in facilities (including a Christian Science sanitarium) which are more than boarding houses but which are less than skilled nursing homes. The rate of Federal sharing for payments for care in those institutions is at the same rate as for medical assistance under title XIX. Such homes will have to meet safety and sanitation standards comparable to those required for nursing homes in a given State.

This provision should result in a reduction in the cost of title XIX by allowing States to relocate substantial numbers of welfare recipients who are now in skilled nursing homes in lower cost institutions.

WELFARE

Burson Told Child Waiting Lists Unacceptable

By ACHSAH NESMITH

The regional U.S. commissioner of Social and Rehabilitation Services, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, has informed state welfare director William H. Burson that establishing waiting lists for needy children with absent fathers is "unacceptable."

Mrs. Virginia Smyth, who assumed the new federal post last fall, also informed Burson that the new Social Security amendments under which Congress froze the number of children with absent fathers who can receive welfare benefits in their final form based the freeze number on the average caseload for the January-March quarter rather than at Jan. 1 as the original amendments had specified.

Burson notified county directors Monday that the date of the freeze number would be delayed, which means waiting lists expected to begin in mid-January would not go into effect in any event until the payments that go out in April.

The freeze is not required by the act until July, but the federal money will be paid after that only on the basis of the number of such children on the January-March rolls. Burson decided to impose the waiting lists immediately because he said federal regulations prohibit removing eligible people from the rolls and he would have to make an across-the-board cut in all welfare payments in July if he didn't establish waiting lists.

"We've advised them it will not be possible to maintain a waiting list or otherwise fail to follow existing provision of the law," Mrs. Smyth said Thursday.

"Everyone who considers himself eligible may apply and if he is eligible may receive assistance promptly," she added. "In the near future the Washington office will send out memoranda listing other alternatives," explaining that the states could either make up the differences with entirely state funds, or "adjust eligibility requirements." She said she couldn't go into detail on how eligibility requirements could be adjusted to handle the freeze without cutting off other children not in the freeze group.

Mrs. Smyth

Burson

The freeze was aimed by Congress at cutting down on the increase in illegitimate children on welfare rolls, but also applies to children whose absent parents are in prison or are patients in tuberculosis or mental hospitals and children whose divorced fathers do not support them. Children who are deprived of parental support by death or incapacity are not included in the freeze, which would mean that children with parents in other types of hospitals, or incapacitated home would not be subject to a numerical freeze.

Mrs. Smyth said she hoped the period from now until March would be used to make intentive efforts to see that every child eligible for assistance is processed and actually on the rolls in time to count on the number the freeze would be based upon.

She said that so far other states in her region have taken no action on the freeze but are following a policy of "wait and see."

Burson has said numerous times that he hopes Congress will change its mind and lift the freeze, but also has said he would resist efforts by HEW to prevent him from setting up waiting lists if the freeze is not lifted.

In the meantime, an estinated 400 needy Georgia Children a month have an additional three months before they are pushed back onto a waiting list.

Apartment At I-285 Deferred

The aldermanic Zoning Committee deferred action Thursday on a zoning change to allow a 600-unit luxury apartment project at the corner of Mount [illegible] and Interstate 285

(adm) WOMEN'S WORK

WORKSHOP

THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED

of the Southern Regional Council, Inc.

PROCEDURES OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE IN THE SOUTHERN REGION:

CORRECTION OR DEFECTION

ATLANTAN HOTEL

ATLANTA, GEORGIA MARCH 22-23, 1967

The use of Rodin's "La Cathedrale" on the cover is by permission of The Philadelphia Museum of Art.

A WORKSHOP -

Is a place of saw and plane and saw dust and shavings on the floor-the leavings from rough things made smooth;-
of square and rule,
with which things not true to line are tested and made straight;
and a workman in overalls, not afraid to soil his hands as he bends to his task to perfect something beautiful-and useful out of that which may have been rough and plain --
But all done in the service of humanity.

In this spirit, we may have our workshop.
It means hard work, - not afraid to handle things not liked, to probe deep with chisel and auger to uncover conditions in our hearts and elsewhere;
to make rough places be saw dust and shavings;
to use the square and rule to straighten conditions now all awry that we may make something beautiful out of that which has been wrong and unlovely-
And all done in the service of humanity

--Dorothy Tilly

From --

Text of President Johnson's Special Message to Congress on Crime in United States

WILLINGNESS TO CHANGE

"So long as perfunctory, mass-production methods prevail in many lower courts, so long as scandalous conditions exist in many jails--where, in 1965, 100,000 children were held in adult jails, and where attempts to rehabilitate are almost nonexistent--we cannot achieve full public confidence in the system of criminal justice.

"What is required of that system is a profound self-analysis, the willingness to change, and a massive effort to:

"Improve the caliber and training of law enforcement, judicial and corrections officials.

"Strengthen the capability of police to detect crimes and apprehend those who commit them.

"Extend the range and quality of treatment services.

"Make full use of advanced scientific methods in the courtroom, to reduce frustrating and unfair delays and to make available to the sentencing judge all necessary information about the defendant.

"Providing better counsel for juveniles and for adults who cannot afford to provide their own...."

WORSHIP SERVICE

10:00 A.M. - March 22

Worship Leaders - Mrs. Martin L. King, Jr.
Mrs. W. H. Clark

SOLO - HOW GREAT THOU ART!

CALL TO WORSHIP --

We go together on a Spiritual Adventure, an age-old Spiritual Adventure pioneered by Amos, Micah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Isaiah, Hosea, and Jesus. We recognize Freedom's Legacy:

Amos: Justice and Righteousness.

Hosea: Justice and Righteousness tempered with Compassionate Love.

Isaiah: Justice and Righteousness with Promises to the Obedient.

John: Justice and Righteousness with Repentance.

Jesus: Justice and Righteousness - Love Thy Neighbor as Thyself.

Let us enter into the Great Adventure with Great Expectancy of the Great Spiritual Value it can be. God trusts us. We will not fail Him.

Again I saw all the oppressions that are practiced under the sun. And beheld, the tears of the oppressed and they had no one to comfort them! On the side of the oppressors there was power, and there was no one to comfort them!

ECCLESIASTES 4:1

Justice is turned back,

And righteousness stands afar off,

for truth has fallen in the public squares and righteousness cannot enter.

The Lord saw it and it displeased Him that there was no justice. ISAIAH 50:14-16

HYMN - THE VOICE OF GOD IS CALLING - Tune, Welsh Hymn Melody

SOLOIST: The voice of God is calling
It summons unto men; as once He spoke in Zion,
So now He speaks again.
Whom shall I send to succor my people in their need?
Whom shall I send to loosen the bonds of lust and greed?

GROUP: We heed, O Lord, Thy summons, and answer, here are we!
Send us upon Thine errand, let us Thy servants be.
Our strength is dust and ashes, our years a passing hour;
But Thou canst use our weakness to magnify Thy power.

SOLOIST: I hear My people crying in cot and mine and slum;
No field or mart is silent, no city street is dumb.
I see My people falling in darkness and despair,
Whom shall I send to shatter the fetters which they bear?

GROUP: From ease and pleasure save us, from pride of place absolve;
Purge us of low desire, lift us to high resolve,
Take us and make us holy, teach us Thy will and way,
Speak and behold we answer, command and we obey. AMEN.

And behold, the Lord passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains and broke in pieces the rocks before the Lord, but the Lord was not in the wind; and after the wind an earthquake, but the Lord was not in the earthquake, and after the earthquake, a fire, but the Lord was not in the fire; and after the fire a still small voice. I KINGS 19:11-12

UNISON PRAYER - May we hear Thy still small voice,
And follow where it commands. AMEN.

P R O G R A M

GREETINGS - Dr. Paul Anthony, Executive Director
Southern Regional Council

Mr. James N. Wood, Executive Assistant
Southern Regional Council

THE PURPOSE OF THE WORKSHOP - Mrs. M. E. Tilly

PANEL DISCUSSION -

"Procedures of Criminal Justice in the Southern Region: Correction or Defection"

Moderator - Mr. Theodore Freedman, Southeastern Director
Anti-Defamation League

Mr. Clifford Durr, Rhodes Scholar, Lecturer at Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and Cambridge and Oxford, England

Mrs. Ruby Hurley, Southeastern Director
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

Mrs. Henry J. Toombs - Pioneered the beginning of Georgia's Department of Children and Youth, and in establishing The Governor's Legislative Forum

Mr. Hershal Sausier, Georgia Family and Children Services Department

Mr. Stewart Werner, Staff Consultant, Georgia Committee on Crime and Delinquency

AFTERNOON SESSION

March 22, 1967

2:00

UNISON PRAYER -

O Heart, that beats with every human heart,
O Heart, that weeps with every human tear,
O Heart, that sings with every human song,
Fill our slow hearts with flood tides of Thy love;
That they may beat with every human heart,
That they may weep with every human tear,
That they may sing with every human song,
And thus, Through Thee, unite all mankind.

--Quotable Poems

YOUTH JURY - Judge E. T. Brock
Atlanta Municipal Court

THE ATLANTA PILOT PROJECT - Mr. Ronald Seivers

THOSE WHO SEARCHED COURT RECORDS -

DISCUSSION GROUPS - "Behold the Turtle,
He makes progress only when he sticks his neck out."

--James Bryant Conant

1. Leader - Mrs. Frances Pauley
   Reporter - Mrs. Edward M. Brown
   Consultant - Mr. John Boone

2. Leader - Mrs. J. Ben Stalvey
   Reporter - Mrs. Chris Matheson
   Consultant - Mrs. Niles C. Clark

3. Leader - Mrs. Newton Johnson
   Reporter - Mrs. W. W. Weatherspool
   Consultant - Miss Thelma Stevens

4. Leader - Mrs. Eva Parks
   Reporter - Mrs. W. W. Dodd
   Consultant - Mrs. H. M. Russell

5. Leader - Mrs. Betty Cantor
   Reporter - Mrs. Henry Collins
   Consultant - Mr. Edwin Stanfield

EVENING SESSION

Wednesday, March 22, 1967

DINNER - 6:00 o'clock

WE SING TOGETHER - Led by Mrs. M. L. King, Jr.

SPEAKER - Dr. Paul Anthony, Executive Director
Southern Regional Council

FILMS - "The Odds Against" and
"The Scar Beneath"

Presented by - Mr. John Boone, Director
Crime and Correction Project

Mr. William Farmar, Assistant

GOOD NIGHT

MORNING SESSION

Thursday, March 23, 1967

9:30

Firm in conviction, Never afraid to speak,
Persuasive in conversation,
Patient and understanding with those who do not agree with us,
Fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.

--adoped October 26, 1954, just after the Supreme Court decision on the desegregation of public schools

WORSHIP - We Sing Together - Mrs. M. L. King, Jr.

MESSAGE - Dr. Evelyn Green, Executive Secretary
Board of Woman's Work
Presbyterian Church in U. S.

THE MARCH 24-25, 1966 - National Womens Organization
Conference on Courts

Mrs. John Patton, Mrs. Newton Fowler, Mrs. George Gunning, Mrs. Betty Cantor, Mrs. Benjamin Mays, Dr. Evelyn Green, Mrs. Niles C. Clark, and Mrs. Edward M. Brown.

Thursday morning - cont'd

THE ALCOHOL PROJECT OF EMORY UNIVERSITY -

Mr. Bruce Herrin
Assistant Professor of Social Work
Department of Psychiatry

REPORT OF DISCUSSION GROUPS - Mrs. John Patton

REPORT ON WORKSHOP - Mrs. Clifford Durr

"LEAD ON, O KING ETERNAL, WE FOLLOW NOT WITH FEARS"

-- Mrs. H. M. Russell, President
Southeastern Jurisdiction
Woman's Society of Christian Service
The Methodist Church

Ye that hath faith to look with fearless eyes
Beyond the tragedy of a world at strife
And trust that out of the night and death shall rise
The dawn of amplier life.

Rejoice, whatsoever anguish rend your heart
That God has given you a priceless dower
To live in these great times and have your part
In Freedom's crowning hour;
That you may tell your sons who see the light
High in the heavens - their heritage take
"I saw the power of Darkness put to flight
I saw the Morning break--"

From - Between Midnight and Morning
Sir Owen Seaman
Written for The Book of King Alfred of Belgium

WORKSHOP ON COURTS

Prepared by Mrs. Wm. Wood, Vice President, League of Women Voters of the United States

Observers Program

Some selective process should be used in recruiting observers. Personal appearance and demeanor are important. Those willing to participate should --

1) Conduct themselves in a polite, well-mannered way.

2) Be willing to sit through proceedings and refrain from making remarks or engaging in conversation with those nearby while the Court is in session.

3) Act like a fair-minded person.

It is wise for observers to work in teams of two. This makes it possible to check with one another when any report is written.

When observing in the Courts the following should be kept in mind:

1) Trials are open. However, any judge has power to exclude the public and to have part of the hearing in private.

2) Know the procedures in the Court to be visited. Attorneys can be helpful in briefings on this.

3) Know the Court schedule -- what cases are coming up, the time the Court opens, etc.

4) Many courtrooms have limited space. Get there in time to get a seat near the front so you can hear. Do not expect special favors in having a seat saved. If offered, do not accept a Judge's invitation to sit on the bench.

5) Areas of interest:
   a. Judge's demeanor toward the person before the Court
   b. Bail
   c. Legal Counsel
   d. Jury selection
   e. Sentencing, fines, etc.

6) Observe several times with the same judge presiding.

7) Observe procedures under more than one judge.

Set up state councils' steering committee to develop regional program emphases.

Sheriffs, J. P's paid on fee system — "piece work" basis

WORLD PROBLEMS

CHURCH AND SOCIETY
Opinion

Issued Occasionally by the Division of Church and Society
Board of Christian Education, Presbyterian Church, U.S.
P. O. Box 1176, Richmond, Virginia 23209 703-649-9021

Malcolm P. Calhoun, Secretary of the Division
George A. Chauncey, Editor

Number 2 February 1967

ISSUES IN THE DEBATE ON THE WAR IN VIETNAM

George A. Chauncey

The tragic war in Vietnam began over twenty years ago. In 1945, Ho Chi Minh - the immensely popular Communist leader of the nationalist Vietminh League and the man who had spearheaded the resistence movement against the Japanese during World War II - declared the independence of the Vietnamese people, and proclaimed Hanoi as capital. Though he quoted the American Declaration of Independence, his call for recognition fell on deaf ears in our country and among the other major powers of the world. After the Japanese Occupation Forces moved out, the French, who had controlled Vietnam since the 19th century, moved back in. In 1946 the nationalist Vietminh forces attacked the French and the Vietnamese forces loyal to the French, and the French-Indochina War, which was to last eight bloody years, began. During this war the United States gave financial and military supply aid to the French. After the fall of Dien Bien Phu, the French withdrew in accordance with the Geneva Agreements of 1954. The next year, in 1955, we sent in our first "military advisors" to help train the South Vietnamese Army. In 1961, we suffered our first American casualty.

Every war is tragic, but in many ways the strange and complicated war in Vietnam seems unusually tragic. The misery and suffering of the Vietnamese people caused by this war is almost incalculable. An estimated 500,000 persons have been killed in it. A total of well over a million men are now engaged in combat on both sides. Another million persons - mostly women, children and the elderly - have been uprooted from their homes and made refugees by it. Saigon, with three million people, is now the most densely populated city in the world. Inflation, caused by the American presence is almost out of hand. Prostitution is on the rise. And a nation, never really united, is almost continually on the verge of a civil war within a civil war.

But this war is costly not only to the people of Vietnam, but also to the people of our own nation. We have already suffered more than 7,000 dead in Vietnam. We now have over 410,000 troops there, and it is expected that we may need a half million or more. We are spending $2.5 billion per month there. Newsweek estimates that it costs us $375,000 to kill a VC. We have already dropped the rough equivalent of a ton of bombs for every VC soldier. And at this very moment, 10,000 miles from home, young GI's are bombing villages, poisoning crops, and applying the torch to civilian huts - as allies of a people of whom James Reston has said, "the brutality of the Vietnamese to the fellow countryman they capture is almost beyond comprehension."

But the cost of this war to our nation is apparent not only in dollars spent and military personnel involved, but also in our internal division, the loss of confidence in national leadership, the draining of resources from urgently pressing domestic programs, and anger in the ghettos. The cost is further reflected in the fact that in her policy in Vietnam, America is more isolated from her traditional allies than at any point since the end of World War II; and in the fact that a great number of Asians and Africans mistakenly, though none the less clearly, regard this war as a racially motivated white man's war against colored peoples.

What is this war all about? What kind of war is it? Why are we involved? And how can this tragic slaughter be stopped? These questions constitute the issues in a great debate now going on in our nation. Participants in this debate are not merely a few militarists and right wing radicals on the one side, and doctrinaire pacifists and left wing students on the other, but a host of responsible public officials, organized groups, distinguished churchmen, and millions of ordinary citizens on both sides.

I want to do two things in this paper. First, I want to summarize the basic positions taken by both sides in this great debate, as I understand them. Secondly, I want to suggest some basic responsibilities we have as Christians vis-a-vis this war. My principal sources for this analysis of the issues are Vietnam: Vital Issues in the Great Debate, published by the Foreign Policy Association (from which I have quoted long excerpts); Triumph or Tragedy: Reflections on Vietnam by Richard Goodwin; and the Vietnam Reader edited by Raskin and Fall.

THE ISSUES IN THE DEBATE

Issue #1: What Sort of War is This?

The first basic issue is: What sort of war is this war in Vietnam? Is this a war of armed aggression into which we have been drawn as a defender of the victim? Or is this a civil war in which we have intervened?

Beginning with the Eisenhower Administration, the official American position has been unequivocal: this is a war of aggression by Hanoi, aided and abetted by Peking. According to the Administration, during the population exchange between North and South carried out under the Geneva agreements, Hanoi secreted some thousands of its guerrillas in South Vietnamese hamlets. Then the Communists waited, convinced that Diem would never be able to weld South Vietnam into a unified, viable state and that the area must inevitably fall to them. But according to the Administration, when, after two years, Diem's state seemed to be making steady progress toward social and political stability and it appeared that, if the Communists wanted to take over South Vietnam, they would have to fight for it, they ordered their guerrillas into action. In 1956 the Communists began a campaign of terror and assassination in South Vietnam which, over the years, developed into full-scale war.

If there was any doubt about Hanoi's involvement in this struggle, says the supporters of our policy, it was removed by the proceedings of the September 1960 congress of the Lao Dong (Communist) party in North Vietnam. One of the "momentous tasks" of the party, the delegates were told, is to "liberate the South from the atrocious rule of the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen...The North is becoming ...transformed into a firm base for the struggle for national reunification." Terror in the South and infiltrations from the North were intensified, and on June 2, 1962, the International Control Commission issued a special report declaring there was "sufficient evidence to show beyond reasonable doubt" that North Vietnam was guilty of aggression in violation of the agreements.

South Vietnam's admitted rejection of the provision in the Final Declaration at Geneva calling for popular elections throughout Vietnam is defended in two ways. First, it is pointed out that South Vietnam never agreed to the Final Declaration, and was therefore never bound by it. Second, it is argued that the North Vietnamese, crushed under the heel of a ruthless Communist dictatorship, could have had no freedom of choice at the polling booth. Under such conditions, the cards would have been stacked against Saigon. Hence no election was held.

Critics of the Administration interpret events quite differently. They point out that between 1954 and 1956, at least, the reports of the International Control Commission indicate satisfaction with the manner in which Hanoi was fulfilling its obligations under the agreements. During this same period, critics charge, Diem was violating their provisions by the ruthless suppression of all political opposition in South Vietnam, by boycotting exports to North Vietnam (especially rice, for which the Hanoi region had always depended upon the South) and by his refusal, with the support of the U.S., to participate in the elections. It was primarily the election issue, critics of our policy insist, that precipitated the renewal of warfare in South Vietnam after 1956. The insurgents were not Northern infiltrees, nor even predominantly South Vietnamese Communists, but chiefly members of religious sects and old Vietminh fighters who, under Diem's campaign of persecution, had no alternative but to fight or be annihilated. That infiltration finally occurred is not denied; what is denied is that the infiltration can be interpreted as aggression.

It is emphasized, furthermore, that the Geneva agreements established not two states, but only a border along the 17th parallel dividing Vietnam into two temporary zones pending the reunification which was expected to result from the elections. North and South constituted one country, it is argued, and the Vietnamese were fighting Vietnamese in a civil war. Administration critics disagree as to when Hanoi entered the struggle in active fashion, but all of them declare that it was subsequent to 1956, the year of the unrealized elections.

Moreover, critics say, even if Hanoi has by now taken over the direction of the Viet Cong and the National Liberation Front, it is still the South Vietnamese who make up the great majority of the Vietcong's fighting men. According to critic Bernard Fall, even America's own statistics show that at the beginning of 1966 the North Vietnamese constituted no more than 10% of the Viet Cong; and by mid-summer the VC's were still recruiting men inside South Vietnam at the rate of 3 to 4,000 a month.

Is this aggression or civil war? The reality seems to be, according to Goodwin, that there is aggression and there is also civil war. Some of the revolutionaries are Communists, some are not. Some wish to associate with China, others are passionate nationalists. "Neither the country nor the President," Goodwin concludes, "is served by a reduction of the confused and blending tones of history to sharp black and whites."

Issue #2: Why is The U. S. Involved?

A second basic issue concerns why we are there. On what basis did America enter this war? The Administration has listed several bases, to each of which various critics have responded. One argument is that the U.S. has a formal and binding commitment to use its armies to defend Vietnam. Sometimes the commitment is found in the SEATO agreement. Dean Rusk, for example, has said, "it is this fundamental SEATO obligation that has from the outset guided our actions in Vietnam."

Critics respond to this by observing that the language of the treaty is imprecise; that no nation is specifically required to go to war; and that neither our fellow signers (including Great Britain and France), John Foster Dulles (author of the treaty), nor any president has believed or been advised that the treaty required us to send fighting men to Vietnam.

More often, the basis of our commitment is found not in the SEATO agreement but in Presidential pledges. "We are there," (President Johnson told a John Hopkins University audience on April 7, 1965), "because we have a promise to keep. Since 1954 every American President has offered support to the people of South Vietnam... to dishonor that pledge, to abandon this small and brave nation to its enemies and to the terror that must follow, would be an unforgivable wrong."

Critics respond to this argument with three points. They observe, first of all, that Eisenhower's pledge to Diem in 1954 was, as Eisenhower himself has since explained, a pledge for foreign aid, not a military program. They observe, secondly, that for every statement of Kennedy's, such as his oft-quoted one of 1961: "The U.S. is determined that the Republic of Vietnam shall not be lost to the Communists for lack of any support which the U.S. can render," there is another one, such as his one on CBS-TV in 1963: "We can help them, we can give them equipment, we can send our men out there as advisors, but they have to win it - the people of Vietnam - against the Communists." A final point is Hans J. Morgenthau's. He stresses that the pledges were made to a Saigon government that, he contends, we ourselves had installed, "our own agent." "I do not regard this," he comments, tartly, "as a valid foundation for our presence in South Vietnam."

A second Administration argument is the so-called "domino theory," This argument holds that the Vietnamese struggle is a test case for the "wars of liberation" upon which both Peking and Moscow have set their seals of approval; that a Communist victory in Vietnam would show us up as a "paper tiger," with the result that neighboring countries, their confidence in us shattered, would quickly fall into Communist hands; and that a Communist-dominated Indochinese peninsula would ultimately force Japan and the Philippines into a neutralist stance that would, in turn, constrict our defense line to Hawaii, Alaska and the West Coast - "too close," as U.S. News and World Report has put it, "for comfort."

This whole strategic concept is challenged by many observers. Recent history, it is said, flatly disproves the domino theory. No country followed the Soviet Union into communism in 1917 or China in 1949; no neighbor emulated North Vietnam in 1954, or Cuba in 1960. "The 'domino theory,'" writes Professor Morgenthau, "is but a replica of a vulgar Marxism which also believes in the inevitable spread of communism." The theory is held to be invalid even in reverse, i.e., that by stopping communism anywhere, it is discouraged elsewhere. Communism, stopped in Greece, the Philippines and Korea, for instance, went on to succeed in Cuba and North Vietnam, and temporarily threatened Indonesia. From this it follows, says critics of Administration strategy, that Vietnam's importance has been vastly exaggerated; even a Communist victory there would be no catastrophe. Indeed, some American observers argue that a Communist Vietnam might prove a stronger barrier to Chinese expansionism than any Saigon regime which needed U.S. backing for survival. The centrifugal force of nationalism, they believe, plus the traditional hostility of all Indochinese peoples toward the Chinese, would make of Ho Chi Minh (or his successor) another Tito, intent on charting an independent course. It is pointed out that even North Korea, whose survival as a Communist state was unquestionably due to China's intervention in the Korean War, is now showing strong signs of independence from Peking. Jean Lacouture, French journalist and author of Vietnam:

Between Two Truces, put the matter graphically: "Should the U.S....continue to prefer dead Vietnamese to Red Vietnamese, China will have won an historic victory."

A third Administration argument reminds us of what we learned in Munich: by failing to draw the line against Hitler at an early stage, the free world was compelled to draw it under much more difficult circumstances at a later date.

Critics contend that the Munich analogy is very misleading. One such critic, Reinhold Niebuhr, says this: "All historical analogies are inexact...and therefore misleading. The analogy between our defense against Nazism and our defense of South Vietnam against the Communist North is flagrantly misleading. Nazism's military nationalism threatened the moral substance of Western culture, the Jews with extinction and non-German continental nations with slavery. None of these issues is involved in a civil war between two portions of a partitioned nation, one Communist and the other non-Communist."

Issue #3: What is the Solution?

The third basic issue concerns the solution. "Let those...who speak and write about Vietnam say clearly what other policy they would pursue," President Johnson has said. Many have taken up the challenge, and the alternatives offered range across the spectrum. At one end is a highly articulate and mobile minority of pacifists, youthful idealists, and leftists who demand immediate, total and unconditional withdrawal of our troops. At the other end of the spectrum are those who demand the immediate mobilization of whatever military power is necessary to crush the enemy. This war must end, they say, with victory on the battlefield, and not with an inconclusive negotiated settlement. National polls indicate that the great majority of Americans favor neither withdrawal nor all-out war. Within this very broad middle-group, however, there is a wide range of alternatives to our present policy. Some want to escalate the war. Others want to de-escalate it. Both seem to agree with the Administration's stated policy on cardinal point: We are fighting not to conquer North Vietnam or destroy the enemy, but to weaken his will to fight sufficiently to bring him to the conference table and reach a settlement which will permit South Vietnam to determine its future in peace. It is on how best to accomplish this that the two schools differ with each other and with the Administration.

The escalators, who appear to be gaining strength in public opinion, believe that the President's buildup and application of our military strength has been slow, overcautious, and to a degree, self-defeating. They want us to consider the whole area - the two Vietnams, Laos, Cambodia, and Thailand - as a strategic whole for combat purposes; to throttle China's seaborne flow of supplies by gunfire and port blockade; and to accelerate our attacks on the Ho Chi Minh trail. By what moral right, some military men ask, does the President send hundreds of thousand of young Americans to risk their lives in an alien land, and at the same time deprive them of the most effective available weapons and methods to use against the enemy?

The Administration resists escalation on the ground that it could lead to a broadened conflict, perhaps a nuclear war. "We could make this into a larger war very quickly," Secretary Rusk said last July. "All we would have to do is to turn our backs for five minutes and let events take their course." Our objective, he reminded his listeners, is "to establish a peace, not destroy somebody."

Pressure for de-escalation comes on the Administration from the other side. Some de-escalators believe that Moscow and/or Peking will directly enter the war rather than permit the Communists to be defeated in Vietnam. If this is so, then it is likely that the present struggle will end in one of three ways: our own withdrawal (and tacit admission of defeat); World War III; or a compromise settlement. If the first two alternatives are intolerable, then the third is inevitable. And if compromise is inevitable - why not now, before more blood is spilled? Anyway, by the Administration's own statements, our purpose in fighting is not "victory" per se, but to get the enemy to quit shooting and talk. How, then, is this to be accomplished? Not, say the de-escalators, by bombing North Vietnam. On the Administration's own showing, they argue, the bombing has neither decreased the flow of men and supplies southward nor has it perceptibly lessened North Vietnam's will to fight. If, as Administration spokesmen have repeatedly said in one way or another, we cannot allow the enemy to shoot their way to the conference table, neither can it be expected that they will allow us to bomb them to the table.

As for what we should do in South Vietnam, most de-escalators appear to approve some variant of the "holding strategy" advocated by Lt. General James M. Gavin, under which we would simply hold what we now have while we seek a political solution through the UN or a reconvened Geneva Conference, or some other way. In any political solution, these critics say, we've got to be prepared to offer the Viet Cong more than a handful of chairs in the Hanoi delegation. In war, political settlements must reflect military realities. The military reality is that the VC occupy half the countryside. We can hardly ask them to accept a defeat at the table they have not suffered in the field.

In response to this criticism, Administration spokesmen have said three things: First, in regard to the Gavin proposal, General Maxwell Taylor has said that "to button up our troops in defensive positions...would constitute the abandonment of our allies on the battlefield...It would destroy all confidence in Vietnam in ultimate success and would encourage the timid and the wavering to turn to the Vietcong for protection." Secondly, as for recognizing the Vietcong, the Administration has taken the position that the VC can come to the conference table as part of the Communist delegation. However, under no conditions could we let them come, through their political wing, the NFL, as Hanoi insists that they come, as the sole representative of the South Vietnamese people. This, Secretary Rusk has said, would "be delivering South Vietnam into the control of the Communist North." Finally, contends the Administration and its supporters, our desire for peace has been manifested many times. Twice we suspended air raids over North Vietnam, once for 5 days and another time for 37 days. We have sent emissaries throughout the world in search of mediators. President Johnson has repeatedly offered to negotiate with Hanoi "without prior conditions"; and we have offered, once peace comes, to finance huge improvement projects of benefit to all of Southeast Asia, including Hanoi. All these initiatives have been rejected by the Communists.

CHRISTIAN RESPONSIBILITIES

So the debate goes. What is our role as Christians vis-a-vis this war, and this debate about the war? I submit that each of us has at least five basic responsibilities.

The first is to keep the horror of this war before us - on our own consciences, and on the consciences of our fellow countrymen. It may well be that this war is, as the Administration contends, a necessary evil. It may well be that this is the lesser of two evils. It may well be that the suffering to which we are contributing, horrible though it is, is less than the suffering which the world would have to endure were we not there. But even if it is the lesser of two evils, even if it is necessary tragedy this is an evil, tragic, horrible war which is inflicting great misery on many of our fellow men - and we as Christians must never forget this primary fact. I realize that one cannot listen to the news on radio or TV, glance at his morning paper, or read his favorite weekly news magazine without being reminded that we are at war in Vietnam. I am not convinced, however, that the American people are sufficiently sensitive to the character of this war, of the agony it is causing the Vietnamese people, of the impact it is having on our own GI's. One of our responsibilities as Christians - however we regard the validity of this war - is to keep its bloodstained character before our own eyes and the eyes of our neighbors.

We are called, in the second place, to give the pursuit of peace an appropriate priority - in our prayers, our preaching, our educational program, everything we are and say and do as the church. As the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches declared in a statement approved last February:

> "We realize the longing of mankind for peace not only in Southeast Asia but in the whole world. We are part of all humanity in this. Here, however, as representatives of Christian churches, we believe we have even deeper reason to speak and act for peace. We believe we must seek peace because of the gospel brought and proclaimed by our Lord."

Our third responsibility is to listen to, carefully examine, and critically evaluate the various positions in the great debate on the necessity of this war and the best way to peace. In a matter of this gravity, we dare not rest content with the judgments which other men make for us. On an issue of such consequence, we dare not leave unexamined the presuppositions with which those judgments are made. Theologian John Bennett of Union Seminary in New York, for example, a critic of our policy in Vietnam, contends that American policy is based on three presuppositions, all of which are erroneous. Two of these I've already mentioned: the "domino" theory and the Munich analogy. The third presupposition, says Bennett, is our anti-Communist obsession.

> "We should abandon the assumption (he writes) that a Communist regime is the worst fate that can come to any country, worse than any rightist tyranny, worse than decades of civil war, worse than generations of neglect of the country's social and economic problems."

Bennett may well be wrong in his listing of the presuppositions on which our policy is based, and he may well be wrong in his evaluation of those presuppositions. But he is surely right in reminding us that we are usually more influenced by the presuppositions that we bring to the facts at hand than we are by those facts themselves so that we need continually to examine our own presuppositions and those of our neighbors.

As we endeavor to discover for ourselves what's really going on, what the real issues are, and what alternatives are before us, it seems to me particularly important for us to listen to the views of non-Americans, especially of non-American Christians. I am by no means suggesting that every non-American is necessarily right, and that American policy is necessarily wrong when it is criticized. I am, however, suggesting that it is extremely helpful for us to see ourselves as others see us; and that a nation whose very claim to independence was founded on "a decent respect for the opinions of mankind" still has some obligation to consider those opinions. Of particular value to us as churchmen is the judgment of our fellow churchmen in other lands. The Central Committee of the World Council of Churches, for example, reminded us in the statement I have already quoted that the longer this conflict goes on, the more bitter will be the racial and other resentments against us by the colored peoples of the world. This is a warning to us from fellow Christians from all over the world. They may be wrong, but wisdom demands that we at least listen to what they as well as others say.

Our fourth responsibility - after we have studied, discussed, listened and reflected on this matter - is to draw some conclusion as to where we personally stand. I am not calling here for any dogmatism. I am not asking for any premature judgments. And I am not commending rigidity in any judgments - premature or otherwise - that we already have. I am suggesting, however, that while "openmindedness" is a virtue, "moral neutrality" is not; and that when stakes are as high as they are in this issue, it is simply irresponsible for a man to let anyone make his moral judgments for him. The very complexity of this issue, the fact that it is not clearly black or white, tempts all of us to renege on our responsibilities as decision-makers. We simply must not yield to this temptation. With consciences sensitized by the gospel, and committed to the cause of peace, we must carefully study the alternatives before us and then make our decisions.

Our final obligation is to witness to the truth as we see it. If, after careful consideration, it seems to you that this war, though evil, is a necessary evil, that the policy of our government is essentially correct, and that in the pursuit of this policy we are contributing to the long-range peace of the world, then testify to that judgment. You will be in the company of many sensitive Christians. On the other hand, if it seems to you - as it does to me - that this war is an unnecessary evil, that it is politically and morally self-defeating, and in the pursuit of this policy we are increasing the risk of World War III, then - for God's sake and the sake of humanity - speak up.

Civil Liberties

CIVIL LIBERTIES

OF TEACHERS AND STUDENTS

Academic Freedom

A Statement of Principles Governing Freedom for Teachers and Students in Public and Private Schools and Colleges

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION
170 Fifth Avenue New York 10, N. Y.
February 1949

COMMITTEE ON ACADEMIC FREEDOM
(Executive)

MEMBERSHIP, 1948-49

Chairman: Prof. Eduard C. Lindeman

Vice-Chairman: Prof. Arthur C. Cole

Counsel: Mr. R. Lawrence Siegel

Secretary: Dean Harry L. Levy

Miss Ruth G. Hardy
Prof. G. Louis Joughin
Dean Harold Lenz
Prof. Karl N. Llewellyn
Prof. Alonzo F. Myers
Prof. John Norton
Mr. Frederick E. Robin
Prof. J. Salwyn Schapiro
Mr. Hans Simon
Miss Jeannette Taylor
Mr. Walter C. Taylor
Mr. Harrison Thomas
Mr. Vinal H. Tibbetts
Prof. Ruth G. Weintraub

Milton Bentz, Office Representative

Representative of Students League for Industrial Democracy

Representative of Students for Democratic Action

CIVIL LIBERTIES OF TEACHERS AND STUDENTS—
ACADEMIC FREEDOM

A statement of principles governing freedom for teachers and students in public and private schools and colleges.

FOREWORD

For over twenty years the American Civil Liberties Union has been active through its Committee on Academic Freedom in championing the civil liberties of teachers and students wherever infractions have arisen. It has fought restrictive legislation; it has contested in the courts discharges of teachers for their opinions and associations; it has challenged in the courts flag-saluting and "released time"; it has labored with administrative officials of colleges and schools wherever the rights of teachers or students, as interpreted by the Union, have been violated.

It has published and widely distributed three pamphlets, the "Gag on Teaching," setting forth the state laws dealing with compulsory subjects of instruction and the intrusion of religion into education; "What Freedom for American Students?" dealing with the controls of student activities, and a "Statement of the Principles of Academic Freedom."

This pamphlet is an up-to-date restatement of the principles thus long advocated by the Union, but without the factual descriptions of the objectionable practices set forth in previous publications. It is intended as a guide in dealing with issues which constantly arise in the colleges and schools, and which, in our judgment, should be resolved in line with these principles. They cannot all be spelled out to fit particular problems, and we recognize that no formulas will fit them all.

While the general principles are set forth as applicable both to colleges and secondary schools, and to public and private institutions, they are couched in terms primarily applicable to colleges and universities.

Among the recent practical problems which occasion the publication and distribution of this pamphlet, and on which it attempts to offer solutions in terms of democratic principles are:

1. The lack of any accepted policy in our colleges and universities in the chartering of student organizations, especially political, and the approval of outside speakers on the campus. Practices vary so widely in dealing with alleged Communist agencies and speakers—a test of an institution's democratic tolerance—that some agreement on principle is clearly desirable.

2. The dismissals of teachers for the expression of opinions outside the class-room or for political affiliation regarded as unfitting them for their posts. This issue has been high-lighted by the debate over whether an alleged Communist is per se disqualified as a teacher. In some institutions the question has been raised as to whether a teacher expressing anti-Semitic or similarly intolerant views is thus disqualified.

3. The obstacles placed in the way of the organization of teachers in unions affiliated with the trade union movement.

Wherever any such issue arises the Civil Liberties Union attempts to act or to get other agencies to do so, or to join with them in acting. Resort to the courts is rarely possible, because few of the rights violated are enforceable in law. But publicity and negotiation often achieve the desired ends.

The American Association of University Professors effectively uses the powerful weapon of highly qualified professional inquiry and exposure, with black-listing of offending institutions. The National Education Association intervenes where the public school system is involved in situations in which the liberties of teacher opinion and association are curtailed.

These associations and the Federation of Teachers, a union, speak for the profession. The Civil Liberties Union attempts to speak for the public interest in educational freedom. It usually acts promptly and publicly on any issue which deserves its intervention. Teachers and students are invited to communicate at once with the Union wherever such issues arise. Suggestions and advice, based on a knowledge of the best existing practices, will be gladly furnished to any who are anticipating the adoption of policies at any institution in conformity with the principles here set forth.

CIVIL LIBERTIES
OF TEACHERS AND STUDENTS
ACADEMIC FREEDOM

Every generation of scholars has had to struggle anew to maintain its heritage of intellectual freedom. In the past the problem has been to protect this heritage against those who openly aimed to limit or to violate it. In our day the problem is, if anything, more difficult. In addition to continuing the struggle against forces which generally distrust intellectual activity, it is to prevent the complete destruction of intellectual freedom by totalitarians,—Communists and fascists,—who aim to undermine the democratic system of which intellectual freedom is an integral part.

The scholar is caught in the multiple crossfire of these groups and of those who are combatting them. What confuses the conflict further is the fact that the totalitarians strenuously insist on being granted the very freedoms which they use to destroy freedom. The anti-totalitarian runs the risk of being drawn into opposition to the very liberties which he champions.

The school is the birth-place of intellectual freedom of every type. Today more than ever before there is a vital need for freedom of research and teaching. The entire world is in the process of fundamental transformation. To avoid chaos or dictatorship, we must not only maintain but extend our heritage of freedom of inquiry and of teaching.

In this changing scene the school, the college, and the university have assumed a more commanding position than they ever held before. The tremendous growth in student enrollment throughout the nation, and the increased average age of the student body, have vastly augmented both the potential effect of our educational system on the community, and the concern of the community in its educational institutions.

In view of their increased importance in the social and political sphere, the schools have attracted the hostile attention of those who identify progressive liberalism with subversive activities. The result is a new and potent threat to academic freedom. It is timely, therefore, to re-examine and to re-affirm the principles upon which academic freedom is based.

WHAT IS ACADEMIC FREEDOM?

Much has been said and written about academic freedom, but the term has been so loosely and variously used that there is manifest need for a clear-cut definition.

Academic freedom is here defined as the liberty to investigate, to present, and to discuss facts and ideas concerning the phenomena of human society and of the physical world in all branches and fields of learning, with no limitations other than those imposed by the generally accepted standards of conscientious scholarship. It includes the right of both teachers and students to be free, both within and without the institutions of learning, from any special limitations regarding the investigation of facts and the expression and discussion of ideas.

Academic freedom, like all other freedoms, is an expanding concept which never remains static but must be continuously reinterpreted in the light of changing events. It is indispensable for an educational institution which is to perform its duty to a democratic commmunity. This duty is to perpetuate and enlarge the sum total of human knowledge, to communicate this knowledge to the youth, and to instill in them a spirit of continuing inquiry. It is the institution's further duty to develop personal creative abilities and socially useful attitudes, and to train its students for participation in the processes of democracy. Without academic freedom, the full performance of this duty is impossible.

Historically, the concept of academic freedom has been largely confined to colleges and universities. This limitation arises from the circumstance that the more controversial aspects of social, economic, and political theory, evolution, philosophy, ethics, and religion, are traditionally reserved for the higher schools, but many of the principles of academic freedom herein advanced apply equally to teachers of primary and secondary schools.

Since education in the United States is carried on by both private and public institutions, and since the community benefits directly from both, the general principles of academic freedom should be applicable to both, with some modifications for institutions under religious auspices.

Traditionally, the concept of academic freedom has been confined to teachers; its applicability to students, even at the college and university level, is often denied. When it is realized, however, that the basis of academic freedom is the philosophy which holds freedom of inquiry and discussion indispensable to the educational institution as a whole, the distinction between student and teacher freedom becomes artificial. We therefore widen the concept to include not only the teacher's right to inquire and to teach but the student's right to inquire and to learn.

A consideration of academic freedom naturally involves three relationships: the relationship of

1. The community to the educational institution.
2. The administration to its teachers.
3. The administration and the teachers to the students.

1. The relationship of the community to the educational institution.

The community has the right to demand that the educational institution be competently staffed and capably administered. Matters of curriculum properly are the concern of the professional staff, who are under obligation to be guided by existing professional standards of scholarship and methods. The community has the right to expect that its youth will be made aware of the common principles underlying our general culture and civilization. It has neither the right, nor indeed any social justification to demand that deviations from accepted principles be excluded from teaching. It may properly insist that such deviations be clearly explained as such, and that students will not be led to believe that they in fact meet general acceptance.

The community may properly expect of its teachers a standard of personal conduct comparable to that required of other responsible professional members of the community and a standard of public conduct harmonious with the teacher's position. The teacher must not be deemed to have sacrificed any of his rights as a private citizen. He should be as free as any other person to participate, in his private capacity, in political and social movements, and in any other lawful activities, and to hold and to express publicly his political, economic, religious or other views.

2. The relationship of the administration to its teachers.

For the implementation of these principles of academic freedom, it is desirable that the relationship between an administration and a faculty—in all institutions, public and private, colleges and schools alike—should be guided by a definite code of academic behavior, clearly formulated and understood, and accepted by the administration and the teaching staff alike.

The following formulation is suggested, based in large part upon statements adopted in 1940 by the American Association of University Professors, and by the American Civil Liberties Union. These statements have been adapted to the present situation.

(1) The teacher has the right to freedom of research and publication, subject only to the adequate performance of his other academic duties.

(2) The teacher has the right to freedom of discussion in the classroom in matters related to his field. Instead of avoiding controversial subjects, he should encourage their discussion. It is perfectly possible for a teacher to take a positive stand on public issues and still retain the critical state of mind necessary for research and teaching. In order to exert a beneficial influence upon his students, the teacher must convince them that he is intellectually honest. Considering the influence of his position, he should make clear to his students that whatever views he presents as his own do not constitute a maneuver to influence his students in favor of partisan policies. Furthermore, the teacher should make special efforts to encourage his students to express their opinions, having in mind the limitations set by decency and a proper respect for the opinion of others. In his reading assignments on controversial subjects the teacher should recommend material setting forth different views. A technique valuable in a democracy will result from the freest possible investigation and discussion of divergent opinions.

(3) The teacher has the right to speak and to write freely on any subject that interests him. However, in the field of his professional competence, he has a special obligation to speak and to write as a man of learning. When acting as a private citizen, he should be sure that it is plain that he speaks, writes, and acts for himself, not for his institution. He should however be free to use his academic title for purposes of identification.

(4) As professional workers, teachers have the right to organize to protect their group interests, or to join existing associations or unions for such purposes. Any attempt on the part of an administration or other agency to prevent the establishment of such an organization, or to hamper its activities, or to discriminate against its members where it is established, would be a serious infringement on the rights of teachers.

3. The relationship of administration and of teachers to students.

An educational institution, as a social agency, affords to the nation's youth an opportunity to develop enlightened citizenship in our democracy. Their courses in civics and the social sciences generally will give students a theoretical acquaintance with the democratic process. But it is axiomatic that learning proceeds most effectively when theory is reinforced by practice. It follows that students should learn by experience the nature and functioning of democracy, and thus gain comprehension of its duties and responsibilities, as well as of its rights and privileges. Faculties should encourage such extra-curricular activities as will provide a working model of democracy and thus furnish a training ground for democratic citizenship.

The democratic way of life depends for its very existence upon the free contest of ideas. This is as true upon the campus as in the community at large. If our students are to grow to political and social maturity, no step should be neglected which will habituate them to the free interchange of ideas, ideas unpopular and strange, as well as favored and familiar.

These primary considerations demonstrate the need for maintaining in the sphere of extra-curricular activities a system analogous, so far as practicable, to the rights of free speech and assembly enjoyed in the community at large. Failure on the part of an educational institution to maintain this principle not only thwarts the development of students, but results in a positive loss to the community. In view of a world situation in which the anti-democratic forces of the extreme right and the extreme left are both rampant, the danger of a repressive policy in regard to student activities becomes apparent. The youth who attends an educational institution in which expression is rigidly supervised is in danger of coming to regard the suppression of free speech as normal and desirable.

The principles set forth below are offered as a guide to the democratic organization and functioning of a student body's extra-curricular activities. They are intended to apply both to the relationship of the administrative authorities and the faculty to the student body as a whole, and to the relationship of the general student organization (whenever it exists) to the rest of the student body. The specific recommendations are arranged as far as possible under the principles to which they correspond.

I

A democracy encourages to the highest degree possible the participation of the governed in the governing process.

1. The regulation of extra-curricular activities should be the function of a joint faculty-student committee, to which the student members should be elected by the student body itself. If a provision of the charter or other basic code of the institution vests such regulation in a dean or other administrative officer, or in the faculty or other body to which students may not be admitted, then the faculty-student committee should act in an advisory capacity, with the presumption that its advice will regularly be followed. Such a faculty-student committee, whether acting in an independent or advisory capacity, should be concerned with the formulation and interpretation of all rules and regulations governing extra-curricular activities. It should also sit as a judicial committee in all cases involving offenses in the field of extra-curricular activities of such gravity as to entail a student's possible suspension or dismissal. In cases involving disciplinary action other than suspension or dismissal in connection with extra-curricular activities, an appeal to this committee should be permitted.

2. In the election of the officers of, and representatives to, the general student organization, the electorate should include the entire student body, or entire classes or other major divisions of that body, and should not be defined in terms of membership in clubs or organizations. The election of all student officers, committees, and boards should rest solely upon the students themselves, and should not be subject to administrative or faculty approval,—though the authorities may properly set up a uniform system of academic eligibility requirements for the holding of major student offices.

II

A democratic government functions according to clearly defined and well-publicized laws.

A code of rules and regulations governing extra-curricular activities should be clearly and fully formulated to cover the entire policy of the institution with regard to such activities. It should be made public to the academic community. Any changes in this code should be promptly publicized. When simplification, clarification, or interpretation is needed, the matter should, as indicated above, be referred to the faculty-student committee.

III

The democratic way of life neither fears nor avoids any competition in the free market of ideas; it may, however, be necessary to insist that competitive wares be plainly and honestly labelled.

1. Students should be free to organize associations for political, religious, social, athletic, and other proper and lawful purposes. The fact of affiliation with any extra-mural association should not in itself bar a group from recognition on the campus.

2. Any organization for political action or discussion of whatever purpose or complexion, and whether or not affiliated with a particular party, including the Communist Party, should be allowed to organize and be recognized in any educational institution, and no student should be discriminated against at any time because of membership in any such organization.

3. If after investigation and fair hearings, a student organization is found by the competent authority to be concealing or misrepresenting its auspices and affiliations, such finding may properly be permanently published to the educational institution at large, but such finding should not be the ground for the withholding or withdrawal of recognition, or suspension, or other disciplinary action.

4. Student organizations should be free to invite outside speakers of any political or religious affiliation to speak to them upon any topic. Where a question arises as to a speaker who is to address the general student body, the faculty-student committee should act.

IV

A democracy combats possible abuses not by a system of pre-censorship, but by the definite fixing of responsibility for such abuses, and the application of punitive measures when necessary.

1. In order that the scope of activities of a student organization may be clearly defined, it should be required that each organization applying for campus recognition (where recognition is required) submit a constitution or other statement setting forth its proposed purposes and modes of activity. A student organization should be granted recognition unless the provisions of its constitution contravene the standards suggested in Section III above. For administrative purposes it may also be required that each organization file and keep current a list of its officers, but it should not be required to file a list of its members.

2. The use of rooms and other facilities should be made available, as far as their primary use for instructional purposes permits, to recognized student organizations acting within the scope of their constitution. Bulletin boards should be provided for the use of student organizations, and school-wide circulation of all notices and leaflets which come within the constitutional scope of the organization concerned should be permitted. Objections to the content of a poster or piece of literature should not be cloaked under the pretense of safeguarding school property against defacement or littering.

3. A student organization should be permitted to use the name of the school as part of its own name (e.g. 'The Franklin College Sociology Club', 'The Student Self-Government Association of Smithfield High School'), and to use this name in all activities consistent with its constitution. Restrictions may fairly be placed on the use of the school name in extra-mural activities (such as participation in public demonstrations or parades), but any such restrictions should be applied without discrimination to all student organizations, and should form part of the written rules and regulations referred to in Section II above.

4. In institutions where it is thought desirable to have faculty advisers for student organizations, the student organizations themselves should participate in the choice of the advisers, possibly making their choice from a panel agreed upon by the student-faculty committee. In no case should the advisers exercise undue control over the activities of a student group. Nor should student groups be forbidden to function because no faculty member will consent to serve as their adviser.

5. Students should be permitted to publish such newspapers or magazines as they wish, subject to the provisions for the recognition of student organizations suggested in Subdivision 1 above. No censorship in advance should be exercised over the contents of any publication. If a student editor should abuse the prerogatives of his position in the publication of material, or should otherwise fail to live up to his editorial responsibilities, disciplinary action should be taken, with due regard for the safeguards suggested in Section I, Subdivision 1 above.

6. Any control exercised by the general student organization over other student organizations should be subject to the scrutiny of the faculty-student committee, to the end that the rights of those groups espousing unpopular opinions may be protected.

In addition to the foregoing safeguards dealing with the regulation of student organizations, due consideration should be given to the individual student as a private member of the community. Off the campus, provided that he does not identify himself as a representative of the student body or of the school, the student should freely exercise the same privileges as any other person in political campaigning, in picketing during labor or other disputes, or in other public activities. In the educational institution, similar activities should also be permitted to the fullest extent consistent with efficient educational functioning.

ACADEMIC FREEDOM and ACADEMIC RESPONSIBILITY

Their Meaning to Students, Teachers, Administrators and The Community

RECEIVED
MAY 19 1952
Southern Regional Council

A Statement of Principles Concerning the Civil Liberties and Obligations of Students and Teachers in Public and Private Schools, Colleges, and Universities.

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION
170 Fifth Avenue New York 10, N.Y.
April, 1952

THE AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION

Ernest Angell
Chairman,
Board of Directors

Roger N. Baldwin
Chairman,
National Committee

Patrick Murphy Malin
Executive Director

ACADEMIC FREEDOM COMMITTEE

Arthur C. Cole, Chairman
Ruth Gillette Hardy, Vice-chairman
R. Lawrence Siegel, Counsel
Harry L. Levy, Secretary
Louis Joughin, Executive Officer

Lawrence H. Chamberlain
Roma Gans
Walter Gellhorn
H. H. Giles
Alfred McClung Lee
Harold Lenz
Clarence E. Linville
Helen M. Lynd
Frederick C. McLaughlin
Broadus Mitchell
Alonzo F. Myers
J. Salwyn Schapiro
George Soll
Harrison Thomas
Vinal H. Tibbets
Ruth Weintraub
H. H. Wilson

Student Representatives from:
National Student Association
Student League for Industrial Democracy
Students for Democratic Action

ADVISORY COUNCIL

Clarence E. Ayres, Texas
Mrs. Russell Babcock, Illinois
Sampel P. Capen, New York
John L. Childs, New York
Margaret Clapp, Massachusetts
Morris L. Cooke, Pennsylvania
Ellen Keefe Donohue, Massachusetts
Royal W. France, Florida
Charles W. Gilkey, Massachusetts
Frank P. Graham, North Carolina
Abram L. Harris, Illinois
Mordecai Johnson, Washington, D.C.
Horace M. Kallen, New York
Richard B. Kennan, Washington, D.C.
Edward C. Kirkland, Maine
Hans Kohn, New York
Milton Konvitz, New York
Eduard C. Lindeman, New York
Karl N. Llewellyn, Illinois
Robert S. Lynd, New York
Curtis D. MacDougall, Illinois
Kirtley F. Mather, Massachusetts
Robert E. Mathews, Ohio
Robert S. Michaelsen, Iowa
Ira DeA. Reid, Pennsylvania
Edgar Schuler, Michigan
Odell Shepard, Connecticut
V. T. Thayer, Virginia
E. C. Tolman, California
William Lindsay Young, California
Benjamin Youngdahl, Missouri

Foreword

THE AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION is a continuing expression of faith in the vital principles of democracy set forth by the founding fathers in the Declaration of Independence and in the Constitution of the United States and of the several States. The Union believes that these principles are dynamic and that they have permitted us to preserve and extend our civil liberties through everchanging conditions. The Union implements this faith in every appropriate manner available to it.

Academic freedom has the same function in schools and colleges as civil liberties in the community at large. It enables students and teachers to act as responsible members of a democratic educational system within the larger framework of a democratic country. It assures them the rights of freedom of expression, fair procedures and equality of treatment.

Since 1925 the ACLU, through its Academic Freedom Committee has actively championed these rights wherever infractions of them or threats of such infractions have occurred. It has fought against legislation which restricts academic freedom, and for legislation which supports freedom in education. It has intervened with administrative officials. In the courts it has contested expulsions of students, and discharges of teachers because of their opinions, associations, or their exercise of rights as citizens. It has challenged in the courts religious "released time" programs and mandatory flag-salute regulations as unwarranted interference with freedom of conscience and the principle of separation of church and state. It has challenged efforts to control thought, special loyalty oath regulations and special inquisitions which admit hearsay and secret evidence. It has sought to arouse the public to resist the mounting demand for orthodoxy and conformity in political and economic thought. It has recognized the futility and delusiveness of any such orthodoxy.

The ACLU has sought to preserve in our schools and colleges the American traditions of a free market-place for ideas and of cultural diversity. These traditions recognize the need for encouraging differences in views and practices, and benefiting from them.

ACLU work for academic freedom has not been accomplished solely through the courts. Because of the nature of schools and school laws, which frequently do not render litigation advisable or possible, the ACLU has often resorted to negotiation, implemented when need be by publicity and the influence of cooperating organizations.

The relationship of the ACLU to other organizations which also defend academic freedom should be clearly understood. The ACLU maintains an independent position, but has cooperated when feasible with such organizations as the National Education Association (NEA), the American Federation of Teachers (AFT), and the American Association of University Professors (AAUP). These bodies are spokesmen for important professional groups.

The Academic Freedom Committee of the ACLU acts promptly and publicly on issues that deserve its intervention. Teachers and students are invited to communicate at once with the ACLU wherever and whenever such issues arise. Suggestions and advice, based on a knowledge of the best existing principles and practices, are gladly furnished to any who anticipate at any institution the adoption of policies in accord with the principles here stated and interpreted.

This pamphlet is the fifth in a series which ACLU has developed through its Academic Freedom Committee. In "The Gag on Teaching" (1932, 1937, 1940), it described state laws concerned with compulsory subjects of instruction, and with the injection of religion and the churches into education. In "What Freedom for American Students?" (1941), it dealt with controls on student activities. In "A Statement of the Principles of Academic Freedom" (1937), and in "Civil Liberties of Teachers and Students—Academic Freedom" (1949), it offered earlier statements of the principles set forth in this pamphlet.

The need for a new statement on academic freedom arises from a number of current pressing problems in academic freedom:

1. Teachers are being discharged because they hold, or are said to hold, unpopular political and economic views—or because they associate or are said to associate with persons holding such views. The proper criteria of responsible citizenship and teaching competence have been thrust aside. In some instances, loyalty oaths and inquisitorial techniques are used indiscriminately and outrageously in open violation of the civil liberties of teachers. These efforts hurt conscientious liberals vastly more than they do authoritarians, whether Communist or other. These efforts intimidate many more teachers than are formally arraigned or fired.

2. Individual students and student organizations are increasingly subject to investigation. Some administrators are building up permanent student dossiers which, extending far beyond proper official needs, often tend to restrict student participation in extra-curricular activities and to convert the results of worthy intellectual curiosity into permanent damage to individuals. Students are also being unduly restricted in their choice of speakers for student groups.

3. Hysterical, reactionary, or deliberately authoritarian elements in society are attempting to force educational institutions "into line" and are calling for dismissal of administrators where compliance is not immediate. Many administrators, instead of properly maintaining the independence of the schools, yield to and even approve outside pressures.

Improper pressures by sectarian forces are being brought to bear upon the American public school system in the areas of course content, recommended reading, teaching methods and selection of staff. If successful, these pressures will substitute authority and orthodoxy for the free and healthy play of ideas among responsible democratic minds.

This pamphlet is a new statement of principles long advocated by the ACLU. For the sake of brevity it summarizes the principles without repeating illustrations presented in other ACLU publications. This restatement is intended to be a guide in dealing with issues of freedom and responsibility as they arise.

No briefly stated formulas can fit all cases and all problems. Applications of general principles are indicated as specifically as possible within the space available. Because controversial matters more often attract repressive efforts among students and teachers in colleges and high schools, the pamphlet devotes to them its chief attention.

Academic Freedom and Academic Responsibility

ACADEMIC FREEDOM AND RESPONSIBILITY are here defined as the liberty and obligation to study, to investigate, to present and interpret, and to discuss facts and ideas concerning man, human society, and the physical and biological world in all branches and fields of learning. They imply no limitations other than those imposed by generally accepted standards of art, scholarship, and science. They include the right within and without institutions of learning to be free from any special limitations of investigation, expression, and discussion. As citizens, students and teachers have the rights accorded to all citizens.

Outside the academic scene the teacher has no less freedom than other citizens. He is not required because of his profession to maintain a timorous silence as a price of professional status. On the contrary his greater knowledge imposes upon him the twofold duty of advancing new and useful ideas and of helping to bury ideas which are outworn. However, since the public may judge his profession and his institution by his utterances, he should make every effort to maintain high professional excellence and at the same time to indicate that he does not speak for the institution which employs him. When he speaks or writes as an individual he should be free from both institutional and public censorship or discipline.

A time of crisis puts pressure on the schools to accept and inculcate current official interpretations of human behavior. Yet it is precisely in time of crisis that it is valuable democratic strategy to encourage the presentation of contrasting viewpoints and to cause students to realize that they are free to draw such conclusions as they think wise. As a member of an academic community and particularly as a teacher, the faculty member is free to present in the field of his professional competence his own opinions or convictions and with them the premises from which they are derived. It is his duty, on the other hand, not to advocate any opinions or convictions derived from a source other than his own free and unbiased pursuit of truth and understanding. Commitments of any kind which interfere with such pursuit are incompatible with the objectives of academic freedom. To the extent that activities of Communists or others represent violations of law the violators should be vigorously prosecuted. When we attempt to prevent divergent thought, however, we neither strengthen democracy nor weaken its enemies.

Anti-democratic groups can readily obtain a strong hold upon a society stricken with a fear of ideas. Unless we as a people give new enthusiasm and support to traditional American democratic principles and practices, we are in grave danger of being victimized by such groups.

The concept of academic freedom, like the concepts of most of our other freedoms, never remains static. It is continually reinterpreted in the light of changing events and conditions. Of recent years it has been extended in two notable and important directions.

1. It was held until about twenty-five years ago that academic freedom related chiefly to colleges and universities. Now, with increased awareness of the vital significance of each stage in the whole educational process, we realize that all educational institutions must be assured of reasonable freedom.

2. It was earlier held that academic freedom concerned only the interests of teachers and that it only incidentally touched upon interests of students. Now we recognize that the indispensable basis of this liberty is freedom of inquiry and discussion within the whole institution and we realize that the distinction between teacher-freedom and student-freedom is artificial and should be discarded. It is to the interest of the public as a whole that this freedom be maintained for both students and teachers.

Our further discussion of academic freedom and responsibility falls into three sections. These restate ACLU interpretations of what academic freedom and responsibility mean (1) for students, (2) for teachers, and (3) for administrators and the community.

The Meaning of Academic Freedom and Academic Responsibility for Students

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS afford the nation's youth opportunities to develop into enlightened democratic citizens. Courses give students theoretical acquaintance with democratic processes. But learning becomes successful education only when theory finds reinforcement in practice. Both in their classes and through extracurricular functions (including extramural activities) faculties should encourage such activities as will provide democratic experiences.

The democratic way of life depends for its very existence upon the free contest of ideas. This is as true on the campus as in the community at large. If our students are to grow to political and social maturity, no step should be neglected which will habituate them to the free interchange of ideas—unpopular and strange ideas as well as those which are favored and familiar.

These primary considerations demonstrate the need for maintaining in extracurricular activities a system analogous, so far as practicable, to the rights of free speech and assembly enjoyed by the community at large. This system should begin to operate in the early grades in matters consonant with the intellectual and general maturity level of the students and gradually broaden as high school years are reached. Failure of an educational institution to maintain this principle not only thwarts student development but causes positive loss to the community in other ways. With anti-democratic forces rampant in the world, the danger of repressive policies regarding student activities becomes apparent. Some students of educational institutions which rigidly supervise expression may come to regard suppression of free speech as normal and possibly even desirable. Others may come to feel that established institutions are inimical to the public interest rather than designed to serve it.

The principles set forth in detail below are offered as guides to democratic organization and functioning in the extracurricular and extramural activities of a student body and in the relations between administrative authorities and the student body as a whole. They also apply to the relations between a general student organization (where one exists) and the rest of the student body. Specific recommendations are arranged, as nearly as possible, under the principles to which they correspond.

1. A democracy encourages to the highest degree possible the participation of the governed in the governing process.

a. Right of Petition: Students should have the right to petition school administrators for changes in curriculum, faculty, and school regulations.

b. Due Process: No student should be disciplined either by suspension, by notation in his permanent record, or by expulsion, without a prompt hearing at which he is presented with the evidence against him and given the opportunity to answer accusations.

c. Student-Faculty Committee: The regulation of extracurricular activities should be the function of a joint faculty-student committee, to which student members should be elected by the student body itself. If a provision of the charter or other basic code of the institution vests such regulation in a dean or other administrative officer, or in the faculty or other body to which students may not be admitted, then the faculty-student committee should act in an advisory capacity, with the presumption that its advice will be followed. Such a faculty-student committee, whether acting in an independent or in an advisory capacity, should be concerned with the formulation and interpretation of all rules and regulations governing extracurricular activities. It should also sit as a judicial committee in all cases involving offenses in the field of extracurricular activities of such gravity as to entail a student's possible suspension or dismissal. In cases involving disciplinary action other than suspension or dismissal in connection with extracurricular activities, an appeal to this committee should be permitted.

d. General Student Elections: In the election of the officers of, and representatives to, the general student organization, the electorate should include the entire student body, or entire classes of other major divisions of that body, and should not be defined in terms of membership in clubs or organizations. The election of all student officers, committees, and boards should rest solely upon the students themselves, and it should not be subject to administrative or faculty approval. There should, of course, be the provision that academic authorities may properly set up a uniform system of academic eligibility requirements for the holding of major student offices.

2. A democratic government functions according to clearly defined and well-publicized laws.

Regulations governing educational and extracurricular activities should be clearly and fully formulated to cover the institution's entire policy on program and student activities. Realistic and practical definitions should be used in place of such general criteria as "conduct unbecoming a student" or "against the best interests of an institution." Regulations should be formulated jointly by administrators, faculty, and student representatives, and should be made public to the whole academic community. Any changes in code should be promptly publicized. When simplification, clarification, or interpretation is needed, the matter should, as indicated above, be referred to the faculty-student committee.

3. The democratic way of life neither fears nor avoids competition in the marketplace of ideas. Its health depends upon the encouragement of such competition.

a. Freedom of Student Association: Students should be free to organize associations for political, social, athletic, and other proper and lawful purposes. The fact of affiliation with any extramural association should not in itself bar a group from recognition on the campus. Any group which plans political action or discussion, of whatever purpose or complexion and whether or not affiliated with a particular legal party, should be allowed to organize and be recognized in any educational institution. The administration should not discriminate against a student because of membership in any such organization.

b. Statement of Affiliation: All student organizations should in their charters define as clearly as possible their nature and purpose. Any student organization having an extramural affiliation should make clear the nature of this affiliation. If after due study and consideration the faculty-student committee concludes that the organization concealed, misrepresented or otherwise failed to make clear its purpose or affiliation, such finding may properly be continuously published to the educacational institution at large. Experience has shown that this is the most appropriate form of discipline for such cases, and that it is far more effective from the educational standpoint than withdrawal of recognition, suspension, or other disciplinary action. The emphasizing of the "publication" procedure in no sense implies a condoning or justification of concealment or misrepresentation.

c. Guest Speakers: Student organizations should be as free as any other responsible group of citizens to invite speakers to address them on any subject. We Americans should never be afraid of ideas. Citizens and especially students should have the right to hear persons who are in the forefront of controversy even though they are under suspension or indictment, at liberty pending appeal, or free after serving sentence.

4. A democracy combats possible abuses not by a system of precensorship but by definite fixing of responsibility for such abuses and the application of disciplinary measures when necessary.

a. Chartering of Student Organizations: In order that the scope of activities of a student organization may be clearly defined, each organization applying for campus recognition (where recognition is required) should be obliged to submit a constitution or other statement setting forth its proposed purposes and modes of activity. A student organization should be granted recognition unless the provisions of its constitution contravene the standards suggested in Section 3 above. For administrative purposes each organization should be required to file and keep current a list of its officers, but it should not be required to file a list of its members.

b. Organization Use of School Facilities: The use of rooms and other facilities should be made available, as far as their primary use for instructional purposes permits, to recognized student organizations acting within the provisions of their constitutions. Bulletin boards should be provided for the use of student organizations, and school-wide circulation of all notices and leaflets which come within the constitutional purposes of the organization concerned should be permitted. Objections to the content of a poster or piece of literature should not be misrepresented as efforts to safeguard school property against defacement or littering.

c. Organization Use of School Name: A student organization should be permitted to use the name of the school as part of its own name (e.g., "The Northfield College Sociology Club" or "The Student Government Association of Smithfield High School"), and to use this name in all activities consistent with its constitution. Restrictions may fairly be placed on the use of the school name in extramural activities (such as participation in public demonstrations or parades), but any such restrictions should be applied without discrimination to all student organizations. They should also form part of the written rules and regulations referred to in Section 2 above.

d. Advisers for Organizations: Student organizations should select their own faculty advisers. No student group should be forbidden to function because of the lack of a faculty adviser. If no other faculty member is available, an administrative officer should serve as adviser. In no case should the advisers dominate the activities of a student group.

e. Publication: Students should be permitted to publish such newspapers or magazines as they wish, subject to the provisions for the recognition of student organizations suggested in subdivision (a) of this section. No censorship in advance should be exercised over the contents of any publication. If a student editor should abuse the prerogatives of his position in the publication of material, or if he should fail to live up to his editorial responsibilities, disciplinary action should be taken, with due regard for the proper safeguards stated in 1(b) above. Where there is a newspaper monopoly, adequate representation of minority viewpoints should be assured. Students should be permitted to sell publications that they produce. Humorous periodicals produced by students are ordinarily sold on school premises, and similar privileges should be accorded political publications. No distinction should be made between local publications and intercollegiate publications with local campus sponsorship.

f. Student Controls Over Student Organizations: Any control exercised by the general student organization over other student organizations should be subjected to scrutiny to the end that the rights of all student groups may be protected, even those espousing unpopular opinions.

5. Students should have the full rights and responsibilities of all citizens of a similar age.

a. Off-Campus Activities: No college or university administrator should attempt to control the off-campus behavior of individual students in regard to their political, social, and economic activities (See also 4(c) above).

b. Penalties: No student should be penalized for exercising his rights as a citizen, even when this involves criticism of the school administration.

The Meaning of Academic Freedom and Academic Responsibility for Teachers

ACADEMIC FREEDOM AND RESPONSIBILITY of teachers embraces two distinct areas: (1) the conduct of a teacher apart from specifically professional responsibilities and (2) his conduct in teaching and other activities directly related to professional responsibilities. An examination of the following principles reveals that the ACLU aligns itself with those adopted by the American Association of University Professors in 1947 and reaffirmed in 1950.

1. When not engaged in specifically professional activities, the teacher should be able to function with the freedom of any other citizen.

a. Freedom of Association: In his private capacity the teacher should be as free as any other citizen to participate in political, religious, and social movements and organizations and in any other lawful activity, and to hold and to express publicly his political, religious, economic, and other views. The fact of his being a teacher should not debar him from any activities open to other citizens.

b. Freedom of Expression: The teacher should be as free as any other citizen to write on any subject which interests him. In the field of his professional competence he should speak and write mindful of the special responsibilities that professional standards impose. When acting as a private citizen, he should make it clear that he speaks, writes, and acts for himself and not for his institution. He should, however, be free to use his academic title for purposes of identification.

c. Freedom to Organize: Like any other professional or non-professional worker, the teacher should be free to organize with others to protect group interests, or to join existing unions or other organizations for such purposes. Any attempt on the part of an administration or other agency to prevent the establishment of such an organization, or to hamper its activities, or to discriminate against its members, is a serious infringement on the freedom of teachers.

d. Oaths: Teachers should not be required to take any special oath of loyalty to the government. We object to the irrelevance and futility of such special oaths and to their use as thought-control devices. No one should be subjected, as a condition of holding a teaching position, to any test of religious belief or of political belief other than his pledge to support the Constitution of his state and of the United States. A test oath is the first step toward tyranny.

2. The criteria of performance for a teacher should be those associated with personal and professional integrity in a democratic society.

a. Professional Independence: The basic question in this regard is whether the schools and colleges of a democracy should be independent institutions guided by professional standards of learning and teaching and scholarship, or whether they should be instruments of current national policy or of other special interests. The ACLU takes the position that the educational system in a democracy should be independent of government policy or that of any other special interest and free to carry out its own highest standards.

b. Criteria of Appointment and Tenure: A teacher should be appointed on the basis of his teaching ability and his competence in his professional field, not on the basis of his race, nationality, creed, religious or political belief or affiliation; a proper exception exists in the right of a private institution of publicly declared faith, denomination or special function to select teachers on a basis harmonious with its public declaration. Continuation of appointment and the granting of continuing tenure should depend upon a teacher's performance as a teacher. None of the factors excluded from entering into appointment should influence continuation of appointment.

As a classroom teacher, the teacher should seek to promote an atmosphere of free and earnest inquiry. This should include discussion of controversial issues without the assumption that they are settled in advance or that there is only one "right" answer in matters of dispute. Studying a philosophy or a social theory for the purpose of approving or denouncing it is not studying it with an open mind. Such discussion should include presentation of divergent opinions and doctrines, past and present, on a given subject. The teacher's own judgment forms a part of this material. If his judgment is clearly stated, his students are better able to appraise it and differ from it on the basis of other materials and views placed at their disposal than they would be if he were to attempt to conceal his bias by a claim to "objective" scholarship.

No set procedures for conduct of a class or for use of materials can guarantee the teacher's own integrity or take its place.

c. Relationship of a Teacher's Views and Associations to his Teaching Position. The central issue, in considering a teacher's fitness, is his own performance in his subject and his relationship with his students. The ACLU opposes as contrary to democratic liberties any ban or regulation which would prohibit the employment as a teacher of any person solely because of his views or associations, such as Communist or Fascist.

The ACLU does not oppose the ouster or rejection of any teacher found lacking in professional integrity. It will not defend a teacher duly discharged after proof that he has misused his position to pervert the academic process.

On the other hand, the ACLU steadfastly opposes any ban or regulation which would prohibit the educational employment of any person solely because of his personal views or associations (political, religious or otherwise). Even though a teacher may be linked with religious dogmatists or political authoritarians, the ACLU believes that he must nevertheless be appraised as an individual.

In advocating the principle of not imposing any tests on the beliefs or associations of teachers in public institutions the ACLU has been challenged by those who contend that a democratic society can not tolerate in its public schools teachers with anti-democratic beliefs or associations. The contention would be defensible if we could secure common agreement on what we mean by democratic and anti-democratic.

If we accept the views of dominant forces current at any one time or place there will be no end to the tests imposed on the fitness of teachers. If Communists are the main target today, as anarchists, socialists and the I.W.W. were a generation ago there will be some other main target tomorrow. What we do today to outlaw from teaching members of presently detested organizations creates the precedents by which all freedom of teaching can be destroyed. The ACLU stands on the principle that it is far better for our democracy to run the calculated risks of establishing freedom than to suffer the already proved dangers of repression.

Believing that an individualized judgment (as against generalized condemnation) is a basic democratic value, the ACLU urges the necessity for appraising the work of the individual teacher. The recent drives to discover Communist teachers illustrate the dangers of proceeding without specific charges that relate to a person's own conduct. In point of fact few Communists have been found in the nation's schools and colleges. But campaigns to expel Communists from educational posts have rarely stopped at their first objective; they have instead resulted in attacks upon persons who merely hold unpopular opinions. As a consequence, teachers everywhere have been made less courageous and less independent in the pursuit of truth, more cautious and more subservient.

The harm done by a few teachers who might be undetected in misusing their teaching positions for political or religious ends, is far less than the harm that is done by making all teachers less responsible and less courageous. The political or religious screening of all teachers is far more dangerous to education than the presence of the occasional teacher who is misusing his profession. Intelligent, qualified persons are discouraged from going into the teaching profession by the knowledge that they may be dismissed for nonconformity.

The ACLU will intervene in appropriate cases involving the discharge of a teacher when action is taken by administrative officials without a prior unfavorable judgment by the teacher's colleagues based on professional incompetence, immoral conduct, or perversion of academic process.

d. Campus Relations With Students Outside the Classroom: The same standards of professional conduct which govern the teacher in the classroom should be observed by him elsewhere on the campus.

e. Freedom of Research: As a scholar and research worker, the teacher should be free to pursue truth in whatever form best expresses his convictions.

The Meaning of Academic Freedom and Academic Responsibility for Administrators and for the Community

STUDENTS AND TEACHERS are the center of any educational institution. Academic freedom and responsibility therefore serve and benefit the community to the extent that they are regarded as the right and obligation of students and teachers. It is the duty of adminisrators to provide the atmosphere in which academic freedom will flourish.

Let us look at what academic freedom and academic responsibility should mean to administrators and to the community in terms of the relationships (1) between the community and the educational institution, (2) between the administrator and the community, and (3) between the administrator and students and teachers.

1. The Community has the right to demand that the educational institution shall be competently staffed and capably administered.

a. Control of Curriculum: Matters of curriculum properly are the responsibility of the professional staff who are under obligation to be guided by high professional standards of scholarship and of teaching methods and by full awareness of the community's educational needs. The community has the right to expect that its youth will be made aware of the common principles underlying our general culture and civilization. It has neither the right to, nor indeed any social justification for, insistence that a discussion of deviations from accepted principles be excluded from the curriculum. It may properly insist that teachers do not present deviant ideas in such a manner as to imply that they are generally accepted.

b. Personal Conduct of Teachers: The community may properly expect of its teachers a standard of personal conduct comparable to that required of other responsible professional members of the community and a standard of public conduct harmonious with the teacher's position. The teacher must not be deemed to have sacrificed any of his rights as a private citizen. He should be as free as any other person to participate in his private capacity in political and social movements and in any other lawful activity and to hold and to express publicly his political, economic, religious and other views.

c. Separation of Church and State: Parents and citizens generally have a right to expect that in the public schools and colleges there will be no effort by the staff to offer instruction or to institute ritualistic or dramatic presentations of a sectarian nature. The United States Supreme Court has reaffirmed that in the public schools as elsewhere in our governmental life there must be a "wall of separation" between the churches and governmental agencies. Parents also have a right to anticipate that, when it is contrary to their religious convictions, their children will not be obliged to receive military education or to render flag salutes. It is of course equally valid that such parents should have no right to interfere with the requirement of such practices upon the part of other children.

d. Curriculum Content by Legislation: The ACLU looks with apprehension upon the practice of determining curriculum content by means of legislative statute. The ACLU feels that this opens up an avenue for powerful groups to impose their educational ideas upon an unsuspecting community.

2. The administrator should serve and not dominate a school system or college.

a. Creation of an Atmosphere of Freedom: Administrators are often tempted to regard themselves as something more than facilitators of the study and teaching functions of their schools. Opportunism and considerations of expediency exert pressures upon them to restrict the areas of free investigation, discussion, and creation permissible to students and teachers. Our schools develop as mediums of growth and opportunity to the extent that administrators are able to resist the temptation to seek safety or prestige by emphasis upon their function as leaders.

b. Liaison Functions: Administrators, whether public or private, see themselves properly in two principal perspectives. On the one hand, the community entrusts them with the task of representing reasonable and legitimate community objectives in the administration of the schools. When special pressures bear heavily upon them, they can perform their proper role only by withstanding such pressures in the interests of broad and continuing community obligations. On the other hand, the community entrusts administrators with the task of serving as a liaison between itself and the desirable ferment to be found in a healthy body of students and teachers. In other words, the administrator should understand quite sympathetically and broadly the reasonable and legitimate objectives of both community and student-teacher body, and he should attempt as well as he can to facilitate the long-term aims of both. When there is a necessary choice, the freedom and responsibility of students and teachers should always have priority.

c. Resistance to Pressure: The administrator should resist the efforts of pressure groups which seek to eliminate experimental curriculums, or which seek to influence the curriculums in a particular direction against the advice of the professional staff.

Transportation

Memorandum from . . . . AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

15 East 84th Street, New York 28, N. Y. : TRafalgar 9-4500

RECEIVED
OCT 15 1951
Southern Regional Council

October 8, 1951

To: Community Relations Councils & Group Relations Agencies
From: Leo Pfeffer

In September of this year a reservation clerk employed by the American Airlines at La Guardia Airport in Queens County New York approached us with a complaint that he had been discharged because of his refusal to use a code designation for Negroes on passenger reservations. He informed us that all reservation clerks were instructed during their training period, to use the code so that the Company might be able to seat a Negro passenger next to another Negro passenger where practicable. Aside from the question of our complainant's discharge, we felt that the practice, squarely raised an important issue in the New York Civil Rights Law. The New York Civil Rights Law prohibits racial or religious discrimination in places of public accommodation, and it was our contention that a prohibition against discrimination included segregation. We, therefore, filed a complaint with the District Attorney of Queens County in which we charged that the action of the American Airlines constituted a violation of the New York Civil Rights Law.

At the request of the District Attorney, we prepared a brief in support of our contention. Thereafter a conference was held with the District Attorney, at which were present the Attorneys for the Company, CLSA on behalf of the American Jewish Congress and the discharged employee of American Airlines, and the District Attorney. The Company submitted a letter to the District Attorney in which it admitted that it used the code E-111 to designate Negro passengers, but claimed that it had discontinued the practice of segregating Negro passengers on planes. It undertook and did issue a directive to all employees to discontinue forthwith the use of any code to designate Negro passengers or to make any reference to the race of a passenger applying for reservations.

This assurance was accepted by the District Attorney and American Jewish Congress. However, at our request the District Attorney sent a communication to every air line operating at LaGuardia Airport and International Airport, both of which are in Queens County, stating his opinion that segregation of Negro passengers constitutes discrimination in violation of the civil rights law and directing discontinuance of any code or other means to designate Negro passengers. In this respect the District Attorney followed a precedent established by Frank Hogan, District Attorney of New York County in 1943 when he sent a communication to all newspapers in New York County expressing his view that the use of the term "restricted or selected clientele" by resorts in their advertisements violated the civil rights law and subjected the newspaper to prosecution. That letter resulted in discontinuance of the use of these terms in New York advertisements.

We believe that you may find our brief useful and are therefore enclosing a copy.

CLSA Reports
COMMISSION ON LAW AND SOCIAL ACTION
of the AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS
15 East 84th St., New York 28, N. Y. • TRafalgar 9-4500

PROPOSALS OF THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS TO THE NEW YORK STATE COMMISSION AGAINST DISCRIMINATION ON THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW AGAINST DISCRIMINATION IN PLACES OF PUBLIC ACCOMMODATION (WICKS-ROMAN LAW)

The Wicks-Roman Law (Chapter 285 of the Laws of 1952) which becomes effective on July 1st of this year, entrusts the New York State Commission Against Discrimination with the responsibility for the enforcement of the State's long-standing policy against discrimination in public accommodations. The American Jewish Congress has for many years concerned itself with the problems of racial and religious discrimination, not only against Jews but against all minorities, and the Commission has always considered the suggestions it has offered concerning the laws which it administers. We therefore believe it appropriate to offer a number of suggestions to the Commission which may be helpful in evolving a program for the effective administration and enforcement of the new Law. Accordingly, we respectfully submit the following proposals.

1. The adoption of regulations

Effective enforcement of the Law can better be assured, if indeed it is not required, by the promulgation of regulations setting forth the procedures to be followed in utilizing the Law and substantively interpreting, wherever necessary, its language and policy. The substantive provisions of the Wicks-Roman act have been a part of the laws of this State for almost three quarters of a century, and many cases have been decided by the courts interpreting much of the language contained therein. The procedure prescribed by the act has been in operation at least since 1945, when the Law Against Discrimination in Employment was enacted. There is therefore ample background of law and administrative experience to enable the Commission to promulgate regulations.

Among the matters which might properly be the subject of procedural regulations are a definition of who constitutes an "aggrieved party" entitled to file complaints under the Law; the use of a uniform complaint form; the policy and practice of self-initiated investigations by the Commission; the policy and practice of publicity on satisfactory settlements or adjustments of complaints; and the policy and practice of attempted reconciliation in absence of jurisdiction to hold a hearing and issue a cease and desist order on a specific complaint.

On substantive matters, regulations might appropriately be issued defining the meaning of "discrimination" in terms of segregation, inferior service, etc.; defining the meaning of the term "private" and specifying the conditions for exemption as an "institution, club, or place of accommodation which is in its nature distinctly private"; defining the exemption of religious and denominational institutions; setting forth policy and practice with respect to discriminatory advertisements published in local newspapers by out-of-state resorts; and defining what constitutes a discriminatory advertisement (e.g., "Near Christian Churches").

These are but some of the items which might appropriately be the subject of regulations. Such regulations, however, should not be issued until after a public hearing at which individuals, industry representatives and organizations concerned with the problem of discrimination are given an opportunity to present their views. The American Jewish Congress would be prepared, at such a hearing, to present its suggestions as to regulations in specific form.

2. Educational program

We urge the Commission to undertake a program to educate both the resort industry and the public to their rights and duties under the Law. We note that the Commission has recently notified all resort owners and operators in the state that the Law will shortly be in effect, at the same time explaining its meaning and requesting the industry's cooperation in its enforcement. From time to time, additional mailings should be made. In addition spot announcements might be made on radio and television, or whole programs devoted to convincing the industry and the public that adherence to the Law is in the best interest of both industry and public. Posters and display cards should be placed on trains and buses serving the resort areas. Resort operators should be required to display the text or a summary of the Law in the lobby of their hotels at or near the registration or reservation desk. The American Automobile Association and the travel bureaus should be requested to include a short educational message in their literature, and other media of mass communication should be employed for this purpose. In addition, the newspapers should be given full information regarding the enactment and operation of the law and should be encouraged to publish news and feature stories and editorials stressing the importance of human rights and equal treatment to all races and creeds. Similar programs, modified as far as necessary, should be adopted for the other industries affected by the Law.

3. Industry co-operation

A determined effort should be made to obtain widespread industry co-operation. We believe that most resort, hotel and restaurant owners are not prejudiced and would gladly comply with the requirements of the Law if they were assured that it would be uniformly administered, and that their problems and suggestions would receive fair consideration. For that purpose, we propose the setting up of industry committees of owners of summer resorts, hotels, restaurants and other places of public accommodation. These committees should be invited and encouraged to work with the Commission and its staff in achieving a smooth administration of the Law.

4. Government co-operation

The co-operation of all state and municipal agencies should be sought in the administration of the Law. Thus, the brochures and other material published by the state to advertise its attractiveness as a vacation area should contain educational material on the state's policy of human rights and equality.

The offices of municipal licensing bureaus for hotels and restaurants should be requested to keep exposed literature explaining the Law and its importance so that applicants for licenses will be able to obtain ready information.

5. Newspaper advertisements

The Commission should undertake a continuing check on newspaper advertisements of resorts and restaurants. It should seek the cooperation of the newspapers and urge them to refuse advertisements which are intended or are likely to facilitate discrimination. Under New York law, as interpreted by the courts, newspapers clearly have a legal right to refuse to publish such advertisements. The new Law, we believe, imposes a legal duty on newspapers to reject them since the publication of such advertisements would constitute aiding and abetting discrimination prohibited by the Law. In any case, the Commission should impress on newspapers their moral obligation to avoid any conduct which facilitates discrimination.

6. Interstate Cooperation

Statutes providing for the administrative enforcement of laws against discrimination in places of public accommodation now exist in five contiguous states, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. Cooperation among these states will be of great value in the enforcement of these laws. One of the arguments most widely used against laws prohibiting discrimination by resorts is the fear of loss of business to resorts in nearby states where anti-discrimination laws do not exist or are not enforced. Whatever validity this argument may have can be countered by uniform enforcement of the equal accommodation laws in these five states.

It is therefore particularly important that the Eastern States Conference of Commissions Against Discrimination use its machinery to obtain uniform enforcement in the field of public accommodations. We suggest further that at least one meeting during each session of the Conference be open to representatives of the regulated industries and of organizations concerned with the enforcement of the laws.

The foregoing are some of the steps which the Commission might take to help assure compliance by the respective industries with the new Wicks-Roman law. Of course, these suggestions are not exhaustive. We do believe, however, that they encompass a practical and effective approach to the enforcement of the Law and we therefore respectfully submit them for the consideration of the Commission.

Respectfully submitted,

Will Maslow

Leo Pfeffer, of counsel.

June 23, 1952

Pub Accom

Memorandum from . . . . AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

15 East 84th Street, New York 28, N. Y. • TRafalgar 9-4500

RECEIVED
JUN 26 1952
Southern Regional Council

June 23, 1952

TO: Community Relations Councils and Group Relations Agencies

FROM: Leo Pfeffer

I enclose a copy of a memorandum submitted by the American Jewish Congress to the New York State Commission Against Discrimination containing proposals on the enforcement of the law against discrimination in places of public accommodation. That law (the Wicks-Roman Law) was enacted by the New York State Legislature this Spring and goes into effect on July 1, 1952. It gives the Commission, which now administers the 1945 Law Against Discrimination in Employment, power to administer the law which forbids discrimination in hotels, resorts, theatres, retail stores, and other places of public accomodation.

With the enactment of this statute and a similar one in Rhode Island this year, there are now five states which provide for the administrative enforcement of public accommodations statutes. The first state to adopt this procedure was New Jersey which, in 1949, enacted the Freeman Law, drafted by AJCongress. Connecticut followed suit the same year and Massachusetts in 1950.

The enclosed memorandum suggests, among other things, the adoption of certain substantive and procedural regulations, the initiation of an educational campaign, and steps to insure cooperation by other government agencies.

Enc.

CLSA Reports
COMMISSION ON LAW AND SOCIAL ACTION
of the AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS
15 East 84th St., New York 28, N. Y. • TRafalgar 9-4500

To: Jewish Community Relations Councils Group Relations Agencies

From: Will Maslow

RECENT AMENDMENTS TO PUBLIC ACCOMMODATION LAWS

An amendment extending the coverage of the Massachusetts statute prohibiting discrimination by places of public accommodation, resort and amusement was adopted by the Massachusetts Legislature and signed by Governor Herter on June 2, 1953.

The amendment enlarging the definition of places of public accommodation to include motels, cabins, swimming pools and numerous other facilities and services not previously covered by Massachusetts law, was adapted from a model definition of places of public accommodation recently prepared by the Commission on Law and Social Action of AJCongress. Abraham T. Alper, president of the New England Division, AJCongress, and Gerald Berlin, New England CLSA representative, attended the bill-signing ceremonies.

Although the Massachusetts amendment follows the model definition prepared by CLSA quite closely, certain changes were made by the Massachusetts Legislature which limit the scope of the new definition. For example, coverage of hospitals, dispensaries and clinics is limited to those operating for profit, leaving non-profit hospitals free to discriminate. Another exemption (limited in the CLSA definition to charitable organizations operated by or in connection with a religious organization) has been changed to exclude all charitable organizations from the operation of the law whether or not they are connected with religious institutions. Finally, the new amendment contains some unnecessary enumeration of specific places of public accommodation.

Massachusetts' action extending the coverage of the public accommodations statute was emulated by the 1953 Connecticut legislature. However, the Connecticut amendment rather than defining places of public accommodation in greater detail as was done in Massachusetts struck out the existing specific enumeration of places of public accommodation and substituted a more inclusive definition. A place of public accommodation is now defined by Connecticut law as "any establishment ... which caters or offers its services or facilities or goods to the general public." The Connecticut definition lists specifically only "public housing projects" and the newly-added "publicly assisted housing." The Connecticut legislature also amended the public accommodations statute to prohibit segregation or "separation."

Ignoring the new trend evidenced in several Eastern states of vesting enforcement of public accommodation statutes in an administrative agency, the Oregon legislature recently enacted a law prohibiting discrimination by public accommodations and providing for enforcement by the aggrieved party in civil suits. Damages up to $500 may be recovered. Oregon is the first state to adopt a public accommodations law since 1909 and increases to 19 the total of such statutes.

The State of Washington which has had a four line statute since 1909 making discriminatory denials of public accommodations a misdemeanor, enacted an amendment defining the terminology used in that statute. The broad definition now given the statutory language, particularly the enlarged definition of "places of public resort, accommodation, or amusement" should enlarge the scope of and increase the effectiveness of the statute. However, like the Oregon statute the enforcement of the Washington Act must still depend on complaints by aggrieved persons to prosecuting attorneys and court actions for damages.

June 8, 1953

CLSA Reports

COMMISSION ON LAW AND SOCIAL ACTION
of the AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS
15 East 84th St., New York 28, N. Y. • TRafalgar 9-4500

AMENDMENT TO MASSACHUSETTS ANTI-DISCRIMINATION STATUTE
ENLARGING THE DEFINITION OF PLACES OF PUBLIC ACCOMMODATION

Section 92A of chapter 272 of the General Laws, inserted by chapter 117 of the acts of 1933, is hereby amended by striking out the second paragraph and inserting in place thereof the following:- A place of public accommodation, resort or amusement within the meaning hereof shall be defined as and shall be deemed to include any place whether licensed or unlicensed, which is open to and accepts or solicits the patronage of the general public and, without limiting the generality of this definition, whether or not it be (1) an inn, tavern, hotel, shelter, roadhouse, motel, trailer camp or resort for transient or permanent guests or patrons seeking housing or lodging, food, drink, entertainment, health, recreation or rest; (2) a carrier, conveyance or elevator for the transportation of persons, whether operated on land, water or in the air, and the stations, terminals and facilities appurtenant thereto; (3) a gas station, garage, retail store or establishment, including those dispensing personal services; (4) a restaurant, bar or eating place, where food, beverages, confections or their derivatives are sold for consumption on or off the premises; (5) a rest room, barber shop, beauty parlor, bathhouse, seashore facilities or swimming pool; (6) a boardwalk or other public highway; (7) an auditorium, theatre, music hall, meeting place or hall, including the common halls of buildings; (8) a place of public amusement, recreation, sport, exercise or entertainment; (9) a public library, museum or planetarium; or (10) a hospital, dispensary or clinic operating for profit; provided, however, that no place shall be deemed to be a place of public accommodation, resort or amusement which is owned or operated by a club or institution whose products or facilities or services are available only to its members and their guests nor by any religious, racial or denominational institution or organization, nor by any organization operated for charitable or educational purposes.

Approved by Governor
June 2, 1953

Loyalty Investigation

Memorandum from . . . . AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

15 East 84th Street, New York 28, N. Y. • TRafalgar 9-4500

September 30, 1953

The widespread denunciation of the House Committee on Un-American Activities for releasing testimony of Benjamin Gitlow labeling the late rabbis, Stephen S. Wise and Judah L. Magnes, as Communist collaborators in the early 1920's has focussed attention anew on the abuses of legislative investigating committees. You may be interested therefore in the attached analysis of the entire Gitlow episode and the issues it has raised. Your comments on this will be most welcome.

Shad Polier,
Chairman, Executive Committee

RECEIVED
OCT 19
Southern Regional Council

CLSA Reports
COMMISSION ON LAW AND SOCIAL ACTION
of the AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS
15 East 84th St., New York 28, N. Y. • TRafalgar 9-4500

THE HOUSE COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES: A CASE HISTORY OF THE ABUSE OF THE LEGISLATIVE PROCESS

Throughout its long and turbulent history, the House Committee on Un-American Activities has been criticized for injuring innocent people, confusing popular understanding of the meaning of Communism, attempting to throttle social and economic views it disliked and otherwise misusing its functions. The recent attack on the deceased rabbis, Stephen S. Wise and Judah L. Magnes, is the latest and one of the most alarming illustrations of the Committee's procedures. Because this episode has widespread significance, we are setting forth an analysis of the affair.

On September 11, 1953 the House Committee on Un-American Activities released to the press without comment four volumes of testimony delivered before a sub-committee sitting in executive, i.e., private, session in New York City on July 6, 7, 8, 13 and 14, 1953. The testimony consisted in the main of statements by ex-Communists linking Protestant clergymen to the Communist Party. The volumes are entitled "Investigation of Communist Activities in the New York City Area."

Included in the 310 pages of testimony released was one statement by Benjamin Gitlow reading as follows (p. 2077):

> "To be specific: Before the creation of the front organizations,* the ministers who carried out the instructions of the Communist Party or collaborated with it were limited in numbers.
>
> The outstanding ones among them were, besides Dr. Harry Ward, Dr. William B. Spofford, Jerome Davis, Rev. Tucker P. Smith, Rev. Irwin St.John Tucker, Rabbi Judal (sic) L. Magnes, Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Rev. Sidney Strong, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise."

This was the first indication anyone had had that the names of Drs. Wise or Magnes had been mentioned by any witness before the Committee.

The paragraph of Gitlow's testimony concerning Dr. Wise and Magnes was incorporated in the Associated Press account of the attack on the Protestant clergy and published throughout the country on September 12, 1953. It is significant that many newspapers, on their own initiative, refused to publish this paragraph and omitted any reference in their stories to Dr. Wise or Magnes; a sufficiently large number, however, did use the Gitlow attack on the rabbis so that it immediately became a matter of national interest.

The Gitlow testimony

Benjamin Gitlow gave his testimony on July 7, 1953 in New York City before Representative Kit Clardy (Rep.-Mich.) and Francis E. Walter (Dem.-Pa.), a sub-committee of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Questioned by Robert L. Kunzig, Committee Counsel, Gitlow described himself as one of the top officials of the Communist Party in the United States from 1919 to 1929, when he was expelled. At the time of his expulsion, he was general secretary of the Party in charge of its work in the textile unions. Mr. Kunzig stated that the main purpose for which Gitlow had been invited to testify was to give his "experience in connection with the relationship of the Communist Party to religion."

*Identified previously by the witness as before 1922.

Gitlow began by describing the Communist Party as an atheistic organization that nevertheless had a policy of infiltration of religious organizations and named a half-dozen Protestant clergymen who had "worked closely" with the Party.

Mr. Kunzig then asked whether Gitlow could tell how the Communists infiltrated "the religious field." He replied that before he answered he would deal briefly with "the tactic of the united front adopted by the Communists in 1922" after their policy of instigating revolutions in Germany and elsewhere had failed.

This united front policy, according to Gitlow, resulted in the formation by the Communist Party of many united front organizations in the United States. He then continued: "To be specific: Before the creation of the front organizations, the ministers who carried out the instructions of the Communist Party or collaborated with it were limited in numbers" (underlining added). He then named "the outstanding ones among them" as Rabbi Magnes, Rabbi Wise, Rev. John Haynes Holmes and six other Protestant ministers of whom three had already been named by him. There was no other references by Gitlow to Drs. Wise or Magnes or any other rabbi.

It is evident that Gitlow in his references to Wise and Magnes was referring to the five years between November, 1917, the date of the Soviet revolution and 1922, or a period thirty years before the date he testified.

Dr. Magnes left the United States and emigrated to Palestine in 1922 settling permanently in that country. In 1925 he became Chancellor of the Hebrew University in Palestine. Gitlow clearly therefore was referring to events before 1922.

Far more shocking than Gitlow's performance was that of the Committee. It allowed him to make his thirty-year old charges without requiring him to substantiate them with the slightest evidence. Gitlow was not questioned at all about this reference to Wise or Magnes. He was not asked how he knew about the alleged Communist collaboration, whether it was based on his personal knowledge or hearsay or when the collaboration took place. It will be noted that Gitlow lumped together the ministers "who carried out the instructions of the Communist Party" with those who "collaborated" with it, as though there were no differences in the two accusations. The sub-committee did not ask Gitlow what he meant by the term "collaborated." Judging by the Committee's past record, "collaboration" may mean anything from taking a public stand on an issue paralleling that of the Communist Party to joining an organization that is any time dominated by Communists. The term, however, as the ordinary reader would understand it, means conscious, deliberate and systematic cooperation. In the present state of public opinion, a charge that an individual has "collaborated" with Communists is almost equivalent to branding him a traitor.

On September 24, 1953, the Peekskill (N.Y.) Evening Star published a letter from Benjamin Gitlow (a resident of the area) defending himself against attacks because of his testimony concerning Dr. Wise and Magnes. In the course of his letter, he wrote:

> "It was the purpose of this testimony to show how the communist movement, from its very inception--though anti-religious and in principal atheistic--was able to attract a number of well-meaning, liberal and social-minded religious leaders such as Rabbis Magnes and Wise. The charge was not made that they were ever communists or members of the Communist Party."

It will be noted that Gitlow was now retreating if not recanting, Rabbis who he had previously sworn had "carried out the instructions of the Communist Party or collaborated with it" were now described as "well-meaning, liberal and social-minded religious leaders" who were never "members of the Communist Party" or "communists." Gitlow apparently draws a distinction between communists with a small "c" and members of the Communist Party. Drs. Wise and Magnes, he stated, fell into neither category. They are now described merely as "well-meaning" leaders whom the "communist movement" was able to "attract." Here again Gitlow gives no dates nor any other evidence to support his assertion and again uses a vague and meaningless word like "attract" to indicate a relationship with the communists.

Had the Committee shown the slightest responsibility or sense of fair play, it would have refused to countenance this denunciation, on the unsupported assertion of one witness, based on nebulous charges thirty-years old. Instead, heedless of the injury it might do to the reputations of two dead rabbis, it made Gitlow's testimony public. The Committee thereby immunized Gitlow from civil or criminal libel proceedings (in New York it is a crime maliciously to defame the reputation of the dead) and allowed anyone now to republish this portion of the official transcript of the testimony with impunity.

Reactions to the "Charges"

The public reaction to the Gitlow smear was instantaneous and vigorous. Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the American Jewish Congress, and Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, issued a joint statement which was printed in full by the New York Times and given generous space throughout the country.

The Goldstein-Eisendrath statement described the action of the House Committee on Un-American Activities as "a shocking and frightening betrayal of elementary public responsibility and decency," expressed the hope that "this climactic revelation of the irresponsible character of the Committee's procedures will move the American people to action in defense of their liberties" and concluded that Gitlow's charge was "a contemptible and vile desecration of two of the most noble and revered names in American Jewish history."

Thereafter many leading American organizations and many distinguished American citizens, Jewish and non-Jewish, joined in denouncing this latest action of the Velde Committee.

The national board of the National Council of Churches of Christ, the central body of American Protestantism, condemned the "utter disregard of the American tradition of fair play" in releasing accusations against the two dead rabbis "revered not only by their co-religionists but millions of other Americans" and described the Committee's action as "yet another example of the abuse of the Congressional investigative process."

The Synagogue Council of America, representing the major congregational and rabbinic groups in this country, condemned the Velde Committee for its "cowardly attack." The National Community Relations Advisory Council scored the "irresponsible" publication of unsupported charges and called upon Congress as "its first order of business when it reconvenes" to adopt fair rules of procedure for Congressional investigating committees.

Rabbi Irving Miller, president of the Zionist Organization of America, accused the Committee of "almost unbelievable irresponsibility" and called the charges against Rabbis Wise and Magnes "fantastic" and "ridiculous." The board of directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People made public a resolution denouncing the "unsupported charges." (Dr. Wise in 1909 had been one of the founders of the NAACP.) Henry Edward Schultz, national chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, in a public statement called Gitlow's testimony "a reckless attack" and urged the Committee that "testimony given in secret hearings should not be made public until the Congressional Committee has weighed carefully possible unfair impact upon the reputations or memory of honorable Americans who can no longer defend themselves." The Community Church of New York (of which Dr. John Haynes Holmes is minister emeritus) and the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue defended the records of Dr. Holmes and Dr. Wise and called upon Congress to adopt a code of fair procedures. The Community Church stated:

> "The practice of releasing unchecked and unanswered testimony to the public, without making adequate effort to determine whether or not it is accurate or true, and without presenting the full records of the individuals, is a violation of the sacredness of individual personality."

Dr. Holmes, a lifelong friend and co-worker with Dr. Wise in innumerable civic and social causes, was for many years chairman of the board of the American Civil Liberties Union whose constitution bars Communists from holding office or staff positions.

Several influential newspapers including the New York Times, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the New York Post assailed the Committee. (Other editorials may have been published but they have not come to out attention.) The New York Times reminded its readers that the Committee for more than a decade had been "playing fast and loose with the reputation of citizens whose views on economic and social matters differed from its own." The St. Louis Post-Dispatch in an editorial entitled "A Devious Attack" rebuked the committee because it "did not have the courage to make an honest statement of their own. They merely released the testimony of the witnesses and let this completely unsifted gossip stand for evidence." The New York Post point of view is epitomized in the title of its editorial: "They Can't Talk Back."

The only dissenting voices that have come to our attention are The Tablet, the official organ of the Roman Catholic diocese of Brooklyn, which supported Gitlow's attack on Dr. Wise, and Rabbi Benjamin Schultz, director of the American Jewish League Against Communism, who expressed his faith in the integrity of Gitlow.

The Velde Committee Rules of Procedure

The Wise-Magnes incident dramatizes the need for the reform of the procedure of legislative investigating committees and focusses attention on the wholly inadequate rules of the Velde Committee that made possible an attack on the memory of two deceased and revered rabbis.

On July 15, 1953, the Velde Committee made public its "Rules of Procedure," the first rules it has ever adopted (Cong. Rec., July 16, 1953, p. 5076). The Rules indicate some awareness that innocent persons may be injured by the procedures of the Committee. Thus Rule IV A(1) provides that if a majority of the Committee or a sub-committee thereof believe that the interrogation of a witness in a public hearing might "unjustly injure" the reputation of other individuals, the Committee shall conduct such interrogations in an executive session. Testimony in executive sessions must be kept "secret" and "shall not be released or used in public sessions without the approval of a majority of the Committee" (Rule IV A (3)).

The same awareness of this unjust injury is indicated by another rule entitled "Rights Of Persons Affected By A Hearing" (Rule X) that requires the Committee "where practicable" to notify any person that has been named in a public hearing before it as "subversive, Fascist, Communist, or affiliated with one or more subversive-front organization, who has not been previously so named." Such notice is to be given "within a reasonable time" after the naming. A person thus notified may within 15 days of such notice request the opportunity of testifying in public about such accusations (Rule XB).

These rules are obviously inadequate to prevent such incidents as the Gitlow smear. Nor indeed could any rule be formulated that would hold the Committee even to elementary notions of fair play or decency in releasing testimony given in secret session. Obviously a committee with any sense of responsibility would have on its own motion rejected out of hand the flimsy assertions of Gitlow concerning alleged conduct thirty years ago.

More basic than rules regulating procedure are rules limiting the scope of the Committee's investigative power. Today it is authorized by the standing rules of the House to investigate "the extent, character, and objects of un-American propaganda activities." But the rules do not and indeed could hardly define "un-American." What is "un-American" for the House Committee on Un-American Activities evidently is, as the New York Times has put it, views on social and economic matters differing from its own. As long as the Committee is given carte blanche to libel anyone living or dead as "un-American," no reputation in the United States is safe.

Failing a complete overhauling of the Committee's functions, the next most important step is to reconstitute the Velde Committee and others like it. It is obviously not enough to man the Velde Committee with lawyers, according to the custom of the House, for lawyers when they sit on legislative investigating committees apparently forget all they have learned about due process and fair play and the evaluation of evidence. Members of such committees should be those who have demonstrated that they value responsibility, objectivity and judicial standards of fair play more than headlines.

While these larger goals are being fought for, half-way measures must be sought. One is the adoption of rules of procedure designed to place some check upon the hit-and-run-tactics of the Committee. For example, rules should be adopted that would (1) forbid the Committee to make public any testimony injuring the reputation of any living or dead person, unless the Committee itself evaluates such testimony and makes detailed findings about it; (2) forbid the release of such defamatory testimony until the person defamed or the representatives of the deceased person have been given a copy of the accusation and the opportunity to comment thereon; and (3) compelling the Committee if it makes public the accusation, simultaneously to release the answer or defense. Such rules are necessary because the Wise-Magnes incident is not an isolated one. The Committee through its long and stormy history has rarely been able to distinguish between accusation and judgment or ever been able to evaluate a person's record as a whole.

Conclusion

Drs. Wise and Magnes have been revered too long by millions of Americans for their reputations to be tarnished by a witness like Gitlow or an agency like the Velde Committee. What is frightening about the episode is not the injury done to a living person or the memory of a dead one but rather the utter lack of responsibility on the part of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. If Dr. Wise and Dr. Magnes can be labelled as Communist on the naked assertion of a notoriety-seeking witness, then no reputation is safe in America.

The spontaneous indignation and resentment of distinguished organizations and individuals is healthy and reassuring. But their sense of outrage must be focussed upon constructive goals; the redefinition of the functions and reform of the procedures of legislative investigating committees. This reform can only be accomplished by the building up of a sound public opinion and tradition that will hold up to public scorn any legislator violating the common decencies. When the conscience of America is so aroused that it no longer is good politics to smear innocent people, effective rules of procedure can be adopted to preserve and protect our American tradition of fair play.

Will Maslow

9/30/53

THE AMERICAN NEGRO

A SELECTED READING LIST

Emergency Education Program

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION

NEW JERSEY

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION

William H. J. Ely
State Administrator
*****

THE AMERICAN NEGRO

A SELECTED READING LIST

EMERGENCY EDUCATION PROGRAM

W. C. McGinnis
State Director

Benjamin F. Seldon

State Supervisor, Negro Adult Education

Compiled By
James A. Pawley
and Staff
Assistant State Supervisor, Negro Adult Education

THE AMERICAN NEGRO

A SELECTED READING LIST

****

ANTHROPOLOGY

BIOGRAPHY

ECONOMICS

FICTION

HISTORY, EDUCATION, INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

MUSIC AND LITERATURE

SOCIAL PROBLEMS

SOURCE BOOKS

BOOKLETS AND PERIODICALS

PROGRAMS AND AGENCIES

*****
***
*

THE AMERICAN NEGRO

A SELECTED READING LIST

****

AUTHORS

	PAGE
ALLEN, JAMES S.	23
ARTHUR, GEORGE	21
AZIKIWE, NNANDI	12
BAKER, PAUL E.	23
BANCROFT, FREDERICK	14
BARTON, REBECCA CHALMERS	24
BECKWITH, MARTHA WARREN	15
BERRY, ERRICK	8
BOND, HORACE MANN	11
BOWEN, TREVOR	20
BRAWLEY, BENJAMIN	14, 16, 20
BROWN, INA CORINNE	24
BROWN, MRS. JOSEPH	11
BROWN, STERLING	17
BUELL, RAYMOND	12
BULLOCK, RALPH W.	2
CALVERTON, V.F.	15
CAMPBELL, THOMAS MONROE	12
CAMPION, C.T.	2
CARTER, CHARLES W.	15

PAGE

CATTERALL, HELEN TUNICLIFF 20

CLINCHY, EVERETT R. 18

COCKE, SARAH JOHNSON 9

COLEMAN, MRS. GEORGE P. 14

COMMISSION ON RACE RELATIONS, CHICAGO 26

CONNELLY, MARC 16

COSTLEN, HARRIET GIFT 9

CULLEN, COUNTEE 16

CUNEY-HARE, MAUD 16

CUTHBERT, MARION 17

DABNEY, WENDELL 20

DAVIS, FRANK MARSHALL 15

DETWEILER, F. G. 22

DICKERMAN, HALLIE F. 9

DOWD, JEROME 21

DUBOIS, W.E.B. 10, 20

EHRLICH, LEONARD 2

EMBREE, EDWIN R. 19

EVERETT, FAYE 20

FAUSET, ARTHUR HUFF 2

FAUSET, JESSIE REDMON 9, 10

FELDMAN, HERMAN 5

FERRIS, WILLIAM H. 10

FISHER, RUDOLPH 8

FLEMING, WALTER 11

FRAZIER, E. FRANKLIN 22

GORDON, TAYLOR 2

GORER, GEOFFREY 1

GOSNELL, HAROLD F. 4

GREENE, LORENZO J. 4

PAGE

GUERARD, ALBERT 19

HALL, EGERTON E. 4

HANKINS, FRANK H. 1

HARRIS, ABRAM L. 3, 26

HAYNES, GEORGE EDMUND 25

HERSKOVITS, MELVILLE J. 11, 18

HERTZ, FREDERICK 1

HEYWOOD, CHESTER D. 13

HILL, JOHN LOUIS 22

HOGAN, INEZ 9

HUGHES, LANGSTON 10, 16, 17

JENNESS, MARY 3

JOHNSON, CHARLES S. 5, 21, 24

JOHNSON, EDWARD A. 14

JOHNSON, GUY B. 16

JOHNSON, J. ROSAMOND 17

JOHNSON, JAMES WELDON 7, 10, 15, 16, 17, 21

KENNEDY, LOUISE VENABLE 4, 25

KENNEDY, EMMET R. 7

KERLIN, ROBERT T. 25

KING, WILLIS J. 22

KLINEBERG, OTTO 22

LARSEN, NELLA 9

LANIER, LYLE H. 25

LASKER, BRUNO 23

LEIPER, HENRY SMITH 19

LEWINSON, PAUL 13

LITTLE, ARTHUR W. 11

LOGGINS, VERNON 16

LUNN, ARNOLD 3

PAGE

MAYS, BENJAMIN E. 12

MCKAY, CLAUDE 1, 8

MILLER, MAE 13

MOTON, ROBERT RUSSA 25

NEARING, SCOTT 19

NICHOLSON, JOSEPH W. 12

ODUM, HOWARD W. 16

OLDHAM, J. H. 19

OVINGTON, MARY WHITE 3

PADMORE, GEORGE 11

PETERKIN, JULIA 7

PETERSON, JOSEPH 25

REED, RUTH 22

REID, IRA D. 4

REUTER, EDWARD BYRON 18, 23, 24

RICHARDSON, WILLIS 13

ROBESON, ELISSA 2

ROSS, FRANK A. 25

RUSSELL, GARTH THOMAS 24

SCHUYLER, GEORGE S. 7

SELIGMANN, HERBERT 21

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD 14

SHUFELDT, R. W. 1

SPERO, STERLING D. 3

SPIVAK, JOHN 8

SUTTON, D. MANNERS 7

SWIFT, HILDEGARDE HOYT 13

THURMAN, WALLACE 8

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE, Bureau of the Census 25

PAGE

VANDERCOOK, JOHN W. 2

VINOGRADOV, ANATOLII 7

WASHINGTON, BOOKER T. 3

WASHINGTON, E. DAVIDSON 17

WAXMAN, PERCY 2

WEATHERFORD, WILLIS D. 13, 24

WESLEY, CHARLES H. 4

WHITE, WALTER 8, 24

WOODSON, CARTER GODWIN 4, 10, 12, 13, 14, 23

WOOFTER, T. J. 19, 22

WORK, ERNEST 11

WORK, MONROE 25

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION 3

WORMLEY, BEATRICE F. 15

WYLIE, I. A. R. 7

YOUNG, DONALD 18

THE AMERICAN NEGRO

A SELECTED READING LIST

***

CONTENTS

	PAGE
ANTHROPOLOGY	1
BIOGRAPHY	1
ECONOMICS	3
FICTION	6
HISTORY, EDUCATION, INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS	10
MUSIC AND LITERATURE	14
SOCIAL PROBLEMS	18
SOURCE BOOKS	25
BOOKLETS AND PERIODICALS	27
PROGRAMS AND AGENCIES	30

****
**
*

PREFACE

During the past quarter century, several hundred books, and innumerable pamphlets and reports have been published, dealing with race relations. This is particularly true of material on the American Negro. From this heterogeneous mass of material, this bibliography has been prepared. It is by no means submitted as a complete bibliography of material on the Negro, but is intended as an aid to the lay reader in his selection of the books that will give the best possible information on the various phases of Negro life.

Acknowledgement is deservedly made to the Works Progress Administration of New Jersey through which this and other productions of the Education Section have been made possible.

James A. Pawley
Assistant State Supervisor
Of Negro Adult Education

Hackensack, New Jersey
June 1, 1937

EXPLANATIONS

Authors:

Where the letter "N" appears in parenthesis following the name of the author, it is an indication that the author is a Negro. Where there is no such notation, the racial identity of the author could not be determined, or else, he is other than Negro.

Ratings:

The asterisk above and following the title of a book indicates an evaluation placed upon the book by the reviewers.

One star () means the book is at least worth the time necessary for reading. Two stars () mean that the book is recommended for reading. Three stars () indicate that the book is highly recommended, while four stars () mean that the book is indispensible.

Where no stars appear, the value of the book can best be determined by the individual reader.

Indices:

All materials are listed alphabetically according to title. Subdivisions are also listed alphabetically.

To further aid the reader, there is also an alphabetical listing of authors.

THE AMERICAN NEGRO

A SELECTED READING LIST

******

ANTHROPOLOGY

AFRICA DANCES, Geoffrey Gorer, Alfred A. Knopf Company, New York, $3.50.

An exciting and lively book covering an English author's visit to West Africa. Contains valuable anthropological data.

AMERICA'S GREATEST PROBLEM: THE NEGRO, R. W. Shufeldt, F. A. Davis Company, Philadelphia, 1915.

A scientific treatment of racial differences between Negroes and whites in the United States. The prevailing tendency is an attempt to prove the inferiority of the Negro. The scientific material upon which the author has established his premises seems to have been hand picked; hence the book is biased. Technical.

RACE AND CIVILIZATION,* Frederick Hertz, translated by A. S. Levitus and W. Entz, Macmillan Company, New York, 1928.

This book, of European origin, vigorously attacks the theory of Nordic superiority. The author takes each theory and argument intended to place races in ascending or descending scales according to superior traits and points out the weaknesses of any such attempt. Objective.

RACIAL BASIS OF CIVILIZATION, THE,* Frank H. Hankins, Alfred A. Knopf Company, New York, 1926.

The book is considered "a critique of the Nordic Doctrine". Among the important conclusions of Mr. Hankins treatise are: that the matter of producing human beings that make for progress is one of eugenics rather than race and that great cultures have been built upon mixed races. Anthropology. Excellent treatment.

BIOGRAPHY

A LONG WAY FROM HOME, Claude McKay, Lee Furman, Inc., New York, 1937, $3.00.

An autobiography of a well known Negro poet and author. In the story he travels to England and Russia where he is associated with radical movements. He attempts to justify his writings and alignments and lashes his critics. Recommended.

BLACK MAJESTY,* John W. Vandercook, Harper Brothers, New York, 1928, $2.50.

A biography of Henry Christophe of Haiti. Born a slave, he became a boot boy, stableman, waiter, soldier, general, president, and king! Under him, Haiti became a world power. The book in content, form and illustrations is well done. It contains 207 pages and is a complete biography.

BLACK NAPOLEON, THE, Percy Waxman, Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York, 1931, $3.50

The story of Touissaint L'Ouverture is interestingly and entertainingly told in this book. The struggles and achievements of this famous Negro character are favorably appraised.

BORN TO BE, Taylor Gordon(N), Covici-Friede Co., New York, 1929.

Taylor Gordon tells with striking bluntness, the swift and exciting incidents in the life of a person born black and unheralded. Royalty had wined and dined him. America had thrilled to his voice, before his fortieth birthday. His observations on race problems, and the aims and ambitions of the Negro are set down with an understanding simplicity. Autobiography.

FOR FREEDOM, Arthur Huff Fauset (N), Franklin Publishing & Supply Co., Philadelphia, 1927.

An introduction to the slave trade with a number of biographical sketches of Negroes who played a definite part in American history. Stories are told in simple language. Interesting and informative. Good biographical sketches for children.

GOD'S ANGRY MAN, Leonard Ehrlich, Simon and Schuster Co., New York, $2.50

A forceful biography of John Brown in novel form. Contains much interesting dialogue. A high point is noted in the related conversation between John Brown and the eminent Negro abolitionist, Frederick Douglass. Readable. Informative.

IN SPITE OF HANDICAPS, Ralph W. Bullock(N), Association Press, New York, 1927.

A simple volume prepared for the primary purpose of improving race relations. Intended for use by religious groups. Contains several brief biographical sketches of prominent Negroes who have attained distinction in their particular fields.

OUT OF MY LIFE AND THOUGHT, C. T. Campion, Henry Holt Publishers, $2.50.

The author tells of his experiences in South Africa. He speaks clearly and fearlessly against the evils of colonization and native exploitation. Interesting reading.

PAUL ROBESON, NEGRO, Elissa Robeson(N), Harper & Brothers, New York, 1930.

An intimate history of the life of Paul Robeson written by one who should know; his wife. Includes his boyhood, college days and other high spots in his career. A very interesting, beautifully illustrated biography.

PORTRAITS IN COLOR, Mary Ovington, Viking Press, New York, 1927.
Among the twenty personalities included in these interesting short biographical sketches are: James Weldon Johnson, Marcus Garvey, Max Yergan, Mordecai W. Johnson, W. E. B. DuBois, Dr. Ernest E. Just, Dr. George Washington Carver, Langston Hughes, Roland Hayes and others. The author whose intimate contacts with Negroes during the past 30 years have given her a good background, has captured the high-lights of the lives of these people and has very beautifully portrayed them for the reader. Excellent biography.

SAINT IN THE SLAVE TRADE: PETER CLAVER, A, Arnold Lunn, Sheed and Ward Co., New York.
An account of Peter Claver who for nearly forty years toiled among the slaves in the harbor of Cartagena. A Saint of abnegation rather than organization, who made himself the slave of the slaves. Recommended as valuable reading.

TWELVE NEGRO AMERICANS,* Mary Jenness, The Friendship Press, New York, 1936, $1.50.
The author introduces outstanding Negroes who have made commendable progress but may not be so well known. The selection is made from different fields: education, religion, business, farming and work among students and young people. A bird's-eye view of what is being accomplished by Thomas Monroe Campbell, William Lloyd Imes, Lewis E. Anthony and others.

UP FROM SLAVERY,* Booker T. Washington(N), Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, New York, 1900, $2.00.
A story of a slave who became one of America's foremost citizens and educators. Recommended to all persons interested in the study of the American Negro. An autobiography.

ECONOMICS

BLACK WORKER, THE,* Sterling D. Spero & Abram L. Harris(N), Columbia University Press, 1931, $4.50.
A careful and studied approach to the Negro's role in the history of American labor. It offers a penetrating analysis of the policies and practices of the American Federation of Labor and the autonomous international unions within and without the Federation. It clearly shows how those organizations, with craft-conscious complacency, have mis-read the trends in American industry. An excellent economic reference.

LANDLORD AND TENANT ON COTTON PLANTATION, Works Progress Administration, Division of Social Research, Washington, D. C., 1936.

A study of landlord-tenant relationship conducted in the seven southeastern cotton states by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. The Report includes social and economic data relating to persons who have been of particular concern to the administrators of programs of rural relief and rehabilitation. The findings have a bearing, not only on relief problems, but on tenancy problems in the south and other areas. An excellent report. Up to date.

NEGRO LABOR IN THE UNITED STATES, 1850-1925* Charles H. Wesley(N), Vanguard Press, New York, 1927.

An exhaustive survey of the development and transition of Negro labor in the United States from the period of slavery to the entrance of Negroes into industrial occupations in large numbers. It contains valuable tables, references and maps, and should be of inestimable value to those interested in an exhaustive study of the Negro's working conditions.

NEGRO MEMBERSHIP IN AMERICAN LABOR UNIONS, Ira De A. Reid(N), The Department of Research and Investigation of the National Urban League, New York, 1930.

A detailed and exhaustive study of the Negro and organized labor in the United States from 1866-1929. Many of the experiences of Negro workers within and without the ranks of organized labor are discussed. The status of Negro workers may be fairly estimated as a result of this compilation. A factual economic report by a specialist in the field.

NEGRO PEASANT TURNS CITYWARD, THE, Louise Venable Kennedy, Columbia University Press, 1930.

This is an analysis and study of the causes and effects of Negro migration to northern cities in recent years. The social and economic influence of migration upon housing, health, and race relations are treated in a clear and concise manner. Objective in treatment.

NEGRO POLITICIANS, Harold F. Gosnell, The University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 1935.

The obstacles to political achievement and economic advancement, as they affect the Negro in an American city, are pointed out in a detailed account of his progress in American politics from the Civil War to the present time. Methods used and results obtained in the efforts of a Negro community to obtain elective and appointive political office, in Chicago politics, are set down in an understandable and interesting manner. Objective treatment.

NEGRO WAGE EARNER, THE,* Lorenzo J. Greene(N), and Carter G. Woodson(N), Van Rees Press, 1930.

A scientific study of occupations and occupational trends of Negroes in the United States. Replete with diagrams, tables, and an extensive bibliography. Invaluable to students of economics and to interracial groups.

NEGRO WAGE EARNER OF NEW JERSEY, Egerton E. Hall(N), Rutgers University Press, 1935.

A picture of the social and economic status of the Negro wage earner in New Jersey. Contains tables, charts and an extensive bibliography. Recommended to those interested in studying the economic conditions of the Negro in New Jersey.

RACIAL FACTORS IN AMERICAN INDUSTRY,* Herman Feldman, Harper & Brothers, New York, 1931.

A factual text that is the result of studies participated in by members and friends of the Inquiry, a national organization for the promotion of co-operative studies of problems in human relations. It pictures the economic exploitation of the Negro and the Oriental, of the racial prejudice which determines the work and pay of these "inferior" races and of the careless assumptions which fix the status and environment of these groups in the communities where they live. Part II is an outline of social and industrial remedies, SHADOW OF THE PLANTATION,* Charles S. Johnson(N), The University of Chicago Press, 1932, $2.50.

The writer deals with life, love, religion, changing family organization and the unchanging situation of the rural Alabama Negro. Done with scientific thoroughness and accuracy. Interesting in its presentation of human values.

FICTION

One of the most effective methods of presenting the Negro to the public has been through printed material. In the field of literature and particularly in fiction, gross misrepresentations have been made of the Negro and Negro types. In discussing Negro fiction, William S. Braithwaite in a chapter of Alain Locke's "New Negro", quotes a passage from an article in an issue of "Independent":

> "During the past few years stories about Negroes have been extremely popular. A magazine without a Negro story is hardly living up to its opportunities. But almost every one of these stories is written in a tone of condescension. The artists have caught the contagion from the writers, and the illustrations are ninety-nine times out of a hundred purely slapstick stuff. Stories and pictures make a Roman holiday for the millions who are convinced that the most important fact about the Negro is that his skin is black. Many of these writers live in the South or are from the South. Presumably they are well acquainted with the Negro, but it is a remarkable fact that they almost never tell us anything vital about him, about the real human being in the black man's skin. Their most frequent method is to laugh at the colored man and woman, to catalogue their idiosyncrasies, their departure from the norm, that is, from the ways of the whites. There seems to be no suspicion in the minds of the writers that there may be a fascinating thought life in the minds of the Negroes, whether of the cultivated or of the most ignorant type. Always the Negro is interpreted in the terms of the white man. White-man psychology is applied and it is no wonder that the result often shows the Negro in a ludicrous light."

It should be also pointed out that many stories written by Negro and white authors have treated characters lightly or disparagingly primarily because the reading public will accept no other form.

J. A. P.

FICTION

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF AN EX-COLORED MAN, THE,* James Weldon Johnson(N), Alfred A. Knopf Co., New York, 1927.

The author has selected a Negro as a fictitious character for whom he has written an autobiography. The story, however, is not so much the account of the life of a man who "passes" but is actually a composite biography of the Negro of the United States. The race consciousness and attitudes of the entire group are therein expressed.

BLACK APRIL, Julia Peterkin, Bobbs Merrill Co., Indianapolis, 1927.

An interesting novel by a white author who is familiar with Negro conditions. In this story a sincere attempt has been made to portray the language, customs and the philosophy of the Negro inhabitants of an isolated South Carolina community bounded by the sea.

BLACK CAMEOS, Emmet R. Kennedy, Albert and Charles Boni, New York, 1924.

An attempt is made in this book to introduce the songs, stories and poems of Negro life in Louisiana in the dialect of that area. Much reference is made to the contributions of the Negro to the increasing mass of Negro literature.

BLACK CONSUL, THE, Anatolii Vinogradov, The Viking Press, $2.75.

A historical novel of absorbing interest in spite of some strictures. Robespierre is limned with great skill. As a great figure in Haitian history, Toussaint L'Ouverture has not been particularly well done. An interesting story of Haitian life.

BLACK GOD,* D. Manners Sutton, Longmans Green & Co., New York, 1934, $2.50.

A story of M'Kato and his quest for revenge by the side of the little river in the Belgian Congo, is told in an accurate picture of the life and people in an African settlement. How M'Kato had his hands cut off because he dared to oppose the taking of his sister by his boss, is striking. "Black God" was a selection of the Book of the Month Club. It is a tale no book lover should miss.

BLACK HARVEST, I. A. R. Wylie, George Doran Co., New York, 1926.

A novel dealing with miscegenation. A giant Negro, the offspring of a black French soldier and a German woman, becomes very much a German, and finally, a world power through his literary genius and his ability as an organizer. The author attributes the downfall of the giant to his mixed blood.

BLACK NO MORE, George S. Schuyler(N), The Macaulay Co., 1931.

The story is a new treatment of the color question. Its main theme concerns the discovery by Dr. Crookman, a Negro scientist, of a serum which bleaches black skin white, turns thick lips thin and makes kinky hair straight. It is a satire on white as well as black people. The irony of the whole matter lies in the fact that after all the Negroes in America have undergone this scientific process, they are so white, whiter even than many of the Nordics, that whites and blacks alike begin using Egyptienne stain to give a light brown tinge to the pigment of the skin, thus solving for all time, in one great stroke, the vexatious race problem. Fiction. Objective. Readable.

BLACKER THE BERRY, THE, Wallace Thurman(N), The Macaulay Company, New York, 1929.

The difficulties and hardships encountered by the central figure of this story, a dark-skinned Negro girl, are vividly shown. The contempt of Negro men for the darker Negro girl is also a pronounced revelation. Interesting reading.

CONJURE MAN DIES, THE, Rudolph Fisher(N), Covici-Friede Company, New York, 1931, $2.00.

A most engaging mystery story by an author who knows Harlem and Harlemites. Frimbo, a Butongo King, steeped in the age-old wisdom of his ancestors, comes to Harlem to live, to experiment, to learn. He conducts a psychic laboratory, tells of the past, the present, foretells the future. Frimbo "hits the numbers" once a week regularly, for $10. Frimbo is murdered. Suspicion points to the numbers king and to a half dozen other characters. Frimbo comes back alive, and confounds the police. The story ends after a couple of neat twists in plot action. Good reading. Interesting characterization of low types.

FIRE IN THE FLINT, THE, Walter F. White(N), Alfred A. Knopf Co., New York, 1924.

A novel, which shows many sides of the race problem in the South from the Negro's point of view. Peonage, rape, lynchings, the lack of law protection for Negroes; and the defenselessness of Negro women, are some of the questions touched upon. Interesting reading.

FLIGHT, Walter F. White(N), Alfred A. Knopf Co., New York, 1926.

An octoroon marries a white man, but finally returns to the race she was forced to desert.

GEORGIA NIGGER, John L. Spivak, Brewer, Warren and Putnam, Inc., 1931, $2.50.

A book of great power and poignancy; a picture astounding and unforgettable, of ignorant, oppressed and helpless Negroes caught in the net of race prejudice in Georgia.

HOME TO HARLEM,* Claude McKay(N), Harper & Brothers, New York, 1928, $2.50.

Valuable only for social comment. Crude in form. Full of beer flats, pool halls, and cabarets. Contains sketches of the sordid life of some Negroes. Its strength is in the writer's comments on Negro habits and customs.

MOM DU JOS, Errick Berry, Doubleday, Doran & Co., $1.75.

The story of a little Negro baby doll that had been stolen by monkeys. Beautifully illustrated. Fiction. Children, six to ten years.

NICODEMUS AND HIS GRAN' PAPPY, Inez Hogan, E. P. Dutton & Co., Inc. 300 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y., 1932, $1.00.

An exciting adventure story for children from four to eight years. Artistically illustrated in three colors. Highly recommended.

NICODEMUS AND HIS LITTLE SISTER, Inez Hogan, E. P. Dutton & Co., 286-300 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y., 1932, $1.00

In a delightfully simple style the author relates the adventures and misadventures of a little Negro boy and his baby sister. Beautifully illustrated in color. Highly recommended for children from four to eight years.

OLD MAMMY TALES FROM DIXIE LAND,* Sarah Johnson Cocke, E. P. Dutton & Co., Inc., 681 Fifth Avenue, New York, 1911, Reprint 1926.

A collection of fascinating stories for bed-time. Realistically written in Negro dialect and interspersed with many nursery songs. Typical old southern Negro folk tales.

PASSING, Nella Larsen(N), Alfred A. Knopf Co., New York, 1929.

A story outlining the agonies and apprehensions suffered by a Negro who "passed" for white. The character around whom the story is built becomes almost wholly absorbed by the white world and still craves for the race which he, according to white standards, belonged to. Interesting, entertaining, but unreal.

PLUM-BUN, Jessie Redmon Fauset(N), Frederick A. Stokes & Co., New York, 1929.

The discriminations practiced against Negroes in public places, of which numerous instances are given and the advantages and disadvantages of "passing" for white, are emphasized by the Negro author in this story. The main characters become intimately acquainted, but it is only after a long period of time that the fact of "passing" is revealed to each other.

QUICKSAND, Nella Larsen(N), Alfred A. Knopf Co., New York, 1928. $2.50.

A story of the inner life and events of the central years of a girl's life. A subjective, modern, sophisticated novel with few characters. Helga Crane, a girl of mixed parents, refuses to marry a well-to-do Danish man and finally marries a poor Negro preacher from Alabama. Well written, full of color and details.

STEVEN KENT, Hallie F. Dickerman, The Hartney Press, New York, 1935, $2.00.

An interesting novel dealing with miscegenation. Steven Kent, a "percentage" Negro, suffers untold agonies because of his mixed blood and because of unpleasant relationships with his parents; one of whom is "passing". A gripping story, timidly handled.

THAT WAS A TIME,* Harriet Gift Costlen, E. P. Dutton & Co., Inc., 300 Fourth Avenue, New York, 1937, $2.50.

Mammy Lou, the slave-heroine, tells the story of her life. Born in Africa, she was brought to America on a slave ship. Her happy and harrowing experiences on the plantation where she was enslaved, her supervised and thwarted love-life, her devotion to the "kind-hearted 'Marse Jim'", her quaint philosophy, her description of the old south after the war, and finally her peaceful passing, with the words of the spiritual, "I done done what you told me to do" on her lips, makes a poignantly beautiful, soul-stirring novel. Highly recommended.

THERE IS CONFUSION,* Jessie Redmon Fauset(N), Boni & Liveright, Publishers, New York, 1924.

A most interesting and well-written novel by one of the best Negro authors, which given an insight into the intimate problems and life of the best types of Negroes. Many of the humiliations and subjugations of this group of Negroes are expressed in the story.

WAYS OF WHITE FOLKS, THE, Langston Hughes(N), Alfred A. Knopf Co., New York, 1934, $2.50.

The author writes a book in which he is laughing at "white folks" on all rounds of the social ladder. He knows white people and how to laugh at their foibles along the color line. Readable. Informative.

HISTORY, EDUCATION, INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

AFRICAN ABROAD, THE, William H. Ferris(N), Tuttle, Morehouse, & Taylor Press, New York, 1913, Vol. I&II.

A colorful dissertation upon the Negro in various countries and cultures. Very detailed in its presentation of theories concerning the race. Treats the development of religion, ethnological background, contemporary status, and future possibilities.

AFRICAN BACKGROUND OUTLINED, THE, Carter G. Woodson(N), The Associated Publishers, Washington, D. C. $3.25.

This work undertakes to serve two purposes. It gives a brief history of the Negro in Africa, and it actually outlines courses in the study of the Negro in Africa, Europe, and America. Among the courses outlined in detail are: "The Negro in Africa", "The Negro in the European Mind", "The Negro in America", "The Negro in Literature", "The Education of the Negro", and "The Religious Development of the Negro". Along with each heading and sub-heading appear bibliographical footnotes and comments. Authentic history.

BLACK MANHATTAN,* James Weldon Johnson, Alfred A. Knopf, N. Y., 1930, $2.00.

The book deals with slavery, the results of the Civil War, and the Negro's struggle for freedom against racial prejudice and discrimination, and follows his northward migration to Harlem. It shows Negro development in music, art and literature and gives an evaluation of Harlem and its possible future.

BLACK RECONSTRUCTION, W. E. B. DuBois(N), Harcourt Brace & Co., 1935, $4.50.

A book containing much well-documented material, through which the author interprets the period in American history between 1860 and 1880, with special reference to the efforts and experiences of Negroes. Of much benefit to students of history and racial backgrounds.

EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO IN THE AMERICAN SOCIAL ORDER, THE, Horace Mann Bond, Prentice-Hall Inc., New York, 1934, $2.75.

A book of 501 pages giving a grave, yet justifiable indictment of the treatment by the whole nation, in general, and the "Old South" in particular, of America's forgotten child, the Negro child of school age. Its chief contribution is Mr. Bond's ability to interpret the most significant problems of Negro education in the American social order. Valuable to teachers and sociologists.

ETHIOPIA: A PAWN IN EUROPEAN DIPLOMACY, Ernest Work, Macmillan Co., New York, $2.50.

A sympathetic and fair treatment of the Ethiopian question based on a first hand study of the country and a careful analysis of official records and other valuable documents. Scientific in its approach. Recommended as an aid in the study of the Ethiopian people.

FREEDMEN'S SAVING BANK, THE, Walter L. Fleming, University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1927.

A brief, but clear statement of the economic condition of the Negro at the close of the Civil War is contained in this study. The strong and weak points of the Freedmen's Saving Bank, its origin, function and development, and its value as a moral and financial bulwark for the Negro are set down in an interesting and understandable manner.

FROM HARLEM TO THE RHINE,* Arthur W. Little, Covici-Friede Co., New York, 1936, $3.00.

The story of New York's colored volunteers. A record of the 15th New York National Guard Regiment from its backhanded beginnings to its spectacular, heroic finish as the 369th. Highly recommended as a source of information of the achievements of the Negro as a soldier.

HISTORY OF THE ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR AMONG COLORED PEOPLE, THE, Mrs. Joseph S. Brown(N), Des Moines, Iowa, 1925.

A short and authentic history of the Order of the Eastern Star among colored people. In addition to a foreword by J. C. Scott, International Grand Patron of the Order, it contains the official statement adopted by the International Conference of Grand Chapters and a statistical report and directory for the entire country.

HOW BRITAIN RULES AFRICA, George Padmore, Lathrop Lee & Shepherd, New York, 1936.

A detailed indictment and expose of the procedures and techniques of contemporary imperialistic exploitation. It draws a conclusion that the British and French empires are colored, since Arabs, Africans, Egyptians, Indo-Chinese, and Hindus form the majority of the population. A good study in imperialism and international relations.

LIBERIA IN WORLD POLITICS, Nnandi Azikiwe(N), Arthur H. Stockwell, London, 1935.

Discusses the origin of the Black Republic, the importation of the first slaves to Virginia, including several colonization projects and back-to-Africa migrations. The tragic financial history of the country, and particularly the ramifications involving its destiny by its agreements with the American Firestone Company, are thoroughly and objectively discussed.

LIFE IN A HAITIAN VALLEY,* Melville J. Herskovits, Alfred A. Knopf, New York, 1937, $4.00.

The author presents an exhaustive study of peasant life in a remote Haitian Valley. He discusses the African and French origins of Haitian customs and an analysis of the attitudes of the Haitians. Authoritative. Well written. Highly recommended.

MIS-EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO, THE,* Carter G. Woodson(N), The Association Publishers, Washington, D. C., $2.15.

The author attempts to show that education in America has been carried out without thought of the Negro. The Negro, therefore, knows practically nothing about his background, his present possibilities, and what the present age requires of him. He argues that at present, the Negro is engaged in meaningless imitation of others rather than in self-development. A very stimulating and thought provoking volume.

MOVABLE SCHOOL GOES TO THE NEGRO FARMER, THE, Thomas Monroe Campbell(N), Tuskegee Institute Press, 1936, $2.00.

A story of the struggles of the southern Negro farmer and the difficulties which the Tuskegee movable school attempted to correct. The movable school was a successful experiment in rural engineering. An autobiography of the author, the first Negro Agricultural Extension agent in the United States, is very inspiringly written. Recommended.

NATIVE PROBLEM IN AFRICA, THE, Raymond Buell, Macmillan Co., New York, 1928.

These volumes contain records of events and conditions in Africa. Each section of the continent is treated separately. A short history of the coming of the white man and the appropriation and exploitation of native lands is given as a basis for understanding the native labor problem. In volume II, the discussion is of South Africa, Basutoland, the Rhodesias and Nyasaland, Kenya, Janganyika Territory, Uganda Nigeria, the Gold Coast Sierra Leone and French Equatorial Africa, the French Mandates, the Belgian Congo and Liberia, Excellent for its information relative to imperialism and economic exploitation.

NEGRO CHURCH, THE, Benjamin E. Mays(N), and Joseph W. Nicholson(N), Institute of Social and Religious Research, New York, 1933.

The first comprehensive contemporary study of the Negro church. A detailed study of Negro religious life. Treats in an interesting manner the origins, ministry, message, program and other phases of the Negro church. Contains 17 chapters, 315 pages, many tables, maps, and case studies. The author apparently wishes to awaken more active interest in the Negro church on the part of the public, stimulate improved leadership, and to aid social scientists and others interested in the development of the Negro church. Invaluable to students of Religion and to those desiring to learn the background of present-day manifestations and activities of Negro religious bodies.

NEGRO COMBAT TROOPS IN THE WORLD WAR, Chester D. Heywood, Commonwealth Press, Worcester, Mass., 1925.

An excellent account is rendered in this book of the activities of the Negro troops during the World War. The bravery and patriotism of Negro soldiers are extolled. Much light is thrown upon the attitudes of Negro and white troops toward each other.

NEGRO FROM AFRICA TO AMERICA, THE, W. D. Weatherford, George H. Doran Co., New York, 1924.

In this book an attempt is made to give the general reader just the information desired in reference to the African background of the Negro; his coming to America; his present religious, social, educational and economic conditions. In addition, the race problem from a constructive point of view is fairly portrayed. Objective. Highly recommended to students of social problems.

NEGRO HISTORY IN THIRTEEN PLAYS, Richardson(N), & Miller(N), Associated Publishers, Washington, D. C., 1935, $3.25.

In these thirteen plays the authors have made a special effort to dramatize the history of the Negro. One of these plays dramatizes Samory of Soudan and Menelek of Abyssinia. Another deals with Antonio Maceo of Cuba, Christophe and Toussaint L'Ouverture of Haiti. The Negro history in the United States is well taken care of with plays based on Crispus Attucks, Sojourner Truth, Nat Turner, Harriet Tubman, William and Ellen Craft and Frederick Douglass. Valuable to students. Pleasant reading.

NEGRO IN OUR HISTORY, THE,* Carter G. Woodson(N), Associated Publishers, Inc., Washington, D. C. Sixth Edition, 1922, 1924, 1927, 1928 and 1931.

The best authoritative history of its kind on the Negro in the United States. Negro life and history as influenced by contact with Caucasians is discussed. It has numerous illustrations, 35 chapters and 650 pages. Its purpose is two-fold, first to show how the influence of the Negro has affected the history of the nation, and to serve as an adequate reference in furnishing material to students of race relations interested in Negro studies. Recommended as a text book in courses in Negro history.

RACE, CLASS AND PARTY, Paul Lewinson, Oxford University Press, N. Y., 1932, $3.75.

A history of Negro suffrage and white politics in the South. Contains results of surveys and questionnaires.

RAILROAD TO FREEDOM, THE,* Hildegarde Hoyt Swift, Harcourt Brace & Co., New York, 1932, $2.50.

A story of the part played by Negro women in aiding the escape and the freeing of slaves. The author was drawn to this interest from her knowledge of the authentic history of Harriet Tubman's escape from slavery. As a girl, she learned from her parents, the story of this amazing woman, the builder of a railroad which was not only responsible for her freedom but for the freedom of hundreds of others. Easily readable.

SCHOOL HISTORY OF THE NEGRO RACE IN AMERICA, A, Edward A. Johnson, Edward A. Johnson, Raleigh, N. C., 1891.

An interestingly written history of the achievement of the Negro in America from 1619 to 1890. Especially designed to meet the levels of elementary school children. Valuable.

SHORT HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO, A,* Benjamin Brawley(N), Macmillan Co., New York, 1913, $2.00.

An exhaustive social history of the American Negro written in clear and beautiful English. A handy volume of 311 pages. Recommended as a text book.

SLAVE TRADING IN THE OLD SOUTH, Frederick Bancroft, The J. H. Furst Company, Baltimore, $4.00.

Slavery is shown as an industry that was promoted by persons of the highest social standing. Valuable as a work in offsetting much distorted history which attempts to make Negro slavery in the United States a benevolent institution.

STORY OF THE NEGRO RETOLD, THE, Carter G. Woodson(N), The Associated Publishers, Inc., Washington, D. C., 1935.

A text book designed for the student, embracing the development of the Negro on an international basis as well as in America. It provides the connecting links of the Negro in American History which are usually omitted or slightly treated by white historians. A valuable record of the Negro from ancient times through the present era. Text book. Recommended as an introductory work to Negro history.

VIRGINIA SILHOUETTE, Mrs. George P. Coleman, Press of the Deitz Printing Company, Richmond, Virginia, 1934, $1.25.

A collection of hitherto unknown and unpublished letters relating to the early slave problem. Together with these letters is a reprint of "A Dissertation on Slavery" by St. George Tucker, in which he presented a proposal for the gradual abolition of slavery during the early slave era. The volume sheds a new light upon the beliefs and attitudes of many persons in regard to slavery during the period when many Americans were being troubled in their search for a deterrent to the vicious slave practices.

MUSIC AND LITERATURE

ADVENTURES OF THE BLACK GIRL IN HER SEARCH FOR GOD, THE, George Bernard Shaw, Dodd, Mead and Co., New York, 1932.

A very cleverly written satire on denominations and religions.

It is an attempt to rescue the Bible in its one and only surviving message, the ideal of God. It criticises the pseudo-christianity of the churches. This black adventuress encounters and questions members and groups representing all of these sects, none of whom, to her sincere heart, have the real spirit of God. Delightfully illustrated and thought provoking. Must be read twice to be appreciated.

ANTHOLOGY OF AMERICAN NEGRO LITERATURE, AN, V. F. Calverton, Modern Library Publishing Co., 1929.

A small volume chock full of interesting and valuable excerpts from outstanding novels, spirituals, and essays. The poetry, songs and "blues" are all the work of Negro authors. A very concise but inclusive anthology.

ANTHOLOGY OF NEGRO POETRY, Arranged by B. F. Wormley(N), and Charles W. Carter(N), Education Section, W. P. A., New Jersey, 1937.

This recently compiled anthology is very nicely edited and contains selections from practically all of the Negro poets of consequence along with a brief biographical sketch of the majority of them.

BLACK MAN'S VERSE, Frank Marshall Davis(N), Black Cat Press, Chicago, 1935, $3.00.

In this work the author admits his delight in experimenting with free verse. His subjects are drawn from life. With a surging vitality varying from a note of social protest to an expression of sheer enthusiasm of living, he presents pictures of the masses, mammoth cities, a people under oppression, cabarets, beer gardens, lynchings, death, and love as well as every odd mixture of life. The poems possess much merit.

BLACK ROADWAYS, Martha Warren Beckwith, The University of N. C. Press, 1929.

A study of the folklore of the Negroes in Jamaica, written with great simplicity. The author shows how integral and important to the lives of many simple country-folk, are the superstitions, signs, and rituals which hold them so powerfully. Very interestingly written.

BOOK OF AMERICAN NEGRO POETRY, THE,* James Weldon Johnson(N), Harcourt Brace and Co., 1921, $2.00.

This excellent anthology of Negro poetry contains sketches of 40 authors and many of their most important poetic contributions. Many of the modern Negro poets are included. Among them are: Countee Cullen, Langston Hughes, Sterling Brown and Arna Bontemps. The transition of Negro poetry is also well treated.

BOOK OF AMERICAN NEGRO SPIRITUALS, THE,* James Weldon Johnson(N), Viking Press, 1925.

The origin, development, form, and meaning of Negro spirituals are thoroughly discussed by the author. The book is interspersed by musical arrangements of spirituals made by J. Rosamond Johnson and Lawrence Brown. Highly recommended. One of the best text books on the subject.

CAROLING DUSK, Countee Cullen(N), Harper Brothers, New York, 1927, $2.50.

An anthology of verse by Negro poets. The volume contains a faithfully representative collection of verse. It is characterized by prettiness rather than by great feeling or profound philosophy. Short sketches of the lives of each contributor make interesting reading.

DREAM KEEPER, THE, Langston Hughes(N), Alfred A. Knopf Co., New York, 1931, $2.00.

A selection of sixty poems by the famous Negro poet, taken from both "The Weary Blues" and "Fine Clothes To The Jew", with the addition of twenty-one new ones. The book is divided into five sections arranged according to mood, including short lyrics of great beauty, stanzas in serious vein, rollicking songs, and some very fine Negro "blues".

GOD'S TROMBONES, James Weldon Johnson(N), Viking Press, New York, 1927, $2.50.

The power of the Negro preacher and the saving faith of a people are recorded for other generations, in this collection of Negro sermons. Unique. Outstanding. Beautifully done.

GREEN PASTURES, THE, Marc Connelly, Farrar & Rhinehart Inc., 1929.

An unusual and interesting play which attempts to present certain aspects of the religious life and belief of Negroes who for the most part are wholly illiterate. Moses, Aaron, Gabriel and God are portrayed as everyday people and made to fit into the everyday lives of Negroes as members of the racial group.

NEGRO AND HIS SONGS, THE, Howard W. Odum and Guy B. Johnson, University of N. C. Press, 1925.

A collection of Negro songs of various types, with interpretations of meanings and origins made by the author. The songs in this volume were collected in Northern Mississippi and in Northern Georgia; a few others, used for comparative purposes, are chiefly from North Carolina and Tennessee.

NEGRO AUTHOR, HIS DEVELOPMENT IN AMERICA, THE, Vernon Loggins, Columbia University Press, New York, 1935, $5.00.

A large volume in which the author expresses his views on Negro writers. It is written in favor and appreciation of what Negro authors have given to the world. Valuable reading.

NEGRO GENIUS, THE,* Benjamin Brawley(N), Dodd, Mead & Co., N. Y. 1937.

The author tells of the outstanding achievements of Negro actors, singers and poets. He points out that the Negro has earned distinction which is far more significant than he has been given credit for. A special feature is the place given to young Negro writers and artists who are beginning their careers.

NEGRO MUSICIANS AND THEIR MUSIC, Maude Cuney-Hare(N), Associated Publishers, Washington, D. C., 1936.

Thirty-three pages of this book are devoted to a detailed account of African music, including instruments and festivities. The author traces the African influences on American Negro music, Negro folk songs, design, rhythmic patterns, mode and text. Much of the book is devoted to a discussion of pioneer and contemporary Negro musicians. For those desiring a general knowledge of Negro musicians, and Negro music, this book is highly recommended. Non-technical.

ROLLING ALONG IN SONG,* J. Rosamond Johnson(N), Viking Press, New York, 1937, $3.50.

A comprehensive collection of more than eighty Negro songs and ballads. It is a chronological survey of American Negro music with eighty-seven arrangements including ring shouts, spirituals, work-songs, plantation ballads, chain gang, jail-house, and minstrel songs, street cries and blues. Excellent.

SECOND BOOK OF AMERICAN NEGRO SPIRITUALS, THE,* James Weldon Johnson(N), Viking Press, New York, 1926, $3.50.

An arrangement of over one hundred Negro songs with their original melodies, rhythms and harmonies. A pertinent discussion of the reasons for variations in Negro folk-songs and the effect of spirituals on American music. All of the musical arrangements are by J. Rosamond Johnson.

SELECTED SPEECHES OF BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, E. Davidson Washington, Doubleday Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y., 1932, $2.00.

A volume including the most important speeches from Booker T. Washington's first address before the National Education Association at Madison, Wisconsin, in 1884 to his last public appearance in 1915.

SOUTHERN ROAD, Sterling Brown(N), Harcourt Brace & Co., New York, 1931, $2.50.

A portrayal of Negro folk character. Negro life on the levee, in the cotton fields, in the cabin, and in crowded Northern cities is realistically depicted. All the sufferings, the joys, and the sorrows in the life of the Negro are expressed in verse.

ST. PETER RELATES AN INCIDENT, James Weldon Johnson(N), Viking Press, New York, $2.00.

This volume contains a group of selected poems and has 105 pages. The scene of the principal poem is laid in heaven where the unknown soldier proves to be a Negro. At first written for private distribution, these poems were later published in book form because of public demand.

WEARY BLUES, THE, Langston Hughes(N), Alfred A. Knopf Co., New York, 1927, $2.00.

Langston Hughes grips reality to the rhythm of the blues. Doubtless he has struck an original note. Neither Vachel Lindsey nor Carl Sandburg imprisoned the soul of the Negro or the meter of his life in their syncopated poems. These poems have caught the essence of their period.

WE SING AMERICA,* Marion Cuthbert(N), Friendship Press, New York, 1936, $1.00.

This volume contains facts about American Negroes in story form.

Stories of Negroes who came to America with the first explorers and of the many different types of Negro people today, are included. Excellent for children. Highly recommended.

SOCIAL PROBLEMS

ALL IN THE NAME OF GOD, Everett R. Clinchy, The John Day Co., $2.00.

The story of Jewish-Protestant-Catholic conflict in the United States. The prejudices and antipathies attending the struggle for status by each of the groups are pointed out, and factors affecting the same, such as economics, population, history, and philosophy are considered. All exist "in the name of God". Readable. Valuable for comparison.

AMERICAN MINORITY PEOPLES, Donald Young, Harpers Publication, New York, 1932, $3.50.

A study of prejudice, immigrants, Negroes and Indians. In the light of inate and social barriers, the author feels that man is not a free agent, nor does logic rule the world.

AMERICAN NEGRO, THE, Melville J. Herskovits, Alfred A. Knopf Co., New York, 1928, $1.75.

The theory that the American Negro is developing a new racial type is supported in this volume. The following discussions are to be found in chapters: (1) "The Amalgam He Represents (2) The Physical Type He Is Forming (3) The Description of His Physical Type (4) White Values For Colored Americans (5) His Significance for the Study of Race." Highly recommended as a text in sociology.

AMERICAN NEGRO, THE,* Donald Young, The American Academy of Political and Social Science (The Annals, Vol. 140) Philadelphia, 1928.

This volume presents, in a series of surveys and articles, specific facts about Negro family life, health, crime, economic status, religion, art, literature, education and a host of other aspects of the everyday lives of Negroes. The articles and reports contained therein have been contributed by specialists in their fields such as: Herbert A. Miller, W. E. B. DuBois, E. B. Reuter, E. Franklin Frazier, James Weldon Johnson, Kelly Miller, Charles S. Johnson, George E. Haynes, Alain Locke, Eugene Gordon, R. R. Moton, and Walter White. Very highly recommended.

AMERICAN RACE PROBLEM, THE,* Edward Byron Reuter, Thomas Y. Crowell Co., New York, 1927, $2.75.

An authoritative text on the "Negro Problem". A presentation and analysis of the facts which create problems and determine solutions. Many of the superficial solutions which have been proposed for the so-called "Negro Problem" are attacked and shattered and directions are indicated for better inter-racial adjustments. An excellent sociological text. Good for race relationship studies. Technical.

BASIS OF RACIAL ADJUSTMENT, T. J. Woofter, Jr., Ginn & Co., Boston, 1925.

The authenticity of this text may be attributed to The Commission on Inter-racial Co-operation. Many phases of Negro life in the United States today are discussed. The usual elements involved in any study of Negro life: population, health, economic situation, crime, politics, and religion, are here considered.

BEYOND HATRED, Albert Guerard, Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, 1925.

This volume is a study in comparative democracy. The mere machinery of suffrage, and the indefensible proposition that, "all men are created equal", is not democracy in its complete form. Democracy is, in the author's view, a spirit: the spirit of brotherhood. Part II, discusses "Democracy and Race". This section ends with the following striking statement: "Races as well as individuals are to be presumed innocent until they are proved to be guilty, and to the accusations so freely leveled against the Colored race and hybrids, a sober mind in the present state of our knowledge, can only return a verdict 'not proven'". The thinly veiled humor and finely inter-woven irony of the author add flavor to the already seasoned work. Very highly recommended to students of race problems.

BLACK AMERICA, Scott Nearing, Vanguard Press, New York, 1929, $3.00.

A very profusely illustrated analysis of the political, social and economic condition of the Negro in the United States. Health and housing are adequately stressed and photographed.

BLACK YOEMANRY, T. J. Woofter, Jr., Henry Holt Co., New York, 1930 $3.00.

An account of the language, customs, and institutions of St. Helena, a small island off the coast of South Carolina. This community is one of the few places in the United States where something of the pre-slave life of the Negro is manifested. Historical. Sociological. Fascinating.

BLIND SPOTS, Henry Smith Leiper, Friendship Press, New York, 1929, $1.00.

A brief discussion of the "Race Problem" involving minority races and their contacts with other groups in America. Suggestions for a solution are made from the Christian angle. This book was intended primarily for use among church and religious groups. Easily readable. Valuable. Non-technical.

BROWN AMERICA,* Edwin R. Embree, The Friendship Press, 1931, $1.25.

A well written, easily understood book by a liberal white southern author which serves as an extremely good introduction to the study of the race problem. The book touches briefly upon the beginnings of the Negro in America and describes the race's cultural gifts to the nation through folk art, music and the fine arts. Highly recommended.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE RACE PROBLEM,* J. H. Oldham, George H. Doran Co., New York City, 1924, $2.25.

The book discusses whether or not the Christian Church has any contribution to make to the solution of racial problems, and if so, what the nature of that contribution is to be, and how it can best be made. Every phase of the race problem is touched upon in this work.

COLORED SITUATION, THE, Faye P. Everett(N), Meador Publishing Co., Boston, 1936.

The compilation of a series of essays upon Negro activities, and racial problems. Among the contributors are: A. Philip Randolph, George E. Haynes, Albon L. Holsey and several other distinguished Negro leaders. An attempt is made to cover the entire sphere of Negro activities in the social, economic and cultural life of the United States.

CINCINNATI'S COLORED CITIZENS, Wendell P. Dabney, Dabney Publishers, Cincinnati, Ohio, 1926.

A thorough, comprehensive treatment of the historical, cultural, civic, social and economic life of Negroes residing in the City of Cincinnati, Ohio. The book is valuable for its treatment of the early Negroes in Cincinnati; the educational facilities for Negroes; the development of the church; business, government employment, housing, and the historical sketches of prominent Negroes. An encyclopedia for anyone interested in the life of the Cincinnati Negro. Technical.

DIVINE WHITE RIGHT, Trevor Bowen, Harper & Brothers, New York, 1934.

This ironically titled book deals with relations between whites and Negroes in the United States. It is an arresting study of America's sorest racial problem, justice for the Negro. It is a vigorous indictment against the "divine white right" to discriminate against another race. The author offers constructive criticism and suggests how recovery agencies combined with organized labor, should proceed in creating a New Deal for the Negro. The book shows careful and painstaking work done with honesty, and forthrightness. A thought provoking book for the advanced student of race relations.

EARLY NEGRO AMERICAN WRITERS,* Benjamin G. Brawley(N), University of North Carolina Press, 1935.

A presentation of selections from Negro writings from Colonial times to the Civil War. A scholarly authoritative work wherein the early Negro American authors are evaluated. Highly recommended.

GIFT OF BLACK FOLK,* W. E. B. DuBois(N), The Stratford Co., Boston, 1924, $2.00.

The book points out the fact that the Negro is, and has been a distinct asset to America. He has contributed to labor, militarism, literature, music, etc., and the faith, hope and tolerance of his religion has played a spiritual role in this country.

The book is particularly valuable, not so much for its new information but for its form of presentation and its literary style. Should be read.

JUDICIAL CASES CONCERNING AMERICAN SLAVERY AND THE NEGRO, Helen Tunnicliff Catterall, Carnegie Institute, Department of Historical Research, Washington, D. C., 1926.

This volume contains cases on American slavery and the Negro taken from the records of the Courts of England, Virginia, West Virginia, and Kentucky. The work is especially valuable for the light which it throws upon social conditions surrounding slavery, and the background out of which much of the law respecting slavery developed.

LIFE ON THE NEGRO FRONTIER, George Arthur, Association Press, New York, $2.00.

An informative volume for one interested in the work of social agencies and social movements affecting Negro life. The author presents his work with a dispassionate attitude and a balanced judgement. Recommended as a text on social agencies and problems.

NEGRO AMERICANS, WHAT NOW? James Weldon Johnson(N), Viking Press, New York, 1934, $1.25.

A volume of 103 pages in which the author deals with some of the dilemmas of Colored Americans and makes suggestions for a cure to their ills. Unlike other solutions offered, such as an exodus, or physical force, he proposes the integration of the race into the life of the nation. This new line of attack should prove valuable and interesting to inter-racial organizations and students of race relations.

NEGRO FACES AMERICA, Herbert Seligmann, Harper Brothers, New York, 1920, $1.00.

A review of the conclusions of anthropologists with references to alleged racial differences in capacities. Analyzes the social and psychological factors at work in different parts of the country, where the race question is acute. Gives a comprehensive discussion of race riots, politics, race relations and the economic problems of the Negro. Easily readable.

NEGRO IN AMERICAN CIVILIZATION, THE,* Charles S. Johnson(N), Henry Holt & Co., New York, 1930, $4.00.

This text written by an eminent American sociologist, is the result of a comprehensive survey of books, reports and researches describing the conditions of the Negro in every part of the United States. It is a complete, authentic symposium on the historical background, health, housing, education, civil rights and other factors affecting the Negro. The author presents the views of several well known specialists in economics, biology, health, race relations, etc., on Negro problems. This sociological text is invaluable to the student of race relations.

NEGRO IN AMERICAN LIFE, THE, Jerome Dowd, The Century Company, New York, 1926.

The historical background of the American Negro is discussed briefly. A large part of the book is devoted to the contributions of the Negro to America since Emancipation. Although generally brief, the information contained in this volume is the result of much minute research and contains much authentic material. Well written. Valuable. Interesting.

NEGRO IN AMERICAN LIFE, Willis J. King, The Methodist Book Concern, New York & Cincinnati, 1926.

A book which lists many of the Negro's contributions to America; sets down the ills and difficulties faced by the Negro group; and attempts, through the Christian approach, to aid in eradicating some of these ills and difficulties. Its special emphasis is on producing a change in the attitudes of the Christian adherents of the dominant group.

NEGRO FAMILY IN CHICAGO, THE,* E. Franklin Frazier(N), University of Chicago Press, 1932, $3.00.

A comprehensive, scientific analysis of the Negro family in Chicago. The author traces the historical development of the Negro family from the ante-bellum period up to the present time. A masterly treatment of the cultural, sociological, and economic factors influencing the development of the Negro family. Replete with charts, graphs, tables, and an abundance of sociological data.

NEGRO ILLEGITIMACY IN NEW YORK CITY, Ruth Reed, Columbia University Press, New York, 1926.

An analysis of 500 case records secured from New York social service agencies. Recommended to students of social work.

NEGRO INTELLIGENCE AND SELECTIVE MIGRATION, Otto Klineberg, Columbia University Press, 1935.

A compilation of psychological research made by the author with the assistance of the Columbia University Council for Research in the Social Sciences.

A generous number of graphs and tables comparing peoples of various sections of the country are included. Results of several nationally known intelligence tests are given. Technical.

NEGRO NATIONAL ASSET OR LIABILITY? John Louis Hill, Literary Associates Inc., New York, 1930.

An informative treatise which is the result of more than a decade of inter-racial associations. The author has gone minutely into the delicacies of race relations, blood mixtures, race origins, inheritance, environment and religion. An interesting mixture of facts and philosophy. Easily readable. Recommended to those interested in the study of the so-called "race problem".

NEGRO PRESS IN THE UNITED STATES, THE, F. G. Detweiler, University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 1922, $3.00.

The Negro Press in the United States has been given an exhaustive study in this serious attempt to find out the character of publications issued by Negroes. Several chapters of this volume indicate the scope and extent of this study. The titles of these chapters are: "The Negro Press in Slavery Days", "The Negro Press In Freedom", "Favorite Themes of the Negro Press", "What is in a Negro Paper", "The Demand For Rights", "Other Solutions of the Race Problem", "Negro Life", "Negro Criticisms of Negro Life". Of interest to the lay reader and of particular interest to news analysts and students of race problems.

NEGRO PROBLEMS IN CITIES,* T. J. Woofter, Jr., Doubleday Doran & Co., Garden City, 1928, $2.50.

A study made through the cooperation of the Institute of Social and Religious Research under the direction of the author. It is divided into four sections each edited by a specialist; Neighborhoods, Housing, Schools, and Recreation. The report is the result of surveys in sixteen cities. Facts and materials from six of these cities were used in the analysis. A text. Authentic. Sociological.

NEGRO PROFESSIONAL MAN IN THE COMMUNITY, THE,* Carter G. Woodson(N), Associated Publishers, Washington, D. C., 1934, $3.00.

According to this author, the social and economic insecurity of the Negro may be attributed to the development of a false set of values whereby the professional man becomes all things at all times in the Negro community. "The mere title of 'doctor' or 'lawyer' elevated the belittled one to a place of importance and leadership that only tended to add a tissue paper roof to the cellophane structure of black economy". The professional class, says the author, more than any other, intensified the belief that the element of racial discrimination was the chief and foremost cause of the Negro's plight. Highly recommended.

NEGRO QUESTION IN THE UNITED STATES, THE, James S. Allen, International Publishers, New York, 1936.

The author of this book discusses the race question from the Marxist's point of view. It is the opinion of the author that only a change in the political and economic philosophy of the country will eliminate the "Negro question". The volume contains valuable statistics, economic and social data on the Negro people. Important as a contrast to current economic and social practices. Highly recommended.

NEGRO-WHITE ADJUSTMENT, Paul E. Baker, The Association Press, New York, 1934, $3.50.

A compilation of interesting, informative data gathered from clippings, speeches, and reports of groups such as the Y. M. C. A., The Commission for Interracial Cooperation, The Federal Council of Churches, The Urban League, The N. A. A. C. P., and the Communist Party. The author presents the "aims" expressed by executive officers rather than attempts at criticism. Excellent for Interracial groups and sociological study.

RACE AND CULTURE CONTACTS,* E. B. Reuter, McGraw-Hill Book Co., $3.00.

A collection of thirteen essays based on the 1933 meeting of the American Sociological Society which had as its central theme, "Race and Culture Contacts". Of particular interest are the papers of Professors Frazier and Johnson on Negro families. Dr. Johnson's essay on "Negro Personality Changes in a Southern Community" gives brief testimony to the qualitative changes that have taken place in the racial personality since slavery. Timely and valuable for those interested in sociological study.

RACE ATTITUDES IN CHILDREN, Bruno Lasker, Henry Holt & Co., New York, 1929, $4.50.

An examination of the ways in which children acquire mistaken opinions of, and irrational attitudes toward people of a different race or nationality; and a discussion of ways to create better understanding. Highly recommended.

RACE CONSCIOUSNESS AND THE AMERICAN NEGRO, Rebecca Chalmers Barton, Arnold-Busck, Copenhagen, $2.00.

A reference work which has been distributed throughout European universities by the author. A scientific medium written to aid in displacing the "jazz" stereotype which "unprejudiced" Europe assumes is the typical American Negro. For those Americans and Europeans who insistently demand the complete stratification of Negro life and types in one volume, this book is highly recommended.

RACE MIXTURES, Edward Byron Reuter, McGraw-Hill Book Co., New York, 1931.

The intermixture of different races is approached from a sociological point of view in this volume. The causes and effects of intermixture and intermarriage of Negroes and whites in America are concentrated upon by the author. A textbook.

RACE PSYCHOLOGY, Garth Thomas Russell, McGraw-Hill Co., New York, 1931.

The volume presents noteworthy deductions relating to racial and mental differences, such as: "1. Racial differences in mental traits are due to one of two causes - modification or selection. 2. Differences in intelligence of races are explained by the influence of nurture and of selection. 3. A proper ethnic program for unfortunate groups would do much for so-called 'inferior peoples' as it does on a small scale for individuals. 4. Esthetic principles are the same for all peoples. 5. There are no racial differences in musical traits. 6. Differences found in races, in the results of studies of racial differences in mental traits, are due to nurtural factors." Many tables and charts round out this valuable study. A text. Highly recommended tc students of race problems.

RACE RELATIONS,* Willis D. Weatherford & Charles S. Johnson(N), D. C. Heath & Co., New York, 1934, $3.20.

Study of an adjustment between whites and Negroes in the United States. The book has 29 chapters, 555 pages. The authors draw heavily on surveys and statistical reports, writers of history, anthropology, sociology and biography. A valuable text book for college students interested in a comprehensive study of the Negro-white relationship in America.

ROPE AND FAGGOT, Walter White(N), Alfred A. Knopf, New York, 1929.

The author discusses the factors behind lynching. The various complements of lynching - economic forces, race prejudice, religion, sex, politics, journalism, and theories of racial superiority and inferiority based upon faulty or insufficient scientific evidence, are isolated and examined.

STORY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO, THE,* Ina Corinne Brown, Friendship Press, New York, 1936, $1.00.

An authoritative survey of the African backgrounds of Negroes, and of social and religious progress of Negroes since emancipation.

Excellent introduction. Easily understood. Highly recommended.

STUDIES IN COMPARATIVE ABILITIES OF WHITES AND NEGROES, Joseph Peterson and Lyle H. Lanier, William and Wilkins Co., Baltimore, 1929.

This text is a result of studies made by the authors. Among the comparisons made and discussed in the book are: Part 1, "Comparative Tests of Twelve Year Old White and Negro Children". The results tend to show the mental superiority of the white. These studies have been thoroughly and painstakingly done. Valuable.

TREND OF THE RACES, THE, George Edmund Haynes(N), The Council Of Women For Home Missions and Missionary Education Movement of the United States and Canada, New York, 1922.

The author who is an authority on race relations, analyzes facts and situations which bear upon race relationships and makes suggestions for a Christian solution to the problems arising therefrom.

VOICE OF THE NEGRO, THE, Robert T. Kerlin, E. P. Dutton & Co., 681 Fifth Avenue, New York, 1920.

A compilation from the colored press of America for the four months succeeding the Washington riot of 1919. Designed to show the Negro's reaction to this and similar events which followed the World War. The entire Afro-American press, consisting of two dailies, a dozen magazines, and nearly three hundred weeklies has been drawn upon. Topically arranged. Readable. Recommended.

WHAT THE NEGRO THINKS, Robert Russa Moton(N), Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, New York, 1928, $2.50.

The author of this book attempts to present the view of the Negro on the many sided problems with which the Negro is faced. Among the serious problems discussed, are segregation, discrimination, lack of economic opportunities, etc. The volume is indicative, of course, of the opinion of one group of Negroes.

SOURCE BOOKS

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF NEGRO MIGRATION, A, Frank Ross and Louise Venable Kennedy, Columbia University Press, 1934, $5.00.

This is a bibliography covering the books and journal articles published since 1865 which bear upon the Negro, with selected and indexed digests of their contents.

NEGROES IN THE UNITED STATES,* 1920-1932 United States Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, Washington, D. C., 1935.

A pertinent report published by the Government containing facts and figures on the Negro as found in the United States, based on United States Census Reports. The volume is a supplement to "The Negro Population, 1790-1915". An invaluable source of information regarding the progress and status of the Negro in the United States.

Extensive in scope and detailed in compilation. An indispensable reference work for any scientific study of the Negro. Technical. Invaluable.

NEGRO YEAR BOOK,* Monroe N. Work(N), Negro Year Book Publishing Co., Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, 1925-1932.

The Negro Year Book provides a succinct, comprehensive and impartial review of the events which affect the interests and indicate the progress of the Negro. It furnishes a compact but comprehensive statement of historical and statistical facts arranged for ready reference. It is a permanent record of current events and at the same time an encyclopedia of historical and sociological facts. Exceptionally useful to students. Highly recommended.

WHO'S WHO IN COLORED AMERICA, Third Edition, 1930, 1931, 1932, New Kirk Avenue, Brooklyn, New York, $10.00.

Life sketches of the leading men and women of Negro descent. Given in brief language without criticism. Tells of the progress the Race is making and things every person wants to know. Highly recommended for every colored school and college. The library of every minister, teacher, doctor, lawyer, business man, and race leader, as well as the public library.

ADDITIONAL BOOKS

NEGRO IN CHICAGO, THE,* Chicago Commission on Race Relations, The University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 1922, $4.00.

This is a compilation of the records of the Chicago Commission on Race Relations on investigations of the Chicago race riot of July 1919, and of living conditions of Negroes in the North, and detailed statements of what the Commission considers are the main factors in the adjustment of racial difficulties. Highly recommended.

******

NEGRO AS A CAPITALIST, THE, Abram L. Harris(N), The American Academy of Political and Social Science, Philadelphia, 1936.

This is a detailed study of the role of the Negro in the economic development of the western world. The following chapters are of particular significance to students of economics:
1. Africa and the Rise of Capitalism; 2. The Accumulation of Wealth Among Negroes Prior to 1860; 3. The Economic Basis of The Negro Middle-class.

The volume shows the struggle of the Negro to gain economic status and social position by erecting within the larger frame-work of capitalism a small world of Negro business enterprise, hoping thereby to develop his own capitalistic-employer class and to create employment opportunities for an increasing number of Negroes in white-collar occupations.

BOOKLETS AND PERIODICALS

Because of the rapidity of changes in the field of social studies, there has been a growing tendency to issue pamphlets on contemporary questions rather than to publish expensive books. Most of these pamphlets are written by the same authorities who would ordinarily publish books. These pamphlets usually contain a digest, synopsis, or symposium on the issue at hand.

Due to the fact that there exists an almost inestimable number of such materials, only a few can be given in this list. The ones listed, however, have a definite bearing upon the Negro and his problems.

From time to time a number of magazines publish articles, and sometimes devote an entire issue to a certain phase, or phases of Negro life in America. Several such articles or issues are also included in this list.

Several nationally known organizations interested in inter-racial relationship, together with their programs, are also contained in this bibliography.

J. A. P.

BOOKLETS AND PERIODICALS

Periodicals

(Best Known Negro Publications)

CRISIS, THE, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue, New York City, Monthly. 15¢ per copy $1.50 yearly.

FLASH, weekly newspicture magazine published by Flash Publishing Co., 715 Florida Avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C., 10¢ per copy $4.50 yearly.

JOURNAL OF NEGRO EDUCATION, THE, published by the faculty of the College of Education, Howard University, Washington, D.C., Quarterly. $2.50 yearly.

JOURNAL OF NEGRO HISTORY, THE, published by the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, Inc., Washington, D. C., Quarterly. $1.25 per year.

OPPORTUNITY, Journal of Negro Life, Published by National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York City. Monthly. 15¢ per copy. $1.50.

SERVICE, published by Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, Tuskegee, Alabama, Monthly. 15¢ per copy. $1.50 yearly.

SOUTHERN WORKMAN, THE, published by Hampton Institute, Hampton, Virginia, Monthly. 10¢ per copy. $1.00.

Also

INTERRACIAL NEWS SERVICE, a publication of the Department of Race Relations, Federal Council of Churches, 105 E. 22nd Street, New York. 50¢ yearly.

Articles in Magazines and Periodicals

CONSUMERS COOPERATIVE AMONG NEGROES IN GARY, INDIANA, Monthly Labor Review, February, 1936.

COTTON CHOPPER'S STRIKE, THE, Information Service, June 27, 1936

ENTER THE COTTON PICKER, R.K. Straus. Harper's Magazine, Sept. 1936.

HARLEM: DARK WEATHER VANE, Alain Locke. Survey August 15, 1936.

I AM A NEGRO, Paul Williams, The American Magazine, July 1937

KING COTTON'S SLAVES, Scribner, October, 1935.

MIRACLE IN GARY: NEGRO GROPES TOWARDS ECONOMIC EQUALITY, B. B. Fowler, Forum, September, 1936

NEGROES: WORKING AND JOBLESS, J. S. Himes, Jr., Survey. August 15, 1936.

RELIEF BENEFITS OF RURAL NEGROES IN EASTERN AND WESTERN COTTON AREAS, Monthly Labor Review, February 1936.

SOUTHERN FARM TENANCY: WAY OUT OF ITS EVILS, E. E. Embree, Survey, March 1936.

SURVEY GRAPHIC, March 1925.

* * *

Booklets

AMERICA'S TENTH MAN, Robert B. Eleazer, Conference on Education and Race Relations, 20¢ per dozen, $1.50 per hundred.

A brief survey of the Negro's part in American History.

COTTON-GROWING COMMUNITIES, a 43 page booklet on cotton-growing communities in rural Alabama.

COTTON PICKER, THE: FRIEND OR FRANKENSTEIN, Common Sense, 315 Fourth Avenue, New York City. 25¢

Problems of the New Rust cotton picking machine, and their thrilling solution.

DEMOCRACY AND THE NEGRO, Marion Cuthbert, Social Action, September, 1936. 10¢

EVERY TENTH PUPIL, Edwin R. Embree, Julius Rosenwald Fund, 16 pages, free.

GLIMPSES OF NEGRO AMERICANS, 6¢ a copy, $4.00 a hundred, $30.00, a thousand.

A 24 page booklet, attractively illustrated, giving in concise and interesting form facts about eight areas of Negro life today.

METHODS OF ACHIEVING RACIAL JUSTICE, Rachel Davis DuBois and Rosie Nelson, Service Bureau for Education in Human Relations, 1936. 25¢

A study outline for church leaders. Adaptable for use by other adult discussion groups.

NEGRO STEPS UP, THE, The Home Boards, 1936. 12 pages. Free.

PLIGHT OF THE SHARECROPPER, Norman Thomas. 1934. 34 pages.

REVOLT AMONG THE SHARECROPPERS, Howard Kester. Covici-Friede, 1936.

SHAME OF SCOTTSBORO, Scottsboro Defense Committee, 112 East 19th Street, New York, 1936, 5¢ per copy.

SCHOOL MONEY IN BLACK AND WHITE, Julius Rosenwald Foundation, 490 Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Free.

STRUGGLE FOR CIVIL LIBERTY ON THE LAND, American Civil Liberties Union, 31 Union Square, New York, 1935. 48 pages. 10¢

TRUE FREEDOM FOR NEGRO AND WHITE WORKERS, F. R. Crosswaith and A. B. Lewis, Negro News Service, 1936, 59 pages. 10¢

UP BY THE BOOTSTRAPS, Margueritte H. Bro, Reprint from Christian Century, 75¢ per hundred, single copies free.

WILL THE CHURCH DEMAND RACIAL JUSTICE, Hubert Herring and others.

WISDOM, MODERATION AND JUSTICE: THE CASE OF ANGELO HERNDON, Joint Committee to Aid the Herndon Defense, 112 East 19th Street, New York, 1935, 2¢ per copy.

* * * *

PROGRAMS AND AGENCIES

Programs

AMERICAN NEGRO CHILD AT WORK AND PLAY, M. I. Whepley and others. 1936. 20 pages. Department of World Fellowship, Congregational Educational Society. A five session unit for primary groups. 10¢

COURSE FOR ADULTS ON THE NEGRO, A. M. B. DeBardelenben.

I, TOO, AM AMERICA, Janet Seville. Reprinted from Presbyterian Tribune. 2 pages. Council for Social Action. Single copies free.

NEGRO FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS, Beth Torrey. 1936. 25 pages. 10¢ Department of World Fellowship. Congregational Education Society. A five session unit for junior groups.

PROGRAM ON RACE RELATIONS, A, Mrs. H. O. Hatcher. Mimeographed. President's Exchange. 3 pages. Free.

RACE RELATIONS SUNDAY, Laura E. Aspinwall, The Department of Race Relations, The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. 6 pages.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COURSE ON THE NEGRO, Ina Brown.

The above booklets and materials may be secured through any of the following services.

Agencies

Civil Liberties Union, 31 Union Square, New York City, N. Y.

Commission on Interracial Cooperation, 703 Standard Building, Atlanta, Georgia.

Conference on Education and Race Relations, 710 Standard Building, Atlanta, Georgia.

Council For Social Action, 289 Fourth Avenue, New York City, New York.

The Department of Race Relations, The Federal Council of Churches, 105 East 22nd Street, New York.

Foreign Language Information Service, 222 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

Indian Rights Association, 995 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

National Conference of Jews and Christians, 289 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations, 600 Lexington Avenue, New York City, New York.

National Negro Congress, 717 Florida Avenue, Washington, D. C.

National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York City, New York.

Office of Indian Affairs, U. S. Department of Interior, Washington, D. C.

Publication Department, The Progressive Education Association, 310 W. 90th Street, New York.

Social Relations Departments of many denominational groups.

SOCIAL PROBLEMS UNIT

NEGRO ADULT EDUCATION PROGRAM

ROOM FIVE

COUNTY COURT HOUSE

HACKENSACK, NEW JERSEY

ALABAMA "The Citizens' Councils of Alabama"

A very strong Citizens' Council movement headed by State Senator Sam Engelhardt, Jr., of Shorter, Alabama. Headquarters are in Montgomery. The group claims some 80,000 members and the claim is probably accurate. A second group, the North Alabama Citizens' Council is largely discredited though its leader, Asa Carter, remains active throughout the South.

ARKANSAS "The Citizens' Councils of Arkansas"

Originally a weak movement, this group has shown considerable growth during past year. Councils of the state are led by James D. Johnson of Crossett with considerable help of Curt Copeland of Hot Springs. Membership claims run high though 20,000 is probably the maximum realistic figure. Group is not all-powerful in state but is very capable of doing considerable damage in localities where integration might be considered.

GEORGIA "The States' Rights Council of Georgia, Inc."

This group has offices in downtown Atlanta with William T. Bodenhamer as Executive Director. Bodenhamer is a Baptist Minister, a State Legislator and formerly school principal and superintendent and president of a Junior College. Has support of the Governor and Senator-elect Herman Talmadge. Is strongly backed by one of its founders, Roy V. Harris of Augusta. No membership claims have been made and estimates are difficult. However efforts at membership drives have not been conspicuously successful and the group probably has a very small official membership.

LOUISIANA "The Association of Citizens' Councils of La."

President is State Senator William Rainach of Summerfield. Headquarters are in Homer. Group claims to prefer the "quiet and legal approach." Membership is difficult to determine. The New Orleans Citizens' Councils claim a membership in excess of 50,000 though that figure is probably a maximum for the state. A second group, "The Southern Gentlemen" of Baton Rouge is active though of small membership and little influence.

MISSISSIPPI "Association of Citizens' Councils of Mississippi"

Administrative offices of this group are in Jackson. Executive Secretary is R. B. Patterson, the man given credit for forming the first Citizens' Council in the South. Current membership is approximately 80,000. This is the fountainhead of the Council movement in the South and it is significant that the temporary office of the "Citizens Councils of America" are located in the Jackson Mississippi Council office. The group has a thorough hold on the state and will be of considerable influence for years to come.

NORTH CAROLINA "The Patriots of North Carolina, Inc."

Headed by Dr. W. C. George, professor at the University of North Carolina Medical School. Group has some strength and a membership estimated at 20,000, though it has significant opposition in the state. It may be significant that during the past 12 months the state legislature and the general atmosphere of the state have been very much akin to the mood which the Patriots have sought to create.

SOUTH CAROLINA "The Association of Citizens' Councils of South Carolina"

A moderately strong group with headquarters in Charleston. S. Emery Rogers of Summerton is Executive Secretary and an active leader. Current membership is probably in excess of 30,000. The group is powerful but not accepted by many people in the state, partially as a result of disagreement with the methods of the group and partially because the movement is thoroughly involved in politics. The group is best known for economic reprisals against any opposition.

TENNESSEE

There are several active resistance groups in Tennessee. The Tennessee Society to Maintain Segregation is located in Chattanooga and receives support from several local citizens of wealth and influence. The Tennessee Federation for Constitutional Government is headed by Donald Davidson, well known writer and professor at Vanderbilt University, Nashville. The Citizens Councils of Tennessee have their headquarters in Memphis and draw their greatest strength from that area. None of these groups have a large membership but all have been active and influential in such areas as Clinton.

TEXAS

Texas too has several resistance groups of which the Citizens' Councils is the strongest. Dr. D. E. Masters is Chairman of the Association. The group was especially active in supporting the pro-segregation referendum of the election of July 28th, in the state Democratic party primary. Membership claims run around 20,000.

VIRGINIA

Virginia has a number of small, and largely ineffective, resistance groups of which The Defenders of State Sovereignty and Individual Liberty, headed by W. E. Maxey Jr. of Richmond is probably the strongest. This group claims some 15,000 members in 37 chapters. The Ace Carter faction of the Citizens' Councils have been organized under John Kasper of Washington, D.C., as a unit of the "Seaboard White Citizens' Council." Group has little membership but has been outspoken and gotten considerable publicity.

Resistance Groups and Minorities other than the Negro

Both Catholics and Jews have been subjected to attack from the various resistance groups. This is especially true of the half-hidden anti-Semitism which one finds in typical hate literature. However, these two groups have received little attention since the Southern Resistance movement is concerned primarily with the Negro and integration. The most damaging effect to these minorities comes through the creation of a general atmosphere of prejudice.

Suffice it to say that prejudice directed toward any minority group or minority opinion has no course other than to affect all minorities. By and large an analysis of current resistance group activity indicates that prejudice is built on a refusal to recognize human differences whether physical or spiritual. Any campaign to maintain and propagate such prejudice will inevitably reach into all areas of human contact and such campaigns, regardless of the immediate subject matter, must be considered dangerous if prejudice itself is so concerned.

Resistance Groups and Anti-Labor Activity

Considerable opposition has been directed to the national unions and individual national leaders, especially Walter Reuther of the UAW. Many of the leaders of the various resistance groups have a public anti-labor record. Two movements have been started either from these groups or with their strong support. The Southern Federation of Labor was organized in Birmingham as an answer to the national unions in opposing integration. This movement has been largely unsuccessful. A second group has been formed in Tennessee, the Southern States Conference of Union People headed by Arthur A. Canada, chairman of the Tennessee Society to Maintain Segregation. This group seems well financed but has only been in operation for several months.

By and large the interests of resistance groups are in direct opposition to the interests and welfare of organized labor and it is only logical to find that resistance groups express this opposition in their programs.

An Application For Membership

—IN THE—

STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY

J. B. STONER, Archleader (in full, unlimited Authority)

To the Archleader of the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY:

I, the undersigned, being a true and loyal White, Gentile, Anti-Jewish Resident of North America, do most respectfully and honestly request you to grant me membership in the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY. I am of good character, temperate habits, honest, sound of mind, and recognize the fact that the Lord Jesus Christ is truly the Son of God. I shall always respect your right to expel me from membership at any time you choose. I shall always recognize your Authority over and within the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY as being full and unlimited.

I gladly agree to support fully, and without any reserve whatsoever, your full and unlimited Authority over and within the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY, because I know that there must be unity, and peace and harmony within ANTI-JEWISH ranks, if North America is to be freed from Jewish control. I recognize and agree to the fact that all Authority within the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY emanates from you; and, that you can always withdraw Authority, where given, at any time you choose. Insofar as affairs of the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY are concerned, you have the full and unrestricted right to do and to un-do, to give orders and to rescind orders. So long as I remain a member of the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY, I shall comply with your Authority and orders.

I, hereby, renounce any and all political allegiance to any and all other political parties and persons, and henceforth, give my full political support to you, so long as I remain a member of this Party. After your death, or if you ever resign from your position as Archleader, the same political support that I owe you shall be freely and automatically given to your legitimate Successor, and after his death or resignation, to his legitimate Successor, and on down the line, however you provide, so long as I maintain my membership in this Party. If ever, at any time, I become unwilling to support you, I shall promptly and unhesitatingly resign from the Party by sending you a written resignation which will become effective at the very moment it reaches you, unless it specifies a later date, so that unity and peace and harmony may continue to prevail within the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY. I know that the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY does not want any members that are not in accord with it. If ever I resign from the Party, as provided above, I shall no longer owe you any political support whatsoever. So long as I remain a member of the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY, I shall fully and fanatically support and follow you.

If ever I am entrusted with, or happen to learn, any secret or secrets of the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY, I will never betray such, even if I leave the Party. If ever I resign from the Party, I shall honestly return any and all of its property and/or funds that may have been entrusted to me. I shall always be honest with the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY.

I agree to vote for and support any and all candidates of the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY that run for or seek public office. I agree to make it a policy to vote in every general election—insofar as I am able—and to vote for the candidates of the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY, so long as I remain a member of the Party. I will also encourage my Anti-Jewish friends and neighbors to vote for the Party's candidates; in fact, I will even assist them to the polls. At every election in which candidates of the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY are involved, I will fanatically strive to see to it that at least 50 non-members go to the polls and vote for the candidates of the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY. I will do more than my part.

I assure you that I shall never believe Jewish or Jewish-inspired lies that are directed against you and/or the Party. Lying Jew-controlled newspapers will never deceive me; I will always believe you in preference to them or anybody like them.

I recognize the fact that Christianity is the one and only true religion, and that all other so-called religions are false. I believe in always putting America First. I believe in upholding the Constitution of the U. S. A. I believe in ANTI-JEWISM and my viewpoint is always ANTI-JEWISH. I believe that no Jews whatever should be allowed to live in North America. I believe that North America is rightfully for White Gentiles only, and for White Gentiles that are Christians in particular. I shall gladly support your policy to end the Jew menace in a strictly legal way. I believe that ANTI-JEWISM is a leading Christian virtue and an essential American virtue. The Jews must be destroyed—legally, of course—for the good of Christianity and America; but, I do hope that God will have mercy upon their souls. I know that ANTI-JEWISM is invincible, irreproachable, irrepressible, and positively irresistible. ANTI-JEWISM cannot be stopped. ANTI-JEWISM is Christian and American. ANTI-JEWISM serves God and Country.

I shall follow and support you in the fight against the Jews with a fanatical Christian zeal that will make men marvel, and with a patriotic American fanaticism that, with the blessings of God, shall free North America from Jewism. Henceforth, I shall use the Christian battle-cry and greeting of "Down with the Jews!"

Upon my honor, I assure you that I speak the truth in this Application. I sincerely hope that it will please you to grant me membership in the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY. May the Jew-devils soon perish. Down with the Jews!

Signed _____

Residence Address _____

Business Address _____ City & State _____

Occupation _____ Date _____ Phone _____

+ NOTE—IT TAKES MONEY TO FIGHT JEWS. DONATIONS TO THE PARTY ARE NEEDED AND APPRECIATED.

ADDRESS STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY, ROUTE 3, CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE

STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY

§

FREE AMERICA FROM THE JEWS!

The STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY is a political Party whose main purpose is to serve CHRISTIANITY and AMERICA by obtaining enactment of proper laws or Constitutional Amendments making it unlawful and impossible for Jews to live in North America. The Jews hate CHRISTIANITY and AMERICA and are nefariously working to destroy both. The Jews are too evil to be allowed to live. A law or a Constitutional Amentment must be enacted making it a criminal offense to be a Jew, punishable by death. The STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY proposes to obtain its objectives by spreading the TRUTH, and by electing the proper Anti-Jewish men to public office, and, thereby, obtaining enactment of the proper laws. When you go to the polls, always vote for the candidates of this Party. The STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY insists that its entire program be accomplished in a strictly legal way. The Satanic Jews must be put to death in accordance with irresistible laws that command such.

DOWN WITH THE JEWS!

The STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY believes in ANTI-JEWISM. ANTI-JEWISM is a leading Christian virtue and a leading American virtue. All Jewish influence in North America must be eliminated. The Jews are the worst enemies of CHRISTIANITY and AMERICA. The STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY demands an end to everything Jewish, so as to clear the way for CHRISTIANITY and AMERICA. ANTI-JEWISM is irresistible!

DOWN WITH THE JEWS!

The Jews, those vipers of hell, control and oppress our beloved AMERICA. The Jew-devils control the Public Press, with few exceptions, as well as the radio and the motion picture industries. The Jews even control newspapers that are allegedly owned by non-Jews because, due to Jew methods, Jew control does not depend upon actual ownership. As a result of such, we Americans are continually subjected to lying Jew propaganda.

DOWN WITH THE JEWS!

The Jews have such a strong control over our Government that they are able to persecute and imprison Americans for being true and loyal to our AMERICA, and to persecute and imprison Christians for being true and faithful to our Lord, Master, and Saviour, Jesus Christ, the Son of God. AMERICA must be freed from the Jewish yoke. AMERICA rightfully belongs to us Americans, not to the Jew-devils.

DOWN WITH THE JEWS!

The Jews constitute a foreign invader within our midst. They intend to completely enslave us Americans. One of their main weapons against us is Communism. Communism is a Jew idea; it was started by Jews; and, it has always been promoted by Jews. Communism is Jewish. Without the Jews, Communism would cease to be a threat. Communism is one of the principal means by which the Jews intend to destroy CHRISTIANITY and AMERICA, and set up a Jew-communist world dictatorship over us. The Jew-devils must be destroyed. If our great and beloved AMERICA is to live, Jewry must die. The Jewish race must cease to exist.

DOWN WITH THE JEWS!

The STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY believes in CHRISTIANITY - AMERICA First - upholding the Constitution of the U. S. A. - freedom of Speech and Press - separation of Church and State - large Old Age pensions - High Wages, Mass Production, and Fair Profits - a much Higher Standard of Living for the American Farmer - White Supremacy - North America for White Gentiles only - resettlement of all niggers in North America back in Africa with better living conditions for them in Africa than here - resettlement of all Orientals in the Orient - an end to the Jewish Institution of divorce - and an end to Jewish Internationalism.

DOWN WITH THE JEWS!

Men and women, Protestants and Catholics, native-born and foreign-born Americans, young and old are all invited to apply for membership in the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY, insofar as they are eligible. All of us real Americans must join together to free our glorious and dearly beloved AMERICA from the evil Jews. May the Jew-devils soon perish. If you are a White, Gentile, Anti-Jewish, Christian American, and honestly desire to do your part for CHRISTIANITY and AMERICA by joining the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY, sign your name below, enclose this in an envelope, and mail it to the STONER ANTI-JEWISH PARTY—Route 3—Chattanooga, Tennessee. Information will then be sent to you explaining how to apply for membership. Tomorrow may be too late. ACT TODAY!

NAME_____ CITY_____

ADDRESS_____ STATE_____

‡ Regardless of whether or not you join the Party, you should read THE GOSPEL OF JESUS CHRIST Versus THE JEWS, Christianity's Attitude Toward The Jews As Explained From The Holy Bible, a book published by the Party. It is a book that proves from the Holy Bible that the Jews are not God's chosen people; but, that instead, we Christians are God's chosen people. The Jews are the children of the devil, vipers, poisonous snakes, serpents, world's chief liars, and the leading murderers. The Jews comprise the synagogue of Satan. Those people that are persuaded to agree with the Jews and to side with them are two-fold more the children of hell than the Jews themselves. The wrath of God is come upon the Jews to the uttermost! The Jew-devils are due to perish. It is the duty of the rulers and governments of the world to destroy the Jews. Read this book that tells the truth about what the Holy Bible actually says about the Jews. Price $2.00 per copy.

DOWN WITH THE JEWS!

MURRAY'S HISTORICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL ENCYCLOPEDIA

OF THE COLORED RACE THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

ITS PROGRESS AND ACHIEVEMENTS FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD DOWN TO THE PRESENT TIME

EMBRACING

25,000 biographical sketches of men and women of the colored race in every age. A bibliography of over 6,000 titles of books and pamphlets, which represent their contribution to the world's literature. A synoptical list of all books of fiction by Caucasian authors that deal with the race question as a feature. Also a list of nearly 5,000 Musical Compositions by Colored Composers in every part of the World.

DANIEL MURRAY, Editor in Chief

(~~Forty-one~~ years in the Library of Congress)

37

ASSISTED BY A CORPS OF THIRTY ASSISTANT EDITORS, INCLUDING

JOHN E. BRUCE, ARTHUR A SCHOMBURG, WM. C. BOLIVAR, REV. J. M. BODDY. JOHN W. CROMWELL, L. M. HERSHAW, S. ROUZIER (HAITI), JAS. CARMICHAEL SMITH (SIERRA LEONE), CHARLES ALEXANDER, STANSBURY BOYCE, G. J. F. MADIOU (HAITI), BISHOP J. ALBERT JOHNSON (SOUTH AFRICA), W. S. SCARBOROUGH, R. R. WRIGHT, JR., HON. G. W. GIBSON (LIBERIA).

Unpublished,

IN SIX VOLUMES

~~Per Set, $24.00~~

open for inspection and test

Kept up to date by Mrs Rachel Murray, 937 T S, N.W.

~~1912~~

WORLD'S CYCLOPEDIA COMPANY

CHICAGO WASHINGTON

THE EGYPTIANS, i. e., ETHIOPIANS, INVENTED THE ALPHABET

It will be recalled by those who keep abreast with current events, that in the famous discussion of the " Negro Question " between Senators J. R. Burton, of Kansas, and Benjamin R. Tillman of South Carolina, in their celebrated debate before the Western Chautauquas, it was asserted by Senator Burton, " That the world was indebted to the ancestors of the Negro for the alphabet, the very foundation of present-day civilization. " It may be stated that no assertion by Senator Burton made during the acrimonious debate was so bitterly challenged by Senator Tillman and the press of his section, as the one crediting the ancestors of the Negro with the alphabet. It was admitted on both sides that if Senator Burton was correct, the whole fabric of argument upon which has been built the theory denying the Negro's intellectual equality, must fall to the ground, and it would only be a confession of ignorance upon the part of a speaker or writer to attempt to further maintain it. In view of the above, the following is regarded as very important.

THE ORIGIN OF THE ALPHABET.

It must be admitted by all, sufficiently informed to speak on this subject, that Egypt and Babylonia were the two greatest nations of remote antiquity, and that the progressive character of the Egyptians renders the claim for them of having invented the alphabet not improbable. In the 2nd volume of " The Historians' History of the World," page 347, it is stated that the tradition and belief of many scholars, that the Phœnicians invented the alphabet, is unsustained. It is therein asserted that the Phœnicians as commercial traders brought it to the Greeks, having first obtained it from the Egyptians. That there is little to justify the prevalent idea as to the Phœnicians inventing it. It may be asked " Why was not this brought forward before? " The explanation is given in a note on page 368 of the " Historians' History of the World," wherein it is shown that Viscount de Rouge, who in 1854 sent to the French Academy the result of his research on the origin of the alphabet, in which the credit is given to the Egyptians and which is now accepted by nearly all scholars, never got his paper published until 1874, the original sent in by him twenty years earlier, it is said, was accidently (?) destroyed.

The following is from Volume 2, page 347, " The Historians' History of the World ":

" As to the exact origin of the alphabet, modern scholars are still somewhat in doubt.[1] The Greeks themselves ascribe its origin to the Egyptians, believing that the Phœnicians had adopted a modified alphabet from the hieroglyphics. There were others, however, among the ancients who ascribed the origin of the Phœnician alphabet not to Egypt, but to Babylonia and curiously enough this discrepancy amongst ancient authorities is exactly matched by the discordant opinions of the scholarship of our own day. It is admitted on all hands that the Phœnicians did not themselves invent their alphabet. But whether the foundation upon which they built it was the hieroglyphic or hieratic spirit of the Egyptians, or the elaborate cuneiform syllabary of Mesopotamia, is not even now clearly established.

The theory of Egyptian origin found about the middle of the 19th Century an able and strenuous advocate in the person of Viscount de Rouge, who elaborated the theory which specifically accounted, or attempted to account for the different letters of the Phœnician alphabet, as to Egyptian origin. He based his comparisons not upon the hieroglyphics, but on the modified forms of the hieratic script, believing with good reason that the Phœnicians obtained their alphabet at a very early date, — perhaps something like 2,000 B. C. He logically confined his analysis to an observation of the oldest specimens of the hieratic writings that were accessable, in particular using the Prisse Papyrus, which, as good fortune would have it, chanced to be written in a very clear, bold hand. This hieratic script, as is well known, follows the hieroglyphics themselves in using at once an alphabet, a syllabary, and a modified form of ideographs. It is one of the most curious facts in the history of human evolution that the Egyptians having advanced through the various stages of mental growth necessary to the evolution of an alphabet, should have retained the antique forms of picture writing and of syllabic representations of sounds after they had made the final anylsis which gave them the actual alphabet, and that to the very last they should have used a jumble of the various forms of representation in all their writings.[2] The feat of the Phœnicians, according to the theory of de Rouge, was to select from the Egyptian characters those that were purely, or almost purely, alphabetic in character, and recognizing that these alone were sufficient, to reject all the rest. Simple as such a selection seems when viewed from the standpoint of later knowledge, it really must have required the imagination of the most brilliant genius to effect it.

The theory of de Rouge was so ably supported through comparison of the most ancient known in-

[1] This more especially related to a similar announcement in 1821, by Champollion overthrowing the old legend of Cadmus and the Alphabet, but before his death Champollion made good his claim for the Egyptians and deRouge took up his work and confirmed it.

[2] It is not more surprising than the fact that the great English scholar Dr. Thomas Young should work for twelve years in an effort to discover the key to the trilingual inscriptions on the Rosetta Stone, and abandon the further effort, ignorant of the fact that he had really discovered the key.

scriptions of the Phœnicians with the hieratic alphabet of the Egyptians that it was almost at once accepted by a large number of scholars, and for many years was pretty generally regarded as having solved the old-time puzzle of the origin of the Phœnician alphabet. More recently, however, the theory of de Rouge has been called in question and the old theory of Pliny, which ascribed the origin of the alphabet to the Babylonian script rather than the Egyptians, has been revived by modern archeologists. Professor Deecke attempted to derive the Phœnician alphabet from the later Assyrian. This attempt, however, has been characterized as refuting itself in the very expression, for it can hardly be in question that the Phœnician alphabet was in use long before the later Assyrian came into existence. A more logical attempt, however, has been made to draw a comparison between the Phœnician and the ancient Accadian, which was the classical speech of Mesopotamia and the model on which the later Assyrian itself was based. This theory, first suggested, perhaps, by Prof. Wuttke, found an able advocate in Dr. J. P. Peters, and more recently has been sanctioned by the high authority of Prof. Hommel. Their opinions, on the other hand, have been ardently combatted by the advocates of the theory of de Rouge, and the subject is as yet too obscure and the data are too few for a final decision."

TESTIMONY OF THE ROSETTA STONE.

If a solitary doubt in the mind of an unprejudiced scholar remain touching the right of the ancestors of the African race to be credited with the origin of the alphabet, after reading the foregoing, it should be removed by reading the story of the "Rosetta Stone" found at page 1, of Volume 1, "Great events by famous historians," a work published in 1905 in 16 volumes through the cooperation of English and American scholars.

Probably no more interesting chapter in history can be found, so far as the colored man is concerned, than the one detailing the finding in 1799, while Napoleon's soldiers were erecting a fort in Egypt, of the "Rosetta Stone" and the efforts of the scholars of the world to read the inscriptions. After years of effort the key was at last discovered by Dr. Thomas Young, of England, in 1818, but he did not unlock the door. That was reserved for Jean Francois Champollion, a Frenchman, who in 1822, deciphered the hieroglyphics of the Egyptians, thus unlocking the enigma of the Sphinx and thus the vast secrets held by the monuments of Egypt for centuries were disclosed to the world. Champollion proved by irrefragable testimony, that the Egyptians developed the alphabet as we now have it, minus the additions since the 3rd century, and this alphabet of twenty letters they originated centuries before the Phœnicians were heard of. It is true they neglected the vowels, as did the early Semetic alphabet, but that in no wise lessens their claim. Champollion's work at his death was taken up by Viscount de Rouge, whose testimony we have already given. Beginning in 1834, he labored for twenty years to establish the truth of history and vindicate the claim of the Egyptians. The mysterious disappearance of his MSS. after the French Academy had decided to print the same in 1854, seems singular and highly suggestive. It, however, saw the light in 1874.

ETHIOPIC LITERATURE.

It will surprise many to learn through investigation the extent of Ethiopic Literature. It is true that the oldest monuments of the Ethiopic language does not extend beyond the first centuries of the Christian era, but the bud was in evidence and later bloomed. An Ethiopic literature of great importance came into existence after the introduction of Christianity into Abyssinia, in the fourth century, predominantly, however, of a religious character, its use being chiefly seen in the translations of both the Old and New Testament and all the apocryphal and semi-biblical books of that period, the translations following the Great Versions. There has been found at times much other literature of Ethiopic origin, which consist of translations of Greek and even Coptic works, also many Arabic books. Theological and religious works such as collections of old Canons, homilies, exegetical and dogmatical writings, particularly, those of Cyril, Epiphanius, Chrysostom and the Fathers of the Monophysitic Church. Lectionaries for the year, particularly, the Fast at Passion Time, horologia, liturgies, etc. There were also writings by Joseph Ben Gorion, George Ben Amid, Abushaker and others in sacred and profane history and chronology, together with works relating to philosophy and natural sciences. Among the Ethopic works thus spoken of must be listed many Abyssinian treatises of dogmatic character, prayer books, formulas for meditation, eulogies, biographies of Saints, Martyrs, Monks, many of these emenations arising from the Monkish delight in miracles. Besides these, there were also large works on native history and annals of the various Kings (from which James Bruce in the 2nd Volume of his travels has given us extracts) the same being a mixture of Geez and Ethiopic-Amharic. Much was also written during this early period on medicine, witchcraft, exorcism and divination by superstition, either in Ethiopic-Amharic or Amharic alone. Hymns, lyrical poems, such as were available for the uses of the church, seem to have been in most favor. Of real poetic genius exhibited in books, etc., in the Ethiopian language, there are but little evidence, but that the germ was there is proved by the later evolution and development of Higiemonte, Francis Williams, Job Ben Soliman, Phillis Wheatley and others of pure Ethiopic origin. This literature is very fully represented in manuscripts in all the large libraries in Europe, especially in Rome, Paris, Oxford, Tubingen, Vienna, Frankfort-on-the-Main, London and Berlin. Since the Abyssinian War of 1868, when England overthrew King Theodore, the collection of the British Museum has become the largest in Europe. Catalogues have been published of these MSS. the latest in London in 1870.

CRETE-A-PIERROT. (Fort). A wonderful exhibition of the Negro's valor as a soldier.

This world-famed fortification that halted for two weeks and baffled an army corps under Lieut. Gen'l. Leclerc of the French Army in 1802, must ever stand as an exhibition of the marvellous soldierly qualities of colored troops in action. The fort itself has little claim to distinction. It was constructed about 1792, by two colored engineers, Laplaine Sterling and Louis Guy, Sr., to aid in the defence of the region largely occupied by people of color, against the infamous Augustine and M. Borel, and their maurauding band of salt miners. The fort was situated on the right bank of the river l' Artibonite, which is an important Haitien stream, and southeast of Petite-Rivière. Here the two mulatto engineer officers, highly rated as such by General Rigaud, both of whom had been educated in France, constructed a fort, which during two weeks baffled the ablest engineers in Napoleon's army to reduce. From March 9th to March 24, 1802, it was the scene of battle conflict that has scarcely a parallel in the military annals of modern times. Twice before it had proved its great strength. In 1794-5, Major Chris. Morney and Captain Blanc Casenave, two colored officers under Toussaint, used it victoriously against the English and Spanish invaders seeking to possess San Domingo. In the defence they were aided, it is true, by many pro-slavery colonists who hoped to continue the slave system, notwithstanding the two French commissioners, Sonthonax and Polverel, had by proclamation, August 29, 1793, declared all slaves enrolled under them emancipated. In February, 1802, following the landing of Leclerc's army, General Dessalines occupied the place with 1,300 men, and set in place about a dozen cannon on its ramparts, and in other ways prepared to obstruct Leclerc's march into the interior. March 1st Dessalines took 400 of the men and posted them on a pass in the mountains, leaving Generals Lamartinière and Magny, to hold the fort at all hazards. The first named assumed command of the 900 men remaining and during the following fifteen days held at bay the entire French army approximating 20,000 men. Gen. Lamartinière at the time was but 28 years of age, but had been educated as a soldier in the best military schools of France. He was loyally supported by his men, not one of whom proposed surrender, though surrounded by an overwhelming force. To break down the stubborn defence of the black soldiers in Crêté-a-Pierrot, Generals Boudet, Hardy, Debelle and Rochambeau, each led in succession an attacking column of five or six thousand men, but to no purpose. Then General Pamphile de Lacroix and lastly the General in Chief Leclerc, directed the attack, but all were in turn baffled. The fort was of rectangular form and in military engineering, known as a Redan, with one hundred feet in each length. A large moat, very deep, surrounded the fort and rendered storming extremely difficult and hazardous. Lamartinière's provisions were soon exhausted and the men compelled to subsist on dogs, cats and horse flesh, but none were favorable to surrender, though the garrison was summoned several times. In the night of the 24th of March 1802, General Lamartinière decided to cut his way out, having killed in the ranks of the French, more than 2,000 men, twice as many as his entire command. In this courageous attempt he was successful; indeed, it is said, the French were willing to let him go.

The seige by Toussaint's army against Jacmel in 1799 and its heroic defence by officers and men of color, is also entitled to the world's admiration. The same may be said in a larger degree, of General Jean Louis Villatte, a man of color, whose marvellous and resourceful defence of Cape Francais from September, 1795, to March, 1796, against the combined naval and land forces of England and Spain, is only equalled in modern military annals by General Elliot's defence of Gibraltar in 1704. The aspect of the place in no wise indicates the great engineering skill displayed in its construction by Sterling and Guy. The visitor on beholding Crêté-a-Pierrot, is at a loss to understand, why the small fort there should be so famous, and is moved to profound astonishment when told that an European army, 20,000 strong composed of Napoleon's veterans of the Egyptian Campaign, soldiers who had successfully withstood on many a field the shock of battle, when arrayed against the world's best fighting men, had been halted and held two weeks before that fort manned by 900 black soldiers, and that four divisions of Leclerc's army, led by famed commanders were compelled to submit to a repulse. Gen. Lacroix in 1819 wrote a history of the French expedition to San Domingo, and at pages 158-170 tells of Lamartinière's defence of Crêté-a-Pierrot, which he characterized as unparallelled in modern military annals. He says, General Leclerc was so chagrined over the matter that he feared to tell Napoleon the truth, but made, instead, a false report. There is no English account save what is here given and in connection with a sketch of General Lamartinière (which see). The fullest account will be found in Madiou's " Histoire d'Haiti," tom 2, p. 205 et seq. Fuller than Lacroix's sketch. And there, in the space of 15 days, " Crêté-a-Pierrot " became a historic name, with thousands of echoes to reverberate it as long as the grim story of the siege and its horrors shall find an interested listener. Years after, the French veterans sitting around the campfires, listening to the stories of fierce battles, and as evidence of the superiority of their own experience, ever and anon someone would arise and proudly exclaim, " I was at Crêté-a-Pierrot."

It is stated that learning of the approach early in March, 1802, of General Leclerc's forces, General Dessalines, then in Fort Crêté-a-Pierrot, seated himself near the powder magazine and taking a torch asked, "Who with me will guard this place? Those willing to be slaves to the French, leave now, and those remain, who like me, intend to die free men." Not one left. "We will all die for liberty!" they cried. "If the French enter that gate," said Dessalines, "I will fire the magazine." These brave words no doubt stimulated the men in their determined defence. And though Dessalines had then, when the fight begun, left the fort to prepare a cover for retreat if necessary, the spirit of his words and example was still there.

MILBURN, RICHARD. i. e., "Dick Milburn, composer of 'Listen to the Mocking bird.'"

It has long been observed that the African possessed certain musical traits of a high order, and that with proper training he was destined to reach a commanding place in the musical world. This opinion is amply sustained by the career of Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, who by his genius attained in 1907, to the highest honors accorded a musician. And to-day, he is spoken of and his music played throughout Europe and America. As great and musically prominent as Mr. Coleridge-Taylor is to-day, the same was accorded to George A. P. Bridgetower, also a colored man, and in honor of whom Beethoven dedicated his famous musical composition, known as the "Kreutzer Sonata." Then there was the Chevalier Georges, the companion about 1776–1793 of kings, queens, princes and the European nobility generally. Richard Milburn, author of "Listen to the Mocking bird," lacked the scientific training of the aforementioned, but had musical taste. In the work of establishing the authorship of this once popular song, happily we are able by reference to the minutes of the Phil. Library Company, an organization of colored men that met at stated periods in the lecture room of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, to fix the same beyond doubt as belonging to Richard Milburn. Dick Milburn, as he was familiarly called, had the faculty of whistling to an extraordinary extent, while at the same time he was sufficiently skilled as a performer, to accompany himself on a guitar. He was a barber by profession, and in the leisure moments of his vocation turned his attention to imitating the birds and particularly the mocking bird. Some of the members of the Library Company, aware of his cleverness in this respect, induced Milburn to add to the interest of their meetings by an exhibition of his marvelous power. Those who have heard the celebrated Mrs. Shaw give an exhibition in whistling, which she did with great success in Europe and America, can form a correct estimate of what possibilities there are in that form of entertainment. The minutes of the Phil. Library Company noticing the presence and performances of Mr. Milburn at several of their meetings, attest beyond dispute the claim made in Milburn's behalf. It seems that Mr. Septimus Winner a skilled musician and publisher, induced Milburn to whistle it before him while he wrote down the bird-like notes. The song was afterwards published by Mr. Winner and during the years between 1855 to 1865, was the piece de resistance, of the minstrel companies and serenading parties. The following from the "Philadelphia Tribune," in January, 1908, is of interest:

The world, in general, has accepted the music of "Listen to the Mocking Bird," as the product of "Sep" Winner. This has been disputed; especially in these columns. Last week, our townsman, noted for his unerring instinct for finding rare tomes, and curios appertaining to colored people, came across a copy of "Listen to the Mocking Bird." It was published in Philadelphia in 1855, and in the frontispiece says: "Music by Richard Milburn, words by Alice Hawthorne." It was published by Septimus Winner, whose gift at lyrics was conceded, and who was musical beside. Because he was a prolific writer, the music of that song was attributed to him. Milburn was a native of this city, and worked in his father's barber shop, next door to "Lou" Cochran's tavern at 6th and Lombard streets. It was soon discovered that he was musical, playing the guitar, with a good singing voice, and with whistling skill beyond approach. This brought a large clientele, and made his place of employment one of the noted ones. His imitations of bird whistles, was indeed marvelous; and the members of the Philadelphis Library Company, alive to any attractions of a musical sort in conjunction with their literary efforts, heard of him, and secured his services along the lines just indicated. It was then that he evolved the air above noted. Being catchy, scores were humming and whistling it. Coming to the notice of Winner, he sent for Milburn, who played, sang and whistled the air, composed by him, and then Winner wrote down the notes. Milburn knew nothing of musical notation, but had an alert mind for composition. It spread all over the country, and Winner won fame, at the expense of another, and that a colored man. The mother of Milburn, Mrs. Matilda Moore, is still alive and resides with George Gorgas, 407 Fairmount Avenue. Our subject must have been built upon original lines, because his wife was a barber, and worked right along with him in his business. After his death, she plied the trade on Lombard street, north side, at what is now, opposite Starr Garden. The music, now in the possession of Mr. Adger, settles beyond cavil the authorship of that bit of melody. Fourteen years prior to the advent of Milburn, there was a member of Frank Johnson's great band, Henry Williams, by name, who wrote a sentimental ballad, entitled "Loriette." The composer was a Bostonian, gifted as an instrumentalist, who had like several others come to our city. It had a large sale, and in its day outranked any other air in popularity. Another composer of no mean calibre in the era of Williams, was William Brady. His music, like that of Williams' and Milburn's, was published in this city. Brady's inclinings were of the religious, and although a voluminous writer, all of his efforts were of a sacred character. In the old Catholic Churches, his masses were constantly used. To Milburn belongs the credit and the mission of the chronicler fullfilled, in the facts just now noted.

THE SONG WRITER'S REWARD.

It is rather a striking fact that tropical jingles are frequent instruments of financial success, while ballads that live long yield scant returns to their authors. "After the Ball"—who ever sings it now? Yet it paid $36,000 in royalties to Charles K. Harris, and the same composer reaped richly from his "Two Little Girls in Blue." Paul Dresser got at least $30,000 from "On the Banks of the Wabash" and almost as much from "Just tell Them That You Saw Me." "Good-bye, Dolly Gray" brought $15,000 to Paul Barnes; "The Good Old Summer Time" was worth $10,000 to Evans and Shields, and so the list goes on.

On the other hand, Septimus Winner got but $35.00 for "Listen to the Mocking Bird," which still lives, and Stephen C. Foster, with his "Old Folks at Home," "Old Kentucky Home," "Come Where my Love Lies Dreaming," and other ballads undying, was at his topmost notch of prosperity at $1,500 a year. Benjamin Russell Hanby, never got a cent for "Nellie Gray," and did not know his song had been published till he heard it in a Cleveland concert hall.

Richard Milburn was born in Philadelphia, Penn., in 1837, near the corner of 8th and Race streets. For a time his mother was in the service of the celebrated Pierce Butler, a very eccentric resident of Philadelphia early in the 19th century. Butler was a director of the famous U. S. Bank, and died in Philadelphia in 1822. In a letter received from Mrs. Alice Gorgas (Oct. 7, 1908), a half sister, we have the information that Richard Milburn died early in the year, 1857, being then in his twentieth year.

PRÉZEAU, JEROME MAXIMILIEN SILVESTRE. Noted Haitiien scholar, author and statesman, under Christophe.

Was born May 28, 1782, at Port-au-Prince, Haiti, of mixed-blood parentage, and received a thorough education on military lines in France. He joined the ranks of the struggling freemen under Toussaint in 1798, and when the valliant Gabart was made a general, Prézeau became his military secretary. Following the death of Gen. Gabart, in 1805, Prezeau accepted a similar position with the Emperor Dessalines who was asasinated in 1806. In 1807, he joined the ranks of Gen. Christophe, who made him a colonel, and when in 1811, Christophe assumed a royal title and created a Kingdom, he selected Prezeau, because of his extraordinary scholarship to be the inspector of schools at Sans Souci, with the rank of Chevalier of the Order of St. Henry. Prezeau served the Emperor Dessalines faithfully up to his death, October 17, 1806, when with Martial Besse, Julien Prevost, Juste Chanlatte and other prominent mulattoes, he joined or sided with Christophe, and became one of his three royal secretaries, Baron Dupuy, and Baron Vastey being the others. In 1814, when Louis XVIII sought to extend again over San Domingo French jurisdiction, and sent three commissioners to negotiate terms for the same, Baron Vastey and the Chevalier Prezeau were selected by the Council of State to place before the world, Haiti's defence. In this behalf Prezeau wrote also three pamphlets, the titles of which are given in the Catalogue of the British Museum. In the case of Franco de Medina, one of the Commissioners, who had formerly served under Toussaint in the Spanish section and upon whom concealed papers were discovered authorizing him to encourage and foster internal strife and conflict in the island between the mulattoes and blacks, and for which he was tried as a spy, the preparation of the charge devolved on Mr. Prézeau. The judgement of the National Council on his case, was prepared and read to a vast concourse of Haitiens assembled in the Great Cathedral at the Cape, by Baron Prézeau. He also published about the same time the answer prepared by him to a letter from Dauxion Lavaysse, one of the Commissioners, to King Christophe, in which he excused the language used, on the ground that such was necessary for the understanding of the King, to whom it was first submitted. Following the suicide of Christophe, Prézeau and Baron Dupuy, concerted to protect his wife and daughters from insult and to screen his remains from violation by the mutinous troops. They decently buried his body in the Citadel Henry, at midnight, to better conceal its resting place. Mme. Christophe and daughters, he conducted to a small habitation called Lambert owned by her near the Cape. In 1822, he was given by Pres. Boyer, the command at Seibo, and in 1824 made aide de camp to Gen. Borgella, his cousin, at Santo Domingo City, and there he died July 28, 1825.

BRIDGETOWER, GEORGE AUG. POLEGREEN. World famed violinist of London, between 1790 and 1845.

That the man of color has been equal to his opportunities in every field of human endeavor, is fully attested by the many notable instances where they have reached the top of the ladder of fame in competition with the world's best. In a letter from London to the "New York Age" December, 1909, Mr. Clarence C. White, said: "No doubt it will be surprising to the readers of "The Age" to note, how conspicuously prominent the negro was in early European musical circles prior to 1804, since at that date Beethoven wrote, and published his now famous "Kreutzer Sonata," and dedicated it to his intimate friend, Bridgewater, the violinist.

Mr. White evidently had in mind, Geo. Aug. P. Bridgetower, a mulatto, to whom the Kreutzer Sonata of Beethoven, was dedicated, but because of a petty quarrel between them over a girl, Beethoven had the publisher substitute the name of Rudolph Kreutzer. This world-famous violinist, whose antecedents and birth are so like those of Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, the composer of "Hiawatha," was the son of an African father and European mother and was born at Biola, Poland, in 1779, and evincing some musical tendencies at an early age was given instruction in that art on the violin and soon developed such extraordinary talent as a violinist, that he appeared February 9, 1790, then only eleven years of age, at Drury Lane, where he played a violin solo between the parts of the " Messiah." His performance was of such high order of merit that it attracted the notice of H. R. H., the Prince of Wales, later George IV., who became his patron at a concert, he appearing along with a youth named Clement, equally celebrated in a similar specialty. He was so well received and popular favor so unmistakable indicated in his behalf, that the same year he played in the series known as the " Professional Concerts," London. He then became a pupil under Barthelemon, Giornovichi and Thomas Attwood, a well known master violinist, after which he was gazetted first violinist to the establishment of the Prince of Wales at Brighton. His reputation was now established and his name was constantly found among the famous performers at the Haydn, Salomon Concerts of 1791, and the equally high toned concerts of Barthelemon during 1792–1794, at which he played a concerto of Viotto's. At the London event of 1791, the Handel Commemoration, Bridgetower and Hummel sat on each side of Joah Bates at the organ, dressed in scarlet coats and pulled out the stops for him. In London, Bridgetower was generally known as the Abyssinian Prince, probably because of his color, he being a mulatto. In 1802, Bridgetower visited his mother then living in Dresden with a younger son, noted as a violin cellist. She died in 1807. While in Dresden he gave concerts on July 24, 1802, and March 18, 1803, and from there went to Vienna, where his reputation had preceded him and where he met with Beethoven and with whom he played that Master's Op. 47, known later as the " Kreutzer Sonata," played May 17th for the first time. It was at this concert he is said to have introduced an alteration of one passage in the world famed Sonata which so pleased Beethoven, that he jumped from his seat at the piano, threw his arms around Bridgetower and cried in an ecstacy of delight, " Once more, my dear fellow, once again." Pohl in his " Haydn in London " mentions Bridgetower in several places, as does Thayer, in his life of Beethoven, which, however, is in German. Czerny tell us that Bridgetower's gestures while playing were so extravagant and he so affected by the music, that few could resist laughing. He was married, but to whom or when we are unable to say, other than that be left a daughter living in Italy at the date of his death in England about 1845, as given by Grove in his " Dict. of Music, etc.," but now found to be incorrect. He was also a composer of note as is evidenced by the fact that the British Museum Catalogue gives the names of the pieces composed by him. The incident of the interpolated passages so graphically described as between Beethoven and Bridgetower, recalls Mozart the precocious musician. In the Sistine Chapel at Rome, in 1770 the choir is chanting the famous " Miserere " by Allegri, the copying of which was forbidden under heavy penalty. In a corner Mozart, then fourteen, listens and hears it twice and the next day accurately transcribes it and sings it at a concert to his own accompaniment on a harpischord. All Rome, including the Pope stands appalled. He is sent for and instead of punishment is encouraged for his wonderful gift of musical memory. Samuel Wesley in England, after a lapse of 25 years, reproduced an oratorio composed by him, of 300 pages, from memory. Von Bulow could give daily a new concert for a month from memory alone. The records of history tells of Milton's gift, of Lord Macauly, of Cyrus, who knew by name every soldier in his army, Michael Angelo, Galileo, of Themistocles, who could call by name all of the 20,000 citizens of Athens. Locke says, Pascal knew the whole Bible from memory. Leibnitz could recite word for word, all the poems of Virgil. These feats of memory though great, are equalled by that of Job Ben Soliman, an African youth who about 1740, before Hans Sloane and a company of Oriental scholars, recited the Koran without missing a word. The verdict of all impartial observers is that in mental power there is no perceivable difference between black and white, but that necessity and opportunity determines the matter. Louis Gottschalk, the first of American pianoists, and the first American to attract attention in Europe, was a New Orleans Creole, i. e., of mixed blood. Later Joseph White, a Cuban negro, won all the first prizes during several years at the Paris Conservatory of Music and in 1910, was still an honored teacher there. Edmund Dédé, a black man, also of New Orleans, went to Paris as a student, won great distinction in music, settled at Bordeaux where in 1910 he was installed as conductor of the Opera. Walter Howard Loving, of Washington, D. C., has won world wide fame in musical circles as leader of the Filipino Band. Brindis de Salas, of Havana, Cuba, who won high fame in the realm of music ere he died in Buenos Aires. The Chevalier Georges was a contemporary of Bridgetower and equally as gifted with the violin and much his superior in general musical ability and fame. Mr. Samuel Coleridge-Taylor fills the same place now. The story of how Beethoven's famous Sonata after being dedicated to Bridgetower in 1803, was found when published in 1805, to bear the name of Rudolph Kreutzer, violinist to Bernodotte, King of Sweden, is thus told:

Bridgetower was in Vienna and billed for a concert, May 24, 1803. He had met Beethoven for the first time in March, at the home of Prince Dietrichstein at a breakfast and both fell in love with each other. Beethoven was induced to write the Sonata for the May concert and on the last day was still at work, so that Bridgetower had no time to copy his part, but was obliged to use the original, with all its blots and blurs. In a note on the concert, Bridgetower says: " I repeated the presto at the fifteenth bar — then he held down the loud pedal during this run from the note C until the ninth bar. His expression in the Andante was so chaste throughout indeed, so thoroughly characteristic of his slow movements, that the whole was unanimously redemanded." The breach of friendship was over the Countess Guicciardi, the lady of Beethoven's heart. This breach seems to have been a wide one, since Beethoven had the publisher Simrock of Bonn, erase the dedication to Bridgetower and insert the name of Kreutzer. In the " Musical Times " May, 1908, the full story is given. An English gentleman, Mr. Samuel Appleby, collected every scrap relating to Bridgetower. From a passport, July 27, 1803, Bridgetower is thus described: " Character artist; born at Biola, Poland, 1779; middle height; smooth bronze complexion; dark brown hair; brown eyes; rather thick nose."

In 1819 at London he married, and in 1820 left England for the Continent. Was at Rome 1825-27. Through a letter from Vincent Novello, August, 1843, at London, who signs, " your much obliged old pupil and professional admirer," it develops that Novello was an early pupil. In 1845, Bridgetower was in Vienna. In 1846 in London again, and in 1848 at Paris. He had been traced thus far, but until March, 1908, the date of his death was uncertain. In musical circles in England beginning about 1858, a Bridgetower revival which soon run to an intense fever or mania set in, and each in the circles vied with others in seeking every paper or scrap of information concerning him and particularly the date of his death. The cemetery registers were searched diligently for years and only in March, 1908, was the searchers rewarded in finding his remains at Kensal Green, South London. The register showing that he died at 8 Victory Cottages, Bedford Street, Montpelier road, February 29, 1860, aged 78 years, leaving an estate about $5,000, which he bequeathed to a Miss Drake his deceased wife's sister. Truly a wonderful character. In the " Musical World," London, December 4, 1858, appeared a letter to the editor from J. W. Thirlwall, who says: " In respect to the Kreutzer Sonata, Bridgetower told me, that when it was written, Beethoven and he were constant companions, and on the first copy was a dedication to his friend Bridgetower; but ere it was published, they had some silly quarrel about a girl, and in consequence Beethoven scratched out the name of Bridgetower and inserted that of Kreutzer, a man whom he had never seen."

THE RACE QUESTION AS PICTURED IN FICTION.

The many social problems that grow out of the diversities of the races inhabiting the Southern section of the United States, and the perplexing question it presents to the Nation, has given rise to a literature peculiarly its own, this and the various phases of life in the South generally, as it has been described by Caucasian authors in fiction, is the object of this phase of the bibliography, with notes to the same by the compiler. Not all the novels on Southern life are included, but only a selection.

DANIEL MURRAY.

FICTION.

In fiction, the reader, if he be a Christian at heart, is constantly impelled to sympathize with the object of injustice as pictured in the story presented and to execrate whoever may be described as responsible for its infliction. Fiction, through its powerful communings with the reader, is an active force in bringing him to see the injustice and to become thenceforth, if not a defender of the right, at least no longer active on the other side, and in the end, through this silent influence often entirely eliminated from the ranks of the oppressors. It cannot, I am sure, be denied, that such an array against the inhumanity of all manifestations of caste and color prejudice will greatly serve to modify and in the end eradicate so unchristian a sentiment, and when this desiderata has come, America will then be free indeed. In Scott's " Ivanhoe " we are shown the subordinate position of the Saxons in relation to their Norman conquerors, and the intense race feeling that existed among them. But it passed away through the mellowing influence of time and the worth and persistence of the Saxons and in this way all divisional lines were finally obliterated. Therefore, in the light of the past, it is reasonable to believe color-prejudice in the United States will pass away or be greatly modified. One of the most active forces tending towards this end will arise through the necessity of treating the Japanese, Cubans and Filipinos, with greater consideration than has heretofore been accorded to the Negro. The presence of Japanese, Cubans, etc., in various circles, where now they are seldom found, will accustom the people to the admixture of the darker colored races in social circles where now they are rarely seen in America, and at last destroy the novelty of elbowing a dark skinned guest, which will be great enough at the beginning, but will in a short time cease to be noticed. To see generally the admixture of colors in the social circles without friction, will then excite no comment. The novelty and friction of such admixtures of guest has passed away in Europe, in the West Indies, in South and Central America, in Mauritius, throughout Asia, and its passing will at last be a fact in North America. It is bound to come, since all arguments against it are absurdly puerile and unreasonable. When one comes to analyze the color question, it appears grotesquely absurd, since the prejudice is not towards the dark colors, since if it were, its adherents would eschew dark colored clothing, etc., but such is not the case. To show prejudice towards the Japanese is the height of folly. The value of such an examination of the works of fiction as I have made in the light of the foregoing at once becomes apparent, and the power of works of that character, that have had the differences of race or caste prejudice for the main incidents of their plots to greatly influence and destroy race prejudice become apparent the moment one gives full thought to a very conspicuous feature of nearly all fiction; that is, to picture justice as ever triumphant in every conflict with injustice. To make virtue the victor in every contest with vice. The author invariably portraying through the unfolding of the story, his own estimate of high moral principle and basic justice. I think I am justified in assuming that concrete justice to the Negro is gaining ground. If in the whole range of fiction of this character disclosed by an examination of five hundred works, that in some manner deals with the manifestations of the prejudice of caste and the oppression of all people who have the least affinity with the African race, the authors have not shown any sympathy with the arrogant assumption of superiority based on color, it follows as surely the night the day, that such an assumption can lay but little claim to popular support among the great mass of justice loving people. The trend is, all men up, not some men up and others down.

As these novels are difficult to obtain, I have prepared and given in their appropriate place, a very full synopsis. Any one could, after reading the same, recount their characters and incidents as readily as one who had read the various books, so thoroughly is the synopsis given in each case. I have made a list of about five hundred color-line novels, few of which are indicated by their titles. The titles of the various novels seemingly having been chosen to conceal, rather than to indicate their character. Some of the most interesting bear the following titles:

"When the Gates Lift up Their Heads."
"The Picadilly Puzzle."
"Pudd'nhead Wilson."
"Sons and Fathers."
"George the Planter of the Isle of France." (By Dumas.)
"Peculiar; a Tale of the Great Transition."
"Senator North."
"Modern Pariah."
"Harold; an Experiment."
"The Cosmopolis."
"An Imperative Duty."
"Without Blemish."
"Mr. and Mrs. Morton."
"The Inevitable."

In this prospectus of specimans but a short outline is given. The same in the Encyclopedia is much fuller

ABBE, L. The African Fabiola; or, The Church of Carthage in the Days of Tertullian. London.

Tertullian was one of the fathers of the Catholic Church, and an African. The Church has had in its long line of Popes, three of the African race. Historical scholars particularly church historians are familiar enough with the life of St. Augustine, who was an African, born in the City of Tagasta, in Algiers (ancient Numidia). St. Monica, his mother is justly renowned for her Christian piety. The Colored Catholic Church in Washington, D. C., is named in his honor. The celebrated St. Cyprian was also an African writer of great power. Another African justly famous, as one of the fathers of the Church is Origen. Next to Augustine the greatest authority on early church history and more often cited. Benoit, of Palermo, in Sicily, an African, called by the Church historians the "Holy Black." Benoit was among the most eulogized and honored saints in the Roman Catholic Church, of the age in which he lived. He died at Palermo, 1589. For further information along this line, see Butler's "Lives of the Saints," Caves, "Lives, etc.," and "The Lives of the Fathers."

ADAMS, FRANCIS C. Our World; or, The Slaveholder's Daughter. New York, Miller & Co. 1855.

This very strong presentation of life in the South in antebellum days, was also published in a two-volume edition in London by Sampson Low & Co. under the title of "Our World; or the Democrats rule," 1855. It was put forth to strengthen Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom" which came out three years earlier and was followed as is well known by a flood of similar works on both sides of the slavery question.

ADAMS, FRANCIS C. Manuel Pereira; or The Sovereign Rule of South Carolina, with Views of Southern Laws, Life and Hospitality. Washington, D. C., Bull & Blanchard. 1853.

This story deals with a condition of Southern barbarism now passed, when colored seamen arriving at the port of Charleston, S. C., were held as prisoners and incarcerated in jail until the vessel was ready to depart. Many will recall the experience of Senator Hoar's father sent by the State of Massachusetts to protect her citizens from this inhuman practice. Mr. Hoar was obliged to leave the State under compulsion as soon as his mission was known, the Mayor and others stating that his life was unsafe, nor were they strong enough to protect him from mob violence even though he gave up his mission. In the book is given a very interesting account of a colored man named Jehu Jones,who kept the finest hotel in Charleston and had as his guest the first people visiting that city. Jones was free, as was all his family. There was a law forbidding any free person once leaving the State, to again enter. Jones' daughter was sent to Philadelphia to school. As soon as this beca ne known he was notified that if she came back she would be seized and sold according to the law on the subject. To this inhuman law he had to submit, feeling he would never see his child again. Years after, supposing he might slip away to see his daughter, he started North; as soon as it became known, the inhuman law was invoked and he forbidden ever again to return. The property he was thus obliged to leave was valued at Forty thousand dollars. The most destructive earthquake experienced in the United States, occurred at Charleston, S. C., August 31, 1886, when a great many lives were lost and 7,000 buildings destroyed. A signal exhibition of the retributive nature of Divine happenings.

ADAMS, FRANCIS C. Uncle Tom at Home. London, Clarke, Beeton & Co. 1853.

This little known novel, was originally written as a defence of Mrs. Stowe's well known novel of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and entitled "Review of the reveiwers and reply to Uncle Tom's Cabin." Mrs. John Tyler, wife of former President Tyler, having been induced to write a magazine article as a Reply to Mrs. Stowe. Mr. Adams a native of the South and for years a resident of Charleston, S. C., gave the strongest kind of evidence through articles in magazines, etc., in support of the truthfulness of Mrs. Stowe's account, the whole being subsequently incorporated into a book in England. In it is given an account of Bella Martin. In the Anti-Slavery Reporter, February, 1854, is copied the interesting story of Bella Martin.

ADAMS, WILLIAM TAYLOR (Oliver Optic). Hatchie; the Guardian Slave. Boston, Author. 1853.

The publication of Hatchie was Mr. Adams' first venture in the field of fiction. For fourteen years previously he had taught school in New England, and had noticed the youthful tendencies of boys. So he concluded to turn his authorship talent into that channel, rather than into serious lines. He at once adopted the pen name of "Oliver Optic," which grew rapidly into public favor and won for the writer undying fame in the field of juvenile fiction. Hatchie, is now long since out of print, nor is it to be found in the catalogues of the largest libraries. A copy is somewhat of a curiosity. Few people recall that the book was an argument on the anti-slavery question.

ALIENROCK, M. R. (Pseud). The White Castle of Louisiana. Louisville, Ky., John P. Morton & Co. 1903.

Through this novel one is able to get a very good insight of the daily life of a southerner who had large plantations and hundreds of slaves. It tells of the vexations ever present and brought to the master who was thus called upon to settle troubles of one kind or another between the slaves, aside from the reports of the drivers as to the poor prospects of the crops. The picture is natural and no doubt a true one, and justifies the belief that even the slaveholders of antebellum times do not hanker after a return to the inhuman system.

ALLEN, CHARLES GRANT. An African Millionaire. New York, Lewis Scribner & Co. 1895.

The exploits of William H. Ellis, the Texas quadroon, bearing the signed treaty of commercial amity between the United States and King Menelik, of Abyssinia, has attained to worldwide celebrity, coupled as it has been with the very mysterious disappearance, June 19, 1904, of Mr. Frederick Kent Loomis, his companion in the mission and brother of Mr. Loomis, Assistant Secretary of State, in mid ocean from the deck of the ocean liner on which he was bound from New York to Cherbourg, France, and due to stop for the discharge of passengers at Plymouth, England. Few indeed, who have read the book fail to be pleased.

ALLEN, CHARLES GRANT. In All Shades. New York, Munroe & Co. 1880.

This is one of the most interesting expositions of the color-line as it affected the people of Trinidad, West Indies, previous to 1833, that has appeared. As it follows so very closely in plot and general outline, one of Dumas' little known novels entitled "George; or the Planter of the Isle of France" (Mauritus), many have accused Mr. Allen of plagiarism. The resemblance is indeed remarkable, if the two, like Darwin's and Wallace's theories of the origin of the species were independently conceived. This is one of the best of Mr. Allen's color-line stories. It will take rank with any.

ALLEN, CHARLES GRANT. The Devil's Dye. Seaside Library No. 9, London and New York, C. G. Crawford. 1891.

This color-line novel, heralded as one of Mr. Allen's best, was never reprinted in America. It was very popular in the West Indies, where in part the scene is laid. The title is suggestive only when one is acquainted with Mr. Allen's "In all shades," which seeks to ridicule the manifestations of color-prejudice among intelligent people.

ALLEN, JAMES LANE. A Kentucky Cardinal. New York, Macmillan & Co. 1900.

This is simply a story of Southern color without any color-line feature of note.

ALLEN, JAMES LANE. The Blue-Grass Regions. New York, Macmillan & Co. 1899.

The same may be said of this story. It is a story of the mountain people of Kentucky and Tennessee.

ALLEN, SARAH E. Hagar's Daughter (A novel). Boston.

ANGUS — Anon. Black Heels on White Necks; or a Fight for Supremacy. Atlanta, Author. 1889.

This story was intended to arouse race feeling rather than keep to the probabilities of life under ordinary conditions.

ATHERTON, GERTRUDE. Senator North. New York, John Lane. 1900.

The heroine is an octoroon, the daughter of a man already married; whose wife is painfully aware of his lapse from virtue. His legitimate daughter feels the full force of blood relationship to the octoroon, and when circumstances deprive the octoroon of support (through the death of a priest who cared for her, the money being forthcoming through provision made by her father, also dead), goes to Virginia, gets her and installs her in her Washington home as a distant relative, and settles $6,000 upon her as a means of future support. Other features of an interesting character follow.

AUGHEY, JOHN HILL. The Iron Furnace; or, Slavery and Secession, by Rev. John H. Aughey, a Refugee from Mississippi. Phil. W. S. & A. Martien. 1863.

This is a vivid picture of what a man of anti-slavery opinions had to encounter on every side in Southern circles before the war.

AUGUSTIN, GEORGE. Romances of New Orleans. New Orleans, Graham & Son. 1891.

This is a real color-line story based on the limited amount of African blood that courses through the veins of the heroines. It is very like the celebrated play of "The Octoroon," that used to hold the stage in the North before the war.

AVERY, MYRTA LOCKETT. Dixie After the War. New York, Doubleday, Page & Co. 1906.

Too much cannot be said of the wealth of material found in this intimate study of Southern life. The stories, whether they depict lights or shadows, are unhackneyed, the pictures are vivid, and, whether it be in the mellow philosophy of "Uncle Randolph" or in the defiance of hotheaded youth, the temper of the people is well revealed. The author is intensely in sympathy with her own people. This is frankly sectional literature, but it is sectional literature written with the fullest comprehension that the tragic conditions were inevitable, and that neither North nor South had the monopoly or heroism or of humanity.

Apart from the charm of personal recollection, there is in the book a praiseworthy purpose to sift the evidence in some of the national questions involved. Of this effort, the account of Lincoln's entry into Richmond is a most successful example, while the not altogether clear treatment of the reconstruction question in "A Little Plain History" is another. A further point which adds to the impression of impartiality is the very careful manner in which Mrs. Avery discriminates between material, for the accuracy of which she holds herself personally responsible, and the "good stories" which she neither affirms nor denies.

Moreover, the book is well planned. The material is grouped into well defined units, arranged in a generally chronological order. Its scope is comprehensive, it is possible to say exhaustive. The chapters on the race question are thoughtful and suggestive. With much real pathos in the book and much genial humor, the chapter on "The Black and Tan Convention" is farce.

AVERY, MYRTA LOCKETT. A Virginia girl in the Civil War.

The title is fully suggestive enough to picture the character of the book without further comment.

AVERY, M. A. Rebel General's Loyal Bride. Springfield, Mass., W. J. Holland & Co. 1873.

The same may be said of this novel. It is an account of a clash of opinions, very natural when all things are considered.

BABCOCK, WINNIFRED EATON (Onoto Wattanna). A Half-Caste, etc. Chicago, Rand, McNally & Co. 1898.

BACHE, RICHARD MEADE. Under the Palmetto. Philadelphia, Claxton, Remsen & Co. 1880.

BACON, EUGENIA JONES. Lyddy; a Tale of the Old South. New York, Continental Pub. Co. 1898.

This novel by Mrs. Bacon, of Memphis, Tenn., has a special value, in that it was written as the author announces in the preface, to conteract, it is claimed, a false impression strongly current on the continent as to the amount of social recognition that should be accorded a visitor from the Southern section of the United States in the higher social circles of England, etc. The daily papers in the United States it seems had given such minute accounts of brutal burnings of human beings and horrible lynchings in which young girls and more mature women were leading participants, that she there found a constant dread in continental social circles of entertaining unawares such a person who might come as a visitor. The book was written, as Mrs. Bacon declares, to refute the harsh opinion very generally entertained throughout Europe towards those who have held human beings in bondage. The author says, that about 1897 she was the chief guest at a tea in Edinburgh, Scotland, and during the conversation was imprudent enough to acknowledge that she was of Southern birth and at one time held slaves, instantly she found herself, as the other guests demeanor indicated, an object of deep aversion by all present and that her host's little girl cried in terror when Mrs. Bacon sought to be friendly with her. Mrs. Bacon further says, "I then resolved to write a book giving a true picture of slavery and the social relations that subsisted among the slaves, and thus conteract the opinion of the world as to the people of the South."

That Mrs. Bacon undertook a superhuman task, must be apparent to all; particularly, since conditions are far worse to-day than at any time. There is less regard for justice or human life.

BAKER, WILLIAM M. (Pseud. Geo. F. Harrington). Inside; a Chronicle of Secession. New York. Harper's Brothers. 1866. Illustrations by Thos. Nast.

This is a fine description of the South during the war. The author was a Union man, but compelled to mask his sentiments in that regard by reason of his environment, he being in the very centre of the rebellion where he was obliged to remain until the end of the war. He gives a very graphic picture of the daily routine of life and the vicissitudes those inside endured, by reason of the blockade.

BALDWIN, JOSEPH G. Flush times in Alabama and Mississippi. New York, D. Appleton & Co. 1856.

This is one of the most celebrated of the books treating of Southern life and character before the war. The period when the Mississippi river boats were the principal means of transportation and high play at gambling was a marked incident of every trip. The book has been republished several times.

MERRICK, LEONARD. The Quaint Companions. 12°, pp. 296. London. 1903.

The scene of the above named color-line novel is laid in England and indicates very clearly the limited extent of color-prejudice, in the social circles of the British Isles. There the negro has only to contend with the natural clanishness incident to race affinity, and as his color differentiates him from the mass of the people, he is thus somewhat apart, by the marked contrast he bears in color to the vast majority. Otherwise he stands on the same footing. Elisha Lee, the leading figure, a negro, has developed into a world-fame tenor and is back in London for a few concerts. He seeks to recall the friends of other days, some of those known to him fifteen years previously, among them Mrs. Tremlett, with whom he boarded then and who had a beautiful daughter, Ownie, whom he fondly recalled. He goes to Brighton and there meets them, but Ownie, now Mrs. Harris, is a widow with a boy-baby Vivien. Lee is rich and in the enjoyment of large returns from his concerts and in dress and expenditures, is as prodigal as the traditional great singer. Because of his great voice he is petted and lionized on every side, the glamour of which and the desire to share it, causes Mrs. Harris to stifle any inate color-prejudice and to say "yes," when he asked her to marry him. Her mother is reconciled, though not approving the match, by the same glamour that has captivated the daughter. From the marriage is born a son, David Lee, who thereby becomes the half-brother to Vivien. The mulatto child is thus brought into direct rivalry in its mother's affection, with Vivien and loses by the contrast, but the loss is wholly made up by the adoration of the father. As Elisha Lee's fortune was in his voice, it naturally hung by a very slender thread. His habits impaired its value and earning power, long before a severe cold developed pneumonia and carried him off. Mrs. Lee, now found herself with two boys dependent for their maintenance and education on her slender resources, but she bravely undertook to do a mother's part by both of them, and to make ends meet, opened a boarding house in which she met fair success. At school and elsewhere, there were always a sprinkling of mean natures to remind David, that he was unlike in color the vast majority. Aside from this he had little to bar his progress, and developed a literary genius in some respects equal to that of his father in music. Vivien felt towards him a brotherly affection and treated him most kindly. One of his books of poems, "A Celibate's Love Songs," had a phenominal vogue in London and throughout Britain, and brought the author great fame. Living at Beckenhampton, was a Prof. Sorrenford and two daughters, Hebe, called Bee, and Hilda. The family was poor, the father being a teacher of music and elocution. Hilda was notably beautiful, while Bee, who had a beautiful face had been dropped in infancy by a careless nurse, which made her a crooked spine. She took to painting to fill up her time and achieved some success. She was conscious of her handicap for social triumphs, and thought little of love until one day a copy of "A Celibate's Love Songs" fell into her hands and caused an intense awakening. She ventured, after long cogitation to write to the author, not knowing that he was a man of color. She had, however, become very charitable through her own social bar; indeed, too generous in her nature to withold her meed of praise from deserving persons on that account. The train of circumstances following the posting of this letter to David Lee by Bee, is the main theme of the story. As she was deformed, she shrunk correspondingly in her own estimation and sought to find an aim in life, in the fame of a great artist. Still there was an unsatisfied longing for love; a longing, the career of a great artist could not fill, but might through its demands quiet and keep still. When her correspondence with David Lee had gone far enough, he asked for a photograph. She feared a full knowledge of her and her deformity of body might deprive her of the intense human satisfaction she experienced through his letters, and having in mind only a continuance of her happiness, she sent the photo of her sister Hilda. On his part, a similar feeling had been nursed; a fear that a full knowledge that he was a mulatto might also deprive him of the happiness gathered through correspondence with an unknown. At last there came to David Lee, an overwhelming desire to test the correctness of the photo, since through gazing on it his heart was enlisted, but still unwilling to put his own hopes to the touch, because of that shrinking fear that the original of the photo might be so obsessed by color-prejudice as to blast his budding affection, as soon as he should appear. He knew that repulsiveness in any form loses much of its intensity, after prolonged familiarity, and hopefully recalled, that, "Vice is a monster of such hideous mien, to be hated needs only to be seen, but seen too oft, familiar with its face, we first pity, then endure, and then embrace". So he contrived by assuming another name, to secure lodging in the same country house where the two girls were stopping, and daily saw the two sisters. He was deluded through the episode of the photo, in believing that Hilda was his correspondent, and was in extacies over his good fortune in having so beautiful a correspondent. Bee, the real correspondent never for a moment associated him with the author of "A Celibate's Love Songs," and thus they daily met, each unaware of the identity of the other. A later situation however brought about a denouement and explanations. Vivien, the half brother was the accepted suitor for Hilda's hand and told her, that

David Lee, the mulatto author, was his half brother. This led Bee into the secret as to the identity of her correspondent, through whom she had experienced such real happiness. It developed when the truth became known, that she must make an explanation to save Hilda in the estimation of Vivien, since David had shown him her photo and the correspondence, the possession of which needed explanation. Again she shrunk from the impending blow to her happiness likely to follow the discontinuance and upon reflection and constant self-examination felt her notions on the varieties of color in human beings undergoing a decided modification and less repugnance to being in correspondence with a mulatto. David Lee called to see Hilda to secure an explanation of the tangle and Bee went down to meet him. She explained the tragedy of her lonely life and the yearnings of her heart for an acknowledged companion, and how free of color-prejudice a self-examination had disclosed to her. On his part he recognized that it was through her mind he had derived so much pleasure, though believing she had the form of Hilda, and further that if she in beauty of form was at varience with established models, he, in the matter of color in England, was no less divergent. In time both came to realize that there were qualities of mind that outweighed beauty of face or form or complexion, and they established a companionship for life more firmly on this account. He a little below the standard of color, and she in form, and each finding in the beauty of mind a more lasting quality.

The theory of the story is correct. What a woman needs to fill the measure of her happiness in life is the consciousness and satisfaction of being loved. This is in the mind wholly. She is seldom particular as to the quarter from whence comes the evidence of ardent admiration of her. He may be a criminal, burglar or murderer, if so, his repulsive attributes in this respect are greatly modified in her sight, if he has the redeeming quality of gratitude and admiration for her.

Mr. Merrick, the author had written several novels ere he produced the "Quaint Companions," and is held in high esteem as a writer, though little known outside of England. He was born there, February 21, 1874.

Some of the most famous novels along this line are but little indicated by their title any more than the one above who would suspect the following as of that class:

"When the Gates lift up their Heads."
"The Plated City."
"No Other Way."
"Master of Red Leaf."

BELL, PHILLIP ALEXANDER. Pioneer Editor of the Colored Press of America; Scholar, etc.

Was born in New York City in 1808 and received a liberal education. In 1837, in connection with Rev. Samuel E. Cornish (who had been co-editor of the "Journal of Freedom," in 1827 with John Brown Russwurm). He started in New York City The Colored American. Later Dr. J. McCune Smith became one of the editors. In 1855, Mr. Bell went to California and began prospecting in various parts of the state, and while so engaged wrote articles for the Pacific Appeal. He and F. G. Barbadoes, did noble work in manufacturing a liberal sentiment in the State towards the Colored people, particularly, during the Civil war preiod. In 1862, Mr. Bell removed to San Francisco, to assume charge of The Mirror of the Times, a newspaper begun by Colored men in 1855. In 1865 several Colored men, among whom was Fred G. Barbadoes, organized to publish The Elevator to be the organ of the Colored men on the Pacific coast. It began April 18, 1865, but did not assume the place marked out for it, but continued to live for a time. In 1848, Mr. Bell, then living in New York, succeeded to the business of keeping an intelligence office formerly maintained in a very successful manner by a Mr. Hutson, who for a long time was the leader in that line of business. Mr. Bell died in very straitened circumstances in San Francisco, Cal., April 24, 1889.

DORSEY, THOMAS JOSHUA. Noted Caterer of Philadelphia, who bought his freedom for $1,000 in 1836.

The subject of this sketch was born of mixed blood parentage at Liberty, Frederick County, Maryland, about 1810. His mother bore his master four children, Basil, Thomas, Charles and William Dorsey. They all runaway in 1836 and reached Philadelphia, where they came under the notice of Mr. Robert Purvis. In R. C. Smedley's Underground Railroad, page 356, Mr. Purvis tells of his connection with them; the attempt to return Thomas to slavery after reaching Philadelphia by arresting him, and the decision of the Judge who delivered him up to be sent South, and how by the timely efforts of friends in Philadelphia he was rescued in Baltimore through the payment of $1,000. The other brothers, Basil, Charles and William, were also sought. Basil was captured at Doylestown where he was being protected by Mr. Purvis, who tells in Smedley's book, the incidents of the rescue of Basil after he had been arrested. At the trial, the services of David Paul Brown, Esq., were enlisted, who raised the novel point as to whether Maryland was a slave State, and if not, the fugitive could not be sent into free territory. Judge Fox asked for proof and Griffith, for the owner, became nonplussed and was unable to prove that it was, and Judge Fox released Basil. Thereupon Mr. Purvis took him in a buggy, drove at a furious rate to Philadelphia, twenty miles away, thus carrying him beyond the jurisdiction before another warrant could be framed. Later he was sent to Northampton, Mass., where he and his family lived until his death about 1873. Mr. Thomas J. Dorsey soon after the incidents narrated, adopted catering in Philadelphia as a business and amassed quite a fortune. In June, 1859, John Brown, then on his mission to Harper's Ferry, visited Philadelphia, and lodged at the home of Mr. Dorsey, 1231 Lombard street. There he conferred with E. D. Bassett, Henry Minton, John Seville, (son-in-law to Mr. Dorsey), Henry Jones, Alfred Morris Green and Joshua B. Matthews. These men did much in a material way to aid John Brown on his mission. Early in December, 1859, the body of John Brown laid in State in Philadelphia on its way to North Elba, N. Y. A meeting was held in National Hall to show respect to the great martyr. A mob of Southern students attempted to break it up, but desisted when they saw the temper of those in attendance. Mr. Dorsey died in Philadelphia, Pa., February 12, 1875.

As an exponent of the Catering Art, Mr. Dorsey was for nearly forty years the leader in Philadelphia. Although devoid of education he possessed a naturally refined taste, which he had cultivated to the highest. At his home in Locust Street, he entertained most lavishly and boasted that Chas. Sumner, Wm. Lloyd Garrison, Wm. D. Kelley, Frederick Douglass and John W. Forney had at times been his guests. He was so intense in loyalty that he refused to serve a party for a "Copperhead Democrat," because of his opposition to President Lincoln's emancipation proclamation.

HALLOWELL, MORRIS L. The Brave Quaker Abolitionist.

It is said that the pocket nerve is the most sensitive and most easily touched by an adverse trend, than any other. Therefore the slave-holding oligarchy of the South mindful of this, sought to arrest the zeal of Garrison and the abolitionist generally, by threatening to boycott all Northern merchants who failed to use their influence against him. Morris L. Hallowell, a young Philadelphia merchant, when threatened in 1838 with the loss of his dry-goods trade South, if he did not abjure abolitionism, replied, "I do not sell my principles with my dry-goods," and refused to yield an inch.

Mr. Hallowell was born in Philadelphia, Pa., August 14, 1809, and died in that city, June 16, 1881. The incident referred to above grew out of the meeting of the American Female Anti-Slavery Society in Penn Hall, corner of 6th and Race streets, May 14, 1838, and the burning of the hall by a mob, May 16th. Mr. Garrison, as usual, was the special object of the mob. He was stopping at the home of Mr. Edward Needles, but to insure greater safety, he took refuge, by invitation, at the home of Morris L. Hallowell, 240 North Sixth Street. At two o'clock the next morning, a covered carriage in which were Joseph Parrish, Jr., Israel H. Johnson and Robert Purvis, drove to Mr. Hallowell's and bore Mr. Garrison safely from the city. An attempt was then made to punish Mr. Hallowell for his part, by a boycott.

HICKS, CHARLES BARNEY. Famous vocalist and pioneer minstrel performer.

Was born of mixed blood parentage at Baltimore in 1842. He began his stage career in a local way as a ballad singer, particularly of sentimental and topical songs, about 1865–66. One of his ever remembered hits was "Little Maggie May" which never failed to bring down the house. About the same time Mr. John Luca located in Baltimore and no doubt the presence of Luca had much to do with leading Hicks into the minstrel business, of which he was the pioneer and shining light among Colored men on an independent scale. In Baltimore about 1865, lived George Kunkle and L. C. Moxley, both "old time minstrels," Moxley the finest delineator of female characters in his day. Hicks was brought directly in contact with these men and no doubt was much influenced by the association, Kunkle being the manager of the "old Front St. Theatre." As a theatrical manager, Mr. Hicks was par excellence. He had that part of the business down to perfection. The business of manager requires such extraordinary equipment that few colored men up to that date had developed the faculty. It was Barney Hicks who organized the famous "Georgia Minstrels," the first Colored troupe that toured the land as such. Later he associated Mr. George B. Callender in the enterprise. Then came a reorganization and the substitution of highly trained performers for those possessing solely natural musical talent. Early in the seventies the troupe went to Europe, where they had phenominal success. On their return Mr. Hicks remained in Europe and never again visited his native land.

Previous to the venture by Mr. Hicks in the field of Ethiopian minstrelsy as an independent manager, about 1866–67, the negro characters on the stage were represented by white men blackened with burnt cork paste. The Bohee brothers, who had appeared in a white company somewhat earlier, appeared with black faces. The great American tragedian, Edwin Forrest, begun his professional career by appearing in 1823 in a play depicting life at the South disguised as a Negro boy, so it was novel to see colored men on the stage. Soon the success of Mr. Hick's venture in genuine Negro minstrelsy became assured, the troupe taking the name of "The Georgia Minstrels." After touring the United States, Mr. Hicks went to Europe and there married in Paris, a French lady. His fine managerial talent was soon recognized and exploited throughout Australia and India. He was the first man to take a colored troupe on a tour of the United States. In Europe for lack of talent in the minstrel line, he engaged in the circus business, since such can perform with greater success, because not required to speak the language of the towns in which billed. It was Hicks and Sawyer that took a minstrel troupe around the world. Having engaged in the entertainment line for so many years, Mr. Hicks acquired in such, an international reputation and was at the time of his death, July 21, 1902, manager of a French Circus, then playing at Saraboya, Java. He left a daughter, his wife having predeceased him.

The city of Saraboya, where Mr. Hicks died, is the main seaport town of the island of Java. It has the best harbor in the island and is defended by many forts and batteries. It has a population of 125,000, and is the capital of the province bearing the same name, which has a population of 1,600,000. It has a very large trade with the interior and is situated on a river bearing the same name.

In the Christmas suppliment, 1909, New York Age, Samuel Corker, Jr., manager of the "Red Moon" Co., speaking of Mr. Hicks, says:

> In the old days when managers produced and routed their shows by individual efforts, the manager had to be, by necessity, a tactful man. Possibly the most astute and celebrated Negro theatrical manager was Chas. B. Hicks; his geographical knowledge of the country and his ability to handle actors made him a prominent figure and his opinions were eagerly sought after.
>
> I understand that he was the first to discover in the making of an itinerary of a company, that it was of greater profit for his company to make its appearance in the far northwest in the spring of the year, because at that time the lumbermen had finished their labors in the forest and were flocking into the smaller towns of that territory with their winter's pay and eager for amusement. His minute observations prompted him to send his company South during the winter months after the cotton had been picked and the Southerners were possessed of the necessary where-with-all to pay for the happy evenings that a Negro minstrel organization furnished.
>
> So famous had become the theatrical business knowledge of Barney Hicks that his opinions were sought by no less distinguished management than the Frohmans. Mr. Hicks rounded out his career as a showman, as manager of a circus that traveled in Australia and India, where he recently died.

Since Mr. Hick's day any number of colored men have developed the faculty of managers.

LOUVERTURE, ISAAC. Son of General Toussaint Louverture; some facts concerning him.

Was born at Breda, near Cape Haïtien, in 1786, where his father and mother, slaves of Col. Noe, were then living. And while yet very young, and the revolution having changed his condition, was sent by his father in the care of Sonthonax, 1794, to France to be educated. Isaac was the only son of Toussaint that survived infancy. Zuzanne having borne a male mulatto child by one Seraphin, before becoming the wife of Toussaint. This boy Placide was by law free, notwithstanding his mother's state of bondage, because the French law did not tolerate mixed blood slavery. The law decreed freedom if either parent was free. Isaac and his half brother Placide, were placed at a college known as the Lycee Colonial, at Bordeaux, and at the time under the management of Pere Coisnon, a very good hearted man. Both made rapid progress in their studies, and Napoleon, in his heart having already conceived his infamous design to re-enslave the blacks of San Domingo, began his dastardly scheme by deception. He named Isaac and Placide lieutenants of the staff of the Royal household and gave them an assignment of duty at the Palace of the Tuileries, hoping by this to allay suspicion and to better cloak his design. Deep in his project of deceit, Napoleon, to Isaac was particularly attentive, urging as a reason his high admiration for Isaac's father. Napoleon who loved much to romp and play with children, while men he made tremble, gave to Isaac one day some mathematical problems to solve, which being done to his full satisfaction, he complimented him and expressed his full belief in the intellectual capacity and equality of the Negro race, and further said to Isaac, "Your father is a great man, he has rendered eminent services to France. You tell him that I, the first Magistrate of the people of France, promise him protection, glory and honor. Tell him not to believe that it is the intention of France to make war on Saint Domingo; the army which I am going to send there is not intended to fight the troops of the country, but to increase their numbers. Look, it is Gen. Leclerc, my brother-in-law, who is to command that army. Orders have already been given that you will make the journey home fifteen days in advance of Gen. Leclerc to announce to your father the coming of the expedition." The next day Placide and Isaac were given complete new military outfits, so as to appear in the best form when they reached San Domingo. They embarked on the frigate Jean Jacques and arrived at the Cape about the same time as the fleet under Leclerc, January 29, 1802, but were held by Leclerc, under Napoleon's direction as hostages, through whom he hoped to secure Toussaint's submission to the scheme to reopen in Haiti and all the French islands the slave trade. In an account of their return and the preparation for the journey much is told of the warm reception accorded Isaac by the Empress Josephine, when he and his preceptor the Abbe Coisnon, were visitors at Malmaison, Josephine greatly admired the distinguished physique of Isaac, in spite of his dark color and predicted for him a brilliant future, the fruit of his superior education and natural talent. He quoted for her sonnets from the Latin Parnassus, with rare fervor, from the Musee Francais, the prize discourse in rhetoric and Latin verse. He was very well grounded in mathematics. The impression made by Isaac on Napoleon was disquieting. Since he loved not the negro and felt as he well might, that he would have a much harder task to restore in the French West Indies the slave trade, than he conceived would be the case after signing, October 1, 1800, the Peace of Amiens. Napoleon had embraced the idea of allaying the suspicions of Toussaint, the father, by extra attention to Isaac and Placide. That he had signally failed became manifest in February, 1802, when the fleet arrived before the Cape and Christophe informed Leclerc, that acting on the orders of Gen. Toussaint Louverture the city would be reduced to ashes should he attempt to land. Leclerc thereupon sent ashore M. Coisnon on a mission to Toussaint accompanied by Isaac and Placide hoping through them to induce Toussaint to call off Christophe. The ruse failed, the two youths returned to the ship and Leclerc manned his boats and Christophe burned the City. Then the war was on in earnest. The two boys were returned to France and Toussaint never again saw Isaac, who was sent to Agen near his mother and Placide was conducted to Fort Belle Isle sur-mer. December 1, 1804, Isaac married at Agen, France, his cousin Louise Chancey and later moved to Bordeaux, following the death of his mother in 1816. There he was treated with great respect, being frequently regarded and called the "King of the Negroes." In 1827–8 Isaac wrote in collaboration with M. Desquiron de St. Agnan, a Paris lawyer, an epic poem in eight cantos "l'Haïtiade," published anon. He died at Bordeaux, September 27, 1854, leaving a widow, but no children.

THOMAS, SIR J. J. Knighted in 1908, by Edward VII. and named Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

Four men of color have been decorated by English Soverigns, the last in 1908 by His Majesty King Edward VII. The first was Edward Jordan, of Jamaica, then Judge Conrad Reeves of Barbadoes, next Samuel Lewis of Sierra Leone, and now Mr. Thomas of the same place.

James Jonathan Thomas, son of the late James and Jane Thomas of Sierra Leone, West Africa, was born July 22, 1850, at Freetown. His first wife was Patience, daughter of Mr. Thomas Joe, merchant of Lagos, his second wife Rhoda, daughter of Mr. Abraham Hebrom, merchant of Sierra Leone. The American Commissioners, Messrs. Sale and Falkner, sent to Liberia by President W. H. Taft in the summer of 1909, visited also Freetown, Sierra Leone, and there met Sir. James J. Thomas. The following from the West African World is interesting:

October 29, 1908, a number of friends and admirers of Sir James, wishing to commemorate the mark of Royal favor evidenced by his decoration by His Majesty, King Edward VII of England, as "Companion of the most distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George," tendered him a banquet at one of the leading hotels in Sierra Leone. It was attended by the foremost business and professional men in the Colony. Among those who extended congratulations to Sir Knight Thomas, was Sir Alfred Lewis Jones, the famous ship owner, the unflinching friend of West Africa and her people, whose vessels dot every ocean and trade with every clime.

The policy of the English government to treat all of its subjects with Christian fairness, cannot but awaken sentiments of admiration in the hearts of all Christian peoples towards such noble examples of concrete justice. The idea of a Christian nation discriminating against its own subjects on the score of a difference of color is a monstrous perversion of common decency. Sir James, is a Justice of the Peace and since 1893 a member of the legislative Councils of Sierra Leone and Lagos. He was formerly a merchant at Lagos and Commissioner for that Colony to the Colonial and Indian Exhibition at London in 1886. Member of the Royal Geographical Society, the Royal Colonial Institute and the Royal Society of Arts. Member of the National Liberal Club of London.

WRIGHT, FANNY. Mme. D'Arusmont. Early abolitionist, 1825.

It is highly probable that the subject of this notice was the pioneer woman in America to publicly expouse the cause for the abolition of slavery. This she did by attempting to establish in Shelby County, Tenn., in 1825, an anti-slavery community. She was born in Dundee, Scotland, of Scottish parentage in 1795. She came to America in 1818, but returned to her home in England in 1820, and in 1821 published "Views of Society and Manners in America," reprinted in Paris, 1822. In 1825, she founded on the Naohoba river, near Memphis, a colony of free negroes, which did not succeed, and the greater part of them were transported to Haïti, in 1830. From 1833 to 1836, she lectured on Woman's Right, and is pictured in the literature of the subject as the pioneer in America on the subject. In 1838 while on a visit to Paris, she was married to M. D'Arusmont, but soon separated from him; returned to the United States and in 1840 located at Cincinnati, where she died in 1852. A Memoir by Gilbert, was published in Cincinnati, in 1855.

KIZLAR, AGASI. The title of the chief Euneuch in the Royal harem.

This is scarcely a personage in the ordinary sense, but a title usually conferred on the black eunuch who stands guard over the portals of the royal harem, since each chief eunuch in turn bears the title "Aga," which in rank is about that of a Lieut. Colonel in Military Circles. An "Aga" is not equal to a "Pasha," though superior to "Kaid." He is invariably of the African race; taken while young and prepared for the post by castration. Porter (Sir James) in his "Observations on the religion of the Turks, etc.," gives at p. 83, an instance of the power wielded by the black eunuch Kizlar Aga. This is seen in the high assumption of power by the eunuchs in 1730 and subsequently, and the difficulty of lodging a complaint against their irresponsible rule, Kizlar was a very shrewd man and possessed the confidence of the sultan Machmut to a great degree, who accepted his counsel implicitly and found it correct as to the matters in hand and thus reigned peacably twenty-four years. Kizlar, was born in Africa, 1656, and died in Constantinople in 1746, and was succeeded in the office by Bekir, a young black born on the island of Borneo in 1713. He was soon after assuming office in trouble. He was more avaricious than wise. He lacked the wisdom of his predecessor. No word against him could reach the Sultan except through him, and those who had so ventured to complain of his exactions were secretly murdered. His enemies therefore hit upon the extraordinary plan of setting Constantinople on fire, and when the investigation was had to determine why the city was fired in a dozen places on a certain night it was laid to deep discontent among the people towards the "Aga." This led to the arrest of Bekir, the black eunuch, and his later execution. By reason of their daily intercourse with the Sultan, the royal eunuchs are a privileged set and many of them have been regarded by the outside world as the virtual rulers of the Ottoman Empire, such a one was the famous Bekir Aga. During the revolt in 1909 against the Sultan for misrule the victorious party at once hung the chief royal eunuch, as a responsible officer.

Southern Regional Council
710 Standard Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

September 21, 1944

SUGGESTED SOURCES FOR THE STUDY OF THE SOUTH

Books and Monographs

Couch, W. T. (editor). CULTURE IN THE SOUTH. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1935.

Gleason, Eliza Atkins. THE SOUTHERN NEGRO AND THE PUBLIC LIBRARY. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1941.

Hagood, Margaret Jarman. MOTHERS OF THE SOUTH. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1935.

Huxley, Julian S. TVA, ADVENTURE IN PLANNING. Cheam, Surrey: Architectural Press, 1943.

Johnson, Gerald W. THE WASTED LAND. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1938.

Lilienthal, David. TVA, DEMOCRACY ON THE MARCH. New York: Harper and Brothers, 1944.

National Education Association. FEDERAL AID FOR EDUCATION. A Review of Pertinent Facts. Washington, D. C., 1942.

National Resources Planning Board. REGIONAL PLANNING: PART XI - THE SOUTHEAST. Washington: U. S. Government Printing Office, 1942.

Murray, Florence. THE NEGRO HANDBOOK. New York: Wendell Malliet Company, 1942.

Nixon, H. C. FORTY ACRES AND STEEL MULES. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1938.

Raper, Arthur F., and Ira De A. Ried. SHARECROPPERS ALL. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1941.

Raper, Arthur F. TENANTS OF THE ALMIGHTY. New York: Macmillan Company, 1943.

Vance, Rupert B. ALL THESE PEOPLE. The Nation's Human Resources in the South. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1944.

Vance, Rupert B. HUMAN GEOGRAPHY OF THE SOUTH. A Study in Regional Resources and Human Adequacy. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1932.

Van Sickle, John V. PLANNING FOR THE SOUTH. Nashville: Vanderbilt University Press, 1944.

Southern Regional Council
710 Standard Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

September 21, 1944

Films

THE SOUTHEASTERN STATES. (Erpi Regional Geography Series). New York: Erpi Classroom Films, Inc., 1942.

LIVING LAND. Washington: U. S. Department of Agriculture, 1940.

THE RIVER. (Story of the Mississippi). Washington: U. S. Department of Agriculture, 1937.

SAVE THE SOIL. (Conservation). Washington: U. S. Department of Agriculture, 1940.

WASTED WATERS. Knoxville: Tennessee Valley Authority, 1939.

WATER POWER. New York: Erpi Classroom Films, Inc., 1937.

LET MY PEOPLE LIVE (Tuberculosis). New York: National Tuberculosis Association, 1938.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE. New York: Harmon Foundation, 1941.

HOUSING IN OUR TIME. Washington: Federal Public Housing Authority, 1939.

STORY OF DR. CARVER. (Great Negro Scientist). New York: Teaching Films Custodians, Inc., n. d.

RURAL EDUCATION AND RACE RELATIONS

A BI-MONTHLY NEWS CIRCULAR PREPARED AND DISTRIBUTED BY MABEL CARNEY
MARSEILLES, ILLINOIS, POST OFFICE BOX 155
FOR FORMER STUDENTS AND FRIENDS

Number 2. September-October, 1944. Subscription Free.

EXPLANATION AND APOLOGY

Dear Former Students and Friends: Here I am— behind schedule again! But there have been extenuating circumstances. To be perfectly frank—a new baby! A little apple-cheeked, brown-eyed nephew who spent the first four months of his life this past spring and summer right here in my house. And with my old failing for putting human needs above all others, I simply gave most of my time these four months to looking after my young sister and her little son—a stern necessity, as a matter of fact, since nursing care is now so scarce. Then there was the interruption, profitable and enjoyable but time-consuming, of six weeks Summer School teaching at Hampton Institute. Not to mention gardening and fruit care, including the canning of over five hundred jars of produce from my 4-acre "farmlet". But summer demands are past, the baby is thriving beautifully, and has now returned to his own home. So back to my neglected leaflet I come, hopeful and determined once more to get, and to stay, on the regular printing schedule.

Certainly there is cause for encouragement and continued effort in this little personal venture. For to my great surprise, deep gratitude, and humility, former white students and friends have recently raised another special fund as a retirement gift in my honor, which will now make it possible to continue this project well beyond the time limit set by the original fund from Negro students.

This new gift, like the first, I could never have accepted but for the purpose of promoting this circular, and thereby serving not only those who have so kindly remembered me, but also the important interests of Rural Education and Race Relations in which we are all united. With this increased financial aid, however, it should now be possible to print and distribute this little publication for at least two years on a gratuitous basis, and also to improve its quality. By this time the war will undoubtedly be finished, and we can then turn our undertaking over to some group of educational leaders, able and ready to expand its functions into a creditable professional magazine—rurally directed but with ample attention to Negro welfare and race relation.

In this spirit and intent I accept this gracious giving then, with the hope and desire of returning equal helpfulness and pleasure to all who have contributed to either fund—M. C.

IMMEDIATE PLANS

The primary purpose of this news circular is to challenge attention and report progress in two important aspects of American democracy, namely, the education of country children and the fair treatment and welfare of Negro youth, most of whom are also rural. With at least 7,000,000 school children on our farms and 3,000,000 more in the racial group, it is clearly apparent that true democracy can never prevail in this country until these ten million children, constituting a full third of the total school enrollment of the nation, have their fair share of educational expenditure and provision—which is most certainly not now the case. But more of this later. The intention here is to explain this issue and the next two to follow.

Since rural and racial welfare are matters of such great importance in American life it would seem that our institutions of Higher Education would be vitally concerned with both of these causes. To determine the extent of this interest your editor has just completed a general inquiry in these fields among leading universities and state colleges. The findings of this study are too extensive to publish in one issue of this small circular, and will be presented thru separate articles in the next three issues.

This belated issue for September-October therefore contains the statement on what leading universities are doing in Rural Education. The November-December issue soon to follow will present a digest of Rural Education service from state universities and colleges. While the January-February number will show what specific activities and courses American universities and colleges are now conducting to further the education and welfare of Negroes. These findings, it is believed, will interest our readers and give helpful information to some in the selection of institutions for summer school study and other purposes.

Meanwhile, the usual news notes will be carried in all numbers of this circular, also the personal editorial statements on the first page, and the reference lists on the last page. As will be noted, however, the present issue includes an insert of annotated bulletins for teachers of rural and village schools, and the January-February issue will have a similar insert of references on Negro and white race relations.

"So much for the present," as radio announcers say, "I'll be back with you again" near the beginning of the New Year.

RURAL EDUCATION IN LEADING UNIVERSITIES OF THE UNITED STATES

"Rural" education as discussed in this article means the general, basic education of country people including children, youth and adults, for citizenship and daily living. It does not relate to technical Agricultural education which is merely one aspect, the vocational phase, of Rural education as a whole.

Rural education, thus defined has been a subject of University study for but thirty years, and has never been federally supported. Agricultural education, on the other hand, was given collegiate and university status through the Morrill Act of 1862, over three-quarters of a century ago, and has always been liberally supported by federal aid. This accounts for "the tail-wagging-the-dog" relationship between the two divisions at the present time.

This brief article will attempt to indicate what nationwide universities are now doing to promote Rural education of general basic type on the lementary, secondary and adult level. Rural education of this general type, it will be noted, has been very greatly victimized by present war conditions, while Agricultural education, through the demand for food production, has been very greatly stimulated.

HISTORICAL STATEMENT

Cornell University, Peabody College, and Teachers College, Columbia University, influenced by national publicity connected with the Report of the Theodore Roosevelt Commission on Country Life and directed by three men of vision (Liberty Hyde Bailey, Bruce R. Payne and James E. Russell) all introduced Rural Education courses in 1914. To Cornell University, however, belongs the chief credit for initiating this movement. A full Department of Rural Education was established here in the fall of 1914 but courses for rural teachers in nature study and elementary science, developed by Mrs. Anna Comstock and others, preceded this action by almost twenty years. Owing probably to its setting in a College of Agriculture the Department of Rural Education at Cornell has always emphasized the secondary and vocational aspects of Rural Education.

Specialized work in Rural Education was begun at Peabody College in the summer of 1914 when Professors W. K. Tate and E. B. Branson of North Carolina offered courses in rural school supervision and rural sociology. The same summer Dr. J. B. Coulter gave a course in rural economics and Dr. Fletcher B. Dressler began his noted work in rural sanitation.

At Teachers College, Columbia University, Dr. Warren H. Wilson, Head of the Country Church Department of the Presbyterian Board, introduced rural sociology in the summer of 1914 and taught it continuously both winter and summer for ten years. The Department of Rural Education stressing the needs of one-teacher schools, but promoting various courses, activities and research in both rural elementary and secondary education including teacher-training, supervision, curriculum and administration, was organized in 1917-18 and has been consistently maintained under two to four specialized instructors for twenty-six years.

The University of Chicago, towering for fifty-odd years over the greatest agricultural region of the world, has heretofore completely ignored the needs of education in rural areas as a specialized field of study. Rural Education offerings have recently been introduced by Chicago, however, under the direction of its nationally-known Floyd W. Reeves, Professor of Educational Administration, who offered a first rural seminar for eleven students in the summer of 1943.

PRESENT STATUS AND SUMMER ACTIVITIES

With state support, heavy endowment, and federal subsidy as a Land Grant College, Cornell University is financially advantaged in the present war period. As a result, it has been possible to keep regular offerings in Rural Education more intact here than in other institutions. These include, both summer and winter, an impressive array of courses for the preparation of teachers, supervisors and extension workers in agriculture, home economics and nature study; also courses for principals, supervisors and rural education specialists in normal schools, teachers colleges and state departments of education. This entire program is carried on in close cooperation with various units of the University, particularly the divisions of Agriculture, Home Economics, Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology, but is taught and directed by six designated "Professors of Rural Education" including especially Julian E. Butterworth, Emery N. Ferris, Clyde B. Moore and R. M. Stewart. A new offering of note is an "Interdepartmental Seminar on Problems of Rural Reconstruction in Various Countries" designed to develop workers for promoting better, all-around rural living in foreign lands after the war. Another important rural project for the past fifteen years has been the "Cornell Short Course for Missionaries" maintained annually.

Peabody College, being largely concerned with education in the predominately rural South has logically emphasized Rural Education thruout its entire history. Prominent among its activities in this field have been the many notable summer conferences on various phases of rural life and education in the South, financed largely by the General Education Board. At the present time an important Council of Rural Agencies looking toward the improvement of community life in the South is being promoted.

In the current Peabody catalog for 1944-45 a four-year under-graduate Curriculum in Community and Country Life is still presented and various graduate courses in the teaching, supervision and administration of rural schools are included. A distinctive characteristic of Peabody instruction however, is that practically all courses in adapting to Southern conditions become automatically semi-rural. Saturday classes for in-service rural teachers are also offered and field workshops are being developed. Summer workshops of rural type, reports Dr. Norman Frost, have been held at Peabody every summer for five years, two outstanding ones on teacher-education and the small elementary school having been conducted by Dr. John E. Brewton this past summer.

At the University of Chicago a "Rural Education Project" designed to carry on teaching, research, and field-service activities, was established in the fall of 1943 under the guidance of Professor Reeves and a special faculty Committee on Rural Education. Most practical of the subprojects developed by this group for present war conditions are the brief one-week Conferences on Education in Rural Communities held at the University for the first time August 21 to 25 this past summer, and tentatively planned also for the Christmas recess, 1944 and March 1945. The first such conference last August attracted some fifty in-service rural workers and served to introduce a three-weeks Workshop in Rural School Supervision attended by 33 representatives of various states, chiefly Midwestern where rural school problems are preeminent.

Rural activities at Chicago announced for the regular academic year of 1944-45 are limited to a single half-course on Planning for Post-war Education in Rural Communites conducted by Dr. Reeves in the spring quarter, and to general field work and lecturing during the fall session.

As well known to all readers of this circular, Teachers College, Columbia University, has for more than a quarter century maintained a department of Rural Education thru which several thousand graduate students, both American and foreign and of every race and creed, have been prepared for leadership in the field of Rural Education. This has been a unique and distinctive record for a privately-supported institution of metropolitan setting, due primarily, and as previously indicated, to the leadership and vision of its Dean Emeritus James E. Russell. But owing to war conditions this service has been sharply curtailed of late. For the first time in thirty years the Summer Session Announcement of 1944 appeared without the inclusion of a single course in Rural Education or Rural Sociology. This was an oversight in printing, however, as Professor Frank W. Cyr, recently returned from sabbatical leave, actually gave two courses during the summer, one for rural superintendents and the other a workshop for county rural school supervisors and helping teachers of New Jersey.

During the present winter session professor Edmund deS. Brunner is giving his reguar course in Rural Sociology to a group of fifty-three students and is also offering the long-established field course in Rural Education. These are the only rural courses announced in the catalog for 1944-45. Dr. Cyr is again absent on leave engaged in various field projects including conference-planning assistance to the National Education Association; editorial work on two series of books; and consultative service to State Departments of Education on rural school finance, larger school units, transportation, and the improvement of rural high schools. Meanwhile, the general registration of Teachers College this fall has increased 28 per cent over that of last year, and prospects are encouraging for prompt reexpansion in this important aspect of American education as soon as the war closes.

IN NEGRO INSTITUTIONS

The three leading Negro Universities of Howard, Fisk and Atlanta all give some attention to Rural Education in a specialzied sense, while the well-known institutions of Hampton and Tuskegee and several of the state Agricultural and Mechanical Colleges do much more. At Howard University, in the metropolitan center of the national capital, this rural interest finds expression only in a course in Rural Sociology and in a Rural Education Section of the quarterly Journal of Negro Education edited by Dr. Alethea H. Washington of the Howard faculty.

Atlanta University has for several years been a distinctive center for the training of rural education leaders. Especially strong are the rural offerings of its summer sessions which in 1944 included four special courses in rural education, one in rural sociology, a workshop in advanced supervision of rural schools (largely for Jeanes supervisors) and a Seventeenth Annual Rural Institute for teachers and community leaders. Prominently identified with most of these rural activities for years has been Mrs. Helen Adele Whiting, former State Supervisor of Jeanes Work for Georgia and now Supervisor of Practice Teaching for the Atlanta University System.

Fisk University in Nashville, Tennessee, offers both winter and summer, a splendidly well-rounded group of courses known as the Southern Rural Life Program. These courses cover every level and phase of Negro rural life in the South from the one-teacher rural school and rural secondary education to rural community sociology, surveys, organization, health, recreation, youth problems, adult education and religion. Appropriate workshops, seminars and other techniques are employed in developing this instruction, also student teaching in small rural schools and in the Allen-White rural high-school of Whiteville, Tennessee. Chiefly responsible for the practical direction of this excellent set-up are Professors George N. Redd, Harold F. Smith, Ellen F. Greene, James H. White and Fisk's noted sociologist, Charles S. Johnson thru whose ability special funds from the Julius Rosenwald Fund have been made available to Fisk for research and demonstration.

Hampton and Tuskegee Institutes having originated for the primary purpose of mass education among Negroes, still hold a genuine interest in Rural Education, notwithstanding the competitive tendencies of urban influence in American life, and their recent struggles for academic rating as Class A colleges. At Hampton, regular yearly courses in agricultural economics, rural sociology, rural education and rural student teaching are still given. During recent summer sessions similar courses have been conducted with the addition of an outstanding conference-program on Rural Education and Country Life among Negroes in the South, in the summer of 1943; and an Eastern Shore Workshop for local counties of this area in 1944.

Tuskegee Institute, as the recognized center of Negro rural life in the deep South, offers a variety of services to Rural Education. Among others, these include specialized courses in rural school and community organization, and also in agricultural economics, rural socialogy, rural psychology, and rural leadership. Four off-campus rural training schools are conducted and programs in rural health, rural drama, adult and children's cooperatives, and community service leagues, are maintained. An Annual Tuskegee Negro Conference, composed largely of farmers, has been presented for years, while the Institute is head of the federal Extension Service including 4-H Club Work, for seven states.

NEWS NOTES

Most outstanding of recent rural events was the White House Conference on Rural Education October 3, 4 and 5, initiated by Charl Ormand Williams and developed by three divisions of the N. E. A. About 250 leaders in Rural Education were in attendance and Mrs. Roosevelt acted as Conference hostess. Program participants particularly well known to readers of this leaflet included Kate V. Wofford, Howard A. Dawson. Anne Hoppock, Troy L. Stearns, Helen H. Heyl, Lois M. Clark, Fred McCuistion, John W. Davis, Effie Bathurst, Richard B. Kennan, Norman Frost, Austin R. Meadows, Walter Guamnitz, Frank W. Cyr and Fannie W. Dunn. A mimeographed summary of this epochal forum prepared by Ralph B. Jones, State Commissioner of Arkansas, is already available. This and a later printed report may be obtained from N. E. A. Headquarters, 1201 16th Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

New York State Department of Education has recently restored its Bureau of Rural Education as originally developed by the late Ray P. Snyder. This Bureau under the present direction of Francis E. Griffin and James A. Harris, has special charge of centralized or consolidated schools which are now literally rolling in under the rapid reorganization of New York state local districts. Helen Hay Heyl, formerly with this Bureau, is now Chief of the Bureau of Curriculum Development (elementary).

Helen Heffernan, Chief of the State Division of Elementary Education, reports that a California Conference on Mexican-American children was held in Los Angeles May 12 and 13. Carey McWilliams, noted authority on migrants, was the principal speaker, and the problem was approached from the economic, political, and social, as well as the educational, point of view.

The Julius Rosenwald Fund of Chicago (4901 Ellis Avenue) is now issuing a Monthly Summary of Events and Trends in Race Relations which should be known to every American educator, both white and colored. This 30 page publication is prepared and published for the Fund by the Social Science Institute of Fisk University under the direction of Dr. Charles S. Johnson. Both the industrial and social fronts, as well as a review of the month, numerous news items, magazine briefs, and book reviews are covered in each issue. Invaluable to all students of race relations; and apparently distributed free.

Jeanes Teachers of the Southern states—Negro rural school supervisors—have recently organized a National Jeanes Association. This organization originated thru the leadership of Mrs. Mayme L. Copeland, State Jeanes Supervisor of Kentucky. Mrs. Copeland is now President, and the Executive Secretary is Miss Shellie T. Northcutt, Special Jeanes Teacher of the Southern Education Foundation, 726 Jackson Place, Washington, D. C. Chief objectives of the Association are to publicize Jeanes work, establish new goals for its attainment, raise qualifications for Jeanes teachers, and publish a monthly bulletin for members.

Thru the auspices of Vernon L. Nickell, State Superintendent of Illinois, school children of the state with contributed nickels and dimes have lately purchased one of the five existing copies of the Gettysburg address in Lincoln's own pen writing. This rare manuscript will be preserved in the Illinois State Historical Library in Springfield. The purchase price was $60,000.

On November 15 at 3:30 o'clock in Horace Mann Auditorium, Teachers College, Columbia University celebrated its half-century mark with a Fiftieth Anniversary Convocation. Dean W. F. Russell presided and the opening prayer was offered by the Right Reverend William T. Manning, Bishop of New York. Addresses were made by President Nicholas Murray Butler, President James B. Conant of Harvard University, President Isaiah Bowman of Johns Hopkins University, and Mr. Cleveland E. Dodge, Chairman of the Teachers College Board of Trustees.

Because of World War conditions countless missionaries are now marooned here at home and available for community lectures and temporary or permanent teaching positions. One such leader from the foreign field is Dr. Frederick G. Williams, Salina, Kansas, formerly of India, but now principal of the Community High School at Hindman, Kentucky.

file Bibliographies

BULLETINS FOR TEACHERS OF RURAL AND VILLAGE SCHOOLS.

Compiled by Mabel Carney, Marseilles, Illinois.

NOTE—These bulletins relate mostly to actual teaching in one and two-teacher schools and small rural high schools. The list is printed separately so that it may be used more conveniently by supervisors and teacher-training instructors. Publications are numbered to facilitate easy class reference.

All bulletins are FREE unless otherwise indicated. If you know of other similar bulletins of special worth, not included here, please notify the compiler.—M. C.

1. ACTUAL NEEDS AND PRACTICABLE SOLUTIONS —BRUTON HEIGHTS COMMUNITY SCHOOL. Bulletin No. 41. New Dominion Series, Extension Division, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia.

   Account of an experimental Negro school at Williamsburg, Va., aided by the General Education Board.

2. A HANDBOOK FOR TEACHERS OF PRIMARY READING. State Department of Education, Charleston, West Virginia. 1940.

   An excellent, recent bulletin on primary reading.

3. A YEAR WITH A THIRD GRADE OF THE UNIVERSITY SCHOOL. Bulletin No. 3, Volume 12, Bureau of School Service, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky. Price 50 cents.

   Very good, suggestive account of how to teach a third grade thru an activity and unit program. Illustrated.

4. CHILDREN AND YOU—A PRIMER OF CHILD CARE. By Eva Knox Evans. Published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York City. Price 35 cents.

   Pamphlet on the care of pre-school children. Good for both mothers and teachers. Illustrated with pen sketches.

5. CURRICULUM GUIDES FOR TEACHERS OF FIVE-YEAR OLD CHILDREN. Bulletin of the State Department of Education, Albany, New York. 1935.

   Old and urbanized but contains some ideas useful for rural and village teachers having five-year old children.

6. DYNAMIC EDUCATION: A HANDBOOK FOR RURAL SCHOOL ADMINISTRATORS. Dr. Otis C. Amis, Western State Teachers College, Kalamazoo, Michigan. 1940. Purchase from the Quarrie Corporation, 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago. Price 20 cents.

   A bulletin devoted chiefly to answering questions on the activity type of teaching in rural schools as contrasted with the formal, traditional type.

7. ELEMENTARY EDUCATION IN TWO COMMUNITIES OF THE TENNESSEE VALLEY. Bulletin No. 3. Volume 14. Bureau of School Service, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky. Price 50 cents.

   Gives descriptions of the Wilson Dam and Gilbertsville Schools. Interesting, well-written and profusely illustrated.

8. EXPLORING YOUR COMMUNITY. By Gladys L. Potter. Bulletin of the Association for Childhood Education, 1201 Sixteenth Street, N. W. Washington, D. C. Price 35 cents.

   Suggestive on the study of community life for lower grades.

9. GUIDING CHILDREN'S READING THROUGH EXPERIENCE. By Roma Gans. Bulletin Bureau of Publications, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York. Price 60 cents.

   See also the special series of bulletins on Practical Suggestions for Teaching edited by Hollis L. Caswell of which this publication is an example. Others deal with elementary science, children's literature, pupil progress, child behavior and teaching the slow learner.

10. HANDBOOK FOR PARENTS. Bulletin No. 9 of the Virginia State Board of Education. April 1941. Published by the State Department of Education, Richmond, Virginia.

    An excellent bulletin for both teachers and parents explaining new methods versus old in public education today.

11. HANDBOOK FOR RURAL ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS. Bulletin No. 3. State Department of Education, Albany, New York. 1936.

    A little old but still helpful on the organization and management of rural and village schools.

12. HEALTH TEACHING ACTIVITIES IN RURAL SCHOOLS. Buffalo Tuberculosis Association of Erie County, 708 Ellicott Street, Buffalo, New York, March 1938.

    Gives reports of rural health units by various rural teachers. Edited by Vivian V. Drenckhahn of the Buffalo Association.

13. INTER-AMERICAN EDUCATION: A CURRICULUM GUIDE. By Effie G. Bathrust and Helen K. Mackintosh. Bulletin 1943, No. 2. United States Office of Education. Order from the Superintendent of Documents, United States Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. Price 15 cents in coin.

    Illustrated and full of definite teaching suggestions and helps.

14. LIVING AND LEARNING IN SMALL RURAL SCHOOLS. Bulletin of the State Department of Education, Nashville, Tennessee. Free to Tennessee teachers. 50 cents for others.

    Good for the managerial aspects of rural school teaching. Not so helpful on curriculum content and teaching techniques.

15. ONE DOLLAR OR LESS. By Edith A. Lathrop. Pamphlet No. 88, 1940 United States Office of Education. Buy from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. Price 5 cents (in coin).

    Very helpful in selecting inexpensive books for school libraries.

16. PROGRESSIVE EDUCATION MAGAZINE—SPECIAL RURAL NUMBER. April, 1942. Obtainable from the Progressive Education Association, 221 West 57th Street, New York City. Price 50 cents.

    All articles and pictures give accounts of actual teaching projects in rural schools. See especially the "Consumers' Co-operative of Centerville Rural School in Minnesota," page 203.

17. RURAL COMMUNITY HIGH SCHOOLS FACE THEIR PROBLEMS. By C. E. Ragsdale. Committee on Rural Education, Farm Foundation, Chicago, Illinois. Free copies still available from Mabel Carney, Marseilles, Illinois, Member of the Committee.

    A report on seven small rural high schools in Wisconsin which attempted to base their teaching upon the life-interests and community needs of their pupils.

    For fuller report see also "Adventures in Rural Education", a 348 page volume, illustrated and paper bound, available from Dr. C. E. Ragsdale, University of Wisconsin, Madison, at $1.00 per copy.

18. RURAL EDUCATION AND RACE RELATIONS. Bimonthly news leaflet prepared and distributed by Mabel Carney, Marseilles, Illinois, for former students and friends. Free upon request.

19. SAFETY GUIDE FOR THE FARM AND HOME FRONT. Available free from the Department of Public Services, General Mills, Inc., Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Excellent on the prevention of accidents and injuries in farm life.

20. SCHOOL CHILDREN AND THE WAR SERIES. Several leaflets by the United States Office of Education. Sold by the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 5 and 10 cents each.

21. SELECTED LIST OF TEN CENT BOOKS. By Mary Lincoln Morse. Association for Childhood Education, 1201—16th street N. W., Washington, D. C. 15 cents.

22. SPECIAL OPPORTUNITIES OF SMALL RURAL SCHOOLS. By Lois M. Clark. Bulletin 230, Department of Public Instruction, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. Free.

Excellent—one of the best bulletins ever written on rural school teaching. Modern and scientific, yet simple and practical. Contains many reports on activity teaching in rural schools, also a very helpful diagram on Community Resources for Learning, and a Daily Program Arranged for Learning Units.

23. STILL SITS THE SCHOOLHOUSE BY THE ROAD. Bulletin by Iman E. Schatzmann and the Committee on Rural Education of the Farm Foundation, Chicago.

Shows recent technological changes in American farm life and how rural schools should be impoved to meet these changed conditions. A few copies are still available free from Mabel Carney. Send 3 cent stamp for postage.

24. TEACHERS' GUIDE TO CHILD DEVELOPMENT IN SMALL RURAL SCHOOLS. A Curriculum for Rural Schools Prepared under the Auspices of the California Curriculum Commission and Edited by Helen Heffernan. Order from The Division of Text Books and Publications, State Department of Education, Sacramento, California. Forthcoming. Price announced later.

An excellent, new curriculum and teaching guide for rural school work, similar to the other superior guides formerly issued by California for Primary grades and for Intermediate grades.

25. THE SCHOOL CURRICULUM AND ECONOMIC IMPROVEMENT. By Maurice F. Seay and Harold F. Clark. Bulletin No. 1, September 1940, Bureau of School Service, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky. Price 50 cents.

Shows how the economic conditions and living standards of rural communities were improved in Kentucky thru the introduction of new material in the reading and activity curriculum. Samples of such reading materials are included. See also reading booklets for children developed thru the experiment. Project financed by the Sloan Foundation of New York.

26. THE VACATION UNIT. By Mrs. Eula A. Johnston and Anna Leah Carpenter. Teachers' Lesson Unit Series, Number 101. Bureau of Publications, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York City. Price 30 cents, 1939.

Reports educational interests and activities carried on by children thru the summer vacation as a means of continued learning in Hamilton County Tennessee.

27. VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE BIBLIOGRAPHY. Compiled by Ann Tanneyhill, Department of Industrial Relations. National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York City. Price 25 cents.

An excellent list of references covering both general and Negro phases of the subject.

28. WHAT THE HIGH SCHOOLS OUGHT TO TEACH. Prepared by a Special Committee on the Secondary School Curriculum. Available from the American Council on Education, 744 Jackson Place, Washington, D. C. Price 30 cents.

Shows how high schools, both rural and urban, should change their curriculum and teaching to give young people the preparation they need for modern life.

29. WHAT DOES RESEARCH SAY? Prepared by leading educational authorities in Michigan. Published by the State Department of Public Instruction, Lansing, Michigan, 1937.

Whole bulletin written in the form of questions and answers telling what scientific educational research has found out about the many problems of teachers in arithmetic, reading, social studies, character education, activity program, etc.

30. WORKING WITH CHILDREN IN ONE AND TWO TEACHER SCHOOLS. Bulletin No. 319, State Department of Public Instruction, Lansing, Michigan, 1942.

A simple, practical guide for rural school teaching. Developed thru summer workshop courses for rural teachers in three of the State Teachers Colleges of Michigan. Contains many concrete ideas.

31. YEARBOOKS—Department of Rural Education of the National Education Association, 1201 Sixteenth Street N. W., Washington, D. C. These are available as follows at 50 cents a copy. All are outstandingly good.

(a) ORGANIZATION OF CURRICULUM FOR ONE-TEACHER SCHOOLS. Yearbook, 1933. Special price, 25 cents. Fannie W. Dunn, Editor.

(b) ECONOMICAL ENRICHMENT OF THE SMALL SECONDARY SCHOOL CURRICULUM. Yearbook, 1934. Frank W. Cyr, Editor.

(c) RURAL SCHOOL LIBRARIES. Yearbook, 1936. Edith A. Lathrop, Editor.

(d) NEWER TYPES OF INSTRUCTION IN SMALL RURAL SCHOOLS. Yearbook, 1938. Kate V. Wofford, Editor.

(e) COMMUNITY RESOURCES IN RURAL SCHOOLS. Yearbook, 1939. Kate V. Wofford, Editor.

(f) CHILD DEVELOPMENT AND TOOL SUBJECTS IN RURAL SCHOOLS. Yearbook, 1941.

(g) GUIDANCE IN RURAL SCHOOLS. Yearbook, 1942. Fannie W. Dunn, Editor.

(h) CONSERVATION IN RURAL SCHOOLS. Yearbook, 1943. Effie G. Bathurst, Editor.

(i) RURAL SCHOOLS AND THE WAR. Yearbook, 1944.

Materials - Bibliography 45

U. S. Department of Labor
CHILDREN'S BUREAU
Washington

March 1945

SELECTED REFERENCES ON SOCIAL CONDITIONS AFFECTING FAMILY AND COMMUNITY LIFE AMONG NEGROES IN THE UNITED STATES

Prepared by Vinita V. Lewis
Consultant in Social Service

This reading list is an invitation to learning extended to health and welfare workers in Federal, State, and local agencies throughout the United States, in a conviction that knowledge of minority peoples is a scarce commodity in the information markets of our country. The bibliography suggests materials that deal specifically with Negroes as a minority. It is hoped that professional workers in agencies that provide health and welfare services will find the list helpful in studying problems affecting family and community life among Negroes in the United States. These workers serving all of our people cannot afford to have less than the most reliable information in their kit of tools.

All minority groups in our national life, but particularly Negroes, are the Cinderellas of the public household. Unlike Cinderalla their destiny lies not in the hands of a beneficent godmother. Their destiny, like that of every American, is being determined by the ability of our country to govern itself in unity for the good of all. The performance of health and welfare workers affects in many ways this ability to govern ourselves and consequently the destiny of our American communities. The most genuine safeguard to our success in establishing safe American community life is the professional worker's own qualifications to do his job wherever he is at work in agencies responsible for programs under Federal, State, or local auspices. In proportion to the professional worker's knowledge, experience, and skill, Negro children will receive the benefits intended for all people in our National life.

In the years that the Children's Bureau has been giving consultation on developing State and local services for children, several publications have proved helpful to workers having responsibility for improving and extending services to Negro children. One book most frequently used by the staff is Ira De A. Reid's story and fact about Negro youth, entitled IN A MINOR KEY (1940), which is a well-written narrative of statistical fact. Two books which may well follow in the worker's selection of material are AFTER FREEDOM (1939) by Hortense Powdermaker and GROWING UP IN THE BLACK BELT (1941) by Charles S. Johnson. Neither of these books can be read one time and remembered; they become references and are used with new enthusiasm as one learns, considers, and works.

Two books that should be a part of every worker's introduction to American Negro family life are THE NEGRO FAMILY IN THE UNITED STATES (1939) by E. Franklin Frazier and THE NEGRO'S SHARE (1943) by Richard Sterner and others. These are also reference books.

AN AMERICAN DILEMMA (1944) by Gunnar Myrdal and others presents with scholarly insight our national problems as they relate to the minority status of Negroes.

PATTERNS OF NEGRO SEGREGATION (1943) by Charles S. Johnson is a rather concrete presentation of segregation as a social problem and the book also shows the widespread practice of segregation of Negroes in the United States.

Two books developed from an interesting and stimulating method of research are: CASTE AND CLASS IN A SOUTHERN TOWN (1937) by John Dollard and CHILDREN OF BONDAGE (1940) by Allison Davis and John Dollard. The case histories in CHILDREN OF BONDAGE are of special interest to both health and welfare workers because they are devoid of any traditional opinions about Negro children. This case material as well as that given in the book by Charles S. Johnson, GROWING UP IN THE BLACK BELT (1941), raises pertinent questions as to the community services that are required for children who are growing up under hazardous conditions such as those cited in these studies. The book by Robert L. Sutherland, COLOR, CLASS, AND PERSONALITY (1942) clarifies the more detailed discussions of Dollard, Davis, and Johnson.

The book on THE MIND OF THE SOUTH (1941) by Wilbur J. Cash interprets the social milieu out of which some present-day attitudes were born. For the sake of particularizing on a given period of time, the Howard Fast novel, FREEDOM ROAD (1944), on the reconstruction period after the Civil War, is recommended. In reading this novel it would be helpful to recognize that this story conforms more to the beliefs that many Negroes have held about this era.

Roy Ottley's NEW WORLD A-COMING (1943) is a little storehouse of information. If you have lived at all close to the problems of American Negroes, as you read you will fill in complementary stories and incidents.

Obviously it is impossible to introduce each book on the list. It is also unnecessary because the few that have been discussed are likely to be sufficiently stimulating to lead the reader on to new discoveries.

PERIODICALS

The Crisis; official organ for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Crisis Publishing Co., Inc. (69 Fifth Avenue), New York.

Journal of Negro Education; a quarterly review of problems incident to the education of Negroes. Bureau of Educational Research, Howard University, Washington.

National Negro Health News. Published quarterly by the Public Health Service, Federal Security Agency, Washington.

Negro Digest; a magazine of Negro comment. Published monthly by the Negro Digest Publishing Co. (5619 South State Street), Chicago.

Opportunity; a journal of Negro life. Published monthly by the National Urban League for Social Service Among Negroes. (1133 Broadway), New York.

Summary of Events and Trends in Race Relations. Prepared monthly for the Julius Rosenwald Fund by the Social Science Institute, Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.

BOOKS, MAGAZINE ARTICLES, AND PAMPHLETS

1944

Bell, Juliet O., and Wilkins, Helen J.: Interracial Practices in Community YWCAs; a study under the auspices of the commission to gather interracial experience. The Woman's Press (600 Lexington Avenue), New York, 1944. 116 pp.

*Fast, Howard: Freedom Road; a novel of the reconstruction period in the South. Duell, Sloan & Pearce, Inc., New York, 1944. 263 pp.

Governor's Peace Officers Committee: Interim Report on Civil Disturbances. Office of the Governor, Sacramento, Calif., 1944. 22 pp. (Processed.)

Joffe, Natalie F., and Walker, Tomannie Thompson: Some Food Patterns of Negroes in the United States and Their Relationship to Wartime Problems of Food and Nutrition. Committee on Food Habits, National Research Council (2101 Constitution Avenue), Washington, 1944. 50 pp. (Processed.)

Johnson, Charles S.: The Negro War Worker in San Francisco; a local self-survey. Young Women's Christian Association, San Francisco, Calif., 1944. 98 pp.

Johnson, Charles S.: Summary of Lectures, Institute of Race Relations; sponsored by the Race Relations Division of the American Missionary Association at Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., July 3-21, 1944. 28 pp. (Processed)

Klineberg, Otto, editor: Characteristics of the American Negro. Negro in American life series, Carnegie Corporation of New York. Harper & Bros., New York, 1944, 409 pp.

* Items starred are annotated in the introduction to the list.

Larkins, John R.: The Negro Population of North Carolina. Special Bulletin No. 23, State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, Raleigh, N. C., 1944. 79 pp.

Larkins, John R.: A Survey of Some Resources for Negroes in North Carolina. State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, Raleigh, N. C., 1944. 18 pp. (Processed.)

Mayor's Conference on Race Relations: The Negro in Chicago; proceedings of the conference, February 1944. Chicago, 1944. 64 pp. (Processed.)

Meyer, Agnes E.: Journey Through Chaos. Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York, 1944. 388 pp.

Murray, Florence, editor: Negro Handbook, 1944; a manual of current facts, statistics, and general information concerning Negroes in the United States. Current Reference Publications (2107 Seventh Avenue), New York 27, 1944. 286 pp.

*Myrdal Gunnar; and others: An American Dilemma; the Negro problem and modern democracy. Negro in American life series, Carnegie Corporation of New York. Harper & Bros., New York, 1944. Two vols., 1483 pp.

National Urban League for Social Service Among Negroes: Freedom's Seed; 1943 annual report. (1133 Broadway), New York, 1944.

Powdermaker, Hortense: Probing Our Prejudices; a unit for high-school students. Harper & Bros., New York, 1944. 73 pp.

War Manpower Commission: The United States Employment Service and the Negro Work Applicant. Washington, January 1944. 56 pp.

Weckler, J. E., and Hall, Theo E.: The Police and Minority Groups. International City Managers' Association (1313 East Sixtieth Street), Chicago 37, 1944. 20 pp.

Welfare Federation of Cleveland: The Central Areas Social Study, March 1942-July 1944. Central Areas Community Council (5806 Woodland Avenue), Cleveland, Ohio, 159 pp. (Processed.)

1943

Benedict, Ruth, and Weltfish, Gene: The Races of Mankind. Public Affairs Pamphlet No. 85. Public Affairs Committee, Inc. (30 Rockefeller Plaza), New York 20, 1943. 31 pp.

Embree, Edwin R.: Brown Americans; the story of the tenth of the Nation. Viking Press, New York, 1943. 248 pp.

Franklin, John Hope: Free Negro in North Carolina, 1790-1860. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1943. 271 pp.

Jack, Robert L.: History of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Meador Publishing Co., Boston, 1943. 110 pp.

*Johnson, Charles S.: Patterns of Negro Segregation. Negro in American life series, Carnegie Corporation of New York. Harper & Bros., New York, 1943. 332 pp.

Johnson, Charles S., and associates: To Stem This Tide; a survey of racial tension areas in the United States. Pilgrim Press, Boston, 1943. 142 pp.

LaFarge, John: The Race Question and the Negro; a study of the Catholic doctrine on interracial justice. Longmans, Green & Co., New York, 1943. 315 pp.

Lee, A. M., and Humphrey, N. D.: Race Riot. Dryden Press, New York, 1943. 143 pp.

*Ottley, Roi: New World A-Coming; inside black America. Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston, 1943. 364 pp.

Poteat, Edwin McNeill: Four Freedoms and God. Harper & Bros., New York, 1943. 155 pp.

Raper, Arthur F.: Tenants of the Almighty. The Macmillian Co., New York, 1943. 403 pp.

*Sterner, Richard, and others: The Negro's Share; a study of income, consumption, housing, and public assistance. Negro in American life series, Carnegie Corporation of New York. Harper & Bros., New York, 1943. 433 pp.

1942

Education, U. S. Office of Federal Security Agency: National Survey of the Higher Education of Negroes. Three vols.: (1) Socio-economic approach to educational problems; (2) General studies of colleges for Negroes; (3) Intensive study of selected colleges for Negroes. Washington, 1942.

Lewis, Julian H.: The Biology of the Negro. University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 1942, 433 pp.

Pierson, Donald: Negroes in Brazil. University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 1942. 392 pp.

Redding, Jay Saunders: No Day of Triumph. Harper & Bros., New York, 1942. 342 pp.

Shalloo, J. P., and Young, Donald, editors: Minority Peoples in a Nation at War. The Annals, American Academy of Political and Social Science (Philadelphia), September 1942.276 pp.

*Sutherland, Robert L.: Color , Class, and Personality. Prepared for the American Youth Commission, American Council on Education, Washington, 1942. 135 pp.

1941

*Cash, Wilbur J.: The Mind of the South. Alfred A. Knopf, New York, 1941. 429 pp.

Herskovits, Melville J.: The Myth of the Negro Past. Harper & Bros., New York, 1941. 374 pp.

*Johnson, Charles S.: Growing Up in the Black Belt; Negro youth in the Rural South. Prepared for the American Youth Commission, American Council on Education, Washington, 1941. 360 pp.

Rollins, Charlemae: We Build Together. Pamphlet Publication No. 2, National Council of Teachers of English (211 West Sixty-Eighth Street). Chicago, 1941. 47 pp.

White House Conference on Children in a Democracy: Children in Minority Groups. Ch. IV, Pub. 272, Final Report of the Conference, January 18-20, 1940. Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor, Washington, 1941.

1940

*Davis, Allison, and Dollard, John: Children of Bondage; the personality development of Negro youth in the urban South. Prepared for the American Youth Commission, American Council on Education, Washington, 1940. 299 pp.

Mangum, Charles Staples, Jr.: The Legal Status of the Negro. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1940. 436 pp.

*Reid, Ira De A.: In a Minor Key; Negro youth in story and fact. Prepared for the American Youth Commission, American Council on Education, Washington, 1940. 134 pp.

Stuart, M. S.: An Economic Detour; a history of insurance in the lives of American Negroes. W. Malliet & Co., New York, 1940. 339 pp.

1939

Cayton, H. R., and Mitchell, G. S.: Black Workers and the New Unions. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1939. 473 pp.

Federal Writers' Project: These Are Our Lives; as told by people and written by members of the Federal Writers' Project of the Works Progress Administration in North Carolina, Tennessee, and Georgia. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1939. 421 pp.

*Frazier, E. Franklin: The Negro Family in the United States. University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 1939. 686 pp.

McQuistion, Fred: Graduate Instruction for Negroes in the United States. George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., 1939. 172 pp.

*Powdermaker, Hortense: After Freedom: a cultural study in the deep South. Viking Press, New York, 1939. 408 pp.

1938

Nixon, H. C.: Forty Acres and Steel Mules. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1938. 98 pp.

1937

*Dollard, John: Caste and Class in a Southern Town. Institute of Human Relations, Yale University Press, New Haven, Conn., 1937. 502 pp.

Doyle, Bertram: The Etiquette of Race Relations in the South; a study in social control. University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 1937. 249 pp.

Roucek, Joseph S., and Brown, Francis J., editors: Our Racial and National Minorities; their history, contributions, and present problems. Prentice-Hall, New York, 1937. 877 pp.

1936

Ford, James: Slums and Housing with Special Reference to New York City. Harvard University Press, Cambridge, Mass., 1936. Two vols.

Johnson, Charles S.: Preface to Racial Understanding. Friendship Press, New York, 1936. 206 pp.

Raper, Arthur F.: Preface to Peasantry; a tale of two Black Belt counties. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1936, 423 pp.

Reid, Ira De A.: Adult Education Among Negroes. Associates in Negro Folk Education (Box 636, Benjamin Franklin Station), Washington, 1936. 73 pp.

Woofter, T. J. Jr., and others: Landlord and Tenant on the Cotton Plantation. Research Monograph V, Works Progress Administration, Washington, 1936. 288 pp.

1935

Johnson, Charles S.: The Negro College Graduate. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1935.

Klineberg, Otto: Negro Intelligence and Selective Migration. Columbia University Press, New York, 1935. 66 pp.

1934

Benedict, Ruth: Patterns of Culture. Houghton Mifflin Co., New York, 1934. 291 pp.

Johnson, Charles S.: Shadow of the Plantation. University of Chicago Press, Chicago 1934. 214 pp.

Radin, Paul: The Racial Myth. McGraw-Hill, New York, 1934. 141 pp.

Woodson, Carter G.: The Negro Professional Man and the Community. Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, Washington, 1934. 365 pp.

1933

Mays, B. E., and Nicholson, J. W.: Negro's Church. Institute of Social and Religious Research (49 East Thirty-Third Street), New York, 1933. 321 pp.

1932

Edwards, P. K.: The Southern Urban Negro as a Consumer. Prentice-Hall, New York, 1932. 323 pp.

Frazier E. Franklin: The Free Negro Family; a study of family origins before the Civil War. Fisk University Press, Nashville, Tenn., 1932. 75 pp.

President's Conference on Home Building and Home Ownership: Negro Housing; report of the Committee on Negro Housing, prepared by Charles S. Johnson. Washington, 1932. 282 pp.

Vance, Rupert B.: Human Geography of the South; a study in regional resources and human adequacy. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1932. 596 pp.

1918 - 1931

Chicago Commission on Race Relations: The Negro in Chicago. University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 1922. 672 pp.

Harmon, J. H., Lindsay, A. G., and Woodson, C. G.: The Negro as a Business Man. Associated Publishers, Inc. (1538 Ninth Street NW.), Washington, 1929.111 pp.

Johnson, Guy B.: Folk Culture on St. Helena Island. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1930. 183 pp.

Kennedy, L. V.: The Negro Peasant Turns Cityward; effects of recent migrations to Northern centers. Columbia University Press, New York, 1930. 270 pp.

Lasker, Bruno: Race Attitudes in Children. Henry Holt & Co., New York, 1929. 394 pp.

Spero, S. D., and Harris, A. L.: The Black Worker; the Negro and the labor movement. Columbia University Press, New York, 1931. 509 pp.

Vance, Rupert B.: Human Factors in Cotton Culture; a study in the social geography of the American South. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1929. 346 pp.

Woodson, Carter G.: A Century of Negro Migration. Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, Washington, 1918. 221 pp.

Woodson, Carter G.: Negro in Our History. Associated Publishers, Washington, 1931. 673 pp.

AMERICAN MINORITY PEOPLE DURING WORLD WAR II

Basic Readings for Americans Concerned about Race Relations

▲

By

EDMONIA WHITE GRANT

Director of Education
Race Relations Division

▲

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

287 FOURTH AVENUE

NEW YORK 10, NEW YORK

REVISED NOVEMBER 1945

GENERAL BACKGROUND

*ABC'S OF SCAPEGOATING with a Foreword by Gordon W. Allport. Central YMCA College, 19 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill. 25 cents. An exposition of the mechanics and conditions of scapegoating which explains why religious and racial minority groups are persecuted.

ALL BRAVE SAILORS by John Beecher, New York: L. B. Fischer, 1945. The story of the "Booker T. Washington," the first American merchant vessel to sail with a mixed crew, under the command of Captain Hugh Mulzac.

AMERICA by Stephen Vincent Benet, New York: Farrar and Rinehart, 1944. A great poet's interpretation of the spiritual, economic and political forces essential to the history of the United States.

AMERICAN COUNTERPOINT by Alexander Alland, New York: Day, 1943. A book of photographs of Americans showing the diversity of racial and national origin in the American population. Also shows how difficult it is to tell an American's origin by the way one looks.

*ASSIGNMENT U.S.A. by Selden Menefee, New York: Reynal and Hitchcock, 1943. A picture of America at war which interprets a 15,000 mile trip into forty-one states made for Princeton University's Office of Public Opinion Research. An interpretation every American could read with profit.

*BROTHERS UNDER THE SKIN by Carey McWilliams, Boston: Little, Brown, 1943. A democrat analyzes the problems of colored peoples (American-Indian, Negro, Chinese and Japanese) within the United States and its possessions, and relates these problems to the world scene. The last chapter gives an "Outline for Action" well worth consideration. Should be read by every literate American.

CAPITALISM AND SLAVERY by Eric Williams, Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1944. A study of the contribution of slavery to the development of British capitalism.

CITY OF CHICAGO—City Planning in Race Relations, Proceedings of the Mayor's Conference on Race Relations, February 1944, Mayor's Committee on Race Relations, 134 North LaSalle Street, Chicago 2, Illinois. Free. Conditions among minority groups in Chicago, especially Negroes.

COLOR AND DEMOCRACY: COLONIES AND PEACE by W. E. B. DuBois, New York: Harcourt, Brace, 1945. A challenge to postwar peace plans from the point of view of colored peoples.

* If only minimum reading is possible.

DEEP RIVER by Henrietta Buckmaster, New York: Harcourt, Brace, 1944. A novel about the poor mountain white people in the South and their fight for democracy and justice for white and Negro southerners.

DEMOCRACY BEGINS AT HOME by Jennings Perry, New York: Lippincott, 1944. The story of the seven-year fight to remove the poll tax by the Nashville Tennessean, a liberal daily still on the fighting line for the establishment of political democracy.

DEMOCRATIC SPIRIT edited by Bernard Smith, New York: Knopf, 1941. An anthology of writings about democracy in the United States from Colonial times to the present.

EDUCATION OF TEACHERS FOR IMPROVING MAJORITY-MINORITY RELATIONSHIPS by Ambrose Caliver, Bulletin, 1944, No. 2 U. S. Office of Education, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., 1944, 15 cents. A study of course offerings in colleges and universities for teachers to learn about racial and national minority groups.

FREEDOM ROAD by Howard Fast, New York: Duel, Sloan and Pearce, 1944. A novel which interprets the Reconstruction Period of the South as an experiment in democracy which worked.

GET TOGETHER AMERICANS by Rachel Davis DuBois, New York: Harper, 1943. A practical guide for getting Americans of different cultural groups to know and understand each other especially through festivals, music and other art forms.

HOW WRITERS PERPETUATE STEREOTYPES by the Bureau of Applied Social Research of Columbia University. The Writers War Board, 122 East 42nd Street, New York 17, New York, 1945. Free. A popular report of a study of the treatment accorded white Protestant Anglo-Saxons in mass media as against the treatment accorded other elements of the American population.

INTERCULTURAL EDUCATION IN AMERICAN SCHOOLS by Willam E. Vickery and Stewart Cole, New York: Harper, 1943. Educational philosophy and methods useful in developing understanding between pupils of different cultures. Written for teachers and group leaders.

MAN'S MOST DANGEROUS MYTH—The Fallacy of Race by M. F. Ashley Montagu, New York: Columbia University Press, 1945. An able and readable presentation of the ideology of "race" which integrates anthropology, genetics, biology and psychology. A must for those who want a sound interpretation of the facts.

MANUAL FOR OFFICIAL COMMITTEES: What Your Official Intergroup Relations Agency Can Do. American Council on Race Relations, 32 West Randolph Street, Chicago 1, Illinois, 1945. No price. Areas in which action can be taken and specific things that can be done.

*A NATION OF NATIONS by Louis Adamic, New York: Harper, 1945. A dynamic revaluation of the American story so that each group in our population is seen as a necessary and integral thread in the pattern of America. Contributes to the basic philosophy of intercultural education.

NATIONAL CIO COMMITTEE TO ABOLISH DISCRIMINATION. Report of the Director, adopted March 13, 1945, National CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination, 718 Jackson Place N. W., Washington 6, D. C. The work of one of labor's most important committees in building unity.

*OF ONE BLOOD ALL NATIONS. An Interracial Code for Protestant Churches, Detroit Council of Churches, 404 Park Avenue Building, Detroit 26, Michigan. Free. A code adopted by the Detroit Council of Churches, February 17, 1944. Includes recommendations in regard to membership, staff and board of control.

ONE AMERICA—The History, Contributions, and Present Problems of Our Racial and National Minorities edited by Francis J. Brown and Joseph Slabey Roucek, New York: Prentice Hall, 1945. This revised edition of "Our Racial and National Minorities" is focused on wartime social change.

*ONE NATION by Wallace Stegner and the Editors of Look, Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1945. Excellent photographs and text interpreting eight important minority group peoples during wartime.

PREJUDICE!—Roadblock to Progress, Army Talk Orientation Fact Sheet No. 70, War Department, Washington 25, D. C., May 5, 1945. Reprinted by International Labor Defense, 112 East 19th Street, New York 3, New York. 5 cents. One of the Army's best educational efforts to combat prejudice and build democracy.

*PRIMER FOR WHITE FOLKS edited by Bucklin Moon, New York: Doubleday Doran, 1945. A penetrating collection of writings about Negroes from Colonial times to the present by Negro and white authors. Contains some choice short stories.

A PRIMER ON RACE by Council on Christian Social Progress of the Northern Baptist Convention. Department of Race Relations Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York. 10 cents. A clever well illustrated ten page presentation of facts about race written in simple language.

RACE DISCRIMINATION AND THE LAW by Carey McWilliams, National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, 205 East 42 Street, New York, N. Y., 1945. 10 cents. The legal basis for attack on discrimination. Answers those who claim that legislation against discrimination is impossible.

RACE RELATIONS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Second Annual Report of Committee on Race Relations, Inc., 743 Investment Building, Washington 5, D. C., 1945. Free. Race Relations in the Nation's capital for representatives of the governments of the world to see.

*RACES OF MANKIND by Ruth Benedict and Gene Weltfish, Public Affairs Committee, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N. Y. 1943. 10 cents. A dramatic presentation of a scientific study of anthropology in simple language.

*SOME OF MY BEST FRIENDS ARE SOLDIERS by Margaret Halsey, New York: Simon and Shuster, 1944. A humorous picture of race relations at the Stage Door Canteen, told in letters.

THE SOUTH: America's Opportunity Number One. Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Ave., N. E., Atlanta 3, Georgia, 1945. 50 cents. A series of important addresses on the South's postwar economy.

THE SPRINGFIELD PLAN, A Photographic Record, by Alexander Alland and James Waterman Wise, New York: Viking, 1945. Excellent photographs and text recording a living plan toward real democracy.

THE STORY OF THE SPRINGFIELD PLAN by Clarence I. Chatto and Alice L. Halligan, New York: Barnes and Nobel, 1945. The official account of Springfield's organized effort to teach its citizens how to live in a democracy. Shows that democracy can be socially learned when it is socially sanctioned.

THEY STILL CARRY ON! Native Fascists: How to Spot Them and Stop Them. Text by U. S. War Department. National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, 205 E. 42nd Street, Room 1613, New York 17, New York, 1945. 10 cents. An illustrated pamphlet of "Army Talk No. 64" which "tells how to spot the native Fascist whether he be professional rabble rouser, senator, cleric, monopolist, grocery clerk, school teacher or your neighbor across the hall."

*TIME BOMB by E. A. Piller, New York: Arco, 1945. A warning to America as to the danger of a fascist explosion. Native fascists and their interlocking organizations exposed and political remedies pointed out.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS. A Fair Employment Practice Handbook by Clarence W. Anderson, Metropolitan Detroit Council on Fair Employment Practice, 906 Transportation Building, Detroit 26, Michigan. Free. Answers to questions most often asked about employment of workers from minority groups.

WHAT AMERICA MEANS TO ME by Pearl Buck, New York: Day, 1942. A collection of speeches and articles by a great champion of human equality which includes the American Negro as well as the peoples of Asia.

WHY RACE RIOTS by Earl Brown, Public Affairs Committeee 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N. Y., 1944. 10 cents. Lessons learned from the 1943 Detroit riots which may be used to prevent riots in any town.

WINDS OF FEAR by Hodding Carter, New York: Farrar and Rinehart, 1944. A novel by a liberal young southerner who sees the fears of white and Negro people living in a small southern town.

WORKING AND FIGHTING TOGETHER, CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C., 1943. 5 cents. Suggestions of what unions can do about the problems of minorities in their own organization.

PERIODICALS

AMERASIA. 225 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Monthly: $2.50 a year. Very helpful in understanding the problems of Americans of Oriental ancestry as well as peoples of Asia.

COMMON GROUND. 222 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Quarterly: $2.00 a year. Official publication of the Common Council for American Unity. Develops an appreciation of what each group has contributed to America.

A MONTHLY SUMMARY OF EVENTS AND TRENDS OF RACE RELATIONS. Department of Social Sciences, Fisk University, Nashville, 8, Tennessee. Free. A summary issued by the Race Relations Divisions of the Julius Rosenwald Fund and the American Missionary Association.

NOW. 1899 W. Jefferson Blvd., Los Angeles 7, California. Semimonthly: $2.50 a year. A popular magazine of all racial groups, emphasizes unity.

THE SOUTHERN PATRIOT. 506 Presbyterian Bldg., Nashville, Tenn. Monthly: $1.00 a year. Official publication of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, composed of liberal and progressive southern leaders—Negro and white.

AMERICAN INDIANS

THE CHANGING INDIAN edited by Oliver La Farge, Norman, Oklahoma: University of Oklahoma Press, 1942. A symposium on the present-day status and problems of American Indians.

CRAZY WEATHER by Charles L. McNichols, New York: Macmillan, 1944. The complex of Mojave Indian desert life as seen through the eyes of a fourteen-year-old white boy.

DELAWARE'S FORGOTTEN FOLK by Clinton A. Weslager, Philadelphia, Pa.: University of Pennsylvania Press, 1943. A study of the people called Moors and Nanticokes who live on the Delmarva Peninsula.

THE INDIAN IN AMERICAN LIFE by G. E. E. Lindguist and others, New York: Friendship Press, 1944. A thought-provoking attempt by experienced workers among American Indians to present against their cultural background the development of American Indians and the efforts of the Indian, the federal government, and the missionaries to solve Indian problems.

INDIANS ARE PEOPLE, TOO by Ruth Muskrat Bronson, New York: Friendship Press, 1944. An Indian leader's interpretation of how American Indians see their past and present problems of "growing up in two worlds," and the interdependence of all Americans.

INDIANS OF THE UNITED STATES by Clark Wissler, Garden City, New York; Doubleday, Doran, 1941. An anthropological study of how Indians live today, and of their past and potential contribution to American culture.

INDIAN WARDSHIP. Home Missions Council of North America, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y., 1943. 15 cents. A detailed outline of the history of Indian wardship from 1831 to the present, with the implications pointed up.

THE LAST FRONTIER by Howard Fast, New York: Press of the Readers Club, 1942. A fascinating story about the Cheyenne Indians.

THE NORTH AMERICAN INDIAN TODAY edited by Charles T. Lorain and Y. F. McIlwraith, Toronto, Canada: University of Toronto Press, 1943. An important background study of Indians in North America. Contains a report of the University of Toronto—Yale University Seminar Conference held in September, 1939.

SPEAKING OF INDIANS by Ella Deloria, New York: Friendship Press, 1944. An Indian anthropologist interprets the cultural problems of her people with warmth and understanding.

THIS IS THE INDIAN by Earle F. Dexter, New York: Friendship Press, 1944. 25 cents. Interesting photographs and stories about Indian work, education and missions.

TRAILS OF FRIENDSHIP WITH INDIAN AMERICANS by Mary Garland Taylor, New York: Friendship Press, New York, 1944. A study guide for junior high school groups.

TWENTIETH CENTURY INDIANS by Frances Cooke Macgregor, New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1941. A pictorial presentation of the life of American Indians.

UNCLE SAM'S STEP CHILDREN by Loring B. Priest, New Brunswick, New Jersey, Rutgers University Press, 1942. A study of the policies of the United States in dealing with Indians, 1865-1887.

WHAT KIND OF DEMOCRACY DO YOU WANT? by Dr. Campbell Wycoff, New York: Friendship Press, 1944. 25 cents. A young people's study guide in which Indians are used as a test case for American democracy.

PERIODICALS

THE AMERICAN INDIAN. American Association on Indian Affairs, 381 Fourth Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. Quarterly: $5.00 a year, includes membership. Official organ of the American Association on Indian Affairs.

INDIAN TRUTH. Indian Rights Association, Inc., 301 South 17th Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Monthly: $2.00 a year includes membership. Official organ of the Indian Rights Association, Inc.

INDIANS AT WORK. Office of Indian Affairs, Chicago 54, Illinois. Bi-monthly. Free. A publication of the U. S. Department of Interior. A News Sheet for Indians and the Indian Service.

AMERICAN MEXICANS

*SLEEPY LAGOON MYSTERY by Guy Endore, Sleepy Lagoon Defense Committee, 129 West Second Street, Los Angeles 12, California. June 1944. 15 cents. The real meaning of the zoot suits riot in Los Angeles.

SPANISH SPEAKING AMERICANS IN THE WAR. Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Washington, D. C. No price. Photographs of Spanish speaking Americans contributing to the war effort in the armed services in factories and on farms.

A CAMERA REPORT ON EL CERRITO, A Typical Spanish-American Community in New Mexico by Irving Rusinow, U. S. Department of Agriculture Misc. Publication No. 479. Washington: U. S. Government Printing Office, 1942. 45 cents. Photographs which show some of the social and economic conditions of Mexican Americans.

FALANGE: The Axis Secret Army in the Americas by Allan Chase, New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1943. The gravity of fascist forces in Latin America and its threat to the United States.

FORGOTTEN PEOPLE. A Study of New Mexicans by George I. Sanchez, Alberquerque, N. M.: The University of New Mexico Press 1940. No price. A study of the social and economic conditions faced by Spanish-speaking Americans in Toas County, New Mexico, presented against an historical background.

*MEXICAN MIGRATORY WORKERS OF SOUTH TEXAS by Selden C. Menefee, Work Projects Administration, Washington: Government Printing Office, 1941. No price. A study of the social and economic conditions of Mexican Americans in Crystal City Texas, "a concentration point of Mexican labor employed not only in spinach but in cotton, onions and sugar beets as well."

AMERICAN NEGROES

ALL AMERICAN by John R. Tunis, New York: Harcourt, Brace, 1942. The story of the Negro in sports.

*AMERICAN NEGROES. A handbook by Edwin R. Embree, New York: Day, 1942. A clear concise introduction to the present-day life of Negroes in the United States. Includes important statistical facts.

AN AMERICAN DILEMMA by Gunnar Myrdal, New York: Harper, 1944. The Swedish scholar who directed the Carnegie Foundation study of the Negro in America, summarizes the studies and draws conclusions which are of great importance.

*THE BLACK AND WHITE OF REJECTIONS FOR MILITARY SERVICE by a Committee for the American Teachers Association, P. O. Box 271, Montgomery, Alabama, 1944. 10 cents. Selective Service figures for rejection on account of education and mental deficiences show that Negro registrants in ten northern and border states ranked higher than white registrants in seven southern states.

BLACK BOY: A record of Childhood and Youth by Richard Wright, New York: Harper 1945. An autobiography of a Negro child whose culture refused him the right to a normal life.

CIO AND THE NEGRO WORKERS TOGETHER FOR VICTORY. Congress of Industrial Organizations, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C., 1942. 2 cents. The program of the CIO to end racial discrimination and to build real labor brotherhood.

COLOR, CLASS AND PERSONALITY by Robert L. Sutherland. Washington: American Council on Education, 1942. A summary of the findings of the American Youth Commission studies of Negro youth and a plan for the future.

DIGEST OF MYRDAL'S "AN AMERICAN DILEMMA" by Samuel S. Wyer. Columbus Council for Democracy, Room 7, 9 East Long Street, Columbus 15, Ohio. No price. Important quotations from the long detailed study.

ESSAYS IN THE HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO by Herbert Aptheker, New York: International Publishers, 1945. The story of the militant struggle of Negroes for freedom and democracy during slavery and after.

THE NEGRO AND THE WAR by Earl Brown and George Leighton. Public Affairs Committee, 30 Rockfeller Plaza, New York, N. Y., 1942. 10 cents. A forthright account of tensions felt by Negroes because of World War II.

THE NEGRO CARAVAN edited by Sterling A. Brown, Arthur P. Davis and Ulysses Lee, New York: Dryden Press, 1941. Selected writings by American Negroes. An excellent anthology.

NEGRO CHURCHMEN SPEAK TO WHITE CHURCHMEN by a Committee for the Commission on The Church and Minority Peoples, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York, November, 1944. 10 cents. A clear call to Christian democrats to live by their basic philosophy.

THE NEGRO IN AMERICA by Maxwell Stewart. Public Affairs Committee, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N. Y., 1944. 10 cents. A summary of Myrdal's "An American Dilemma." Excellent pictographs.

THE NEGRO PEOPLE AND THE COMMUNISTS by Doxey A. Wilkerson. Workers Library Publishers, Inc., P. O. Box 148, Station D., New York 3, N. Y., 1944. 3 cents. The basis of Communist appeal for the support of Negroes.

"THE NEGRO IN THE NORTH DURING WARTIME," Journal of Educational Sociology, January, 1944. 32 Washington Place, New York, N. Y. Excellent articles about the seldom discussed Negroes in the North.

NEW WORLD A'COMING by Roi Ottley, New York: Houghton, Mifflin, 1943. A reporter's analysis of Harlem "the most complex of Negro communities" which the author thinks reflects much of Negro America.

THE NMU FIGHTS JIM CROW by the National Maritime Union, 345 West 17th Street, New York, N. Y., 1944. Free. Describes one of labor's most thrilling stories of interracial unity achieved during this war.

ON CLIPPED WINGS, the story of Jim Crow by William H. Hastie, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 1943. 10 cents. The story of the struggle of Negroes in the armed forces to get training in the air corps and the truth about facilities at Tuskegee.

ORGANIZED LABOR AND THE NEGRO by Herbert Northrup, New York: Harper, 1944. A realistic account of the position of Negroes in labor unions.

THE POLICE AND MINORITY GROUPS by J. E. Weckler and Theo. E. Hall, International City Managers' Association, 1313 East 60th Street, Chicago 37, Illinois, 1944. 50 cents. "A program to prevent disorder and to improve relations between different racial, religious, and national groups."

A RISING WIND by Walter White, New York: Doubleday, Doran 1945. Race relations in the European theatre of war as seen by the executive secretary of the NAACP.

THERE ARE THINGS TO DO by Lillian Smith, Reprinted from South Today. Clayton, Ga. Winter, 1942-43. 5 cents. Specific suggestions for individuals.

THEY SEEK A CITY by Arna Bontemps and Jack Conroy, New York: Doubleday, Doran, 1945. The story of the migrations of American Negroes from the South—during slavery, after the Civil War, during World War I, and during World War II—which includes many colorful personalities.

13 AGAINST THE ODDS by Edwin R. Embree, New York: Viking, 1944. Biographical sketches of thirteen outstanding American Negroes: Mary McLeod Bethune, Richard Wright, Charles S. Johnson, Walter White, George Washington Carver, Langston Hughes, Marian Anderson, W. E. B. DuBois, Mordecai W. Johnson, William Grant Still, A. Philip Randolph, Joe Louis, and Paul Robeson.

THIS IS OUR WAR by Afro-American War Correspondents, Baltimore: Afro-American Publishers, 1945. The contributions of Negroes to the prosecution of World War II as seen by Negro newsmen: Ollie Stewart, Vincent Stubbs, Herbert Frisby, Art Carter, Bettye Phillips, and Max Johnson.

TO STEM THIS TIDE. A Survey of Racial Tension Areas in the United States, by Charles S. Johnson, Boston: Pilgrim Press, 1943. Factual data about tensions in industry, agriculture, public carriers, housing, politics, "law" and armed forces. The last chapter is devoted to "Post-War Problems in Prospect."

WHAT THE NEGRO WANTS, edited by Rayford W. Logan, Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1944. Conservative, liberal and radical Negro leaders tell clearly and forcefully what they think the Negro wants.

PERIODICALS

CONGRESS VUE. 307 Lenox Avenue, New York, N. Y.. Monthly, $1.00 a year. Official publication of the National Negro Congress.

THE CRISIS. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 20 W. 40th Street, New York, N. Y. Monthly $1.50 a year. Official organ of the N.A.A.C.P. Is concerned mostly with civil rights.

EBONY, 5619 South State Street, Chicago 21, Illinois. Monthly: $3.00 per year. A photographic magazine about Negroes similar to Life magazine.

JOURNAL OF NEGRO EDUCATION. Howard University, Washington, D. C. Quarterly: $3.00 a year. A review of the education of Negroes by educators.

JOURNAL OF NEGRO HISTORY, 1538 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. Quarterly: $4.00 a year. Research in the field of Negro History.

NEGRO DIGEST, 5619 South State Street, Chicago, Illinois. Monthly: $3.00 a year.

OPPORTUNITY, Journal of Negro Life. 1133 Broadway, New York 10, N. Y. Quarterly: $1.50 a year. Official organ of the National Urban League, whose task is getting greater job opportunities for Negroes.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS

AFRO AMERICAN, 628 North Eutaw Street, Baltimore 1, Maryland. $4.00 a year.

CHICAGO DEFENDER, 3435 Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. $4.00 a year.

NORFOLK JOURNAL AND GUIDE, 719 Olney Road, Norfolk, Virginia. $3.50 a year.

PITTSBURGH COURIER, 2628 Centre Avenue at Francis Street, Pittsburgh 19, Pa. $4.00 a year.

AMERICAN JEWS

AMERICANS ALL, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, 100 N. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois, 1944. 10 cents. A brief history of American Jews, the countries from which they came and individuals who have made outstanding contributions.

AMERICAN JEW. A Composite Portrait, edited by Oscar I. Janowsky, New York: Harper, 1942. A collection of articles which include Jewish history, religion, education, achievements, literary expression and community structure.

AMERICAN JEWISH YEARBOOK, Volume 45, 1943-44, Philadelphia, Pa.: Jewish Publication Society of America, 1944. Standard reference book about the Jewish people.

DER FUEHRER by Konrad Heiden, Boston: Houghton, Mifflin, 1944. The story of Hitler's rise to power which includes the use of anti-Semitism as a weapon.

EARTH AND HIGH HEAVEN by Gwethalyn Graham, New York: Lippincott, 1944. A novel of tensions caused by a Gentile-Jew situation within a Canadian family. Excellent analysis of prejudiced thinking.

THE GROWTH OF GOOD WILL by Everett R. Clinchey, National Conference of Christians and Jews, 381 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10 cents. A discussion of inter-faith activity . . . American Protestant, Catholic and Jewish relations.

HISTORY OF BIGOTRY IN THE UNITED STATES by Gustavus Myers, New York: Random House, 1943. Anti-Semitism in the United States from colonial times to now.

HITLER'S TEN-YEAR WAR ON THE JEWS,, edited by Boris Shub, Institute of Jewish Affairs. 330 West 42nd Street, New York, 1943 The extent and degree of Hitler's persecution of Jews, country by country.

JEWISH COMMUNITY ORGANIZATION IN THE UNITED STATES by Morris J. Karpf, New York: Bloch, 1943. A survey of Jewish agencies and activities.

THE MAKING OF THE MODERN JEW by Milton Sternberg, New York: Behrman, 1943. A rabbi uses the history of the Jewish people as background for understanding the present day life of the Jewish people.

OVERCOMING ANTI-SEMITISM by Solomon A. Fineberg, New York; Harper, 1943. A public relations guide written for members of the Jewish community but also helpful to non-Jews in understanding and eradicating anti-Semitism, "the Trojan horse of democracy."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS CONCERNING THE JEW, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, 100 N. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois, 1942. Free. A handbook of facts and figures relating to the Jews which every student of American life should know.

TO BIGOTRY NO SANCTION. Revised Edition 1944. American Jewish Committee. 386 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 7 cents. A collection of factual answers to anti-Semitic statements.

WHY A JEWISH STATE by Leon Fener, New York: Richard R. Smith, 1942. Zionist arguments for a Jewish state in Palestine.

PERIODICALS

CONGRESS WEEKLY, 1834 Broadway, New York 23, New York. Weekly: $3.00 a year, Official publication of American Jewish Congress.

CONTEMPORARY JEWISH RECORD, 386 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Bi-monthly. $2.00 a year. Official publication of the American Jewish Committee.

JEWISH FRONTIER, 45 East 17th Street, New York 3, N. Y. Monthly: $3.00 a year. Official organ of the League for Labor Palestine.

NEW CURRENTS, 119 West 57th Street, New York 19, N. Y. Monthly. $3.00 a year. Official Publication of the American Committee of Jewish Writers, Artists and Scientists, Inc.

AMERICAN JAPANESE

AMERICAN FIGHTING MEN SPEAK OUT by the Committee on American Principles and Fair Play, 2234 Telegraph Avenue, Berkeley 4, California, 1944. 10 cents. Excerpts from speeches and letters by Americans in the armed forces expressing concern that democratic principles be applied to Japanese Americans.

ASIA ON THE MOVE by Bruno Lasker, New York: Henry Holt, 1945. Population pressure, migration and resettlement in Eastern Asia under the influence of the war. Chapter 15, "Policies of Oriental Exclusion," points up the problem in the United States.

NISEI IN UNIFORM. U. S. Department of Interior, War Relocation Authority, Washington, D. C. No price. The war records of Japanese Americans showing their devotion to America and gallantry in action.

OUTCASTS by Caleb Foote. Fellowship of Reconciliation, 2929 Broadway, New York, N. Y. 15 cents. Best popular presentation of evacuation, relocation and resettlement with attractive photographs. Raises fundamental questions.

PREJUDICE: The Japanese Americans, a Symbol of Racial Intolerance by Carey McWilliams, Boston: Little, Brown, 1944. The story of the Japanese Americans by a democrat well qualified to speak.

WHAT ABOUT OUR JAPANESE AMERICANS? by Carey McWilliams. Public Affairs Committee, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N. Y., 1944. 10 cents. The story of evacuation and relocation.

PERIODICALS

NEWS LETTER. Japanese American Committee for Democracy, 72 West 52nd Street, New York 19, N. Y. Monthly: $1.00 a year. Official publication of the Japanese American Committee for Democracy.

THE PACIFIC CITIZEN, 415 Beacon Building, Salt Lake City, Utah. A weekly publication on the Japanese American Citizens League $2.50 a year.

AMERICAN CHINESE

FATHER AND GLORIOUS DESCENDANT by Pardee Lowe, Boston: Little, Brown, 1943. A delightful novel about an American of Chinese ancestry who grew up in California, but who became a globe-trotter.

TWO LANDS FOR MING by Stanley Chin and Virginia Fowler, New York: Scribner, 1945. Experiences of a Chinese boy born of American parents who lived both in China and San Francisco.

Single Copies Free Quantity Orders: $3.00 per hundred

A SELECTED LIST OF BOOKS ABOUT THE SOUTH

Botkin, B. A. (editor)-Lay My Burden Down: A Folk History of Slavery - University of Chicago Press, 1945.

Cash, W. J. - The Mind of the South - New York, Alfred A. Knopf, 1941.

Cayton, Horace R. and George S. Mitchell - Black Workers and the New Unions - University of North Carolina Press, 1939.

Dabney, Virginius - Below the Patomic - New York, Appleton Century Co., 1942.

Davis, Allison and John Dollard - Children of Bondage - Washington, D. C., American Council on Education, 1940.

Davis, Allison, B. B. Gardner and Mary R. Gardner - Deep South - University of Chicago Press, 1941.

Frazier, E. F. - Negro Youth at the Crossways - Washington, D. C., American Council on Education, 1940.

Johnson, Charles S. - Growing Up in the Black Belt - Washington, D. C., American Council on Education, 1941.

Johnson, Charles S. - Shadow of the Plantation - University of Chicago Press, 1934.

Johnson, Charles S. - Statistical Atlas of Southern Counties - University of North Carolina Press, 1941.

Logan, Rayford (editor) - What the Negro Wants - University of North Carolina Press, 1944.

Mangum, Charles S. - The Legal Status of the Negro - University of North Carolina Press, 1940.

Negro Handbook, 1944 - Compiled by Florence Murray, New York, Current Reference Publications.

Odum, Howard W. - Southern Regions - University of North Carolina Press, 1936.

Odum, Howard W. - The Way of the South - (Soon to be published. Regret we do not know the publishers' name.)

Parkins, Almon E. - The South, Its Economic-Georgrphic Development - New York, John Wiley and Sons, 1938.

Raper, Arthur - Preface to Peasantry - University of North Carolina Press, 1936.

Raper, Arthur - Tenants of the Almighty.

Raper, Arthur and Ira De A. Reid - Sharecroppers All - University of North Carolina Press, 1941.

Vance, Rupert B. - Human Geography of the South - University of North Carolina Press, 1932.

Vance, Rupert B. - All These People - University of North Carolina Press, 1946.

March 8, 1946
Southern Regional Council, Inc.

MEMORANDUM

April 30, 1947

TO: DR. GEORGE S. MITCHELL

FROM: J. O. SLADE

RE: BIBLIOGRAPHY FOR THE STUDY OF ECONOMIC PROBLEMS OF THE SOUTH

The enclosed bibliography requested from you by Mr. Walter R. Chivers is merely suggestive, not exhaustive. It was assumed that Mr. Chivers as a teacher of sociology would be familiar with some of these and other sources that would be helpful in conducting the aforementioned course.

Encl.

A SUGGESTED BIBLIOGRAPHY FOR THE STUDY OF ECONOMIC PROBLEMS OF THE SOUTH

BOOKS

Bullock, B. F., Practical Farming in the South
University of North Carolina Press.

Cayton and Mitchell, Black Workers and the New Unions
University of North Carolina Press
(1939)

Dabney, Virginius, Below the Potomac, (1942)

Goodrich, Carter and Others - Migration and Economic Opportunity.

Haynes, Williams, Southern Horizons
D. Nostrand (1946)

Herring, Harriet L., Southern Industry and Regional Development
University of North Carolina Press
(1940)

Holley, Winston, Woofter, The Plantation South: 1934-37
(1940)

Johnson, Chas. S., The Economic Status of the Negro
Fisk University Press (1933)

Johnson, Embree, Alexander, The Collapse of Cotton Tenancy
University of North Carolina Press

Mims, Edwin, The Advancing South
Doubleday, Page and Co. (1926)

Mitchell, Geo. S., Textile Unionism and the South
University of North Carolina Press
(1931)

Molyneaux, Peter, What Economic Nationalism
Means to the South (1934)
(World Affairs Pamphlets No. 4)

Murchison, Claudius T., King Cotton is Sick
University of North Carolina Press

Odum, Howard W., Southern Regions of the United States (1936)

Parkins, A. E., The South (1938)

Statistical Abstracts of the United States

The Farm Income Situation, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U.S. Department of Agriculture (August 1941)

The South: America's Opportunity Number One Southern Regional Council (1945)

Vance, Rupert B., All These People (1944)

Vance, Rupert B., Human Factors in Cotton Culture.

Woofter, T.J. and Associates, Landlord and Tenant on Cotton Plantations (1936)

PAMPHLETS AND ARTICLES

Herring, Harriet, L., "The Outside Employee in the Southern Industrial Pattern", Social Forces, XVIII (October 1939) pp. 115-126.

Hon, Ralph C., "The South in a War Economy", Southern Economic Journal, VIII (January 1942), pp. 291-308.

Vance, Rupert B., "Cotton Culture and Social Life and Institutions of the South," Publication of the American Sociological Society, 23. (1929(, pp. 51-59.

Vance, Rupert B., "Planning the Southern Economy", Southwest Review, XX (January 1935) pp. 111-123.

NOTE: The following quarterly publications by the Southern Regional Council would include much information on the economic problems of the South:

WANTED: THE SOUTH'S FUTURE FOR THE NATION

WANTED: A HEALTHY SOUTH

MACHINES IN THE COTTON FIELDS

WANTED: AN EDUCATED SOUTH

Suggested Reading List for Young People to Build Better Human Relations

Prepared for

Junior Institute of Race Relations
Fisk University
June 28 - July 5, 1947

All-American, John Tunis. Harcourt Brace $2.50

All Brave Sailors, John Beecher. L. B. Fischer $2.50

Brave Nurse, Ellsworth Newcomb. Appleton-Century $2.00

A City for Lincoln, John Tunis. Harcourt Brace $2.00

Color Blind, Margaret Halsey. Simon Schuster $2.00

The Company Owns the Tools, Henry Vicar, Westminster Press $2.00

Deep River, Henrietta Buckmaster. Harcourt Brace $3.00

Glass House of Prejudice, Dorothy Baruch. Morrow $2.50

Great Day in the Morning, Florence C. Means. Houghton Mifflin $2.00

The House, Marjorie Allee. Houghton Mifflin $2.00

Incident in Yorkville, Emma G. Sterne. Farrar Rinehart $1.75.

North Star Shining, Hildegarde Swift. William Morrow $2.50

One God: Ways We Worship Him, Florence Fitch. Lothrop $2.00

Pioneers of Plenty, Christy Borth. Bobbs-Merrill $3.50

Road to Alaska, Douglas Coe. Julian Messner $2.00

A Star Pointed North, Edmund Fuller. Harper $2.50.

Starlight, Regina Woody. William Morrow $2.00

Submarine Sailor, Gregor Felsen. Dutton $2.50

Up at City High, Joseph Gollomb. Harcourt $2.00

We Have Tomorrow, Arna Bontemps. Houghton-Mifflin $2.00

Willow Hill, Phyllis Whitney. David Mackay $2.00

3 - Bibliographies

12 1947
Negro Bibliography Council

BOOKMARK PRESS

BOX No. 1974 ◆ CHICAGO 90, ILLINOIS

#FOUR THE NEGRO AND RELATED SUBJECTS #FOUR

Every item is in sound condition, and sold subject to your inspection and approval. Binding is original cloth unless otherwise described. Postage prepaid in U. S. A. Please send CASH with your order. Educational institutions will be charged on regular 30 day terms, net. Prompt shipment deserves prompt payment. Please pass this list on to an interested friend.

1 AFRICA--Bateman,G. W.--ZANZIBAR TALES: told by the natives of the East coast of Africa; ill. by W. Babbitt; 224pp;Chicago;1901;OUT OF PRINT $4.00

2 Barth,H.--TRAVELS & DISCOVERIES IN NORTH & CENTRAL AFRICA,being a journal of an expedition undertaken under the auspices of H.B.M.'s government, in the years, 1849-1855;3 vols.; ill. with engravings & maps;xxvii,657pp;xiii,709pp;xvi,800pp; New York;1857; VERY SCARCE $10.50

3 Brodrick,A.H.--NORTH AFRICA; a brief guide to its people;ill. with photos;vi,98pp; New York; 1943 $1.25

4 Buell, R.L.--NATIVE PROBLEMS IN AFRICA; the report of the Com. of Intern. Res. of Harvard & Radcliffe College; 2 vols.;xiii,1045;x,1101pp;New York;1928 $10.00

5 De Marco, [illegible].R.--ITALIANIZATION OF AFRICAN NATIVES;goverment native education in the Italian colonies, 1890-1937;xvii,150pp; New York; 1943 $2.35

6 Furbay,E.D.--TOP HATS & TOM-TOMS: days & nights in Liberia;ill. with photos;307pp; Chicago;1943 $3.00

7 Huxley,J.--AFRICA VIEW; an excellent introd. to the vast continent of Africa by a distinguished scientist; ill. with photos;viii,478pp;New York;1931 OUT OF PRINT $3.00

8 Lobagola,B.--LOBAGOLA, an african savages own story; a black jew describes his escape from the African Bush into modern civilization;ill. with photos;xxiii,402pp New York;1930;OUT OF PRINT $4.00

9 Perham,M.--TEN AFRICANS; an interesting col. of biograp. sketches of outstanding citizens of Africa;ill. with photos;356pp; London;1939;OUT OF PRINT $3.50

10 Stanley,H.M.--THROUGH THE DARK CONTINENT, or the sources of the Nile around the great lakes of equatorial Africa & down the Livingstone river to the Atlantic ocean;ill. with woodcuts & maps; 2 vols.;xiv,522pp; ix,566pp; New York;1878 VERY SCARCE $7.50

11 Thooner,J.P.--BLACK MARTYRS; a study of the native martyrs of Uganda, in central Africa;xviii,302pp;New York;1941 $4.00

12 BIOGRAPHY--DuBois,W.E.B.--DUSK OF DAWN;the autobiography of W.E.B. DuBois;xi,334pp New York;1940 $3.00

13 Graham,S.--THERE WAS ONCE A SLAVE:the heroic story of Frederick Douglass;ix,310pp New York,1947 $3.00

14 Grimke,A.H.--WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON,the abolitionist;ix,405pp;New York;1891 VERY HARD TO FIND $6.50

15 Hurston,Z.N.--MOSES:man of the mountain; miss Hurston writes Moses' story as told the vernacular of the Southern Negro;349pp;Philadelphia;1939; O.P. $3.00

16 Matyn,C.--WENDELL PHILLIPS,the agitator;xi,600pp;New York;1890;). P. 4.50

17 Scott& Stowe--BOOKER T. WASHINGTON: with preface by Theodore Roosevelt;xvii,331pp Garden City;1916;OUT OF PRINT 6.00

18 FARMING--Campbell,T.M.--MOVABLE SCHOOL GOES TO THE NEGRO FARMER;a combination autobiography & history of the Tuskegee Rural school on wheels for farmers;170pp Tuskegee;1936 $2.00

19 Johnson & others--COLLAPSE OF COTTON TENANCY: a study of a system characterized as" oue greatest social humiliation";61pp;Chapel Hill;1935; O. P. $1.50

20 Johnson, C.S.--SHADOW OF THE PLANTATION: a study of the cotton growing farmers of the South; intro. by R.E. Parks;xxiv,215pp;Chicago;1934 2.00

21 Hullinger,E.W.--PLOWING THROUGH:the story of the Negro in agriculture;ill. with photos;60pp;New York;1940 $1.50

22 FICTION--Alman,D.--HOURGLASS; a novel about conditions in the South--but having more to do with the oppressor, rather than with the oppressed;206pp;New York; 1947; $2.75

23 Bland,A.--BEHOLD A CRY;a novel of a man & three woman faced with problems in a large midwestern city; New York;1937 $2.50

24 Bradford,R.--OL' MAN ADAM AN' HIS CHILLUN; with draw. by A.D. Walker;xxiv,264pp New York;1928; OUT OF PRINT 3.50

25 Chestnutt,C.W.--COLONEL'S DREAM; a story by the author of the "Conjure Woman", etc.;294pp; New York;1905; OUT OF PRINT 6.00

26 FIRST GEO. WASH. CARVER AWARD BOOK
Cook,F.--MRS. PARKER'S HONEY; outlines in a warm & richly human novel the broad panorama of the Negro's struggles for opportunity & analyzes the forces which gave this struggle its social signicance;280pp;Garden City;1946 $1.50

27 Fast,H.--FREEDOM ROAD;a novel with the Reconstruction period as its climax;viii, 263pp;New York;1944;FIRST EDITION 2.75

28 Heywood,D--STAR SPANGLED VIRGIN;story of life on the Virgin Islands by the author of "Porgy"; etc.;230pp; New York;1939;OUT OF PRINT 3.50

29 BY THE AUTHOR OF THE "LONELY CRUSADE"
Himes,C,--IF HE HOLLERS LET HIM GO; a realisticly written novel dealing with present-day Negro living;249pp;Garden City; 1945; 1.50

30 Huxley,E.--RED STRANGERS; realistic picture of a primitive African people confronted with the most advanced civilization;viii,406pp;ill. with photos;New York; 1939; OUT OF PRINT $5.50

31 Hyland,J.A.--DOVE FLYS SOUTH;southern white man made dark in complextion who is mistaken for Negro, & his harrowing experiences;274pp;Milwaukee;1943; $2.50

32 Ludwig,E.--OTHELLO: a brilliant variation on a great subject;vii,306pp;New York 1947 $3.00

33 McKay,C.--HOME TO HARLEM;an early novel by one of America's well-known Negro authors;340pp;New York;1928; OUT OF PRINT 6.00

34 Motley, .--KNOCK ON ANY DOOR, a novel of life in Chicago's slum districts;504pp; New York;1947; 2.00

35 Peeples,L.A.--SWING LOW; anovel of modern Negroes in Atlanta, Ga., & the problems they faced in living every day;293pp; Boston;1945; 2.50

36 Pickard, K.R.--KIDNAPPED & THE RANSOMED: the extraordinary story of Peter Still & his family;315pp; New York;OUT OF PRINT 2.75

37 HISTORY--Bond,H.M.--NEGRO EDUCATION IN ALABAMA; astudy in cotton & steel;358pp; Wash.D.C.;1939 3.25

38 Bradden,W.S.--UNDER FIRE WITH THE 370th INFANTRY(8th I.N.G.) OVER WAR I record of this famous Negro regiment; ill. with photos. from the author's private collection;109pp;Chicago;1928;OUT OF PRINT 1.00

39 Cansler,C.W.--THREE GENERATIONS:the story of a Colored family of Eastern Tennessee;viii,173pp;Knoxville;1939 1.25

40 Carlson,J.R.--UNDER COVER;544pp; New York;1943; interesting chapter on Negro activities 1.10

41 Cohn,D.--GOD SHAKES CREATION; apicture of life in the Mississippi delta;with drawings by L.Dent;xvi,299pp;New York;1935; OUT OF PRINT 5.50

42 Crum,M.--GULLAH,Negro life in the Sea Islands;ill.withphotos;xv,351;Durham 1940; OUT OF PRINT 5.50

43 DuBois,W.E.B.--COLOR & DEMOCRACY:Colonies & Peace; a ringing challenge to post-war peace plans from the point of view of the Colored races;143pp;New York 1945 2.00

44 Eisenchiml,O.--WHY WAS LINCOLN MURDERED?new evidence appaling in its implications ill. with photos;x,503pp;Boston;1937 3.50

45 Franklin,J.H.--FREE NEGRO IN NORTH CAROLINE,1790-1860;x,271pp;Chapel Hill 1943 4.00

46 Higginson,T.W.--ARMY LIFE IN A BLACK REGIMENT;an interesting account of Negro soldiers during the Civil war;413pp;Boston;1900; OUT OF PRINT 2.50

47 Hill,J.L.--NEGRO:NATIONAL ASSET OR LIABILITY;with intro. by R.L. Vann;x,233pp; New York;1930; OUT OF PRINT 2.50

48 Hurston,Z.N.--TELL MY HORSE;voodoo & life in Haiti & Jamaica;ill.with photos. 301pp; Philadelphia;1938; OUT OF PRINT 5.50

49 Jefferson,T.L.--OLD NEGRO & THE NEW NEGRO;"I am writing this, as a sort of guide for the American Negro, by pointing out some of the remedies for correcting them....;118pp;Boston;1937 1.50

50 Johnson,C.S.--NEGRO--American Journal of Sociology1 May 1943; 854-864pp; Chicago;PAPER 1.00

51 Little,A.W.--FROM HARLEM TO THE RHINE; the complete story of the famous Negro regiment from New York, the 15th Infantry(World War I);ill. with photos;xviii, 382pp;New York;1936; OUT OF PRINT $3.00

BOOKMARK PRESS
BOX NO. 1974 ◆ CHICAGO 90, ILLINOIS

52 Murray,F.--NEGRO HANDBOOK,1942;a manual of current facts, statistics & general information;269pp; New York;1942 $2.00

53 Nell,W.C.--COLORED PATRIOTS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, with sketches of several distinguished Colored persons; to which is added a brief survey of the condition & prospects of Colored Americans; intro. by H.B. Stowe; 396pp; Boston; 1855; VERY VERY SCARCE $12.50

54 LIFE IN AMERICA PRIZE BOOK
Ottley,R.--NEW WORLD A-COMING:inside black America; top current social history tothe American Negro;vii,364pp;ill.byJ.O.Cosgrave,II;Cleveland;1943 $1.49

55 Paynter,J.H.Horse & Buggy Days with Uncle Sam; the author's observations on Negro activity in government service;190pp;New York;1943;)UT OF PRINT $2.00

56 Powell R.P.--HUMAN SIDE OF A PEOPLE & THE RIGHT NAME: the author's history of Negro accomplishment, & reasons why the " correct " name for the group should be used;ill. with photos.;xvi,399pp;New York;1937; OUT OF PRINT $3.58

57 Quillin, F.U.--COLOR LINE IN OHIO; a histiry of race prejudice in a typical Northern State;xvi,178pp; Ann Arbor;1913; OUT OF PRINT $3.50

58 Stuart, M.S.--ECONOMIC DETOUR: ahistory of insurance in the lives of American Negroes;xxv,345pp; New Yrok;1940 $3.00

59 Tanser,H.A.--SETTLEMENT OF NEGROES IN KENT COUNTY, ONTARIO, 7 a study of the mental capacity of their descendants;187pp;ontario;1939;OUT OF PRINT $4.00

60 Taylor,AA--NEGRO IN TENNESSEE,1865-1880;306pp;Wash. D.C.;1941 $3.25

61 Thompson,J.W.--AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE DOUGLASS MONUMENT:biographical facts & incidents in the life of Frederick Douglass,etc.;ill. with photos;204pp;;Rochester;1903; OUT OF PRINT $3.00

62 Wesley,C.H.--NEGRO LABOR IN THE UNITED STATES,1850-1925; a study in American economic history;xiii,343pp;;New Yoork; 1927;OUT OF PRINT $2.00

63 Wilson,R.D.--JIM CROW JOINS UP: story of the Negro in the Armed Services, World War II;ix,k29pp; New York;1944 $2.50

64 Woodson,C.G.--FREE NEGRO HEADS OF FAMILIES IN THE UNITED STATES IN 1830, together with a brief treatment of the Free Negro;lvii,296pp;Wash, D.C.;1925 $5.25

65 Young,D.--AMERICAN NEGRO; the Annals of the Amer. Acad. of Pol. & Soc. Sci., vol.cxxxx,Nov. 1928;359pp; OUT OF PRINT $2.00

66 LITERATURE-Bond,F.W.--NEGRO & THE DRAMA; the direct & indirect contribution which the Amer.Negro has made to drama & legitimate stage, with the underlying conditions responsible;x,213pp; Wash D.C.;1940; OUT OF PRINT $3.50

67 Burley,D.--ORIGINAL HANDBOOK OF HARLEM JIVE; the only book available on how to speak & write jive language;ill. by M. Tapley;159pp; New York;1944
PAPER BINDING $1.50

68 Connelly,M.--GREEN PASTURES: a fable suggested by R. Bradford's Southern Sketches "Ol' Man Adam an' His Chillun";with ill. by R.E. Jones;xvii,141pp; New York 1930; OUT OF PRINT $5.00

69 Hammerstein,O.II--CARMEN JONES: based on Meilhac & Halevy's adaptation of Prosper Merimee's CARMEN; with ill. from the musical show;xix,139pp;New York;1945 FIRST EDITION $2.50

70 Scally,Sis.M.A.--NEGRO CATHOLIC WRITERS,1900-1943--a bio-bibliography;152pp; Detroit;1945 $2.20

71 Yordan,P.--ANNA LUCASTA; a play("A very impressive play...something you must not miss"....New Yorker Mag.)ill. with photos;184pp; New York;1945 $2.00

72 MUSIC--Krehbiel,H.E.--AFRO-AMERICAN FOLKSONGS; a study in racial & national music xii,176pp;New York;1914; VERY SCARCE $6.00

73 Marsh,J.B.T.--STORY OF THE JUBILEE SINGERS, with their songs;ill. with photos; viii,243pp;Boston;1881;OUT OF PRINT $2.50

74 Miller,P.L.--YEARBOOK OF POPULAR MUSIC; contains numerous short biographies of Negro musicians in all parts of the country;ill. with photos;195pp;Chi; '43 $2.00

75 Niles,J.J.--SINGING SOLDIERS ;anexcellent col. of the songs that were popular with Negro soldiers of W.W.I;ill/by H.T. Williamson;x,171pp;New Yrok;1927 VERY HARD TO FIND $4.50

76 Parrish,L.--SLAVE SONGS OF GEORGIA SEA ISLANDS music by churchill & MacGinsey; intro. O. Downes;ill with photos;xxxi,256pp;New Yrok;1942; $3.50

77 Rosenthal & Zachary--JAZZ WAYS; story of jazz from its beginnings in old New Orleans up to the present; with 100 photos;109pp;New York;1947; $3.00

78 SLAVERY--Cochin,A.A--RESULTS OF SLAVERY;x,413pp; Boston;1863; O. P. $3.50

79 Olmsted,F.L.--JOURNEY IN THE BACK COUNTRY;xvi,492pp;London;1860;SCARCE $7.50

80 Olmsted,F.L.--JOURNEY IN THE SEABOARD SLAVE STATES; with remarks on their economy;xxvi,723pp;New York;1856;VERY SCARCE $7.50

81 Smith,J.H.--POLITICAL HIST. OF SLAVERY;being an account of theslavery controversy from the earliest agitators in the 18th century to the close of the Reconstruction period in Amer.; 2 vols.;xvi,350pp;iv,456pp;New York;1903; O. P. $7.50

82 SOCIAL SCIENCE--Atwood,etc.--THUS FIT THEIR DESTINY;personality developement in 3 communities;xi,96pp; Wash D.C.;1941;PAPER $0.50

83 Calhoun,A.--SOCIAL HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY, form colonial times to the present--3 vols in 1;348;390;411pp;New Yrok;1945 reprint ed. $7.50

84 Colson,E.--ANALYSIS OF THE SPECIFIC CONTRIBUTIONS TO NEGROES IN SELECTED CURRICULA FOR THE EDUCATION OF TEACHERS;178pp;New Yrok;1940 $2.00

85 Halsey,M.--COLOR BLIND; a white woman looks at the Negro;163pp;New York; '46 $2.00

86 Hayes,L.J.--NEGRO FEDERAL GOV'T WORKER; study of his classification status in the Dist of Col.,1883-1938;156pp;Wash D.C.;PAPER $1.00

87 Hercules,M.--DEMOCRACY LIMITED;a revelation of actual conditions afflicting the lives of millions of Americans, both black & white;183pp;Cleveland;1945; $2.50

88 MOON,B.HIGH COST OF PREJUDICE, CONSTRUCTIVE STUDY OF THE FINANCIAL & CULTURAL PRICE WE PAY FOR INTOLERANCE;xvi,168pp;New Yrok;1947 $2.50

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

89 Powdermaker,H.--PROBING OUR PREJUDICES, unit for high school students;viii,73pp; New York;1944 1.00

90 Schricke,E.--ALIEN AMERICANS; study in race relations;xi,207pp;New York;1936 OUT OF PRINT $2.50

91 Stone,A.H.--STUDIES IN AMERICAN RACE PROBLEM, with an intro. & 3 papers by W.F. Willcox;xxii,555pp;New York;1908; VERY SCARCE $3.50

92 SOUTH--CAMPBELL,M.--FOLK DO GET BORN:RURAL GEORGIA & THE STORY OF HIS GRANNY MIDWIVES:x,245pp; New York;1946 $1.65

93 Cooper,A.J.--VOICE FROM THE SOUTH ,by a black woman of the south;being the personal experiences of a Negro woman;303pp; Xenia;1892;OUT OF PRINT $2.00

94 Couch,W.T.--CULTURE IN THE SOUTH;31 outstanding experts have contributed thought-provoking chapters, all dealing with the various aspects of southern life;xiv, 711pp;Chapel Hill;1937 $4.00

95 Fed. Writ. Proj.--THESE ARE OUR LIVES; as told by the people;xx,421pp; Chapel Hill;1939 $3.00

96 Johnson,C.S.--INTO THE MAIN STREAM; survey of the best practices in race relations in the south;xiv,355pp;Chapel Hill;1947 $3.50

97 Page,T.N.--OLD SOUTH,essays social & political,with new preface;viii,344pp;New York;1919;VERY SCARCE $4.75

98 Raper & Reid--SHAR CROPPERS ALL;interesting account of economic conditions in the south,especially its rural people;x,281pp;Chapel Hill;1941 $3.00

99 Tannenbaum,F.--DARKER PHASES OF THE SOUTH;an interpretation of group behavior by a well-known author;vii,203pp;New York;1924;OUT OF PRINT $2.00

100 Vance,R.B.--ALL THESE PEOPLE; a nation's human resources in the south;xxxiii,503 pp;Chapel Hill;1946 $5.00

101 Walker,A.M.--TUSKEGEE & THE BLACK BELT;a portrait of a race;ill. with photos; xx,180pp;Richmond;1944 $3.00

CHICAGO

Guy B. Johnson
Southern Regional Council Inc
63 Auburn Ave, NE
Atlanta Ga (3)

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

★ PUBLICATIONS OF THE ★

American Youth Commission

OF THE AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION

3- Bibliographies

The Commission, which completed its work in 1942, conducted a comprehensive investigation of the problems facing young people in this country. It was concerned not only with the difficulties which face the school, but also with the protection and education of the millions of youth not reached now by the schools. Owen D. Young was chairman of the Commission. Floyd W. Reeves was director. A Committee on Youth Problems, under the chairmanship of Henry I. Harriman, continues the implementation of the findings of the Commission. The Committee on Youth Problems sponsored the revised edition of Youth-Serving Organizations described below.

Third Edition Now Ready

YOUTH-SERVING ORGANIZATIONS, National Nongovernmental Associations. By M. M. Chambers. 3d Edition, 1948. 162 p. $3.00, cloth.

Up-to-date third edition of this comprehensive reference work, of which earlier editions appeared in 1937 and 1941. Terse statements of membership, purposes, activities, publications, and finances of 250 national nongovernmental agencies, ranging from the youth-membership associations through the great national organizations primarily for adults but concerned in part with youth. Embraces political, labor, veterans' and farm organizations; women's clubs and service clubs of business men; and a variety of professional and quasi-professional associations in the fields of education, health, recreation, social welfare, and vocational guidance, as well as organizations advocating social reforms and international organization. Statistics are arranged in many convenient tables, and interrelations among the organizations are shown in eight graphic charts. A brief introduction discusses changes in the picture during the war and postwar periods, and exhibits condensed statistics of the principal organizations over a ten-year period.

* * * * * *

YOUTH AND THE FUTURE: The General Report of the American Youth Commission. 1942. 296 p. $2.50, cloth.

This significant report, widely discussed in the press and among educators and youth workers, sets forth a vital, practical program for the care and education of America's young people—a program based on the experience of the past, adjusted to harsh realities of the wartime present, and adequate to the foreseeable needs of the future. It provides an invaluable perspective on immediate and urgent problems and presents a long-range program for youth, with concrete proposals and recommendations that have been formulated after six years of investigation and study. Introduction by Owen D. Young. Foreword by Floyd W. Reeves. Final chapter, "Meaning for Life," prepared for the Commission by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. 2nd printing.

TIME ON THEIR HANDS

A Report on Leisure, Recreation, and Young People

By C. Gilbert Wrenn and D. L. Harley. 1941. 266 p., illus. $2.00, cloth.

Examines the new meaning of recreation and the leisure-time needs of youth against the background of modern social changes. Appraises the part that the principal recreation agencies take and might take in adequately meeting these needs. Outlines major objectives for recreational planning with specific recommendations. One of the "60 Educational Books of 1941."

WHAT THE HIGH SCHOOLS OUGHT TO TEACH

1940. 36 p. 25c, paper. Quantity discounts.

A highly significant discussion of the increasingly urgent curriculum changes needed in secondary schools today in order to meet the current conditions and problems of American youth. The report of a special committee headed by Ben G. Graham. One of the "60 Educational Books of 1940." 5th printing.

SECONDARY EDUCATION FOR YOUTH IN MODERN AMERICA

By Harl R. Douglass. 1937. 137 p. $1.00, cloth.

Reviews the important facts and trends which bear upon the necessary readjustment of secondary education in line with recent social and economic changes. Suggests concrete possibilities for experimentation and further study. 5th printing.

POSTWAR YOUTH EMPLOYMENT

A Study in Long-Term Trends

By Paul T. David. 1943. 172 p. $2.00, cloth.

Charts the course of American economic development in special relation to employment of youth. Analyzes the effects of such factors as technology, population changes, social stratification, industrial and occupational trends. 40 charts, tables, maps.

WORKING WITH RURAL YOUTH

By Edmund DeS. Brunner. 1942. 113 p. $1.20, cloth.

A report on the Rural Project of the American Youth Commission. The aim of the project was to develop and encourage programs for meeting the needs of rural youth through existing agencies in the states, counties, and communities. This report describes the project, its objectives and procedures, summarizes its lessons and achievements, and appraises the results.

YOUTH TELL THEIR STORY

A Study of the Conditions and Attitudes of Young People

By Howard M. Bell. 1938. 273 p. $2.50, paper.

This comprehensive survey made by the American Youth Commission in Maryland tells a dramatic story of the conditions and attitudes of 13,500 young people of all types, between 16 and 24. Based on detailed interviews, this study presents a forceful and readable analysis of what American youth are thinking and doing. Widely discussed in lay and professional press. 4th printing.

"Most comprehensive and significant study that has ever been made of young people, their life, and their work."—SURVEY GRAPHIC.

MATCHING YOUTH AND JOBS

A Study of Occupational Adjustment

By Howard M. Bell. 1940. 277 p., illus. $2.00, cloth.

A report on a survey and demonstration of occupational adjustment carried out in cooperation with the Employment Service Division of the Social Security Board. Discusses vocational guidance, preparation, and placement. Explains how an occupational adjustment program may function through school systems and other agencies present in most communities. One of the "60 Educational Books of 1940." 2nd printing.

YOUTH WORK PROGRAMS

Problems and Policies

By Lewis L. Lorwin. 1941. 195 p. $1.75, cloth.

Explores basic problems and policies involved in publicly operated work programs for American youth. Though not an over-all appraisal of current programs, this report has utilized the experience of the NYA in its out-of-school projects for purposes of illustration. Considers national defense plans in connection with work programs. One of the "60 Educational Books of 1941."

BARRIERS TO YOUTH EMPLOYMENT

By Paul T. David. 1942. 110 p. $1.75, cloth.

Studies such obstacles as entrance requirements for certain occupations, the practice of seniority, governmental restrictions upon child labor and youth employment, and state and federal minimum wage laws. Suggests revisions of existing policies and practices to facilitate youth employment. A practical and valuable planning aid.

AMERICAN YOUTH

An Annotated Bibliography

By Louise A. Menefee and M. M. Chambers. 1938. 492 p. $3.00, cloth.

Annotations of 2500 items on literature of the problems of youth. Nearly 2000 authors are represented, covering such topics as employment, education, guidance, health, leisure, family life. A basic reference for all who work with young people.

STUDIES OF NEGRO YOUTH

An investigation of the special problems of Negro youth, carried out by a staff headed by Robert L. Sutherland. Specifically, the survey studied the personality development of Negro youth as affected by their membership in a minority racial group.

CHILDREN OF BONDAGE—The Personality Development of Negro Youth in the Urban South.

By Allison Davis and John Dollard. 1940. 299 p. $3.00, cloth; $2.00, paper.

Explores the personality development of Negro youth in New Orleans and Natchez. Interviews with over 200 adolescents supply the background for an intensive study of eight representative cases. A report of scientific and social significance, important for its psycho-sociological technique as well as for the findings and conclusions presented. Well documented, but not statistical. One of the "60 Educational Books for 1940." 4th printing.

"Necessary reading for all those interested in understanding . . . the way human nature is formed in the social context. . . . Highly relevant to our general understanding of the dynamics of caste and class behavior."—THE AMERICAN JOURNAL OF SOCIOLOGY.

* * * * * *

COLOR, CLASS, AND PERSONALITY

By Robert L. Sutherland. 1942. 135 p., illus. $1.25, cloth; 75c, paper.

This final volume reviews the chief findings of the investigation and suggests their implications for our national life. Not a digest or literal summary of the earlier volumes, it is an interpretation of those findings which are most relevant to plans for improving the status of Negro youth. Defines problems that call for action now and makes specific, practical recommendations for their orderly solution. 2nd printing.

THUS BE THEIR DESTINY

The Personality Development of Negro Youth in Three Communities

By J. Howell Atwood, Donald W. Wyatt, Vincent J. Davis, and Ira D. Walker. 1941. 96 p. 75c, paper.

Profile studies of groups of Negro young people reared in three "liberal" communities—Milton, Pa.; Greensboro, N. C.; Galesburg, Ill. Documentation of changes in community structure during this century makes this a useful sociological study.

NEGRO YOUTH AT THE CROSSWAYS

Their Personality Development in the Middle States

By E. Franklin Frazier. 1940. 301 p. $2.25, cloth.

Against a background summary of Negro "border states" culture, drawn from existing reports and newly secured community data, the interracial experiences of 268 Negro young people are analyzed. This is followed by two systematic and complete case studies. 2nd printing.

"A mature book. Documentary material . . . has been given a scholarly, candid, and penetrating analysis without sacrificing an iota of spontaneity or of human interest."—AMERICAN ACADEMY OF POLITICAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCE ANNALS.

COLOR AND HUMAN NATURE

Negro Personality Development in a Northern City

By W. Lloyd Warner, Buford H. Junker, and Walter A. Adams. 1941. 301 p. $3.00, cloth.

Analyzes systematically the socio-racial factors affecting the adjustment of Negro youth in Chicago's South Side "Black Belt." Utilizing a combined cultural and psychological approach, this study appraises the significance of color and other Negroid physical characteristics in the formation of personality. Personal histories vividly illustrate the conclusions drawn from hundreds of case studies. 2nd printing.

"An analytic report on 805 case histories in Chicago which will certainly be invaluable in any future consideration of the color problem. Besides its value as a social document the book should be of interest to the general reader in the non-fiction field."—BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB NEWS.

GROWING UP IN THE BLACK BELT

Negro Youth in the Rural South

By Charles S. Johnson. 1941. 360 p. $2.25, cloth.

Investigates the response of Negro youth to the generally low economic conditions of the rural South and to the racial status in which they find themselves. Individual interviews, life history documents, attitude and psychological tests, and other techniques were used in conducting and interpreting this survey of eight southern rural counties. An outline of the research methodology adds to this volume's usefulness to the student.

IN A MINOR KEY

Negro Youth in Story and Fact

By Ira DeA. Reid. 1940. 134 p. $1.25, paper.

Brings together in compact and readily accessible form much basic and general information about Negro youth in this country. "A vivid living story well buttressed with facts." 2nd printing.

PAMPHLETS

HOW TO MAKE A COMMUNITY YOUTH SURVEY

By M. M. Chambers and Howard M. Bell. 1939. 45 p. 25c, paper.

What should be done and what can be done to improve vocational opportunities, education, health, and recreation for the community's youth. 2nd printing.

THE COMMUNITY AND ITS YOUNG PEOPLE

By M. M. Chambers. 1940. 36 p. 15c, paper.

A practical and important handbook of methods and procedures for investigating locally the status, needs, and aspirations of the community's young people. 3rd printing.

WORK CAMPS FOR YOUTH

A series of studies of the social, economic, and educational significance of the CCC, NYA, and private work camps in the United States. An extensive investigation and experimental program directed by Kenneth Holland.

YOUTH IN THE CCC

By Kenneth Holland and Frank Ernest Hill. 1942. 263 p., illus. $2.25, cloth.

Investigates and evaluates the Civilian Conservation Corps as an agency to provide employment and training for youth and to give youth an opportunity to make a major contribution to the national welfare. An extensive background of case studies heightens the value of this definitive report.

WORK CAMPS FOR COLLEGE STUDENTS

By Kenneth Holland. 1941. 32 p., illus. 25c, paper.

Reviews activities in five camps sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee during 1940, and makes recommendations for increasing the value of such work centers.

WORK CAMPS FOR HIGH SCHOOL YOUTH

By Kenneth Holland and George L. Bickel. 1941. 27 p., illus. 25c, paper.

Brief review of the junior camp movement. Includes descriptions of camp programs, costs, and educational possibilities.

YOUTH IN EUROPEAN LABOR CAMPS

By Kenneth Holland. 1939. 303 p., illus. $2.50, cloth.

Background data for the Commission's studies of American work camps. Countries included in the survey are: Bulgaria, Switzerland, Germany, Austria, Great Britain, the Scandinavian countries, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and the Netherlands. Important bibliographies. 2nd printing.

ORDER FORM

American Council on Education
744 Jackson Place
Washington 6, D. C.

Please send me

.....

.....

.....

☐ Cash enclosed ☐ Bill me

Name.....

Address.....

20M 1-48

3 - Bibliographies

BRITISH INFORMATION SERVICES
AN AGENCY OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT

REFERENCE DIVISION

April, 1948

ID 551
(Revised)

SOME BOOKS ON THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH AND EMPIRE

A. GENERAL AND HISTORICAL

*ADAMS, James Truslow — Empire on the seven seas (New York, Scribners, 1939) 2 vols.

*BARKER, Ernest — The ideas and ideals of the British Empire (New York, Macmillan, 1941)

*BEER, G.L. — British colonial policy 1754-1765 (New York, Macmillan, 1907)

*CAMBRIDGE HISTORY of the British Empire (Cambridge U.P., 1929 to date) 8 vols.

*CARRINGTON, C.E. — An exposition of empire (Cambridge U.P., 1947)

*COUPLAND. Sir R. — The Durham Report (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1945)

*CROCKER, W.R. — On governing colonies (London, Allen & Unwin, 1947)

*DAWSON, R.M. — The development of dominion status (Oxford U.P., 1937)

*EGERTON, H.E. and NEWTON, A.P. — A short history of British colonial policy (London, Methuen, 1943)

*ELLIOTT, W.Y., and HALL, H.D. — The British Empire at war (New York, Knopf, 1943)

*ELTON, Lord — Imperial commonwealth (London, Collins, 1945)

*FAWCETT, C.B. — A political geography of the British Empire (London, Ginn, 1933)

This material is filed with the Department of Justice, where the required registration statement of B.I.S. under 56 Stat. 248-258 as an agency of the British Government is available for inspection. Registration does not imply approval or disapproval of this material by the United States Government.

*GRIGG, Sir E. — The British Commonwealth (London, Hutchinson, 1943)

*HAILEY, Lord — The future of colonial peoples (Oxford U.P., 1943)

*HAILEY, Lord — Britain and her dependencies (London, Longmans, 1943)

*HANCOCK, W.K. — A survey of British Commonwealth affairs (Oxford U.P. 1937-42) 2 vols. (Vol.2 in 2 pts)

*HANCOCK, W.K. — Empire in the changing world (Penguin Books, 1943)

*HODSON, H.V. — The British Commonwealth and the future (Oxford U.P., 1939)

*INNES, A.D. — The maritime and colonial expansion of England under the Stuarts (London, Sampson Low, 1931)

*KEITH, Sir A.B. — Selected speeches and documents on British colonial policy, 1763-1917 (Oxford U.P., 1918) 2 vols.

*KEITH, Sir A.B. (ed.) — Speeches and documents on the British dominions, 1918-1931 (Oxford U.P., 1932)

*KNAPLUND, Paul — The British Empire, 1815-1939 (New York, Harper, 1941)

*LEACOCK, S.B. — Our British Empire: its structure, its history, its strength (Lane, 1940)

*LEWIN, E. — Best books on the British Empire: a bibliography (London, Royal Empire Society, 1945)

*LINDSAY, Sir H. (ed.) — British commonwealth objectives (London, Joseph, 1946)

*MAIR, L.P. — Welfare in the British Colonies (London, Royal Institute of International Affairs, 1943)

*MARRIOTT, Sir J.A.R. — Evolution of the British Empire and Commonwealth (London, Nicholson & Watson, 1939)

*MEEK, C.K. — Land law and custom in the colonies (Oxford U.P., 1946)

*NEWTON, A.P. — A hundred years of the British Empire (London, Duckworth, 1940)

*NEWTON, A.P. — The British Empire to 1783 (London, Methuen, 1935)

*NEWTON, A.P. and EWING, T. — The British Empire since 1783 (London, Methuen, 1939)

*ORIGINS AND PURPOSE: — A handbook on the British Commonwealth and Empire (London, H.M.S.O., 1947)

*PALMER, G.E.H. — Consultation and co-operation in the British Commonwealth (Oxford U.P., 1934)

*ROYAL INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS — The British Empire (London, Oxford U.P., 1939)

*ROYAL INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS — The colonial problem (London, Oxford U.P., 1937)

*SEELEY, Sir J.R. — The expansion of England (London, Macmillan, 1925)

*SEELEY, Sir J.R. — The growth of British policy (Oxford U.P., 1922)

*SOMERVELL, D.C. — The British Empire (London, Christophers, 1930)

*WALKER, Eric A. — Colonies (Cambridge U.P., 1944)

*WALKER, Eric A. — The British Empire: its structure and spirit (Oxford U.P., 1944)

*WIGHT, M. — The development of the legislative council (London, Faber, 1946)

*WILLIAMSON, J.A. — The British Commonwealth and Empire (London, Macmillan, 1935)

*WILLIAMSON, J.A. — Foundation and growth of the British Empire (London, Macmillan, 1943)

*ZIMMERN, Sir A. — The third British Empire (Oxford U.P., 1934)

B. CONSTITUTIONAL

JENKS, E. — Government of the British Empire (London, Murray, 1937)
*(BIS has 1929 edn)

*JENNINGS, W.I. and YOUNG, C.M. — The constitutional laws of the British Empire (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1938)

KEITH, Sir A.B. — Responsible government in the dominions (Oxford U.P., 1928) *(BIS has 1912 edn)

*KEITH, Sir A.B. — The governments of the British Empire (London, Macmillan, O.P.)

*KEITH, Sir A.B. — The dominions as sovereign states (London, Macmillan, 1938)

'ORRITT, E. — The fiscal and diplomatic freedom of the British oversea dominions (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1922)

*TOYNBEE, A.J. — British Commonwealth relations (Oxford U.P., 1934)

WHEARE, K.C. — The Statute of Westminster and dominion status (Oxford U.P., 1942) *(BIS has 1931, 1933 edns)

C. ADMINISTRATION

*BERTRAM, A. — The colonial service (Cambridge U.P., 1930)

*HALL, H.L. — The colonial office: a history (London, Longmans, 1937)

*JEFFRIES, C.J. — The colonial empire and its civil service (Cambridge U.P., 1938)

D. DEFENCE

*BOYCOTT, A.G. — Elements of imperial defence: a study of the geographical features, material resources, communications, and organizations of the British Empire (Aldershot, Gale and Polden, 1936)

*COLE, D.H. — Imperial military geography (London, Sifton Praed, 1938)

*FALLS, C. — The question of defence (London, New York, Longmans, 1947)

E. ETHNOLOGY AND FOLK-LORE

*DOWD, J. — The Negro race (N.Y. Macmillan, 1907) 2 vols.

EVANS, I.H.N. Studies in religion, folklore, and custom in British North Borneo and the Malay Peninsula (Cambridge U.P., 1923)

FRAZER, Sir J.G. The golden bough: a study in magic and religion (London, Macmillan, 1923-30) 12 vols.

FRAZER, Sir J.G. The native races of Africa and Madagascar ...arranged and edited from the mss. by Robert Angus Downie (London, Lund and Humphries, 1938)

SELIGMAN, C.G. Races of Africa (London, Butterworth, 1930)

*SMITH, E.W. The golden stool: some aspects of the conflict of cultures in modern Africa (London, Holborn Publishing House, 1926)

F. EUROPE AND ASIA

*EMERSON, R. Malaysia: a study in direct and indirect rule (N.Y., Macmillan, 1937)

*ENRIQUEZ, C.M. Ceylon past and present (London, Hurst and Blackett, 1927)

*GARRATT, C.T. Gibraltar and the Mediterranean (London, Cape, 1939)

*HAY, I. The unconquered isle (London, Hodder, 1943)

*HOLDEN, Lord Ceylon (London, Allen and Unwin, 1939)

MILLS, L.A. British Malaya, 1824-1867 (Singapore, Methodist Printing House, 1925)

*MILLS, Lennox A. British rule in East Asia (Oxford U.P. 1942)

*MILLS, Lennox A. Ceylon under British rule (London, Oxford U.P., 1933)

*SWETTENHAM, Sir F.A. British Malaya: an account of the origins and progress of British influence in Malaya (London, Lane, 1907)

WINSTEDT, Sir R.O. A history of Malaya (London, Luzac, 1935)

*WINSTEDT, Sir R.O. — Malaya, the Straits Settlements, and the Federated and Unfederated Malay States (London, Constable, 1923)

G. AFRICA

*BATTEN, T.R. — Problems of African development: part I, land and labour (Oxford U.P., 1947)

BROWNE, G. St. J.O. — The African labourer (London, African Institute, 1933)

*BUELL, R.L. — Native problem in Africa (London, Macmillan, 1928)

*COUPLAND, Sir R. — The exploration of East Africa, 1856-1890 (London, Faber, 1939)

*FITZGERALD, W. — Africa: a social, economic and political geography (London, Methuen, 1934)

*FORTES, M. and EVANS-PRITCHARD, E.E.(eds) — African political systems (Oxford U.P., 1940)

*FRANKEL, S.H. — Capital investment in Africa: its course and effects (Oxford U.P., 1938)

*HAILEY, Lord — African survey (Oxford U.P., 1938)

*HINDEN, R. — Plan for Africa: a report prepared for the Colonial Bureau of the Fabian Society (London, Fabian Society, 1942)

*HUXLEY, E. — East Africa (London, Collins, 1941)

*HUXLEY, J. — Africa view (London, Chatto and Windus, 1931)

*JOHNSTON, H.H. — The opening up of Africa (London, Thornton, Butterworth, 1937)

*LUGARD, Lord — The dual mandate in British tropical Africa (London, Blackwood, 1926)

*MACMILLAN, W.M. — Africa emergent: a survey of social, political and economic trends in British Africa (London, Faber, 1938)

*MAIR, L.P. — Native policies in Africa (London, Routledge, 1936)

*MEEK, C.K. — Law and authority in a Nigerian tribe: a study in indirect rule (Oxford U.P., 1937)

*MEEK, C.K., MACMILLAN, W.M., and HUSSEY, E.R.J. — Europe and West Africa: some problems and adjustments (Oxford U.P., 1940)

*PERHAM, M. — Africans and British rule (Oxford U.P., 1941)

*PERHAM, M. (ed) — Mining, commerce, and finance in Nigeria (London, Faber, 1948). (Vol.II of The economics of a tropical dependency)

*PERHAM, M. (ed) — The native economies of Nigeria (London, Faber, 1946). (Vol.I of The economics of a tropical dependency)

*PERHAM, M. and SIMMONS, J. — African discovery: an anthology of exploration (London, Faber, 1942)

*PIM, A. — The financial and economic history of the African tropical territories (Oxford U.P., 1940)

*WESTERMANN, D. — The African today and tomorrow (Oxford U.P., 1939)

*WIGHT, M. — The Gold Coast legislative council (London, Faber, 1947)

*WORTHINGTON, E.B. — Science in Africa (London, Oxford U.P., 1938)

WRONG, M. — Five points for Africa (Edinburgh House Press, 1942)

H. INDIA

*CAMBRIDGE HISTORY of India — (Cambridge U.P., 1922-40) 5 vols.

*COUPLAND, Sir R. — The Indian problem (Oxford U.P., 1944)

*KEITH, Sir A.B. — A constitutional history of India 1600-1935 (London, Methuen, 1936)

*MAJUMDAR, RAYCHAUDHURI, and DATTA — An advanced history of India (London, Macmillan, 1946)

*RAMAN, T.A. — Report on India (Oxford U.P., 1943)

*RAWLINSON, H.G. — India, a short cultural history (N.Y., Appleton-Century, 1938)

I. FAR EAST AND PACIFIC

*KEESING, F.M. — The South Seas in the modern world (London, Allen and Unwin, 1942)

*DANIEL, H. Islands of the Pacific (N.Y., Putnam, 1943)

*BEAGLEHOLE, J.C. The exploration of the Pacific (London, Black, 1934)

J. WESTERN HEMISPHERE

*BLANSHARD, P. Democracy and empire in the Caribbean (N.Y., Macmillan, 1947)

*BOYSON, V.F. The Falkland Islands (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1924)

*BURN, W.L. Emancipation and apprenticeship in the British West Indies (London, Cape, 1937)

*GUTTRIDGE, G.H. The colonial policy of William III in America and the West Indies (Cambridge U.P., 1922)

*MACMILLAN, W.M. Warning from the West Indies (London, Faber, 1935)

*MATHIESON, W.L. The sugar colonies and Governor Eyre, 1849-1856 (London, Longmans, 1936)

*NEWTON, A.P. The European nations in the West Indies, 1493-1688 (London, Black, 1933)

PENSON, L.M. The colonial agents of the British West Indies (U. of London Press, 1924)

*SIMEY, T.S. Welfare and planning in the West Indies Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1946)

WRONG, H.H. Government of the West Indies (London, Clarendon, 1923)

NOTE: All books preceded by an asterisk are contained in the Library, B.I.S. New York. Applications for inter-library loans will be sympathetically considered.

K. PERIODICALS

Africa: Journal of the International African Institute, (Quarterly)

African Affairs: Journal of the Royal African Society, (Quarterly)

African World, (Monthly)

Colonial Review: A Readers' Digest of Important Articles on Colonial Affairs, (Quarterly)

Crown Colonist, (Monthly)

East Africa and Rhodesia, (Weekly)

Empire: Journal of the Fabian Colonial Bureau, (Monthly)

Great Britain and the East, (Monthly)

Oversea Education: A Journal of Educational Experiment and Research in Tropical and Subtropical Areas, (Quarterly)

Round Table: A Quarterly Review of the Politics of the British Commonwealth, (Quarterly)

United Empire: Journal of the Royal Empire Society, (Bi-monthly)

West Africa, (Weekly)

West India Committee Circular, (Monthly)

All the above may be consulted in the Library, B.I.S. New York.

NL

3 - Bibliographies

Jan

LEGISLATION AFFECTING MINORITY GROUPS

A SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY

BIBLIOGRAPHIC SERIES

NO. 3

1948

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON RACE RELATIONS

4901 ELLIS AVENUE CHICAGO 15, ILLINOIS

Preface

The American Council on Race Relations has available a series of selected current bibliographies covering the several important areas of major interest in the field of intercultural relations. They are,

1. Minorities and Intergroup Relations
   An introduction to the series listing materials which present authentic scientific backgrounds for the study of intercultural relations.

2. Discrimination in Employment
   Employment problems of minorities, their integration into the economic structure, including materials on industry, unions, business, government and FEPC legislation.

3. Legislation Affecting Minority Groups
   Legislation at the federal, state and local levels, including court decisions.

4. Discrimination in Housing
   Segregation in housing and racial restrictive covenants.

5. Discrimination in Education
   Materials on segregated and unsegregated school systems and quota limitations in higher education.

6. Community Organization for Intergroup Relations
   Techniques for organizing the community and directories of agencies working in the field of intergroup relations.

These mimeographed bibliographies are revised regularly by the Librarian of the American Council and are available at 10¢ each (with quantity rates upon request).

American Council on Race Relations

uopwa-39-cio
May, 1948
rjs

LEGISLATION AFFECTING MINORITY GROUPS

A Selected Bibliography

Alexander, Raymond Pace. "The Upgrading of the Negro's Status By Supreme Court Decisions." Journal of Negro History, April 1945, p. 117-49.

American Jewish Committee, Community Activities Department. What Can Be Done About Prejudice -- By Legislation? (Straight Talk, Vol. 1, No. 2). New York: The Committee, 386 Fourth Ave. 1947.

American Jewish Congress, Commission on Law and Social Action. Law and Social Action. Published monthly. New York: The Congress, 1834 Broadway.

_____. Check List of State Group Defamation Statutes, June 1947.

Carr, Robert K. Federal Protection of Civil Rights: Quest for a Sword. Ithaca, New York: Cornell University Press. 1947.

Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts. Equal Rights Regardless of Race or Color. Boston: The Union, 14 Beacon Street, Room 301.

Connecticut Interracial Commission. Laws Against Discrimination. Hartford, Connecticut: The Commission, 1945.

"Courts Protect Rights of Negroes in White Unions." Lawyers Guild Review, November-December, 1944, p. 42-4.

Cushman, Robert E. "Laws of the Land." Survey Graphic, January 1947, p. 14-18.

Du Bois, W.E.B. "Civil Rights Legislation Before and After the Passage of the Fourteenth Amendment." Lawyers Guild Review, November-December 1946, p. 640-2.

Fraenkel, Osmond K. "The Federal Civil Rights Laws." Minnesota Law Review, March 1947, p. 301-27.

_____. The Supreme Court and Civil Liberties. New York: American Civil Liberties Union, 170 Fifth Avenue. 1941.

_____. "The Supreme Court and Civil Rights -- 1946 Term." Columbia Law Review, September 1947, p. 953-78.

Gellhorn, Walter. "In Defense of American Activities." American Scholar, Spring 1948, p. 139-49.

Governor's Interracial Commission of Minnesota. Outside the Home. St. Paul, Minnesota: The Commission, 117 University Avenue. 1946.

Houser, George M. and Rustin, Bayard. We Challenged Jim Crow. New York: Fellowship of Reconciliation and Congress of Racial Equality, 2929 Broadway.

International Labor Defense and National Negro Congress. It Is Against The Law. New York: Civil Rights Congress, 205 E. 42nd Street and National Negro Congress, 307 Lenox Avenue. 1945. 5¢, quantity rates.

Jones, Sidney A., Jr. "The Supreme Court's Role in Jim Crow Transportation." National Bar Journal, June 1945, p. 114-25.

_____. "The White Primary and the Supreme Court." National Bar Journal, March 1945, p. 10-28.

Konvitz, Milton R. The Alien and the Asiatic in American Law. Ithaca, New York: Cornell University Press. 1946.

_____. The Constitution and Civil Rights. New York: Columbia University Press. 1947.

_____. "Enforcement of Civil Rights." Common Ground, 4 no. 4, 1944, p. 90-100.

Lee, Kendrick. Federal Protection of Civil Liberties. Washington D.C.: Editorial Research Reports, 1205 19th Street. $1.00.

"Legislative Attempts to Eliminate Racial and Religious Discrimination." Columbia Law Review, June 1939, p. 986.

McWilliams, Carey. "Race Discrimination and the Law." Reprinted from Science and Society, Winter, 1945. New York: National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, 205 E. 42nd Street.

Mangum, Charles S. The Legal Status of the Negro. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press. 1940.

Maslow, Will. "Anti-Semitism and the Law." Congress Weekly, November 16, 1946.

_____. "Law and Race Relations." Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, March 1946, p. 75-81.

Milwaukee Mayor's Commission on Human Relations and the Fair Employment Division of the Wisconsin Industrial Commission. Laws Against Discrimination, City, State, and Federal and Excerpts from U.S. and Wisconsin Constitutions. Milwaukee, Wisconsin: The Commission, 844 North Market Street. 1948.

National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Legal Defense and Educational Fund. Equal Justice Under Law. New York: The Association, 20 W. 40th Street. 1945. 10¢

National Community Relations Advisory Council. NCRAC Legislative Information Bulletin. Published from time to time. New York: The Council, 295 Madison Avenue.

National CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination. What Is The Law. Washington: CIO Department of Research and Education, 718 Jackson Place, N.W. 1947. 15¢, quantity rates.

National Federation for Constitutional Liberties. Everybody's Business; A Summary of Anti-Discrimination Laws of New York State and How to Use Them. New York: Civil Rights Congress, 205 E. 42nd Street, 1946. 25¢, quantity rates.

National League of Women Voters. Government and Our Minorities. Washington: The League, 726 Jackson Place, N.W. 1945. 10¢

Nelson, Bernard H. The Fourteenth Amendment and the Negro Since 1920. Washington, D.C.: Catholic University of America Press. 1946.

New York State Commission Against Discrimination. Compilation of Laws Against Discrimination Because of Race, Creed, Color or National Origin; a Reference Manual. New York: The Commission, 270 Broadway. 1948. $2.00.

Polier, Shad. "Law, Conscience and Society." Lawyers Guild Review, March-April 1946.

President's Committee on Civil Rights. To Secure These Rights. Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1947. $1.00.

Price, Margaret. The Condition of Our Rights; from the files on civil and human rights in the south. Atlanta, Georgia: Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E. 1948.

Public Affairs Committee, National Board, Y.W.C.A. Public Affairs Newsletter. New York: 600 Lexington Avenue.

Styles, Fitzhugh. Negroes and the Law, Boston: Christopher Publishing House. 1937.

Syrkin, Marie. "Laws Educate." Common Ground, Summer, 1945, p. 61-66.

Truman, Harry S. "Message to Congress Recommending Civil Rights Legislation." Congressional Record, February 2, 1948.

Urban Colored Population Commission of New Jersey. Discrimination in Public Places and the Civil Rights Laws of New Jersey. Fourth annual report. Newark, New Jersey: The Commission, 1060 Broad Street, Rooms 527-28. 1946.

Waite, Edward F. "The Negro in the Supreme Court." Reprint from Minnesota Law Review, Vol. 20, p. 219-304. 1946.

FEBRUARY 1954 - No VII

Educational Studies and Documents

Education for Community Development: A Selected Bibliography

Prepared by Unesco and United Nations

Education Clearing House

Materials- Bibliographies

BASIC BIBLIOGRAPHIES IN INTERGROUP RELATIONS

* * * * *

These two bibliographies have been prepared primarily for use by the following persons:

1. Students enrolled in orientation workshops or seminars in intergroup relations;
2. School superintendents or principals who wish to build professional libraries suitable for use by their staffs;
3. Individuals or study groups desirous of professional growth in the field of intergroup relations;
4. Students enrolled in introductory, college courses in human relations;
5. Librarians building balanced collections of books in intergroup or human relations.

By choosing books from each section of The Primary Bibliography, a person can secure an introduction to the field of intergroup relations. Specific problem areas can then be explored by use of The Supplementary Bibliography.

The 145 books listed are recent and, so far as is known, are all in print. Publishers and prices are listed, but the books are not annotated, deliberately, in order to encourage personal examination.

Gordon W. Lovejoy

Guilford College, N. C.
May, 1954

CONTENTS

I. THE PRIMARY BIBLIOGRAPHY Page

A. The Background

1. The American Heritage: Biological and Cultural Roots of the American People 1.

2. The American Dream: A Way of Life 1.

3. Unfinished Business of American Democracy 2.

B. Sociological and Educational Insights into Intergroup Relations

1. The Role of Education in a Free Society 2.

2. Moral and Spiritual Values for Public Education 3.

3. Child Acculturation: Process and Product 4.

4. Caste-Class as a Theory of Intergroup Relations 4.

5. Prejudice: Causes and Manifestations 5.

6. Race and Racism 5.

C. Sociological and Educational Approaches to New Skills

1. In General 6.

2. For Teachers and Administrators 7.

3. For Community Leaders 9.

CONTENTS (con't)

II. THE SUPPLEMENTARY BIBLIOGRAPHY — Page

A. The Negro — 11.

B. The Mexican American and the Puerto Rican — 11.

C. The Japanese American — 12.

D. The American Indian — 12.

E. Minority Religious Groups: Beliefs and Practices — 13.

I. THE PRIMARY BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. The Background

1. The American Heritage: Biological and Cultural Roots of the American People

Blake, Manfred - A short History of American Life. New York: McGraw, 1952. $5.75

Brown, Francis, and Roucek, Joseph H. - One America: The History, Contributions, and Present Problems of Our Racial and National Minorities (Third Edition). New York: Prentice-Hall, Inc., 1952. $5.00

Handlin, Oscar - The Uprooted: The Epic Story of the Great Migrations That Made the American People. Boston: Little, Brown & Co., 1952. $4.00

Parkes, Henry B. - The American Experience: An Interpretation of the History and Civilization of the American People. New York: A. A. Knopf, 1947. $3.50

Smith, William C. - Americans in the Making. New York: D. Appleton Co., 1949. $3.75

Wischnitzer, Mark - To Dwell in Safety: The Story of Jewish Migration in the Past 150 Years. Philadelphia: Jewish Publ. Soc. of America, 1947. $4.00

2. The American Dream: A Way of Life

Allen, Frederick L. - The Big Change: 1900-1950. New York: Harper & Bros., 1953. $3.50

Douglas, William O. - On Being An American. New York: John Day Co., 1948. $2.75

Hacker, Louis M. - The Shaping of the American Tradition. New York: Columbia University Press, 1947. $7.50

MacIver, Robert M. - The Ramparts We Guard. New York: Macmillan Co., 1950. $3.00

Van Doren, Carl - The Great Rehearsal. New York: Viking Press, 1947. $3.75

Wester, Dixon - Age of the Great Depression. New York: The Macmillan Co., 1948. $5.00

Williams, Robin M., Jr. - American Society: A Sociological Interpretation. New York: A. A. Knopf, 1952. $4.50

3. Unfinished Business of American Democracy

Ashmore, Harry S. - The Negro and the Schools. Chapel Hill, University of North Carolina Press, 1954. $2.75

Forster, Arnold, and Epstein, Benjamin - The Troublemakers. Garden City: Doubleday-Doran, 1952. $3.50

McWilliams, Carey - A Mask for Privilege: Anti-Semitism in America. Boston: Little, Brown & Co., 1948. $2.75

Marden, Charles F. - Minorities in American Society. New York: American Book Co., 1952. $4.50

Moore, Wilbert E. - Industrial Relations and the Social Order (Rev. Ed.). New York: The Macmillan Co., 1951. $5.00

Pinson, Koppel S. - Essays on Anti-Semitism. New York: Conference on Jewish Relations, 1946. $3.50

Rose, Arnold - America Divided. New York: A. A. Knopf, 1948. $3.00

Roy, Ralph L. - Apostles of Discord. Boston: Beacon Press, 1953. $3.75

B. Sociological and Educational Insights into Intergroup Relations

1. The Role of Education in a Free Society

Brameld, Theodore - Patterns of Educational Philosophy. New York: World Book Co., 1951. $5.60

Conant, James B. - Education and Liberty. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1953 $3.00

Day, Edmund E. - Education for Freedom and Responsibility: Selected Essays. Ithaca, N. Y.: Cornell University Press, 1953. $2.50

Hullfish, H. Gordon (Ed.) - Educational Freedom in an Age of Anxiety. New York: Harper & Bros., 1953. $3.00

McGrath, Earl J. - Education, the Wellspring of Democracy. Tuscaloosa, Ala.: University of Alabama Press, 1951. $2.50

MacConnell, Charles M., et al. - New Schools for a New Culture: An Action Program for Democratic Education. New York: Harper & Bros., 1953. $3.00

Melby, Ernest O., and Puner, Morton - Freedom and Public Education. New York: Frederick A. Praeger, 1953. $4.00

Robbins, Florence G. - Educational Sociology: A Study of Child, Youth, School, and Community. New York: Henry Holt & Co., 1953. $4.75

2. Moral and Spiritual Values for Public Education

Butts, R. Freeman - The American Tradition in Religion and Education. Boston: Beacon Press, 1953. $3.00

Committee on Religion and Education - The Function of the Public School in Dealing With Religion. Washington: American Council on Education, 1953. $2.00

Education Policies Commission of the N.E.A. - Moral and Spiritual Values in the Public Schools. Washington: N.E.A., 1951. $1.00

Hay, Clyde L. - The Blind Spot in American Public Education. New York: Macmillan Co., 1951. $2.00

Madden, Ward - Religious Values in Education. New York: Harper & Bros., 1951. $3.00

Wesson, Elizabeth M. - Bible Readings for School and Homes. New York: Harper & Bros., 1950. $0.60

3. Child Acculturation: Process and Product

Bossard, James H. S. - The Sociology of Child Development. New York: Harper & Bros., 1948. $4.50

Goodman, Mary Ellen - Race Awareness in Young Children. Cambridge, Mass.: Addison-Wesley Press, 1952. $3.75

Gruesser, Sister Mary Jeanine - Categorical Valuation of Jews Among Catholic Parochial School Children. Washington: Catholic University Press, 1951. $2.00

Lewis, Claudia - Children of the Cumberland. New York: Columbia University Press, 1946. $2.75

Traeger, Helen, and Yarrow, Marian - They Learn What They Live: Prejudice in Young Children. New York: Harper & Bros., 1952. $4.50

4. Caste-Class as a Theory of Intergroup Relations

Holingshead, August B. - Elmtown's Youth: The Impact of Social Classes on Adolescents. New York: John Wiley & Sons, 1949. $5.00

Warner, W. Lloyd, et al. - Democracy in Jonesville. New York: Harper & Bros., 1949. $3.50

Warner, W. Lloyd, and Lunt, Paul S. - The Social Life of a Modern Community. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1941. $4.00

Warner, W. Lloyd, and Lunt, Paul S. - The Status System of a Modern Community. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1942. $3.00

Warner, W. Lloyd, and Strole, Leo - The Social Systems of American Ethnic Groups. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1945. $4.00

5. Prejudice: Causes and Manifestations

Ackerman, Nathan, and Jahoda, Marie - Anti-Semitism and Emotional Disorder: A Psychological Interpretation. New York: Harper & Bros., 1950. $2.50

Adorno, T. W., et al. - The Authoritarian Personality. New York: Harper & Bros., 1950. $7.50

Allport, Gordon W. - The Nature of Prejudice. Cambridge, Mass.: Addison-Wesley Publishers, 1954. $5.50

Bettelheim, Bruno, and Janorwitz, Norris - Dynamics of Prejudice: A Psychogical and Sociological Study of Veterans. New York: Harper & Bros., 1950. $3.50

Lowenstein, Rudolph M. Guterman, Norbert - Christians & Jews: A Psychoanalytic Study. New York: International Universities Press, 1951. $3.25

Lowenthal, Leo, and - Prophets of Deceit: A Study of the Techniques of the American Agitator. New York: Harper & Bros., 1950. $2.50

Saenger, Gerhart - The Social Psychology of Prejudice. New York: Harper & Bros., 1953. $4.00

6. Race and Racism

Ashley-Montagu, M. F. - Statement on Race. New York: Henry Schuman, Inc., 1951. $2.00

Berry, Brewton - Race Relations: A Sociological Analysis. New York: Houghton Mifflin Co., 1952. $5.00

Brown, Ina Corrine - Race Relations in a Democracy. New York: Harper & Bros., 1949. $3.00

Loescher, Frank S. - The Protestant Church and the Negro: A Pattern of Segregation. New York: Association Press, 1948. $3.00

Rose, Arnold - Race Prejudice and Discriminations: Readings in Intergroup Relations in the United States. New York: A. A. Knopf, 1951. $5.00

C. Sociological and Educational Approaches to New Skills

1. In General

Allport, Gordon W.	- The Resolution of Intergroup Tensions. New York: National Conference of Christians & Jews, Inc. 1952. $0.25
Benne, Keneth D., and Muntyan, Bozidar	- Human Relations in Curriculum Change. New York: The Dryden Press, 1951. $2.90
Berrien, F. K.	- Comments and Cases in Human Relations. New York: Harper & Bros., 1952. $4.50
Cartwright, Dorwin, and Zander, Alvin	- Group Dynamics: Research and Theory. New York: Row, Peterson & Co., 1953. $6.00
Chase, Stuart	- Power of Words. New York: Harcourt, Brace and Co., 1954. $3.95
Chase, Stuart	- The Proper Study of Mankind: An Inquiry into the Science of Human Relations. New York: Harper & Bros., 1951. $3.50
Chase, Stuart	- Roads to Agreement: Successful Methods in the Science of Human Relations. New York: Harper & Bros., 1951. $3.50
Eakin, Mildred M., and Eakin, Frank	- Sunday School Fights Prejudice. New York: Macmillan Co., 1953. $2.75
Fineberg, S. Andhil	- Punishment Without Crime: What You Can Do About Prejudice. New York: Doubleday & Co., 1949. $3.50
Haiman, Franklyn S.	- Group Leadership & Democratic Action. New York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1951. $2.50
Kagan, H. E.	- Changing the Attitudes of Christians Toward Jews. New York: Columbia University Press., 1952. $2.75
Keller, James	- You Can Change the World. New York: Longman's Green Co., 1949. $3.00

Leighton, Alexander H. - Human Relations in a Changing World: Observations on the Use of the Social Sciences. New York: E. P. Dutton, 1949. $4.50

Lerner, Daniel and Lasswell, Harold D. - The Policy Sciences. Berkely: Stanford University Press, 1953. $7.50

Lewin, Kurt - Resolving Social Conflicts: Selected Papers on Group Dynamics. New York: Harper & Bros., 1948. $3.50

Marrow, Alfred J. - Living Without Hate: Scientific Approaches to Human Relations. New York: Harper & Bros., 1951. $3.50

Redden, John D., and Ryan, Francis A. - Intercultural Education. Milwaukee: Bruce Publ. Co., 1951. $3.00

Rose, Arnold M. - Studies in the Reduction of Prejudice. Chicago: American Council on Race Relations, 1947. $1.50

Sherif, Muzafer, and Sherif, Carolyn - Groups in Harmony and Tension. New York: Harper & Bros., 1953. $3.50

Watson, Goodwin - Action for Unity. New York: Harper & Bros., 1947. $2.00

Wootton, Barbara - Testament for Social Science. New York: W. W. Norton & Co., 1951. $3.00

2. For Teachers and Administrators

American Association of School Administrators - From Sea to Shining Sea. Washington: The Association, 1947. $0.50

American Council on Education - Curriculum in Intergroup Education. Washington: American Council on Education. $1.25

American Council on Education - Elementary Curriculum in Intergroup Relations. Washington: American Council on Education. $2.50

American Council on Education - Intergroup Relations in Teaching Materials: A Survey and Appraisal. Washington: American Council on Education, 1949. $3.00

American Council on Education - Literature for Human Understanding. Washington: American Council on Education, 1947. $1.00

American Council on Education - Reading Ladders for Human Relations. Washington: American Council on Education, 1947. $1.00

Beauchamp, Mary; Llewellyn, Ardella; and Worley, Vivienne - Building Brotherhood: What Can Elementary Schools Do? New York: National Conference of Christians & Jews, Inc., 1953. $0.25

Bostwick, Prudence - Brotherhood Week: What Can Secondary Schools Do? New York: National Conference of Christians & Jews, Inc., 1952. $0.25

Cook, Lloyd A. - College Programs in Intergroup Relations. Washington: American Council on Education, 1950. $3.75

Cook, Lloyd A. - Intergroup Relations in Teacher Education. Washington: American Council on Education, 1951. $3.75

Cook, Lloyd and Cook, Elaine - Intergroup Education. New York: McGraw-Hill, 1953. $5.50

Grambs, Jean D. - Group Processes in Intergroup Education. New York: National Conference of Christians & Jews, Inc., 1952. $0.25

Heaton, Margaret M. - Feelings Are Facts. New York: National Conference of Christians & Jews, Inc. 1952. $0.25

Jennings, Helen H. - Sociometry in Group Relations. Washington: American Council on Education. 1948. $1.25

Shaftel, George, and Shaftel, Fannie R. - Role Playing the Problem Story: An Approach to Human Relations in the Classroom. New York: National Conference of Christians & Jews, Inc., 1952. $0.25

Smiley, Marjorie - Intergroup Education and the American College. New York: Bureau of Publ., Teachers College, Columbia University, 1952. $4.25

Storen, Helen F. - Readings in Intergroup Relations. New York: National Conference of Christians & Jews, Inc., 1952. $0.25

Taba, Helen - Diagnosing Human Relations Needs. Washington: American Council on Education, 1951. $1.75

Taba, Hilda; Brady, Elizabeth, and Robinson, John - Intergroup Education in Public Schools: Experimental Programs. Washington: American Council on Education, 1952. $4.00

Taba, Hilda - Leadership Training in Intergroup Education. Washington: American Council on Education, 1953. $2.50

Taba, Hilda, and Elkins, Deborah - With Focus on Human Relations: A Story of an Eighth Grade. Washington: American Council on Education, 1950. $2.50

Van Til, William - Democracy Demands It. New York: Harper & Bros., 1950. $1.50

Yauch, Wilbur A. - Improving Human Relations in School Administration. New York: Harper & Bros., 1949. $3.50

3. For Community Leaders

Bard, Harry - Teachers and the Community: An In-Service Program in Action. New York: National Conference of Christians & Jews, Inc., 1952. $0.25

Biddle, William W. - The Cultivation of Community Leaders Up From the Grass Roots. New York: Harper & Bros., 1953. $3.00

Carter, J. C. - Small Communities in Action: Stories of Citizen Programs at Work. New York: Harper & Bros., 1946. $3.00

Chapin, F. Stuart - Experimental Designs in Sociological Research. New York: Harper & Bros., 1948. $3.00

Davis-Dubois, Rachel - Neighbors in Action: A Manual for Local Leaders in Intergroup Relations New York: Harper & Bros., 1951. $3.00

Hillman, Arthur - Community Organizations and Planning. New York: Macmillan & Co. 1950. $4.00

Hunter, Floyd - Community Power Structure. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1953. $5.00

Lippitt, Ronald - Training in Community Relations: Toward New Group Skills. New York: Harper & Bros., 1949. $3.50

Olsen, Edward G. - The Modern Community School. New York: Appleton-Century-Crafts, 1953. $2.50

Poston, Richard W. - Democracy is You: A Guide to Citizen Action. New York: Harper & Bros., 1953. $3.00

Sanders, Irving T. - Making Good Communities Better. Lexington, Ky.: University of Kentucky Press, 1953. $2.50

II. THE SUPPLEMENTARY BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. The Negro

Davie, Maurice R. - Negroes in American Society. New York: McGraw-Hill, 1949. $4.50

Franklin, John H. - From Slavery to Freedom: A History of the American Negro. New York: A. A. Knopf, 1947. $3.75

Frazier, E. Franklin - The Negro Family in the United States (Rev. Ed.) New York: Dryden Press, 1948. $3.75

Myrdal, Gunnar - An American Dilemma: The Negro Problem and Modern Democracy. New York: Harper and Bros., 1944. $5.00

Nolan, Father William A. - Communism Versus the Negro. Chicago: Henry Regney Co., 1952. $3.50

Oak, Vishna V. - The Negro Newspaper. Yellow Springs, Ohio: Antioch Press, 1948. $2.50

Pierce, Joseph A. - Negro Business and Business Education. New York: Harper & Bros., 1947. $4.00

Redding, J. Saunders - On Being Negro in America. Indianapolis: Bobbs-Merrill, 1952. $3.00

Rose, Arnold - The Negro in America. New York: Harper & Bros., 1948. $3.75

B. The Mexican American and the Puerto Rican

Griffith, Beatrice - America Me. Boston: Houghton-Mifflin, 1948. $3.50

McWilliams, Carey - North From Mexico: The Spanish Speaking People of the United States. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott, 1949. $4.00

Mills, C. Wright; Senior, Clarence, and Goldsen, Rose K. - The Puerto Rican Journey. New York: Harper & Bros. 1950. $3.00

Tuck, Ruth D. - Not With the First: Mexican Americans in a Southwestern City. New York: Harcourt, Brace & Co., 1946. $3.00

C. The Japanese American

Bloom, Leonard, and Reimer, Ruth - Removal and Return: The Socio-Economic Effects of the War on the Japanese Americans. Berkely: Univ. of California Press, 1949. $3.75

Myer, Dillon - WRA--A Story of Human Conservation. Washington: U. S. Government Printing Office, 1947. $0.55

Rademaker, John A. - These Are Americans: The Japanese Americans in Hawaii in World War II. Palo Alto, Calif: Pacific Books, 1953. $5.00

Smith, Bradford - American From Japan. New York: J. B. Lippincott, 1948. $5.00

Thomas, Dorothy S. - The Salvage. Berkely: University of California Press, 1952. $7.50

D. The American Indian

Collier, John - Patterns and Ceremonials of the Indians of the Southwest. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co., 1949. $15.00

Dale, Edward E. - The Indians of the Southwest; A Century of Development Under the United States. Norman, Okla.: University of Oklahoma Press, 1949. $4.00

Hamilton, Charles - Cry of the Thunderbird. New York: Macmillan Co., 1950. $4.00

Kluckhohn, Clyde, and Leighton, Dorothea - The Navaho. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1946. $4.50

MacGregor, Gordon - Warriors Without Weapons. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1945. $3.75

E. Minority Religious Groups: Beliefs and Practices

Bach, Marcus - They Have Found A Faith. New York: Bobbs-Merrill, 1946. $4.00

Bernstein, Phillip - What the Jews Believe. New York: Farrar, Straus & Young, 1951. $1.50

Braden, Charles - Those Also Believe: A Study of Modern Cults and Minority Religious Movements in America. New York: Macmillan Co., 1949. $6.00

Finkelstein, Louis - The Jews: Their History, Culture, and Religion. New York: Harper & Bros., 1949. $12.00

Fitch, Florence M. - One God: The Ways We Worship Him. New York: Lothrop, Lee, and Shepherd Co., Inc., 1944. $2.50

Kavanaugh, John (Ed.) - The Quaker Approach to Contemporary Problems. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1953. $4.00

Masse, Benjamin, S. J. - The Catholic Mind Through Fifty Years: 1903-1953. New York: America, 1953. $5.00

Riesman, David - Commentary on the American Scene. New York: A. A. Knopf, 1953. $3.75

Smith, George D. - The Teaching of the Catholic Church. New York: The Macmillan Co., 1949. $12.50

Steinberg, Milton - A Believing Jew. New York: Harcourt, Brace and Co., 1951. $3.50

Williams, John P. - What Americans Believe and How They Worship. New York: Harper & Bros., 1952. $5.00

Bibl.

FREE LIBRARY OF PHILADELPHIA
OFFICE OF WORK WITH ADULTS

Suggested list of books for NAIRO CONFERENCE, November 28-30, 1956

Abrams, Charles	Forbidden neighbors; a study of prejudice in housing	N.Y. Harper, c1955
Ashmore, Harry S.	The Negro and the schools	Chapel Hill, Univ. of N. Caroline pr. c1954
Baldwin, James	Notes of a native son	Boston, Beacon pr. 1955
Banton, Michael	The coloured quarter; Negro immigrants in an English city	London, Cape, 1955
Barton, Rebecca C.	Our human rights; a study in the art of persuasion	Washington, D.C. Pub. Affairs pr. c1955
Berger, Morroe	Equality by statute; legal controls over group discrimination	N.Y. Columbia Univ. press, 1952
Berger, Morroe	Racial equality and the law	Paris, UNESCO, 1954
Butcher, Margaret	The Negro in American culture	N.Y. Knopf, 1956
Clark, Kenneth B.	Prejudice and your child	Boston, Beacon pr. c1955
Constantine, Learie	Colour bar	London, Paul, 1954
Cook, Lloyd	Intergroup relations in teacher education	Washington, D.C. Amer. Council on Ed. c1951
Cushman, Robert E.	Civil liberties in the United States	Ithaca, N.Y. Cornell Univ. press, 1956
Dean, John P. and Rosen, Alex.	Manual of intergroup relations	Chicago, Univ. of Chicago press, 1956
Forster, Arnold & Epstein, Benj.R.	Cross-currents	Garden City, Doubleday, 1956
Furnas, J. C.	Goodbye to Uncle Tom	N. Y. Sloane, 1956
Ginzberg, Eli	The Negro potential	N. Y. Columbia Univ. press, 1956
Haber, William & others	Manpower in the United States; problems and policies	N.Y Harper, 1954
Hill, Herbert and Greenberg, C. J.	Citizen's guide to desegregation; a study of social and legal change in American life	Boston, Beacon pr. 1955
Lee, Elizabeth B. & Lee, Alfred M.	Social problems in America; source book, rev. ed.	N.Y. Holt, c1953

Lewis, Hylan	Blackways of Kent	Chapel Hill, Univ. of N.Carolina press, 1955
Lind, Andrew W., editor	Race relations in world perspective;papers read at the conference on race relations in world perspective, Honolulu, 1954	Honolulu, Univ. of Hawaii press, 1955
Meyerson,Martin & Banfield,Edward	Politics, planning and the public interest; the case of public housing in Chicago	Glencoe, Illinois, Free press, c1955
Nichols, Lee	Breakthrough on the color front	N. Y. Random, c1954
Palmer, Charles F.	Adventures of a slum fighter	Atlanta, Tupper, c1955
Pfeffer, Leo	Church, state, and freedom	Boston, Beacon pr. 1953
Pitt, James E.	Adventures in brotherhood	N. Y. Farrar, c1955
Rossi, Peter H.	Why families move; a study in the social psychology of urban residential mobility	Glencoe, Illinois, Free press, c1955
Ruchames, Louis	Race, jobs and politics; the story of FEPC	N.Y. Columbia Univ. press, c1953
Simpson,George E.& Yinger, J. Milton	Racial and cultural minorities;an analysis of prejudice and discrimination	N.Y. Harper, 1953
Smith, Lillian	Now is the time	N. Y. Viking, 1955
Stendler,Celia B.& Martin,Wm. E.	Intergroup education in kindergarten-primary grades	N. Y.Macmillan, c1953
Straus, Nathan	Two-thirds of a nation; a housing program	N. Y. Knopf, 1952
Taba, Hilda	Leadership training in intergroup education	Washington, D.C. Amer. Council on Ed. c1953
Tipton, James H.	Community in crisis; the elimination of segregation from a public school system	N. Y. Columbia Univ. press, 1953
Trager, Helen G.& Yarrow,Marian R.	They learn what they live; prejudice in young children	N.Y. Harper, c1952
Warren,Robert Penn	Segregation; the inner conflict in the South	N.Y. Random, 1956
White, Walter F.	How far the promised land	N. Y. Viking, 1955
Williams,Robin M.	The reduction of intergroup tensions	N.Y.Social Science Research Council, 1947
Williams,Robin M.& Ryan, Margaret	Schools in transition	Chapel Hill, Univ. of N. Carolina pr. c1954
Wilner,Dan.M.& others	Human relations in interracial housing	U.of Minn. pr. 1955
Woodward,Comer	Strange career of Jim Crow	N.Y.Oxford U.pr. 1955
Wormser,Margot H.& Selltiz, Claire	How to conduct a community self-survey of civil rights	N.Y. Assoc. press, 1951

now is the time to plan for BROTHERHOOD WEEK, FEB. 17-24, 1957

NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIANS AND JEWS

Bibliog -

NEWS RELEASE FROM: Alex Sareyan
Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry
1790 Broadway, New York 19, New York. Circle 5-8000

FOR RELEASE: After 6:00 P.M., Wednesday, May 15, 1957

New York. May 15. - To aid in the smooth changeover to desegregation in the nation's schools, a group of more than 250 psychiatrists and social scientists have just released their pooled observations and findings on the psychological aspects of desegregation. Their recommendations, addressed in the main to public officials, school administrators, teachers, and parent-teacher organizations, among others, are designed to assist in working out the knotty inter-racial problems affecting desegregation.

The report - PSYCHIATRIC ASPECTS OF SCHOOL DESEGREGATION, prepared and published by the Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry is one of the most thorough scientific studies of its kind to be made public since the famous U.S. Supreme Court decision on this subject was announced. Among many other conclusions it documents in clear and firm language, the court's contention that segregation in fact does impair the psychological growth of children.

In releasing the report, Dr. Dana L. Farnsworth, president of the Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry, said it was drafted by psychiatrists and social scientists, working in an interracial committee, and representing every region of the country. These specialists have all had extensive first hand experiences in the area of inter-racial relations. Dr. Viola Bernard, New York City, served as Chairman of The Committee on Social Issues, responsible for the document. The editorial sub-committee for the report was under the chairmanship of Dr. Mabel Cohen of Chevy Chase, Maryland.

In their introduction, the psychiatrists explain their interest and qualifications in discussing the problem of desegregation by pointing out that it is not merely a legal problem, "but a social, and above all, a psychological problem". In our view," they state, "psychiatry concerns itself with the study of all human behavior, not merely the study and treatment of mental disorders."

Although the report is largely concerned with racial relations between Negroes and whites, the authors note that their observations and conclusions apply with equal force to situations involving discrimination against other minority groups such as the Asians and Mexicans on the West Coast and the Eskimos in Alaska.

"Wherever segregation occurs there are damaging effects to the personality growth and development of the person discriminated against" the report observes. The authors also note that segregation practices inflict damaging psychological scars upon those who condone or foster them.

Segregation causes psychological damage not only to individuals, but to the communities in which it is practiced. The psychiatrists remark that the "institution of separate schools for Negroes is both an expression of their lower cultural status and a factor in further depressing their economic and educational level as compared to whites." Among the social ills that segregation breeds are high disease and death rates, some types of crime and delinquency, poor housing, substandard living, and disorganized family life. In developing this observation, the psychiatrists noted that these social ills do not remain confined to the segregated populations; they inevitably lower the level of well-being for the entire community. For example, they pointed out that the maintenance of duplicate sets of "equal" but separate health, welfare, and educational services means that the budget for each group must be lowered at the expense of the other.

At the national level, the psychiatrists conclude that segregation, through its hampering influence on the economic, educational and social development of millions of our fellow citizens tends to rob the country as a whole of a substantial part of its human resources.

Although segregation practices contribute to disorders in personality development, the authors warn that this does not mean that all who believe in and advocate segregation are themselves maladjusted or psychiatrically abnormal. Attitudes of many persons toward Negroes are based on early childhood training and other cultural and social influences in their communities. If confronted with evidence that desegration can be carried out successfully, and if their attitudes are not too firmly rooted in emotional conflicts, or early conditioning, these persons may be won over to accepting desegregation. As a matter of fact, the report states, it is encouraging to note that in every community there are more people at all levels who are psychologically prepared to accept desegregation than those who are staunchly opposed to any form of integration of the races.

Among the factors contributing to inter-racial problems, much of the difficulty has been caused by economic and political considerations that have nothing to do with the issue at hand. Southern fear of Northern economic domination and states' rights questions have kept many Southerners from endorsing desegregation. On the other hand, many Americans have to keep fighting down their own religious beliefs and sense of fair play, it is claimed, in order to feel themselves in the right about segregation.

The report cites prejudice as one of the chief stumbling blocks that continues to stand in the way of successful efforts at desegregation. This prejudice, the authors point out is based on racial myths that have a long and obscure history. These myths which have no scientific validity are often used by individuals and groups in attempting to arrive at solutions to difficult situations in which their individual or group security is threatened. To offset the tensions and anxieties created by these problems, a defense reaction is stimulated which often takes the form of a myth or a notion that has no basis in fact. The myth provides an apparently rational solution to an otherwise insoluble problem.

Clouding the desegregation issue are a whole host of racial myths which influence the views of whites toward Negroes, particularly in the South. (The psychiatrists note in their findings however, that there are no geographical limits to racial prejudice, and that evidences of prejudice may be found in every region of the country.)

In terms of racial myths, for example, the Negro is often depicted as intellectually and morally inferior to whites; as childish and irresponsible, and endowed with strong primitive impulses. These attitudes give rise to the fears which are stirred by these myths. These in turn affect the relationship between Negroes and whites. These myths are scientifically assailed by the psychiatrists in their searching discussion of this subject. For example, they cite that all the scientific evidence available supports the thesis that there is no significant difference in intellectual capacity between Negroes and whites.

The emotionally charged subject of sex-relations and race relations around which many myths exist is explored at length in the report. In response to the often expressed charge that Negroes are responsible for a disproportionately large number of incidents involving poor sexual restraint, the report states that from psychiatric experience and delinquency studies, there is scientific support for the belief that anti-social sexual behavior may be attributed to coming from substandard economic and social circumstances as well as a poor family background and without regard to racial factors. They say, therefore, that segregationists who cite statistical evidence to support their thesis that there is poor sexual restraint among Negroes may be right about their figures, but quite wrong as to their interpretation of their statistics.

In surveying communities where desegration has already taken place, it is noted that fewer conflict situations developed when school boards, teachers, and Parent-Teacher organizations joined together with the political leaders of the community to anticipate the problems of integration. Case histories of successful desegregation and continued operation of integrated schools such as those in Louisville, Kentucky and in Hawaii are cited as some of the examples in point.

Other points which are covered in depth in the report include the importance of attitudes in dealing with problems of this character, and how such attitudes can be changed to bring about a more favorable climate for desegregation. In this connection, the responsibility of political leaders in shaping attitudes receives considerable attention. The responses of children in situations involving desegregation and segregation are discussed in detail as well as the effects of both on parents. Some consideration is also given in the report to the school administrators and teachers who are most directly affected by application of desegregation to their schools. Throughout the report the emphasis is on the psychological responses of people at all levels to the process of desegregation.

In concluding their report, the psychiatrists observe that problems arising out of desegregation require for their solution, not only an understanding of the social situations in which these problems occur, but an insight into the complex emotional feelings both hidden and obvious which influence attitudes towards these problems. They say, "We believe that much important data in advancing the basic knowledge of human behavior may be gathered from research efforts applied to desegregating situations. As psychiatrists we know from our work with individuals, the dangers and difficulties of proceeding according to oversimplified and arbitrary rules. We have tried to present a way of looking at desegregation in schools as a human problem."

The Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry was organized about ten years ago. It has a membership of approximately 250 psychiatrists, most of whom serve on one of the 20 working committees which direct their efforts toward the study of various aspects of psychiatry and toward the application of this knowledge to the fields of mental health and human relations.

Copies of PSYCHIATRIC ASPECTS OF SCHOOL DESEGREGATION are obtainable at $1 per copy from the Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry, 1790 Broadway, New York 19, N.Y.

# #

B.b/. JCr
FI

THE ADVENTURES OF JOHNNY

A PUZZLED PUPPET

Presented as a Series of Four One-Minute TV Spots

Available to Stations, Without Charge, As a Public Service Feature for Brotherhood

BOOKS

FOR ADULTS AND CHILDREN

Distributed by

The Commission on Community Organizations of

THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIANS AND JEWS

43 WEST 57th STREET NEW YORK 19, N. Y.

Materials — Bibliography

from the desk of

JACOB BLAUSTEIN

Dear AJC Member:

I have just read the proofs of a new book that will interest you personally. It is aptly entitled THE PURSUIT OF EQUALITY: a half century with The American Jewish Committee. Your Fiftieth Anniversary Planning Committee encouraged its creation.

THE PURSUIT OF EQUALITY traces our five decades -- from those barbarous Kishinev pogroms of 1903-5 which spurred the Committee's formation to the bright promise of our second half-century. It recounts historic events which have shaped our era and influenced our personal lives. Here is the dramatic story of your Committee -- the record which led President Eisenhower to "salute its members as champions of liberty . . . for work performed in the best traditions of our country."

I know that you will read THE PURSUIT OF EQUALITY with deep interest and pride.

Sincerely,

Jacob Blaustein

Chairman, Fiftieth Anniversary
Planning Committee

THE PURSUIT OF equality

For a preview of this exciting book, turn the page.

Bibliography Materials

ADL

ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE
OF B'NAI B'RITH
515 Madison Ave., New York 22, N. Y.
PLaza 1-1800

Press Representatives
N. C. Belth
Morton Puner

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

A new series of popularly written human relations publications primarily designed for senior high school and young adult readers was launched recently with the release of "Prejudiced: How Do People Get That Way?" written by Dr. William Van Til, professor of education and chairman of the Department of Secondary Education at New York University.

Called the One Nation Library Series, the pamphlets are published by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in cooperation with the Joseph Kaplan Project in Intergroup Education. The project was established by Joseph Kaplan, Boston industrialist, philanthropist and civic leader, to further the application of democratic ideals to American life and group relationships. The Van Til pamphlet was hailed by New York Superintendent of Schools, William Jansen, as "of great assistance to teachers in developing attitudes of students which will make for an understanding and respect for each other and thereby prepare them properly for their role as citizens in the American community." Superintendent Jansen praised the League for its long record of publishing materials to aid schools in building good relationships among students of various races, creeds and national origins.

Authors of forthcoming booklets in the series are Dr. Oscar Handlin, chairman of the Department of History at Harvard University, whose subject is "Jews in the United States;" Dr. Otto Klineberg, internationally known psychologist of Columbia University, writing on "Pictures in Your Mind;" and the noted author James Michener, who will deal with the international implications of minority group tensions in the United States.

Other distinguished authors, covering important themes in the field of intergroup education, will contribute to the series. The project has been several years in the making and was drawn up after consultation and discussion with leading educators.

Each of the pamphlets, amply illustrated, is accompanied by a teachers' guide. Price of individual copies is 25¢.

In the first of the series, Dr. Van Til presents a humorous but cogent analysis of how people become prejudiced and how prejudice can be prevented. He dissects "prejudice chromosomes," mutual prejudice between "country hicks" and "city slickers," and the entire theory of "superior" and "inferior" races.

Dr. Van Til writes from extensive experience in the field of education for democratic human relations. As director of learning materials for the Bureau of Intercultural Education from 1944 to 1947, he edited the quarterly "Intercultural Education News," and the series, "Problems of Race and Culture in American Education."

Dr. Van Til has served as a consultant on human relations to many school systems in the South and throughout the nation. Until recently, he was chairman of the Division of Curriculum and Teaching, George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tennessee.

Joseph Kaplan, whose grant made the One Nation Library project possible, is vice-chairman of the board of governors of the Human Relations Center at Boston University, and a director of the Massachusetts Council for Public Schools.

He is president of the Colonial Tanning Company of Boston, one of the nation's major leather producers. He has long been active in communal institutions and civic affairs. He serves as a trustee of the Beth Israel Hospital, and as a corporation member of the Children's Hospital, and as chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee, Massachusetts Department of Public Health. He is also a director of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Civil Development Commission of Boston, and a member of the Advisory Council, Port of Boston Commission.

# #

Bibliographies

BIBLIOGRAPHIES FOR PROFESSIONAL PUBLICATIONS

Emmett Albert Betts
Director, The Reading Clinic
Temple University
Philadelphia 22, Penna.

Bibliographies appended to professional publications meet at least four specifications: First, the information is given as concisely as possible. Second, enough information is given to permit the reader to evaluate the relevance of the publication to his purpose. Third, the information is adequate for locating the reference. Fourth, information is presented in a standard form to permit the rapid identification of the type of publication.

Sources of Help

A number of style books and other types of references give information on the preparation of bibliographical entries. While the authors of these publications agree in general on the type of information to be included, they do not always recommend the same format. Examples of this type of reference include:

Campbell, William Giles. A Form Book for Thesis Writing. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1939.

A Manual of Style. Chicago: University of Chicago Press. Revised 1949.

Skillin, Marjorie E., and Gay, Robert M. Words into Type. New York: Appleton-Century-Crofts, Inc., 1948.

Essential Bibliographical Information

For a book, the following information is given:

1. Name of author, including full name or initials
2. Title of book, including sub-title when available
3. Publisher's name and address
4. Date of publication
5. Edition, if other than first
6. Volume number, if more than one

For an article:

1. Name of author, including full name or initials
2. Title of the article
3. Title of the magazine
4. Volume number
5. Issue number, if available for all items in the bibliography
6. Date, including month, day, and year
7. Page numbers

Bibliographical Order

Each publication is listed separately in alphabetical order by author's name.

When an author has more than one publication, entries are arranged in alphabetical order by titles. A 3-em dash, or a typewritten dash ranging from five to ten spaces, is used in place of the author's name, beginning with the second entry for the author, as follows:

Gray, William S. Developing Word Attack Skills. Chicago: Scott, Foresman & Co., 1947.

_____. "Implications of Research for the Improvement of Reading," Education, LXX, No. 9, (May 1950), 539-547.

_____ (Compiler and Editor). Reading in Relation to Experience and Language. Supplementary Educational Monographs, No. 58. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1944.

Publications of a senior co-author follow his independent publications, as follows:

Gates, Arthur I. The Psychology of Reading and Spelling. Teachers College Contributions to Education, No. 129. New York: Teachers College, Columbia University, 1922.

_____. "Reading in Relation to Spelling," Education Digest, XI, No. 7, (March 1946), 55-58.

_____, and Crampton, Gertrude. "First Days at School," Teachers Service Bulletin on Reading, I, No. 1 New York: Macmillan Company, 1939.

For a publication by two or three authors, all the names are entered.

For a publication by more than three authors, only the name of the first author is given, followed by the phrase "and Others" or by the abbreviation et al.

Forms of Entries

Book -- One Author

Keyes, Kenneth S., Jr. How to Develop Your Thinking Ability. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc., 1950.

Book -- Two Authors

Witty, Paul, and Kopel, David. Reading and the Educative Process. Boston: Ginn and Company, 1939.

Book -- Three Authors

McCullough, Constance M.; Strang, Ruth M.; and Traxler, Arthur E. Problems in the Improvement of Reading. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc., 1946.

Book -- More Than Three Authors

Broom, M. E., and Others. Effective Reading Instruction. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc. Revised 1951.

Book -- No Author

Children Learn to Read. Chicago: National Council of Teachers of English, 1949.

Group Processes in Supervision. Washington, D. C.: Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, National Education Association, 1948.

Book -- Editor

Helson, Harry (Editor). Theoretical Foundations of Psychology. New York: D. Van Nostrand Company, Inc., 1951.

Book -- Two Editors

Kinney, Lucien, and Dresden, Katharine (Editors). Better Learning Through Current Materials. Stanford, California: Stanford University Press, 1949.

Book — Revised Edition

Dolch, Edward William. Psychology and Teaching of Reading. Champaign, Illinois: Garrard Press. Revised 1951.

Yearbook

Group Planning in Education. 1945 Yearbook. Washington, D. C.: Department of Supervision and Curriculum Development of the National Education Association, 1945.

Language Arts in the Elementary School. Twentieth Yearbook, XX, No. 6. Washington, D. C.: Department of Elementary School Principals, National Education Association, 1941.

Reading in the Elementary School. Forty-Eighth Yearbook of the National Society for the Study of Education, Part II. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1949.

Teaching Critical Thinking in the Social Studies. Thirteenth Yearbook. Washington, D. C.: National Council for the Social Studies, National Education Association, 1942.

Monograph or Special Pamphlet

Douglas, Anna Gertrude. "A Tachistoscopic Study of the Order of Emergence in the Process of Perception," Psychological Monographs, LXI, No. 6, (1947), Whole No. 287.

Gifford, Mabel F. "Speech Correction in the Elementary School," Bulletin of the California State Department of Education, XVII, No. 1. Sacramento: California State Department of Education, 1948.

Gray, William Scott. Summary of Investigations Relating to Reading. Supplementary Educational Monographs, No. 28. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1925.

Horn, Alice McAnulty. Uneven Distribution of the Effects of Specific Factors. Southern California Education Monographs, No. 12. Los Angeles: University of Southern California Press, 1941.

"Language Arts and Fine Arts," Review of Educational Research, XIX, No. 2, (April 1949).

Morse, Horace T., and McCune, George H. Selected Items for the Testing of Study Skills. Bulletin No. 15. Washington, D. C.: National Council for the Social Studies, National Education Association. Revised 1949.

Morse, William C.; Ballantine, Francis A.; and Dixon, W. Robert. Studies in the Psychology of Reading. University of Michigan Monographs in Education, No. 4. Ann Arbor, Michigan: University of Michigan Press, 1951.

Williams, Alice M. Children's Choices in Science Books. Child Development Monographs, No. 27. New York: Bureau of Publications, Teachers College, Columbia University, 1939.

Witty, Paul. Helping Children Read Better. Better Living Booklet. Chicago: Science Research Associates, 1950.

Part of a Publication

Heidbreder, Edna. "Studying Human Thinking," Chapter IV in T. G. Andrews (Editor), Methods of Psychology. New York: John Wiley and Sons, Inc., 1948.

Horn, Ernest. "Language and Meaning," Chapter XI in The Psychology of Learning. Forty-First Yearbook of the National Society for the Study of Education, Part II. Bloomington, Illinois: Public School Publishing Company, 1942.

Horn, Ernest. "The Objectives in Reading as a Guide to Remedial and Prophylactic Work," pp. 287-296 in The Problem of the Elementary School Principal in the Light of the Testing Movement. Second Yearbook, Bulletin of the Department of Elementary School Principals, II, No. 4. Washington, D. C.: Department of Elementary School Principals, National Education Association, 1923.

Russell, David H. "The Development of Creative Reading Abilities," Chapter XIV in Children Learn to Read. Boston: Ginn and Company, 1949.

Stauffer, Russell G. "Research in Spelling and Handwriting," Chapter III in Review of Educational Research, XIX, No. 2, (April 1949).

Government Publication

Mackintosh, Helen K. How Children Learn to Read. Bulletin 1952, No. 7. Washington, D. C.: U. S. Government Printing Office, 1952.

Conference Report

Yoakam, Gerald A. (Compiler and Editor). The Content, Selection, and Use of Children's Literature. Report of the Eighth Annual Conference on Reading. Pittsburgh, Pa.: University of Pittsburgh Press, 1952.

Teacher's Service Bulletin

Bailey, Matilda. "Therapeutic Reading," ABC Language Arts Bulletin, I, No. 6. New York: American Book Company, 1948.

Gates, Arthur I. "The Place of Phonetics in the Reading Program," Teachers Service Bulletin on Reading, IV, No. 9. New York: Macmillan Company, 1942.

Leckie, Margaret. "Developing Personality As We Read," Monograph on Language Arts, No. 37. Evanston, Illinois: Row, Peterson and Company, 1944.

Unpublished Graduate Studies

Dumas, Enoch. Syllabic Errors in Certain Misspelled Words. Field Study Number Two. Greeley, Colorado: Colorado State College of Education, 1942.

Dunn, Maud Wilson. Vocabulary Difficulty for Secondary Students of Varying Ability Levels. Doctor's Dissertation. Los Angeles, California: University of Southern California, 1933.

Farnham, Moulton Humphreys. The Relation Between Judgment of Legibility and Speed of Reading. Master's Thesis. New York: Columbia University, 1936.

Published Graduate Studies

Kelley, Victor H. An Experimental Study of Certain Techniques for Testing Word Meanings. University of Iowa Studies in Education, IX, No. 1. Iowa City, Iowa: State University of Iowa, 1934.

Franzen, Raymond Hugh. The Accomplishment Ratio. Teachers College Contributions to Education, No. 125. New York: Teachers College, Columbia University, 1922.

Dice, Leah Kathryn. An Experimental Study of Two Methods of Teaching Beginning Reading: The Direct Versus the Preparatory Approach. Johns Hopkins University Studies in Education, No. 32. Baltimore: John Hopkins Press, 1942.

Magazine Article

Hassol, Leonard; Margaret, Ann; and Cameron, Norman. "The Production of Language Disorganization Through Personalized Distraction," Journal of Psychology, XXXIII, Second Half, (April 1952), 289-299.

Dale, Edgar, and Chall, Jeanne S. "Techniques for Selecting and Writing Readable Materials," Elementary English, XXVI, No. 5, (May 1949), 250-258.

Dorothy, Sister M., and Cecile, Sister Rita. "A Vocabulary Analysis of Recently Published Primers," Journal of Educational Research, XL, No. 2, (October 1946), 116-125.

Galichet, Georges. "Valeurs Sémantiques et Valeurs Grammaticales" ("Semantic Values and Grammatical Values"), Journal de Psychologie Normale et Pathologique, XLI, (1948), 206-215.

Index

Betts, Emmett Albert, and Betts, Thelma Marshall. An Index to Professional Literature on Reading and Related Topics. New York: American Book Company, 1945.

Cobb, Katharine. "Selected References on Preschool and Parental Education," Elementary School Journal, LIII, No. 6, (February 1953), 352-357.

Dale, Edgar (Compiler). Bibliography of Vocabulary Studies. Columbus, Ohio: Bureau of Educational Research, The Ohio State University, 1949.

Hazen, Meribah (Editor). Subject Index to Children's Magazines, V, No. 7. Madison, Wisconsin: 301 Palomino Lane. Published Monthly.

Course of Study

The Elementary Course of Study. Bulletin 233-B. Harrisburg, Pennsylvania: Department of Public Instruction, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 1949.

Experiencing the Language Arts. Bulletin No. 34. Tallahassee, Florida: State Department of Education, 1948.

The Intermediate Manual -- Grades Four, Five, and Six. Curriculum Bulletin 125. Cincinnati, Ohio: Board of Education, 1945.

Dictionary

Webster's New International Dictionary of the English Language. Springfield, Mass.: G. & C. Merriam Co. Revised 1939.

Reprint

Black, Matthew W. "The Hardest Reading in the World." Reprinted from Education, (May 1949). Philadelphia 22: The Reading Clinic, Temple University.

Test

Kelley, Truman L.; Ruch, Giles M.; and Terman, Lewis M. Stanford Achievement Test: Primary Battery, Form D. Yonkers-on-Hudson, New York: World Book Company, 1940.

Spitzer, H. F., and Others. Iowa Every-Pupil Tests of Basic Skills: Test A -- Silent Reading Comprehension -- Elementary Battery, Form L. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1940.

Tiegs, Ernest W., and Clark, Willis W. California Achievement Tests: Complete Battery, Advanced Form CC. Los Angeles, California: California Test Bureau, 1950.

Mimeographed Material

Spache, George. A New Readability Formula for Primary Reading Materials. Gainesville, Florida: University of Florida, 1953. (Mimeo'd.)

These recommendations are followed in establishing bibliographical form:

1. Roman numerals are used to indicate volume number; Arabic figures, for issue number.
2. The word The is dropped before the title of a periodical (e.g., Elementary English Review for The Elementary English Review) or the name of a publisher (e.g., Macmillan Company for The Macmillan Company).
3. No comma is used between the month and year when indicating the date of publication of a periodical (e.g., May 1955).
4. Information on second, third, etc. editions is not given. However, the latest copyright date is given.
5. The second line of an entry is indented three spaces.
6. Titles of books and periodicals are printed in italics. In a typed manuscript, the title is underscored.
7. In a typed manuscript, the titles of articles, reports, bulletins, and similar works are enclosed with quotation marks. In a printed report, the titles may be printed in Roman capitals and lower case.
8. The first word, pronouns, verbs, adjectives, and adverbs are capitalized in a title. Prepositions containing less than five letters, articles, and conjunctions generally are not capitalized.
9. Above all, the bibliography is carefully edited; a premium is placed on accuracy.

A PROGRAM FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

The problems of human relations occupy a place of paramount importance both within the nation and in international affairs. Christians face the responsibility to develop attitudes which will enable them to behave towards all people as brothers regardless of their race, color, nationality or religion. Youth groups, as they plan their programs throughout the year, will undoubtedly want to devote time to this aspect of human relations. The following suggested materials for worship, study and action will provide help in planning.

WORSHIP MATERIALS

Hymns

Blest Be the Tie That Binds
Dear Lord and Father of Mankind
In Christ There is no East or West
O Brother Man, Fold to Thy Heart Thy Brother
Once to Every Man and Nation
Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life

Scripture

Psalm 133	Mark 12:28-34
Isaiah 2:2-11	Acts 17:22-30
Matt. 5:1-16	I Corinthians 13:1-13

Call to Worship

Know ye that the Lord, He is God;
It is He that hath made us and not we ourselves;
We are His people and the sheep of His pasture.

Invocation

Dear Lord and Father of Mankind, in these moments of worship we seek after Thee to open our minds that we may think Thy thoughts; to open our hearts that we may learn more of Thy love and to strengthen our wills that we may dedicate ourselves anew for service to Thee and our fellow man. Amen.

Prayer

O Lord, our Creator, who revealed Thy love to us through Jesus Christ, remind us in this hour that Thou didst create all men in Thy image and to Thy glory. Teach us, as we call Thee Father, to worship Thy Holy Name in true fellowship together though we be members of various faiths, and nations and races. Show us that as Thy children we are brothers to each other; that our aspirations and fears are one, and that to each of us is given both the privilege and the duty to live a brotherhood unhindered by barriers of race and creed. In the name of Jesus Christ we ask it. Amen.

SUGGESTED ACTION PROJECTS

Action begins with you, your youth group and your local church. Include the improvement of racial and cultural relations in your community as one aspect of your ongoing program. This may be done by:

1. Inviting speakers of different racial and cultural backgrounds to your youth group.
2. Planning a panel discussion in which representatives from several racial or cultural groups participate.
3. Conducting interdenominational meetings in which you include youth groups of different racial and cultural backgrounds.
4. Studying the housing or educational situation in your community and cooperating with groups working to improve the situation.
5. Finding out whether or not local theatres, restaurants or other public places discriminate in admitting or seating racial minorities, and working to change such practices.
6. Visiting settlements, community centers or social agencies which work with racial minorities.
7. Adopting a work project which affords contact with persons of racial or cultural minority groups.

RESOURCE MATERIALS

The following list is only a limited one. For further help you should:

1. Contact your local librarian, social studies teacher, pastor or director of religious education.
2. Write to:

   (a) Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith,
   515 Madison Avenue, New York, New York

   (b) Department of Racial and Cultural Relations,
   National Council of Churches,
   297 Fourth Avenue, New York, New York

   (c) National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
   20 West 40th Street, New York, New York

   (d) National Urban League,
   14 East 48th Street, New York, New York

   (e) United Christian Youth Movement,
   257 Fourth Avenue, New York, New York

   (f) Your denominational headquarters

FILMS

Brotherhood of Man — (11 minutes), animated cartoon based on phamphlet, "Races of Mankind".

Boundary Lines — (10 minutes), black and white, a plea to eliminate prejudice and arbitrary boundaries which divide people.

The Challenge — (30 minutes), black and white, gives examples of discrimination and what individuals and groups all over the country are doing to safeguard democracy through positive civil rights programs.

The High Wall — (32 minutes), black and white, story of a boy's adjustment to racial, religious and cultural differences in his neighbors.

The House I Live In — (10 minutes), black and white, points out that America has grown strong through contributions of all groups.

One People — (12 minutes), color, describes contributions of minority groups to the building of the nation.

One God — (37 minutes), black and white, presents ways of worship of the three faiths — Jewish, Catholic and Protestant.

Prejudice — (58 minutes), black and white, deals with intolerance in terms of what it does to the person who practices it.

The Toymaker — (58 minutes), black and white, uses puppets to show how people of various backgrounds can live together.

FILMSTRIPS

None So Blind — (15 minutes), color, light satire on problems of prejudice and thoughtful analysis of need for good human relations. Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue, New York, New York, Price $6.00 sound; $2.25 silent.

Culture and Creed — silent with script, facts about two religious groups in America — Jews and Catholics. Film Strip House, 347 Madison Ave., New York. Price $3.50.

Rumor Clinic shows how sterotyped thinking conditions responses. Anti-Defamation League. Price 35 cents with discussion guide.

We Are All Brothers — sound filmstrip, 20 minutes, black and white, attempts to break down common beliefs about racial differences by substituting scientific facts. Price $3.50, free loan from Jewish Labor Committee — 25 East 78th Street, New York, New York.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS

Accent On Liberty, M. Sheibley, Friendship Press, New York, New York.

Chariot In the Sky, A. Bontemps, Winston Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Mary McLeod Bethune, C. O. Peare, Vanguard Press, New York, N. Y.

Cry the Beloved Country, A. Paton, Scribner's Sons, New York, N. Y.

Bread From Heaven, H. Buckmaster, Random House, New York, N. Y.

Nisei Daughter, M. Sone, Little, Brown Co., Boston, Mass.

Ralph J. Bunche, J. A. Kugelmass, Messner, Inc., New York, New York.

What the Jews Believe, Rabbi Philip S. Bernstein, Farrar, Straus & Young, Inc., New York, New York.

The Synagogue and its People, Desider Holisher, Abelard-Schuman Inc., New York, New York.

The Negro and the Schools, Harry S. Ashmore, University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Schools in Transition, R. M. Williams, Jr., and M. W. Ryan, University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Education In a Transition Community, Jean D. Grambs, The National Conference on Christians and Jews, New York, New York.

The Negro Potential, Eli Ginzberg, Columbia University Press, New York, New York.

Who is on First? Jack Mabley, Public Affairs Pamphlet, No. 233, Public Affairs Committee, New York, New York.

Race and Society, Kenneth Little, Unesco Booklet, Columbia University Press, New York, New York.

The Ecumenical Movement and the Racial Problem, W. A. Visser't Hooft, Unesco Booklet, Columbia University Press, New York, N. Y.

The Catholic Church and the Race Question, The Reverend Father Yves M. J. Congar, O. P. Unesco Booklet, Columbia University Press, New York, New York.

Reason, Religion and Race, R. B. Eleazer, Abingdon-Cokesbury, Nashville, Tennessee.

The Negro —A List of Significant Books, Margaret E. Kuhn, Handbook of Group Procedures for the Local Church, National Council of Churches, 120 E. 23rd Street, New York, New York.

Love of this Land, Progress of the Negro in the United States, James H. Robinson, Ed., Christian Education Press, Philadelphia, Pa.

Naught for Your Comfort, Trevor Huddleston, Doubleday & Co., New York, New York.

* Available for rental from Anti-Defamation League Film Library, 515 Madison Avenue, New York, New York.

Copies of this program are available from the Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, 297 Fourth Ave., New York 10, N. Y. 4¢ each; $3.00 per hundred.

Materials - Bibliography

ANOTHER IMPORTANT BOOK
PUBLISHED BY PUBLIC AFFAIRS PRESS

Southern Race Progress

By THOMAS J. WOOFTER

In calling attention to the significance of this book, Jonathan Daniels editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer, states in the introduction:

"No book I know provides such an understandable personal approach to the segregation story in the lifetime of living men as this charming and challenging work by Dr. Thomas Woofter.

"What he has written is in a real sense the autobiography of the Southerner who. long before the Supreme Court, was concerned about the tragic lapses which so often and so long segregation shielded . . .

"Dr. Woofter is a gentleman who understands his region and its problems much better than those who give the impression that only Kluxers can understand the South. Dr. Woofter does not have to screen his helpful understanding based upon fifty years of creative labor in the fields about which he writes.

"He has, indeed, written a very quiet book but a vivid one richer in native anecdotes and homely images than in statistics. It helped me understand better this troubled South in which I live. I can think of few other books so deserving of a place on the shelf of required reading for those who would understand in depth the debate which sometimes now seems to be restricted in participation to the extremists—the defiant, the vindictive, the headlong and the stubborn.

"Dr. Woofter has written a book for America, but in it he has drawn the portrait of a Southerner—of many Southerners—who had this problem on their hearts long before any jurists put it into a decision of the Supreme Court . . ."

Written by one of the nation's leading experts on race relations, this book is particularly timely in view of recent Supreme Court decisions on segregation.

Dr. Woofter, a former President of the Population Association of America, writes with the viewpoint and background of a Southerner who has been a prominent participant in the activities of organizations which have sought to improve race relations.

Covering the interweaving economic, social, and political trends of the past fifty years, the book calls attention to the problems of Negroes and whites, the interdependence of the two races, and the progress that has been achieved in recent years. His basic approach is midway between that of extremists in the North and South.

WASHINGTON POST

"Dr. Woofter has written a book which sheds light and shuns heat on the race problem in the South . . .

"Rabble-rousers and hotheads will not like some of the author's opinions, facts and conclusions. But there is clear logic in his defining the three types of racial segregation and how the Southerner, in his less calm moments, confuses them.

"The book makes good reading because it is generously sprinkled with anecdotes and personal references. Northerners should read it to understand Southerners better. Southerners should read it to understand themselves better."

KINGSPORT (TENN.) TIMES:

"Dr. Woofter has written a readable book . . . the best part is the telling of the story of what has been done by the several organizations with which he has been connected in bringing about cooperative programs."

THE SCHOOL EXECUTIVE:

"Mr. Woofter writes with a deep subjective understanding of the South's economy, yet with the objectivity of one who, along with other tolerant whites and outstanding Negro leaders, has dedicated much of his life to implementing democratic ideals, to righting wrongs, to furthering the status of the Negro and to seeing justice done after unlawful violence has gone unpunished . . . This book is a refreshing change after the many criticisms from northern writers and the retaliating defenses written by southerners."

ST. PETERSBURG (FLORIDA) TIMES:

"Readability is enhanced through a semi-autobiographic viewpoint and through liberal use of anecdotes . . . It will be valuable to those who wish to understand the present relation between the races, and how it came about."

BEAUMONT (TEXAS) JOURNAL:

"Amid the miasma of words which have flown in a turgid stream since the Supreme Court's historic desegregation order in 1952, seldom has the voice of moderation bee heard. That voice speaks through this volume . . . Autobiography, history and current events are combined here with an informality that adds largely to the book's readability. The author has done well . . . to record and explain rather than to praise or blame."

NEW ORLEANS TIMES-PICAYUNE:

"A sane approach. Should be assigned reading to all extremists."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

"Here is a man of obvious charm who lectures without haranguing and argues without rancor . . . Dr. Woofter has the perception to see that Negroes and many Southern leaders have certain outlooks which, if carefully dovetailed, can unite to support a bridge over which regional progress can travel . . . His information is in large part new. His points are well documented by eyewitness detail. His area of survey covers all of Dixie. Such evidence could easily be ignored; it should prove quite difficult to refute."

Mail this order blank to your local bookstore or to the publisher:
Public Affairs Press, 419 New Jersey Ave., S.E., Washington 3, D. C.

Please send the books listed. Payment of _____ is enclosed.

Southern Race Progress ($3.50) by Thomas J. Woofter

Name _____

Address _____ Date _____

Materials - Bibliog.

BIBLIOGRAPHY - - - Section I

- o -

the American Negro: A UNESCO Report. The UNESCO Courier, October 1954. UNESCO Publication Service, 475 Fifth Avenue, New York 17, New York. 25¢

Code: 1) 2) 3) 4) 5)

Dedicated to the American Negro's progress in the last half a century. It is described as one of the most amazing social phenomena of our time.

a Balance Sheet in Human Relations During 1954. Strengthening Democracy, February 1955. Board of Education of the City of New York, 131 Livingston Street, Brooklyn, New York. 10¢

Code: 5)

A review of the gains and losses in human relations during 1954.

Changing Patterns in the South. Special Issue. New South, December 1954 - January 1955. Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Ave., Atlanta 3, Georgia. 50¢

Code: 1) 2) 3) 5)

A record of the growth of democracy in the last decade. The materials have been taken from the pages of the Council's publication, THE NEW SOUTH.

a Check List for Your Local Schools. The Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta 3, Georgia 10¢

Code: 1)

An aide for discussion groups who wish to examine and evaluate schools in their own community.

Denominational Statements with Reference to a Racially Inclusive Fellowship. Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York 25¢

Code: 6)

Official bodies of various church groups make statements relative to the effect the May 17th Decision will have on establishing democratic and Christian ideals in our churches and communities.

Desegretation Along the Mason-Dixon Line. By James Rorty. A Reprint. Commentary, December 1954. For copies, write to: National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York 10. N. Y.

Code: 1) 5)

The author discusses how the end of educational segregation was received in Washington and Baltimore.

a Documented Report on Housing. National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York 10, New York. Single copy free.

Code: 4)

A carefully documented pamphlet which seeks to set forth a few of the underlying causes of the wide expanse of present day slums - with the hope that these causes, which even now jeopardize current planning, can be quickly and safely eliminated.

Economically the Negro Gains But He is Still the Low Man. A reprint. Business Week, December 18, 1954. For copies write to: Information Service, National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York 10, New York. Free.

Code: 2)

Business Week examines the Negro's economic status to see whether the gains in the economic field have matched his dramatic progress in political, social and educational areas.

a Fair Chance for All Americans. A symposium. National Conference of Christians and Jews, 381 Fourth Avenue, New York 18, New York.

Code: 2) 5)

Four American business leaders tell how democratic employment practices have been instituted and maintained in their companies.

From School to Jobs: Guidance for Minority Youth, by Ann Tanneyhill. Public Affairs Pamphlets, 22 East 38th Street, New York 19, New York. 25¢

Code: 2)

This pamphlet suggest ways in which citizens and their communities may, through vocational guidance techniques and practices, help children whose horizons have been limited by minority status.

How the Supreme Court Decision is Affecting YWCA Program. A symposium. The YWCA Magazine, February 1955, 600 Lexington Avenue, New York 22, New York. 35¢

Code: 3) 5)

Describes the procedures adopted by the YWCA throughout the USA in carrying out the doctrines of the May 17th Decision. Cities include: York, Pa.; Baltimore, Md.; Southeastern Region: Tucson, Ariz.; Roanoke, Va.; St. Louis, Mo.; Asheville, N. C. and Portland, Ore.

It Can Be Done - Desegregation. National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 20 West 40th Street, New York 18, New York. Free

Code: 1) 5)

A report on the progress which has been made in several communities during the first six months following the May 17th Decision outlawing public school segregation.

Materials from the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. Southeast Office, 41 Exchange Place, Atlanta, Georgia. Write for Catalogue.

Code: 5)

This agency has a large number of pamphlets and other materials that will be helpful to persons interested in securing recent information and reports on the status of human relations in America.

Materials from the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing. 35 West 32nd Street, New York 1, New York. Write for catalogue and price list.

Code: 4)

This agency has a very large number of publications that will be helpful to persons interested in securing the latest information on the status of housing for minority groups.

the Negro in America Today. By Alan Paton. Reprint. Collier's Magazine, October 15, 1954. Community Relations Service, 386 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York 10¢

Code: 1) 2) 3) 4) 5)

Alan Paton has brought both objectivity and sympathetic understanding in this study of race relations in the United States.

the Right of Every Child. A Report. The American Friends Committee, Community Relations Program, 104 "C" Street, N. E., Washington, D. C. Free

Code: 1) 5)

A report of the school integration program in the Washington, D. C. public schools.

Schools in Transition: Community Experiences in Desegregation. By Robin M. Williams and Margaret W. Ryan. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, North Carolina. $3.00

Code: 1) 5)

A series of case studies of communities that have made the change from bi-racial public schools to integrated school systems during the past few years.

Some Suggested Next Steps in Furtherance of Desegregation in Education. By Lester B. Granger. The Journal of Negro Education, Washington, D. C., Summer Issue, 1954. For copies write to: National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York 10, New York 5¢

Code: 1) 5)

The author points up some important factors which must be considered as we make plans to democratize the American School System.

the South in 1975. Special Report, November 1954, to the Southern Governors Conference. Southern Association of Science and Industry, Inc., 5009 Peachtree Road, Atlanta, Georgia. 50¢

Code: 2)

A report of the proposed technical and industrial progress and opportunities and their relationship to an expanded industrial economy for the Southern States.

the Southern Education Reporting Service. Post Office Box 6156, Acklen Station, Nashville, Tennessee. Subscription, $2.00 per year.

Code: 1)

A non-profit agency directed by a group of Southern editors and educators and financed by the Ford Foundation. It publishes a monthly newspaper, "Southern School News."

the Status of Racial Integration in Religious Institutions. By J. Oscar Lee. A Reprint. The Journal of Negro Education, Summer Issue, 1954. Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of Churches, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York. 15¢

Code: 6)

This discussion deals with the changes which are taking place in church related institutions and organizations as they work to improve racial and human relations.

BIBLIOGRAPHY - - - Section II

- o -

Brethren - Dwell Together in Unity. National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U. S. A., 120 East 23rd Street, New York 10, New York. 5¢

Code: 5) 6)

A message for Race Relations Sunday. It suggests a number of ways in which churches and individuals may live together in unity every day of the year.

Builder Opportunities in Minority Group Housing. Special Reprint. May - September 1954 issues PF - The Magazine of Prefabrication. Prefabricated Home Manufacturers' Institute, 908 - 20th Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C. Speciman Copy Free

Code: 2) 4)

One of a series of articles designed to explain the potentialities and special requirements of the nonwhite housing market and to bring readers helpful suggestions from both Government specialists and builders, who are interested in developing projects or homes for minority groups.

the Church and Segregation. By Dr. E. C. Benefield. For copies write to: Department of Research and Education, Kentucky State Federation of Labor, 312 Armory Place, Louisville 2, Kentucky. Free

Code: 5) 6)

A Presbyterian minister in Louisville, Kentucky, preaches a sermon on brotherhood. His message is very timely and could very well become the sermon for "Today."

the Churches and Human Rights. The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York 5¢

Code: 5) 6)

An official statement adopted by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, December 1948, urging the application of "Religious Liberty" through domestic and international action.

the Color Line in Fraternities. By Alfred S. Romer. A Reprint from Atlantic Monthly. Community Relations Service, 386 Fourth Avenue, New York 16, New York. Free

Code: 1) 5)

The story of Amherst College Chapter of Phi Psi Fraternity and its battle against discrimination.

Ever Widening Horizons. By Ann Tanneyhill, National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York 10, New York. Single Copy Free.

Code: 2)

The story of the Vocational Opportunity Campaign, an important phase of the Urban League program in vocational guidance and industrial relations.

Equal Job Opportunity is Good Business. The President's Committee on Government Contracts, Washington 25, D. C. Free

Code: 2) 5)

This pamphlet has been prepared to bring to the attention of employers holding government contracts, other interested agencies and the general public as well, the purpose and function of the President's Committee on Government Contracts.

Fair Employment: Responsibility of Free Enterprise. By Joseph J. Morrow. For a copy: Write to the Urban League of St. Louis, 3017 Delmar Blvd., St. Louis 3, Missouri. Free

Code: 2)

The author relates progress which has been made by Negroes in industry in recent years and discusses ways and means of expanding a program of equal opportunities for all.

First Report, President's Committee on Government Contracts. U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C. Free

Code: 2)

A report of the first year of activities of the President's Committee. It indicates the measures which, thus far, have been undertaken to accomplish its mission.

General Assembly Pronouncements. Christian Social Action. 1954 Department of Social Education and Action. Board of Christian Education, Presbyterian Church, 830 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia 7, Pa.
Free

Code: 5) 6)

These pronouncements, relating to "the Integrated Church," are taken from a report of the Standing Committee on Social Education in Action, Board of Christian Education, Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.

the High Cost of Discrimination. By Elmo Roper. National Conference of Christians and Jews, 381 Fourth Avenue, New York 16, New York.
Free

Code: 2) 5)

The author tells why the practice of discrimination in employment in American industry is costing industry thirty billion dollars a year.

Implementing the School Decision. By Marion A. Wright. New South, March 1955. Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta 3, Georgia Free

Code: 1) 5)

Some suggestions to local planning boards and commissions on ways of implementing the Supreme Court Decision.

Industrial Relations Program in the Urban League. (Mimeographed) By Julius A. Thomas. Department of Industrial Relations, National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York 10, New York. Free

Code: 2)

An official statement of the program of the Industrial Relations Department of the National Urban League. It gives a brief history of this important phase of Urban League operations, as well as to point out the role of this Department in expanding employment opportunities for Negroes.

Integration in the Armed Services. A progress report. Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower and Personnel). U. S. Government Printing Office, 1955. Free

Code: 4) 5)

This progress report presents some of the steps taken in implementing policies pointing toward optinum effectiveness of the Armed Forces through full utilization of the total use of manpower and facilities.

Interracial News Service. National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U. S. A. Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York, New York. Subscription $2.00 for two years.

Code: 5) 6)

A digest of trends and developments in Human Relations. Recent issues cover such topics as "Churches and Integration;" "Pottstown Shows a Way" - a unique project aimed at the eventual racial and religious integration of an average northern community; "As Children Go Back to School" - accounts of the first few days of class in cities where schools have been recently desegregated.

It Was the Right and Moral Thing to Do, Official Statement Adopted at Conference of Southern Negro Educators in Hot Springs, Arkansas. Phelps-Stokes Fund, 101 Park Avenue, New York 17, New York. Free.

Code: 1) 5)

Sixty-four Negro educational leaders express their views on the significance of the Supreme Court's May 17, 1954 Decision relating to segregation in the public schools.

Measuring Rod for Social Progress. By Lester B. Granger. A Reprint. Shifting Scenes, March 1955. National Travelers Aid Association, 425 Fourth Avenue, New York 16, New York. Free

Code: 5)

It suggests that social progress in any community may be measured by the degree to which its society is able to provide protection, comfort and inspiration to its members and the extent to which individuals are able to make their maximum contribution to the society by expression and development.

Negro Family Income in the Southern States. New South. October - November 1953. Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta 3, Georgia. 10¢

Code: 2)

Some very pertinent information regarding the income of Negro families in the Southern States as revealed by the 1950 Census.

Negroes in the Work Group. By Dr. Jacob Seidenberg. National Conference of Christians and Jews, 381 Fourth Avenue, New York 16, New York. Free

Code: 2)

The author uses data collected in several research projects to show how thirty business and industrial firms are offering equal employment opportunities to all.

Newsletter. The President's Committee on Government Contracts, February 1955, Washington 25, D. C. Free

Code: 2)

The President's Committee on Government Contracts' Newsletter discusses some of its recent achievements in expanding employment opportunities and other results achieved by the Committee.

New Ways on the Campus. By Guy B. Johnson. New South. February 1955. Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta 3, Georgia. 10¢

Code: 1) 5)

A report on the status of the enrollment of Negro students in Southern colleges and universities since 1946.

Segregation on Sunday? Special Issue, January 1955, Social Progress, 830 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia 7, Pa. Speciman copy free.

Code: 6)

This issue is devoted exclusively to the task of building "a nonsegregated church and a nonsegregated society." The narrative and comments describe five integrated churches and give accounts of their respective experiences in integrated fellowship.

Social Action in the Local Church. A Leader's Manual. Department of Social Education and Action. Board of Christian Education, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., 830 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia 7, Pa. 25¢

Code: 5) 6)

A handbook designed to help churches become alive in social education and action. It is addressed to ministers and other persons connected with the Church, but can be used effectively by other community and group workers.

Some Principles Related to the Problem of Desegregation. A Reprint. By Kenneth Clark. Summer Issue, 1954, The Journal of Negro Education, Washington, D. C.

Code: 1) 5)

The author discusses desegregation in a number of social institutions and suggests ways techniques used may be applied to desegregation in the public schools.

the Supreme Court Decision and the Appalachian South. By Robert G. Menefee, New South. Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta 3, Georgia. October 1954. 10¢

Code: 1) 5)

A report of the findings of one research worker on his travels through the South, discussing the Supreme Court Decision with local educational and community leaders.

a Training Program in Human Relations for Cadet and Inservice Police Officers. A Reprint. Department of Police Administration, May 1955. Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan.
Speciman copy free

Code: 5)

Although this training program has been prepared to give representatives of law enforcement agencies a clearer and more unbiased understanding of the people with whom they must make daily contacts, representatives of other community agencies and groups will find the material equally applicable for their own consideration and use.

TVA and Negro Employment. By J.H. Daves. A Reprint. The Journal of Negro Education, Winter, 1955. Howard University, Washington, D. C.

Free

Code: 2)

A recent report on the status of Negro employees at the Tennessee Valley Authority installations.

books for brotherhood for adults, young people and children

A CHECKLIST OF YOUR SCHOOL'S INTERGROUP RELATIONS IN Curriculum ✓

Teaching ✓

Administration ✓

Community Service ✓

Human Rel Ed

How Does YOUR School Score?

HOW DOES YOUR SCHOOL SCORE?

Discussion of checklist results should form a sound basis for planning action your school can take.

WHY THIS CHECKLIST?

This is one method your school may use in evaluating what is being done in your classrooms and school life to deal constructively with intergroup relations.

This is not a scientific measuring device. It is simply a checklist of some positive steps that may lead to better intergroup living in your school.

HOW TO USE THE CHECKLIST:

As many teachers and parent leaders as possible should have an opportunity to use the checklist.

Circle zero (0) opposite an item if your school has no such activity or is making no effort in this category.

Circle single plus sign (+) if some activity is underway.

Circle double plus (++) if a great deal of activity or effort is underway.

Add up the number of plus signs for total score.

PLEASE TURN FLAP

members on the basis of democratic principles (without exclusion because of students' group background or identity)?

✓ The Curriculum and Teaching

1. Is there provision in the curriculum at all levels and in all subject areas for inclusion of activities and materials which contribute to democratic intergroup relations? 0 + ++
2. Are the contributions to American civilization made by various cultural groups and their outstanding representatives included as an emphasis in the curriculum? 0 + ++
3. Do teachers use any of the following means to help develop personalities free of hostility towards others: 0 + ++
   a. development of student self-discipline rather than rigid teacher-directed discipline;
   b. pupil participation in planning classroom activities;
   c. pupil initiative in group projects;
   d. pupil participation in managing school affairs?
4. Is attention given in the curriculum to social and economic problems which lead to intergroup tensions? 0 + ++
5. Is provision made to ensure that pupils are well informed about fallacies about various groups? 0 + ++
6. Do you have a counseling and guidance program which contributes to group relations through the better adjustment of the individual pupil? 0 + ++
7. Is there opportunity for teachers to explore together their own attitudes and feelings regarding differences among individuals and groups? 0 + ++
8. Does your school have an adequate library of intergroup education materials such as audio-visual aids, pamphlets, reference books, or access to such a source? 0 + ++

✓ Cooperative School-Community Relations

1. Do you employ the school facilities as a center for community activities for the promotion of better group relations? 0 + ++
2. Does the school cooperate with civic and private organizations in dealing with intergroup problems? 0 + ++
3. Do your courses employ the community for study and as an experience laboratory for such activities as the following: 0 + ++
   a. fact-finding interviews
   b. field trips
   c. participation activities?

(continued on back page)

CHECKLIST

SCHOOL PRACTICES FOR DEMOCRATIC GROUP RELATIONS

(Circle 0, +, ++, to indicate score for each question)

Group Life of School

1. Are members of school-sponsored clubs selected on the basis of merit and interest, irrespective of students' group background or identity? 0 + ++
2. Are students chosen or elected for leadership positions on the basis of merit and in such a manner as to be truly representative of the various groups comprising the student body? 0 + ++
3. Are the members of your athletic teams chosen solely on the basis of ability and achievement? 0 + ++
4. Are you making a special effort to organize activities and groups (recreation, intergroup choruses, discussion groups, etc.) to break down barriers between groups? 0 + ++
5. If your school has fraternities and sororities, do students and faculty advisers encourage selection of members on the basis of democratic principles (without exclusion because of students' group background or identity)? 0 + ++

The Curriculum and Teaching

1. Is there provision in the curriculum at all levels and in all subject areas for inclusion of activities and materials which contribute to democratic intergroup relations? 0 + ++
2. Are the contributions to American civilization made by various cultural groups and their outstanding representatives included as an emphasis in the curriculum? 0 + ++
3. Do teachers use any of the following means to help develop personalities free of hostility towards others: 0 + ++
   a. development of student self-discipline rather than rigid teacher-directed discipline;
   b. pupil participation in planning classroom activities;
   c. pupil initiative in group projects;
   d. pupil participation in managing school affairs?
4. Is attention given in the curriculum to social and economic problems which lead to intergroup tensions? 0 + ++
5. Is provision made to ensure that pupils are well informed about fallacies about various groups? 0 + ++

Administrative Leadership

1. Do you have a representative committee to study, guide and make recommendations on intergroup problems? 0 + ++
2. Are teachers encouraged to make studies of any of the following: habits of association (sociometric patterns), open hostility, intergroup attitudes, cliques? 0 + ++
3. Is there school-wide policy on intergroup attitudes and relations that implements and supports continual improvement of intergroup relations in school and community? 0 + ++
4. Are steps taken to include on your faculty individuals of merit, regardless of their group backgrounds? 0 + ++
5. Do you have an in-service training policy and program for your staff members designed to improve their understanding and skill in human relations? 0 + ++
6. Do you have a counseling and guidance program which contributes to group relations through the better adjustment of the individual pupil? 0 + ++
7. Is there opportunity for teachers to explore together their own attitudes and feelings regarding differences among individuals and groups? 0 + ++
8. Does your school have an adequate library of intergroup education materials such as audio-visual aids, pamphlets, reference books, or access to such a source? 0 + ++

Cooperative School-Community Relations

1. Do you employ the school facilities as a center for community activities for the promotion of better group relations? 0 + ++
2. Does the school cooperate with civic and private organizations in dealing with intergroup problems? 0 + ++
3. Do your courses employ the community for study and as an experience laboratory for such activities as the following: 0 + ++
   a. fact-finding interviews
   b. field trips
   c. participation activities?

(continued on back page)

4. Do your parent-teacher organizations deal with the problem of intergroup relations? 0 + ++

5. Are teachers informed regarding the local and national programs of organizations working to develop better intergroup relations? 0 + ++

WHAT IS YOUR SCORE?_____

Discuss these findings with a faculty committee, P.T.A. committee, a student club or group. Plan Brotherhood Week and year-round activities in the light of your findings.

National Committee for Brotherhood Week

Lawrence G. Derthick
Allan P. Farrell, S.J.
Abram L. Sachar

Co-Chairmen for Schools and Colleges

Thomas E. Braniff, General Chairman

Commission on Educational Organizations

J. Martin Klotsche, Chairman
Lavone Hanna, Vice-Chairman

Herbert L. Seamans, Director

National Conference of Christians and Jews
381 Fourth Avenue, New York City

BROTHERHOOD

"This volume might well be titled Inventory of Hope or An Answer to the Faint of Heart."

So begins Morris Ernst's foreword to INTEGRATION NORTH AND SOUTH, an important study of the progress the United States has made in racial integration since the United States Supreme Court decision on desegregation of schools in 1954.

While the press, radio, and television usually carry only news of the troubles that have arisen as a result of opposition to the decision, the authors of this "progress report" describe hundreds of examples of successful integration all over the country in education, employment, housing, travel, health, recreation, and other areas of public life.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS →

Materials - Bibliography

INTEGRATION NORTH AND SOUTH

About the Authors

DAVID LOTH, author of many books, was a staff member of The New York World for ten years and The New York Times for seven years. He has served as Information Director of the Surplus Property Board, the Columbia University Bicentennial Celebration, and the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, for which he was also Acting National Director. He has also been a consultant to Nelson A. Rockefeller and the Eisenhower Foundation.

HAROLD CURTIS FLEMING is Director of the Southern Regional Council after having directed the Council's publications and information program from 1947 to 1956. He was a member of the central staff of the survey of bi-racial education in the United States sponsored by the Fund for the Advancement of Education in 1953. He was a Phi Beta Kappa at Harvard University and has written on Southern affairs for The Reporter, New Republic, Survey, The Annals, and other publications.

About The Fund for the Republic

The Fund for the Republic, publisher of Integration North and South, is an independent, non-profit corporation concerned with advancing public understanding and discussion of civil liberties in the United States.

If you are interested in obtaining an up-to-date account of what has been accomplished since 1954, you will want to read —

INTEGRATION NORTH AND SOUTH

MAIL COUPON NOW ➔

Prices

1 — 9 copies: 40 cents each
10 — 50 copies: 35 cents each
51 — 300 copies: 30 cents each
301 — 500 copies: 25 cents each
More than 500 copies: 20 cents each

MERIDIAN BOOKS, Inc.
17 Union Square West
New York 3, N. Y.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL
RM. 432, 63 AUBURN AVE., N. E
ATLANTA, GEORGIA

$.....amount enclosed (NYC residents please add 3% sales tax) for prompt, postage-free delivery of.....copies of Integration North and South by David Loth and Harold Fleming. Ship to:

NAME.....

STREET.....

CITY.....ZONE.....STATE.....

Materials
Bibliography

new publications

published by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22, N. Y., Plaza 1-1800

G338. LET'S GET DOWN TO CASES (revised) Jean Alexander 32 pp. 25¢

A study plan for group discussions covering problems of interfaith, interracial and intercultural relations. Especially prepared for youth, young adult and social action groups with a twofold aim.

1. To help young people develop intelligent attitudes toward problems arising in human relations through informed discussion and dramatic role-playing.

2. To inspire young people to bridge the gap between religious principles and practice by both individual and group action.

The study plan suggests two approaches.

1. A democratic discussion method which makes use of specific case descriptions of problems dealing with intergroup relations based on actual incidents.

2. A role-playing method which allows the group to act out dramatically the situations of everyday life. This gives the group an opportunity to explore important feelings which might otherwise remain hidden.

Nine different cases, ranging from integration in the public schools to changing neighborhoods, are presented in all, with special references listed at the conclusion of each case. General references are listed in a bibliography at the end of the booklet.

Written by the former secretary for Intergroup Work of the United Christian Youth Movement.

Research Office

ADL

FREEDOM LIBRARY...

ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE OF B'NAI B'RITH

SOUTHEASTERN OFFICE
41 Exchange Place, S. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

ARTHUR J. LEVIN
Director

Materials - Bibliography

new publications

published by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22, N. Y., Plaza 1-1800

JF100. PREJUDICED -- HOW DO PEOPLE GET THAT WAY? William Van Til 32 pp. 25¢

The first pamphlet of The One Nation Library, a new series to be published by the ADL, primarily directed at high school and young adult audiences.

This initial pamphlet offers the reader a humorous but cogent explanation of how people become prejudiced -- and how prejudice can be prevented. Amply illustrated, the pamphlet analyzes "prejudice chromosomes," mutual prejudice between "country hicks" and "city slickers" and the entire theory of superior and inferior races. How people can learn to be prejudiced against people with green hair is graphically outlined by the author.

These salient facts are highlighted:

Prejudice is learned, not inherited.
Great world ideas oppose prejudice.
True religion makes bonds between men, not barriers.
Democracy means one set of rules for rich and poor alike.

"How people get that way" is illustrated by a fictional case history of two boys, Ted and Jim, which emphasizes that early lessons in human relations have a lasting effect on the personality. What the reader can do about prejudice by examining his own attitudes and reactions concludes the pamphlet.

Written by William Van Til, professor of education and chairman of the Department of Secondary Education at New York University, and formerly chairman of the Division of Curriculum and Teaching, George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tenn.

The pamphlet is accompanied by a teacher's guide.

Mat - Bibliog.

new publications

published by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22, N. Y., Plaza 1-1800

G331e. THE TALLAHASSEE BUS PROTEST C.U. Smith and L.M. Killian 23 pp. 25¢
(This is the fifth in a series of Field Reports on Desegregation in the South.)

A comprehensive study and factual round-up of the events leading up to the Tallahassee, Fla., bus boycott which began on May 27, 1956. The report opens with an outline of the community background including descriptions of the city government, race relations before the bus protest, reactions to the 1954 Supreme Court ruling, and Negro defense organizations in Tallahassee. Results of a study on the attitudes of the Tallahassee white community toward desegregation are also given.

A month-by-month chronological account of the bus boycott from its inception in May, 1956 through the month of February, 1957 --- and its present status, follows the community background outline.

In conclusion, the authors report on a study of the attitudes of the Negro population toward: 1) the bus protest and desegregation, and 2) the South, in general, and Tallahassee, in particular; give an analysis of the movement and their own observations on the emergence of the bus protest.

Written by C.U. Smith, of the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical University, and L.M. Killian, of the Florida State University, both of Tallahassee.

Other Field Reports include:

G331a. MANSFIELD, TEXAS
G331b. CLINTON, TENNESSEE
G331c. STURGIS, KENTUCKY
G331d. BEAUMONT, TEXAS
(In preparation: G331f. TUSKEGEE, ALABAMA)

Special price discount on large quantity orders.

Write to:
Anti-Defamation League or your nearest ADL regional office
515 Madison Avenue
New York 22, N.Y.

Please send me ..... copy(ies) of THE TALLAHASSEE BUS PROTEST at 25¢.
..... G331a. MANSFIELD, TEXAS
and/or ..... G331b. CLINTON, TENNESSEE
Field Reports ..... G331c. STURGIS, KENTUCKY each at 25¢.
..... G331d. BEAUMONT, TEXAS

I am enclosing..... Name.....

Bill me..... Address.....

City & State.....

Note: Please add 10¢ for handling charge UNLESS order is accompanied by remittance.

Bibliography

CCI

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. About CCI

B. General Methods of Improving Intergroup Relations

C. Community Self-Surveys

D. Incident Control

a. Technical Papers

b. Popular Articles

c. Training Aids

E. Effects of Intergroup Contact

F. Minority Group Membership

a. Theoretical Analyses

b. Empirical Studies

G. Research Methodology

H. Discrimination and Segregation

I. Prejudice

J. Miscellaneous

COMMISSION ON COMMUNITY INTERRELATIONS
OF THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

15 East 84th Street
New York 28, N.Y.

G. B. J.
Desk Copy

University of North Carolina
Sociology 185
The Negro

SELECTED READINGS ON RACE AND RACE RELATIONS IN THE UNITED STATES

1. Race, Racial Differences, Race Mixture, Etc.

Barzun, Jacques. RACE, A STUDY IN MODERN SUPERSTITION.
✓ Boas, Franz. THE MIND OF PRIMITIVE MAN.
Boas, Franz. "Anthropology." Article in ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE SOCIAL SCIENCES.
Boas, Franz. ANTHROPOLOGY AND MODERN LIFE.
Bruce, Myrtle. FACTORS AFFECTING INTELLIGENCE TEST PERFORMANCE OF WHITES AND NEGROES. (Columbia University Archives of Psychology, No. 252.)
Davenport, C. B., and M. Steggerda. RACE CROSSING IN JAMAICA.
Day, Caroline Bond. A STUDY OF SOME NEGRO-WHITE FAMILIES IN THE UNITED STATES.
Dixon, Roland B. THE RACIAL HISTORY OF MAN.
Dover, Cedric. HALF-CASTE.
East, E. M. MANKIND AT THE CROSSROADS.
Finot, Jean. RACE PREJUDICE.
Fishberg, Maurice. THE JEWS: A STUDY OF RACE AND ENVIRONMENT.
Garth, T. R. RACE PSYCHOLOGY.
Haddon, A. C. THE RACES OF MAN AND THEIR DISTRIBUTION.
Hankins, F. H. THE RACIAL BASIS OF CIVILIZATION.
Herskovits, M. J. THE AMERICAN NEGRO: A STUDY IN RACIAL CROSSING.
Herskovits, M. J. ANTHROPOMETRY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO.
Hirschfeld, M. RACISM.
Hooton, E. A. UP FROM THE APES.
Huntington, Ellsworth. THE CHARACTER OF RACES.
✓ Huxley, Julian, and A. C. Haddon. WE EUROPEANS.
Jennings, H. S. THE BIOLOGICAL BASIS OF HUMAN NATURE.
Jennings, H. S., and Others. SCIENTIFIC ASPECTS OF THE RACE PROBLEM.
✓ Klineberg, Otto. RACE DIFFERENCES.
Kroeber, A. L. ANTHROPOLOGY. (chaps. 3 & 4)
Lewis, Julian H. THE BIOLOGY OF THE NEGRO.
Linton, Ralph. THE STUDY OF MAN. (chapter on Race.)
Radin, Paul. THE RACIAL MYTH.
Ripley, Wm. Z. THE RACES OF EUROPE.
Seligmann, Herbert J. RACE AGAINST MAN.
Sergi, C. THE MEDITERRANEAN RACE.
Weale, B. L. Putnam. THE CONFLICT OF COLOUR.
Wilder, H. H. THE PEDIGREE OF THE HUMAN RACE.

✓ Montagu, M. F. A. Man's Most Dangerous ~~Superstition~~ Myth: The Fallacy of Race

✓ Benedict, Ruth. Race: Science and Politics.

2. The American Historical Background.

Ballagh, J. C. A HISTORY OF SLAVERY IN VIRGINIA.
Bassett, John Spencer. SLAVERY AND SERVITUDE IN THE COLONY OF NORTH CAROLINA.
Brackett, J. R. THE NEGRO IN MARYLAND.
Brawley, Benjamin G. A SOCIAL HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO.
Brown, William G. THE LOWER SOUTH IN AMERICAN HISTORY.
Bruce, Philip A. THE PLANTATION NEGRO AS A FREEMAN.
Carroll, Joseph C. SLAVE INSURRECTIONS IN THE UNITED STATES, 1619-1865.
Catterall, Helen T. JUDICIAL CASES CONCERNING AMERICAN SLAVERY AND THE NEGRO.
Donnan, Elizabeth. DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE HISTORY OF THE SLAVE TRADE TO AMERICA.
Du Bois, W. E. B. BLACK RECONSTRUCTION
Flanders, Ralph B. PLANTATION SLAVERY IN GEORGIA.
Fleming Walter L. DOCUMENTARY HISTORY OF RECONSTRUCTION.
Helper, Hinton Rowan. THE IMPENDING CRISIS.
Hundley, D. R. SOCIAL RELATIONS IN OUR SOUTHERN STATES.
Jefferson, Thomas. NOTES ON THE STATE OF VIRGINIA.
Jenkins, Wm. S. PRO-SLAVERY THOUGHT IN THE OLD SOUTH.
Johnson, Guion G. A SOCIAL HISTORY OF THE SEA ISLANDS.
Johnson, Guion G. ANTE-BELLUM NORTH CAROLINA.
Livermore, George. AN HISTORICAL RESEARCH RESPECTING THE OPINION OF THE FOUNDERS OF THE REPUBLIC ON NEGROES AS SLAVES, AS CITIZENS, AND AS SOLDIERS.
Olmsted, Frederick L. A JOURNEY IN THE SEABOARD SLAVE STATES. . . 1853-1854.
Phillips, Ulrich B. AMERICAN NEGRO SLAVERY.
Russell, John H. THE FREE NEGRO IN VIRGINIA, 1619-1865.
Simkins, F. B., and R. H. Woody. SOUTH CAROLINA DURING RECONSTRUCTION.
Turner, Edward R. THE NEGRO IN PENNSYLVANIA.
Warner, Robert A. NEW HAVEN NEGROES, A SOCIAL HISTORY.
Wesley, Charles H. THE COLLAPSE OF THE CONFEDERACY.
Wiley, Bell Irving. SOUTHERN NEGORES, 1861-1865.
Woodson, Carter G. THE NEGRO IN OUR HISTORY.
Woodson, Carter G. FREE NEGRO OWNERS OF SLAVES.
Woodson, Carter G. THE MIND OF THE NEGRO AS REFLECTED IN LETTERS WRITTEN DURING THE CRISIS, 1800-1860.

3. Negro Life and Race Relations

Allen, James S. THE NEGRO QUESTION IN THE UNITED STATES.
ANNALS of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Special Issue on the Negro, November, 1928.
Archer, William. THROUGH AFRO-AMERICA.
Arkansas Writers' Project (W.P.A.). SURVEY OF NEGROES IN LITTLE ROCK AND NORTH LITTLE ROCK.
Bailey, Thomas P. RACE ORTHODOXY IN THE SOUTH.
Baker, Paul. NEGRO-WHITE ADJUSTMENT.
Baker, Ray Stannard. FOLLOWING THE COLOR LINE.
Barton, Rebecca C. RACE CONSCIOUSNESS AND THE AMERICAN NEGRO.
Bogardus, E. S. IMMIGRATION AND RACE ATTITUDES.
Bond, Horace M. EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO IN THE AMERICAN SOCIAL ORDER.
Bowen, Trevor. DIVINE WHITE RIGHT.
Brawley, Benjamin G. EARLY NEGRO AMERICAN WRITERS.
Brawley, Benjamin G. THE NEGRO IN LITERATURE AND ART.
Brawley, Benjamin G. THE NEGRO GENIUS.
Brearly, H. C. HOMICIDE IN THE UNITED STATES.
Brown, F. J., and J. S. Roucek. OUR RACIAL AND NATIONAL MINORITIES.
Brown, Ina C. THE STORY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO.
Brown, Sterling. NEGRO POETRY AND DRAMA.
Brown, Sterling. THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN FICTION.
Brown, Sterling, and Others. THE NEGRO CARAVAN. (An Anthology of Writings by Negroes.)
Cable, G. W. THE CREOLES OF LOUISIANA.
Cable, G. W. THE NEGRO QUESTION.
Cable, G. W. THE SILENT SOUTH.
Caliver, Ambrose. SECONDARY EDUCATION FOR NEGROES.
Calverton, V. F. (ed.) AN ANTHOLOGY OF AMERICAN NEGRO LITERATURE.
Campbell, Thomas M. THE MOVABLE SCHOOL GOES TO THE NEGRO FARMER.
Cayton, Horace, and George Mitchell. BLACK WORKERS AND THE NEW UNIONS.
Chadbourn, J. N. LYNCHING AND THE LAW.
Chenault, Lawrence. THE PUERTO RICAN MIGRANT IN NEW YORK CITY.
Chicago Commission on Race Relations. THE NEGRO IN CHICAGO.
Cooley, Rossa B. SCHOOL ACRES.
Couch, W. T. (ed.) CULTURE IN THE SOUTH.
Dabney, Virginius. LIBERALISM IN THE SOUTH.
Daniel, W. A. THE EDUCATION OF NEGRO MINISTERS.
Davis, Allison, and John Dollard. CHILDREN OF BONDAGE.
Davis, Allison, and Others. DEEP SOUTH.
Detweiler, F. G. THE NEGRO PRESS IN THE UNITED STATES.
Dollard, John. CASTE AND CLASS IN A SOUTHERN TOWN.
Dowd, Jerome. THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN LIFE.
Doyle, Bertram W. THE ETIQUETTE OF RACE RELATIONS IN THE SOUTH.
Du Bois, W. E. B. THE NEGRO.
Du Bois, W. E. B. SOULS OF BLACK FOLK.
Du Bois, W. E. B. BLACK FOLK THEN AND NOW.
Dutcher, Dean. THE NEGRO IN MODERN INDUSTRIAL SOCIETY.
Edwards, Paul K. THE SOUTHERN URBAN NEGRO AS A CONSUMER.
Embree, Edwin R. BROWN AMERICA.
Embree, Edwin R. AMERICAN NEGROES, A HANDBOOK.
Evans, Maurice. BLACK AND WHITE IN THE SOUTHERN STATES.

Feldman, Herman. RACIAL FACTORS IN AMERICAN INDUSTRY.
Foreman, Clark. ENVIRONMENTAL FACTORS IN NEGRO ELEMENTARY EDUCATION.
Franklin, Charles L. THE NEGRO LABOR UNIONIST IN NEW YORK.
Frazier, E. Franklin. THE FREE NEGRO FAMILY.
Frazier, E. Franklin. THE NEGRO FAMILY IN CHICAGO.
Frazier, E. Franklin. THE NEGRO FAMILY IN THE UNITED STATES.
Frazier, E. Franklin. NEGRO YOUTH AT THE CROSSWAYS.
Gallagher, Buell G. AMERICAN CASTE AND THE NEGRO COLLEGE.
Garth, T. R. RACE PSYCHOLOGY.
Georgia Writers' Project (W.P.A.). DRUMS AND SHADOWS.
Gleason, Eliza A. THE SOUTHERN NEGRO AND THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.
Gosnell, Harold. NEGRO POLITICIANS.
Green, Elizabeth L. THE NEGRO IN CONTEMPORARY AMERICAN LITERATURE.
Green, Lorenzo, and Carter G. Woodson. THE NEGRO WAGE EARNER.
Handy, W. C. FATHER OF THE BLUES.
Hare, Maud Cuney. NEGRO MUSICIANS AND THEIR MUSIC.
Harmon, J. H. THE NEGRO AS A BUSINESS MAN.
Harris, Abram L. and S. Spero. "Negro Problem," in ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE SOCIAL SCIENCES, Vol. XI.
Harris, Abram. THE NEGRO AS CAPITALIST.
Hayes, Lawrence J. W. THE NEGRO FEDERAL WORKER.
Henderson, E. B. THE NEGRO IN SPORTS.
Herskovits, M. J. LIFE IN A HAITIAN VALLEY.
Herskovitz, M. J. THE MYTH OF THE NEGRO PAST.
Holmes, D. O. W. THE EVOLUTION OF THE NEGRO COLLEGE.
Holmes, S. J. THE NEGRO'S STRUGGLE FOR SURVIVAL.
Johnson, Charles S. THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN CIVILIZATION.
Johnson, Charles S. SHADOW OF THE PLANTATION.
Johnson, Charles S. THE NEGRO COLLEGE GRADUATE.
Johnson, Charles S. A PREFACE TO RACIAL UNDERSTANDING.
Johnson, Charles S. GROWING UP IN THE BLACK BELT.
Johnson, Guy B. JOHN HENRY.
Johnson, Guy B. FOLK CULTURE ON ST. HELENA ISLAND.
Johnson, James Weldon. NEGRO AMERICANS, WHAT NOW?
Kennedy, Louise V. THE NEGRO PEASANT TURNS CITYWARD.
Kiser, Clyde V. SEA ISLAND TO CITY.
Klineberg, Otto. NEGRO INTELLIGENCE AND SELECTIVE MIGRATION.
Klineberg, Otto. RACE DIFFERENCES.
Lasker, Bruno. RACE ATTITUDES IN CHILDREN.
Lewis, Edward E. THE MOBILITY OF THE NEGRO.
Lewinson, Paul. RACE, CLASS, AND PARTY.
Locke, Alain. THE NEGRO AND HIS MUSIC.
Locke, Alain. NEGRO ART, PAST AND PRESENT.
Locke, Alain. THE NEW NEGRO.
Locke, Alain. THE NEGRO IN ART.
Locke, Alain, and M. Gregory. PLAYS OF NEGRO LIFE.
Loggins, Vernon. THE NEGRO AUTHOR.
Lomax, John and Allen. AMERICAN BALLADS AND FOLK-SONGS.
Mangum, Charles S., Jr. THE LEGAL STATUS OF THE NEGRO.
Matthews, Basil. THE CLASH OF COLOR.
Mays, B. E., and J. W. Nicholson. THE NEGRO'S CHURCH.
Mazyck, W. H. GEORGE WASHINGTON AND THE NEGRO.
McGee, A. E. BLACK AMERICA ABROAD.

Mecklin, J. M. DEMOCRACY AND RACE FRICTION.
Miller, Herbert A. RACES, NATIONS, AND CLASSES.
Moton, R. R. WHAT THE NEGRO THINKS.
Muntz, Earle. RACE CONTACT.
Murphy, E. G. THE PRESENT SOUTH.
Murphy, E. G. THE BASIS OF ASCENDANCY.
Murray, Florence (comp.) THE NEGRO HANDBOOK, 1942.
National Youth Administration. NEGRO YOUTH IN GEORGIA STUDY THEIR PROBLEMS.
Nearing, Scott. BLACK AMERICA.
Newbold, N. C. (ed.). FIVE NORTH CAROLINA NEGRO EDUCATORS.
Nowlin, W. F. THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN NATIONAL POLITICS.
Odum, H. W. SOCIAL AND MENTAL TRAITS OF THE NEGRO.
Odum, H. W. SOUTHERN REGIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.
Odum, H. W. RAINBOW ROUND MY SHOULDER.
Odum, H. W., and Guy B. Johnson. THE NEGRO AND HIS SONGS.
Odum, H. W., and Guy B. Johnson. NEGRO WORKADAY SONGS.
Oldham, J. H. CHRISTIANITY AND THE RACE PROBLEM.
Page, Thomas Nelson. THE NEGRO, THE SOUTHERNER'S PROBLEM.
Parrish, Lydia. SLAVE SONGS OF THE GEORGIA SEA ISLANDS.
Peterkin, Julia, and Doris Ulmann. ROLL, JORDAN, ROLL.
Phelps-Stokes Fund. TWENTY YEAR REPORT OF THE PHELPS-STOKES FUND.
Pickett, Wm. P. THE NEGRO PROBLEM, ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S SOLUTION.
Porch, Marvin E. THE PHILADELPHIA MAIN LINE NEGRO.
Porter, Kirk H. A HISTORY OF NEGRO SUFFRACE IN THE UNITED STATES.
Powdermaker, Hortense. AFTER FREEDOM.
Puckett, N. N. FOLK BELIEFS OF THE SOUTHERN NEGRO.
Raper, Arthur. PREFACE TO PEASANTRY.
Raper, Arthur. THE TRAGEDY OF LYNCHING.
Raper, Arthur, and Ira De A. Reid. SHARECROPPERS ALL.
Redding, J. Saunders. TO MAKE A POET BLACK.
Reid, Ira De A. IN A MINOR KEY.
Reid, Ira De A. THE NEGRO IMMIGRANT.
Reuter, E. B. THE AMERICAN RACE PROBLEM (Rev. ed. 1938).
Reuter, E. B. THE MULATTO IN THE UNITED STATES.
Reuter, E. B. RACE MIXTURE.
Reuter, E. B. (ed.) RACE AND CULTURE CONTACT.
Schrieke, B. ALIEN AMERICANS.
Schulze, Andrew. MY NEIGHBORS OF ANOTHER COLOR: A TREATISE ON RACE RELATIONS IN THE CHURCH.
Shay, Frank: JUDGE LYNCH: HIS FIRST HUNDRED YEARS.
Skaggs, W. H. THE SOUTHERN OLIGARCHY.
Spero, S., and A. Harris. THE BLACK WORKER.
Spiller, G. (ed.). PAPERS ON INTER-RACIAL PROBLEMS.
Stephenson, G. T. RACE DISTINCTIONS IN AMERICAN LAW.
Stone, A. H. STUDIES IN THE AMERICAN RACE PROBLEM.
Stuart, M. S. AN ECONOMIC DETOUR: A HISTORY OF INSURANCE IN THE LIVES OF AMERICAN NEGROES.
Styles, Fitzhugh. NEGROES AND THE LAW.
Styles, Fitzhugh. HOW TO BE SUCCESSFUL NEGRO AMERICANS.
Sutherland, Robert. COLOR, CLASS, AND PERSONALITY.
Thomas, William H. THE AMERICAN NEGRO.
Thompson, Edgar T. (ed.). RACE RELATIONS AND THE RACE PROBLEM.

United States, Bureau of the Census. Various publications, but especially:
NEGRO POPULATION, 1790-1915
NEGROES IN THE UNITED STATES, 1920-1932
CENSUS OF POPULATION, 1930 and 1940
CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE, 1930 and 1940
CENSUS OF RELIGIOUS BODIES, 1926 and 1936
PRISONERS IN STATE AND FEDERAL PRISONS AND REFORMATORIES.

Van Deusen, John G. THE BLACK MAN IN WHITE AMERICA.

Voorhis, H. B. NEGRO MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

Walker, Ira, and Others. THIS BE THEIR DESTINY: THE PERSONALITY DEVELOPMENT OF NEGRO YOUTH IN THREE RURAL, COMMUNITIES.

Warner, Lloyd, and Others. COLOR AND HUMAN NATURE.

Washington, Booker T. THE STORY OF THE NEGRO.

Washington, E. Davidson. PUBLIC ADDRESSES OF BOOKER T. WASHINGTON.

Weatherford, W. D. THE NEGRO FROM AFRICA TO AMERICA.

Weatherford, W. D., and C. S. Johnson. RACE RELATIONS.

Wesley, Charles H. NEGRO LABOR IN THE UNITED STATES.

White, N. I. AMERICAN NEGRO FOLK-SONGS.

White, Walter. ROPE AND FAGGOT.

Woodson, Carter G. THE MIS-EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO.

Woodson, Carter G. THE EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO BEFORE 1861.

Woodson, Carter G. THE RURAL NEGRO.

Woodson, Carter G. HISTORY OF THE NEGRO CHURCH.

Woodson, Carter G. THE NEGRO PROFESSIONAL MAN AND THE COMMUNITY.

Woofter, T. J., Jr. BLACK YEOMANRY.

Woofter, T. J., Jr. THE BASIS OF RACIAL ADJUSTMENT.

Woofter, T. J., Jr. NEGRO PROBLEMS IN CITIES.

Woofter, T. J., Jr. (ed.) RACES AND ETHNIC GROUPS IN AMERICAN LIFE.

Woofter, T. J., Jr. LANDLORD AND TENANT ON THE COTTON PLANTATION.

Work, Monroe N. (ed.) BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE NEGRO.

Work, Monroe N. (ed.) NEGRO YEAR BOOK, 1931-1932; 1937-1938.

W.P.A. Writers' Project of Georgia. DRUMS AND SHADOWS.

W.P.A. Writers' Project of Virginia. THE NEGRO IN VIRGINIA.

Wright, Richard. 12 MILLION BLACK VOICES: A FOLK HISTORY OF THE NEGRO IN THE UNITED STATES.

Young, Donald. AMERICAN MINORITY PEOPLES.

Young, Donald. RESEARCH MEMORANDUM ON MINORITY PEOPLES IN THE DEPRESSION.

4. Selected Fiction and Poetry by Negro Authors.

A. Fiction

Attaway, William. LET ME BREATHE THUNDER.
Attaway, William. BLOOD ON THE FORGE.
Bontemps, Arna. GOD SENDS SUNDAY.
Bontemps, Arna. BLACK THUNDER.
Chestnutt, Charles C. THE MARROW OF TRADITION.
Chestnutt, Charles C. THE CONJURE WOMAN.
Cullen, Countee. ONE WAY TO HEAVEN.
Daly, Victor. NOT ONLY WAR.
Du Bois, W. E. B. DARK PRINCESS.
Fauset, Jessie R. THERE IS CONFUSION.
Fauset, Jessie R. PLUM BUN.
Fauset, Jessie R. THE CHINABERRY TREE.
Fauset, Jessie R. COMEDY, AMERICAN STYLE.
Fisher, Rudolph. THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
Hughes, Langston. NOT WITHOUT LAUGHTER.
Hughes, Langston. THE WAYS OF WHITE FOLKS.
Hurston, Zora N. JONAH'S GOURD VINE.
Hurston, Zora N. THEIR EYES WERE WATCHING GOD.
Johnson, James Weldon. AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF AN EX-COLORED MAN.
Larsen, Nella. QUICKSAND.
Larsen, Nella. PASSING.
Lee, John M. COUNTER CLOCK-WISE.
McKay, Claude. HOME TO HARLEM.
McKay, Claude. BANJO.
McKay, Claude. BANANA BOTTOM.
Schuyler, George. BLACK NO MORE.
Thurman, Wallace. THE BLACKER THE BERRY.
Turpin, Waters. THESE LOW GROUNDS.
White, Walter. THE FIRE IN THE FLINT.
White, Walter. FLIGHT.
Wright, Richard. UNCLE TOM'S CHILDREN.
Wright, Richard. NATIVE SON.

B. Poetry

Brown, Sterling. SOUTHERN ROAD.
Cullen, Countee (ed.). CAROLING DUSK. AN ANTHOLOGY.
Dunbar, Paul Laurence. COMPLETE POEMS.
Hughes, Langston. THE WEARY BLUES.
Hughes, Langston. THE DREAM KEEPER, AND OTHER POEMS.
Johnson, James Weldon. FIFTY YEARS AND OTHER POEMS.
Johnson, James Weldon. GOD'S TROMBONES.
Johnson, James Weldon. (ed.) THE BOOK OF AMERICAN NEGRO POETRY.
McKay, Claude. SONGS OF JAMAICA.
McKay, Claude. SPRING IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.
McKay, Claude. HARLEM SHADOWS.
White, N. I., and W. C. Jackson (eds.). POETRY BY AMERICAN NEGROES (Anthology)

5. Autobiographies of Negroes.

Douglass, Frederick. LIFE AND TIMES OF FREDERICK DOUGLASS.
Du Bois, W. E. B. DUSK OF DAWN.
Harrison, Juanita. MY GREAT, WIDE BEAUTIFUL WORLD.
Herndon, Angelo. LET ME LIVE.
Hughes, Langston. THE BIG SEA.
Johnson, James Weldon. ALONG THIS WAY.
McKay, Claude. A LONG WAY FROM HOME.
Moton, R. R. FINDING A WAY OUT.
Powell, Clayton. AGAINST THE TIDE.
Terrell, Mary Church. A NEGRO WOMAN IN A WHITE WORLD.
Washington, Booker T. UP FROM SLAVERY.

6. Some Negro Newspapers.

AFRO-AMERICAN (Baltimore)
AMSTERDAM NEWS (New York)
CAROLINA TIMES (Durham)
CHICAGO DEFENDER
DAILY WORLD (Atlanta)
HOUSTON INFORMER
JOURNAL AND GUIDE (Norfolk)
PITTSBURGH COURIER

7. Important Periodicals.

THE CRISIS. (N.A.A.C.P., 69 Fifth Avenue, New York City.)
OPPORTUNITY. (National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York City.)
JOURNAL OF NEGRO EDUCATION. (Howard University, Washington, D. C.)
JOURNAL OF NEGRO HISTORY. (Association for Study of Negro Life and History, Washington, D. C.)
PHYLON. (Atlanta University Review of Race and Culture, Atlanta, Ga.)

Materials - Bibliography

THIS YEAR...

THIS MONTH...

THIS DAY...

Throughout the land, a complicated system of barriers of discrimination—based upon prejudice—is at work, harming people and institutions, and depriving the nation of its greatest potential for strength in its search for peace. Now, in one volume, the full story of discrimination against Jews in the United States . . .

— How it works
— The extent of the evil
— How it can be fought

BARRIERS

A Human Rights Reader

BARRIERS...

Patterns of Discrimination Against Jews

Edited by N. C. Belth in association with Harold Braverman and Morton Puner.

BARRIERS...

59 per cent of Philadelphia's institutions of higher learning, a recent study showed, asked their applicants questions about race, religion, or national origin.

BARRIERS...

27 per cent of 5,500 Chicago business firms specified restrictions against Jews in such words as "We're desperate—but not desperate enough to hire Jews," or "This is a Gentile firm. A Jewish girl wouldn't be happy here."

BARRIERS...

Two of six residential areas surveyed in Denver were found to restrict against Jews.

"A national institution and an American tragedy." Thus, Henry Edward Schultz, national chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, describes the gravity and scope of discrimination against Jews in the United States.

BARRIERS was prepared by the Anti-Defamation League to show the face and shape of discrimination, and to give precedent and background for fighting it. Fact by fact, giving names, places and statistics, BARRIERS presents a graphic and comprehensive picture of discrimination—"prejudice in action"—as it affects American Jews.

BARRIERS is culled from the publications, files, and daily experiences of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, and from the writings of foremost national specialists.

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION
By Henry Edward Schultz

WHY PEOPLE SCAPEGOAT
By Gordon W. Allport

SOCIAL DISCRIMINATION
- Discrimination and the Power Structure
- The Right of Privacy
- The Merchants Club

RESORT DISCRIMINATION
- Bigotry and Hotels
- Experience with Camelback
- Resorts: A National Survey
- State Laws Against Resort Discrimination

DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT
- "Jews Need Not Apply"
- Insurance, Banking, Public Utilities
- FEPC: How to Answer its Critics
- Fair Employment Practices and the Law

DISCRIMINATION IN EDUCATION
- Barriers in Higher Education
- Medical School Quotas
- The Decline of Fraternity Bias
- State Laws Against Discrimination in Education

DISCRIMINATION IN HOUSING
- The Hidden Barbed Wire in Housing
- How to Keep Exclusive
- Delray Beach—The Realtors' Pride
- State Laws and Discrimination in Housing

THE COMMUNITY
- The Jews of Middletown
- Anti-Semitism Today

BARRIERS — In exposing the face of discrimination, BARRIERS also gives insight into the general status of American Jews in big cities and suburbs, small towns and country. It also gives an idea of the future of Jews in the United States, a great and wonderful one, the authors say, if prejudice and discrimination can be lessened to their irreducible minimum. BARRIERS is devoted to that task.

some advance comments:

"I have read with interest, fascination, and admiration the book 'Barriers.' It should be 'must' reading for all, for the articles in your anthology are so well-conceived and written, so sharp and to the point, that they throw an illuminating light upon all aspects of discrimination."

AVERELL HARRIMAN
Governor, State of New York

"I have read 'Barriers' with a great deal of interest. I believe the greatest contribution that the Anti-Defamation League has made in its fight against prejudice and discrimination of all kinds has come through its ability to bring the subject out into the open and by studying its causes, encouraging debate and making people aware of its implications and evil results. Prejudice and hate, like most other slimy things, cannot bear the light of day."

HERBERT H. LEHMAN
Former United States Senator, State of New York

"This book will be an eye-opener . . . Well worth reading for Gordon Allport's 'Why People Scapegoat' alone."

ELMO ROPER
National Public Opinion Analyst

"A first-rate job. This book presents a picture which all Americans ought to see. It is both factual and interesting. The facts are challenging and they are presented in a way which arrests attention."

SAMUEL McCREA CAVERT
Executive Secretary in the U. S., World Council of Churches

Hard cover edition published by Friendly House . . . $2.95

Soft cover edition published by Anti-Defamation League . . . $1.50

ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE
OF B'NAI B'RITH
515 Madison Avenue
New York 22, N. Y.
or your local regional office

3 - Bibliographies

READING LIST: Improving Human Resources

Compiled by Miss Alma Jamison, Assistant Librarian, Carnegie Library of Atlanta, for the Georgia Citizens Council. The following books and pamphlets are in the Carnegie Library of Atlanta. If these are not available in your own local public library, they may be obtained from the Library Extension Division, Georgia Department of Education, 92 Mitchell Street, Atlanta. In addition, a wealth of material on these subjects may be found in current periodicals.

* * * * * * * * *

FAMILY LIVING - PROBLEMS OF PARENTS AND CHILDREN

176	Bromley:	Youth and Sex: a Study of 1300 Students.	1938
392.3	Burgess:	American Family.	1942
392	Burgess:	The Family.	1945
392.3	Cavan:	The Family.	1942
131	Crow:	Mental Hygiene in Home and School Life.	1942
173	Dennis:	Living Together in the Family.	1934
173.7	Ellenwood:	There's No Place Like Home.	1938
136.7	Garrison:	Psychology of Adolescence.	1946
173.5	Groves:	Parents and Children.	1928
131	Plesants:	If You Ask My Advice.	1946
392.5	Schmiedler:	Marriage and the Family.	1946
170	Stevens:	The Right Thing.	1935
173	Wieman:	Family Lives Its Religion.	1941
808.31	Wunsch:	Thicker than Water.	1939

THE SCHOOLS IN THE COMMUNITY

323.35	Bingham:	Community Life in a Democracy.	1942
374.28	Engelhardt:	Planning the Community.	1940
790	Franklin:	Play Centers for School Children.	1943
R917.58	Georgia Citizens' Fact-Finding Movement Education:	A Proposed Policy for Georgia	1940
R379.758	Lavonia Times -- Georgia Rural Education Edition.
370.1	Livingston:	Some Tasks for Education.	1947
371.3	Olsen:	School and the Community.	1945

CHARACTER-BUILDING ORGANIZATIONS

369.2	Boy Scouts of America -- Handbook for Scoutmasters.		1937
267.3	Davis:	YMCA and the Public Recreation.	1946
267.3	Eddy:	Century With Youth: History of the YMCA, 1844 - 1944.
796	Girl Scouts of America Girl Scout Camps: Administration,	Minimum Standard, Water-front Safety.	1934
630.2	Hinshaw:	4-H: A Story.	1935
369.2	Levy:	Building a Popular Movement-Case Study of Public Relations of the Boy Scouts of America.	1944
267.3	Shreffler:	Boys and Girls Together -- A YMCA-YWCA Manual for Cooperative Planning Among Teen-Age Groups.	1944

THE HANDICAPPED

615.851	Barton:	And Now to Live Again.	1937
362.73	Baylor:	Rehabilitation of Children.	1939
R371.912	Cathy:	History of the Georgia School for the Deaf.	1939
616.8	Davis:	Principles and Practices of Rehabilitation. Revised Edition.	1946
R917.58	Georgia Citizens' Fact-Finding Movement Health -- A Major Factor in the Solution of Georgia's Problems.
R362.2	Georgia. State Hospital Authority -- First Year of the Georgia State Hospital Authority, Feb. 1939-Feb. 1940
R362.4	Georgia. WPA -- Georgia's Blind.		1938
R362.2	Greene:	Conditions in the Milledgeville State Hospital.	1939
371.912	Martin:	Speech Training for the Deaf Child.	1941
362.4	Wilber:	Vocations for the Visually Handicapped.	1937

RELIGIOUS LIFE OF THE COMMUNITY

248	Burkhart:	Understanding Youth.	1936
248	Carrier:	Church Education for Family Life.	1937
268	Fallaw:	Modern Parent and the Teaching Church.	1946
268	Gleason:	Church Group Activities for Young Married People.	1943
261	Groves:	Christianity and the Family.	1942
248	Harner:	Youth Work in the Church.	1942
248	Sherrill:	Family and Church.	1937
248	Sperry:	What You Owe Your Child.	1935
267.6	Stock:	Better Meetings for the Young's People Society.	1933
248	Wieman:	Modern Family and the Church.	1937

COMMUNITY ORGANIZATION

309.1	Association of Junior Leagues of America, Inc. Arts and Our Town: A Plan for a Community Cultural Study.		1944
323.35	Bingham:	Community Life in a Democracy.	1942
309.1	Fincher:	Democracy at Work: Living in American Communities.	1942
301.15	Hanna:	Youth Serves the Community.	1936
323.35	Haynes:	Small Community Looks Ahead.	1947
309.1	Herriott:	A Community Serves its Youth.	1933
917.49	Hudson:	Radburn, A Plan of Living.	1934
323.354	Morgan:	Small Community: Foundation of Democratic Life, What It is and How to Achieve it.	1942
323.35	Ogden:	Small Communities in Action: Stories of Citizen Programs at Work.	1946
360	Pettit:	Case Studies in Community Organization.	1928
	Chambers:	How to Make a Community Youth Survey.	1939

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

364	Johnson:	Character Culture of Youth.	1946
364	Kvaraceous:	Juvenile Delinquency and the Schools.	1945
364	National Probation Association -- Dealing With Delinquency.		1940
369.4	Pendry:	Organization for Youth.	1935
364	Waters:	Youth in Conflict.	1927
309.1	Herriott:	A Community Serves Its Youth.	1933
362.7	Polier:	Everyone's Children, Nobody's Child: A Judge Looks at Underprivileged Children in the U. S.	1941
362.73	Baylor:	Rehabilitation of Children.	1939
364	Carr:	Delinquency Control.	1941
136.7	Garrison:	Psychology of Adolescence.	1946
364	Healy:	New Light on Delinquency and its Treatment: Results of a Research Conducted for Institute of Human Relations, Yale University.	1936
136.73	Crow:	Our Teen-Age Boys and Girls.	1945
940.5316	N. Y. State Board of Public Welfare -- Effects of the War on Children.		1943

RECREATION

371.74	Davis:	Play and Mental Health.	1938
613.74	Elsom:	Community Recreation.	1929
790	Bowers:	Recreation for Girls and Women.	1934
790	Gardner:	Handbook for Recreation Leaders.	1936
793	Geer:	Adventures in Recreation .... for Young People in the Epworth League and Church School.	1934
261	Heaton:	Character Building Through Recreation.	1929
793	National Recreation Association --- Games for Boys and Men.		1938
790	Powell:	Recreation in Church and Community.	1938
790	Chicago. Municipal Reference Library --- Public Opportunities and Facilities for Leisure Time Recreation, Amusement and Instruction in American Cities.		1926
790	Hjelte:	Administration of Public Recreation.	1940
790	National Recreation Association --- Introduction to Community Recreation.		1940
370.1	National Recreation Association -- New Leisure Challenges the Schools.	Shall Recreation Enrich or Impoverish Life?	1933
790	Steiner:	Recreation and Morale: Teaching American Youth How to Plan and Use Leisure Time.	1942
790	Dulles:	America Learns to Play: A History of Popular Recreation, 1607 - 1940.
790	Weaver:	Amusements and Sports in American Life.	1939
790	Wrenn:	Time on Their Hands.	1941

HUMAN RESOURCES IN GEORGIA

R917.58	Georgia Citizens' Fact-Finding Movement --- Penal Systems.	1940
R917.58	Georgia Citizens' Fact-Finding Movement --- Public Welfare.	1940

HUMAN RESOURCES IN GEORGIA (Continued)

R917.58	Georgia Citizens' Fact-Finding Movement --- Religious, Civic and Social Forces in Georgia.		1938
R378.364	Georgia College Placement Office --- History of the Organization, Method of Operation and Results of its Activities in Halting Migration of Georgia College Students.		1940
R326	Georgia N. Y. A. --- Brief Report of the Vocational Guidance Project for Negro Youth.		1937-38
R361.8	Goodwill Industries. n.d.
R362.7	McCord:	A Child Shall Lead Them.	1913
R362.7	Maxwell:	Story of the Methodist Children's Home.	1936
R374.28	Negro Rural Community Center, Hancock County. n.d.
R312.758	Sutker:	Population Trends in Georgia.	1938
352	Raisty:	Financial Statistics of Local Governments in Georgia.	1939
352	Raisty:	Municipal Government and Administration in Georgia.	1941
R630.7	Aderhold:	Need for Vocational Education in Agriculture Georgia.	1939
R304 3	Georgia. University. Institute of Public Affairs and International Relations --- State and Local Problems: Public Health Proceedings, 1935, pt. 2, 1936, pt. 2
309.1	Beers:	Studies in Contemporary Georgia.	1938
975.8	Bryan:	Readings to Accompany a Course on Contemporary Georgia. rev. ed.	1940
975.8	Contemporary Georgia, ed., by J. C. Meadows		1942
975.8	Meadows:	Modern Georgia.	1946

* * * * * * *

Books in Library by Dr. Grace Sloan Overton, who will lecture in Georgia during January and February, under the auspices of the Georgia Citizens Council.

792.07	Overton, Grace Sloan	Drama in Education, Theory and Technique.	1926
173	Overton, Grace Sloan	Love, Marriage and Parenthood.	1939
173.1	Overton, Grace Sloan	Marriage in War and Peace.	1945

The following titles have been ordered and will be added to our collection as soon as possible:

Overton, Grace Sloan	The Home in a Changing Culture	1935
Overton, Grace Sloan	Youth in Quest.	1928

3 - Bibliographies

COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL ISSUES

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. GENERAL

ARTICLES

DOLLARD, JOHN, "HOSTILITY AND FEAR IN SOCIAL LIFE," SOCIAL FORCES, 17:15-26, 1938.

PRESENTS A THEORY OF THE ROLE OF HOSTILITY AND FEAR IN SOCIAL LIFE AND DISCUSSES THE DYNAMICS OF RACE PREJUDICE IN TERMS OF THE AGGRESSION AND HOSTILITY ENGENDERED IN THE INDIVIDUAL TOWARD THE SOCIETY AND ITS MEMBERS BY THE NECESSARY PROCESS OF SOCIALIZATION. RACE PREJUDICE IS A MIXED DESIGNATION AND CAN BE SEEN AS AT LEAST TWO TYPES OF AGGRESSIVE RESPONSES -- DIRECT AND DISPLACED. RACE PREJUDICE, AS DIRECT OR DISPLACED AGRESSION, IS ALWAYS DIRECTED TOWARD IDENTIFIABLE OUT-GROUPS. THIS PROCESS IS ILLUSTRATED BY CASES IN AMERICAN LIFE INVOLVING LABOR CONFLICT, JEWS, NEGROES AND GERMANS. THERE IS A DISCUSSION OF THE ARTICLE BY FRANZ ALEXANDER OF THE CHICAGO INSTITUTE FOR PSYCHOANALYSIS.

*****

MCLEAN, HELEN V., "PSYCHODYNAMIC FACTORS IN RACIAL RELATIONS," ANNALS AM.ACAD. POL. SOC. SC., MARCH, 1946, P. 159.

AN EXPLORATION OF SOME OF THE PROBLEMS INVOLVED IN THE PSYCHODYNAMICS OF NEGRO-WHITE RELATIONS. BOTH THE NEGRO AND THE WHITE MAN FACE A PSYCHOLOGICAL DILEMMA. THE NEGRO CHILD IS AFFECTED BY EXISTING TENSIONS LONG BEFORE HE HAS BECOME FULLY CONSCIOUS OF BEING A NEGRO. THE INSECURITY AND IMPOTENCE OF THE NEGRO PARENT IN THE FACE OF WHITE DOMINATION MAKES IDENTIFICATION WITH THOSE PARENTS ANXIETY LADEN. YET IDENTIFICATION WITH ANY MEMBER OF THE WHITE GROUP IS ALSO ANXIETY PRODUCING SINCE THE NEGRO IS CONSTANTLY REJECTED BY THE WHITE GROUP. OFTEN THE NEGRO TRIES TO ESCAPE INTO MAGIC AND PHANTASY OR INTO REBELLION FROM FRUSTRATION. THE WHITE MAN, ON THE OTHER HAND, LIVES IN AN INDUSTRIAL CIVILIZATION BEYOND HIS PSYCHOLOGICAL CAPACITY. FEELING INSECURE, HE PROPS UP HIS PRESTIGE FEELINGS BY THE MYTH OF WHITE SUPERIORITY. NEITHER THE NEGRO'S NOR THE WHITE MAN'S SOLUTION IS MATURE OR SATISFYING. THE SOLUTION TO SUCH A DILEMMA MUST LIE IN A FURTHER PSYCHOLOGICAL MATURITY -- IN A COMPROMISE; THE WHITE MAN MUST GIVE UP HIS CLAIM TO AN OMNIPOTENCE AND POWER HE DOES NOT POSSESS AND THE NEGRO MUST DISENTANGLE HIMSELF FROM A CYCLE OF PASSIVE SUBMISSION GIVING RISE TO GUILT AND REBELLION THROUGH REJECTION WHICH IN TURN ENGENDERS FURTHER ANXIETY AND PASSIVE LONGING.

*****

MCLEAN, HELEN V., "GROUP TENSION," J.AM.M.WOMEN'S ASSOC., 2:479-484, NOV., 1947.

MAN HAD BEEN PSYCHOLOGICALLY TOO IMMATURE TO HANDLE THE TENSIONS OF AN INDUSTRIAL CIVILIZATION PRIOR TO WORLD WAR II. TODAY, WITH A NEW SOURCE OF POWER, THE ATOM, NEW WAVES OF DESTRUCTIVE ENERGY ARE APT TO BE LOOSED. SOME OF THE TENSION OF GUILT AND FEAR WILL BE RELIEVED INTERNALLY BY INCREASING HOSTILITY TOWARD MINORITIES IN THE U.S. MEN, IN ORDER TO DEFEND THEMSELVES AGAINST THEIR INNER INSECURITIES, TO GIVE THEMSELVES AN OUTLET FOR THEIR OWN FEELINGS OF INADEQUACY, TO PROTECT THEMSELVES AGAINST HUMILIATING INFANTILE OR FRIGHTENING FORBIDDEN HOSTILE AND SEXUAL IMPULSES, PROJECT AND EXPRESS SUCH CONFLICTFUL FEELINGS ON PEOPLE BELONGING TO OTHER RACIAL GROUPS. THE DETERIORATION WHICH MAY RESULT IN THE GROUPS SO TREATED WILL, IN TURN, HAVE A DELETERIOUS REACTIVE EFFECT ON THE GROUP WHICH IS THE ORIGINATOR OF THESE PREJUDICIAL ACTS AND FEELINGS.

MEKEEL, SCUDDER; MCLEAN, HELEN V.; AND LEWIN, KURT, "CONCERNING RACE PREJUDICE," AM. J. ORTHOPSYCHIAT., 14:699-705, 1944.

THIS ARTICLE POINTS OUT THAT PREJUDICE STEMS PARTLY FROM THE VERY NATURE OF SOCIETY ITSELF, BUT THAT WHICH WE COMMONLY CALL RACE PREJUDICE IS, IN PART, A SYMPTOM OF OUR PARTICULAR SOCIETY WHICH IS FULL OF TREMENDOUS PSYCHOLOGICAL STRESS AND STRAIN FOR THE INDIVIDUAL. ALL SOCIETIES HAVE SOCIAL DISCRIMINATION, A KIND OF PREJUDICE, BECAUSE IT IS FUNCTIONALLY NECESSARY FOR ANY SOCIETY TO DISTINGUISH PEOPLE ON THE BASIS OF SUCH FACTORS AS SEX, AGE, ABILITY. ALSO, ALL SOCIETIES IMPOSE SOME RESTRAINTS ON THE BIOLOGICAL ORGANISM. HOWEVER, OUR SOCIETY LAYS SUCH A BURDEN OF STRESS ON THE INDIVIDUAL WITHOUT PROVIDING ADEQUATE ANXIETY REDUCING OUTLETS THAT MANY INDIVIDUALS MUST DISCHARGE THIS ANXIETY BY PROJECTING THEIR HOSTILITY ONTO A SCAPEGOAT -- THE NEGRO, THE JEW, OTHERS.

*****

ROSE, ARNOLD M, "STUDIES IN REDUCTION OF PREJUDICE," AMER. COUNCIL ON RACE RELATIONS, CHICAGO, 1947.

THIS MEMORANDUM SUMMARIZES AND GROUPS A LARGE PART OF THE VAST AMOUNT OF SCATTERED LITERATURE REPORTING THE RESULTS OF INVESTIGATION OF ATTITUDES TOWARD MINORITY GROUPS. NO CLAIM IS MADE THAT THE FIELD HAS BEEN COVERED COMPLETELY. HOWEVER, THIS PUBLICATION MAKES EASILY ACCESSIBLE THE PRESENT STATE OF KNOWLEDGE IN THE FIELD FOR THOSE ENGAGED IN RESEARCH. SOME OF THE AREAS IN WHICH RESEARCH IS REPORTED UPON ARE STUDIES MADE OF (A) THE EFFECTIVENESS OF PROPAGANDA TO REDUCE PREJUDICE, (B) THE DIFFERENTIAL EFFECTIVENESS OF PROPAGANDA TECHNIQUES, (C) ATTITUDE TESTING TECHNIQUES, (D) APPEARANCE OF PREJUDICE AMONG CHILDREN, (E) THE PSYCHOLOGY OF PREJUDICE.

*****

WILLIAMS, ROBIN M., JR., "THE REDUCTION OF INTERGROUP TENSIONS: A SURVEY OF RESEARCH ON PROBLEMS OF ETHNIC, RACIAL AND RELIGIOUS GROUP RELATIONS," SOCIAL SCIENCE RESEARCH COUNCIL, BULL. 57, 1947.

IN THIS REPORT THE AUTHOR EXAMINES THE MORE IMPORTANT TECHNIQUES AND PROCEDURES IN USE BY REPRESENTATIVE ACTION AGENCIES WHICH ARE SEEKING TO REDUCE HOSTILITY AND RESOLVE CONFLICT IN INTERRACIAL AND INTERCULTURAL GROUP RELATIONS. HE THEN ANALYZES THE BASIC ASSUMPTIONS UNDERLYING THE ACTION PROGRAMS AND PROPOSES RESEARCH DESIGNED TO TEST THESE ASSUMPTIONS. IN CONNECTION WITH THESE PROPOSALS, RESEARCH WHICH HAS RELEVANCE FOR THESE PROBLEMS IS DISCUSSED WITH A VIEW TO POINTING OUT IMPORTANT GAPS IN OUR KNOWLEDGE. THE APPENDIX INCLUDES A WELL SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY.

*****

BOOKS

DOLLARD, JOHN, ET AL., FRUSTRATION AND AGGRESSION, YALE UNIVERSITY PRESS, NEW HAVEN, 1939.

THIS BOOK PRESENTS THE RESULTS OF RESEARCH DONE BY THE INSTITUTE OF HUMAN RELATIONS AT YALE UNIVERSITY. IT ATTEMPTS A MORE SYSTEMATIC FORMULATION AND FURTHER ELABORATION OF THE FRUSTRATION-AGGRESSION HYPOTHESIS PREVIOUSLY STATED BY FREUD AND OTHERS AND BRINGS TO BEAR UPON THIS HYPOTHESIS A LARGE BODY OF ILLUSTRATIVE MATERIAL. THE BASIC POSTULATE OF THE STUDY IS THE ASSUMPTION THAT AGGRESSION IS ALWAYS A CONSEQUENCE OF FRUSTRATION. THE FIRST THREE CHAPTERS SET THE FRAME OF REFERENCE BY EXPANDING AND EXPLORING THIS ASSUMPTION. T HE REMAINDER OF THE BOOK DEALS WITH THE APPLICATION OF T HE THEORY TO (1) SOCIALIZATION IN AMERICA, (2) CRIMINALITY, (3) A COMPARISON OF DEMOCRACY, FASCISM AND COMMUNISM AND (4) A PRIMITIVE SOCIETY: THE ASHANTI.

*****

FREUD, SIGMUND, GROUP PSYCHOLOGY AND ANALYSIS OF THE EGO, HOGARTH PRESS, LONDON, 1922.

THIS BOOK PRESENTS A REVIEW OF THEORIES REGARDING THE "GROUP MIND." THE AUTHOR RELATES HIS OBSERVATIONS ON THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE EGO TO THOSE OF THE GROUP. IN A GROUP THE EMOTIONS OF AN INDIVIDUAL ARE INTENSIFIED AND THE INTELLECTUAL FUNCTIONS REDUCED. THE INDIVIDUAL GIVES UP HIS DISTINCTNESS BY SUGGESTION TO FEEL IN HARMONY WITH OTHERS IN THE GROUP. IDENTIFICATION IS THE EARLIEST FORM OF EMOTIONAL TIE, ITS VALUE DEPENDING ON WHETHER THE TIE (TO FATHER) ATTACHES TO THE SUBJECT OR OBJECT OF THE EGO. A PRIMARY GROUP IS A NUMBER OF INDIVIDUALS WHO HAVE SUBSTITUTED ONE AND THE SAME OBJECT FOR THEIR EGO-IDEAL AND HAVE CONSEQUENTLY IDENTIFIED THEMSELVES WITH ONE ANOTHER IN THEIR EGO. THE DEMAND FOR EQUALIZATION (ONE PART OF IDENTIFICATION) IS THE ROOT OF SOCIAL CONSCIENCE AND SENSE OF DUTY. MAN IS NOT A HERD BUT A HORDE ANIMAL.

*****

WATSON, GOODWIN, ACTION FOR UNITY, HARPER & BROS., 1947.

THIS STUDY EMBODIES THE REPORT OF THE PLANNING SURVEY SPONSORED BY THE COMMISSION ON COMMUNITY INTERRELATIONS OF THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS. IT DESCRIBES "THE SOCIAL TOPOGRAPHY.... IN THE BATTLE AGAINST BIGOTRY AND HATE." THE BOOK IS DIVIDED INTO TWO MAIN SECTIONS, THE FIRST OF WHICH IS CONCERNED WITH THE TYPES OF ORGANIZATION IN THE FIELD AND THE SECOND WITH THE PATTERNS OF ACTION. HERE THE AUTHOR DISCUSSES IN DETAIL THE METHODS OF EXHORTATION, EDUCATION AND PARTICIPATION, REVELATION, NEGOTIATION, CONTENTION AND PREVENTION IN AN ENDEAVOR TO EVALUATE CRITICALLY WHAT IS PSYCHOLOGICALLY EFFECTIVE AND WHAT IS INEFFECTIVE IN CURRENT EFFORTS TO COMBAT THE PATTERNS OF INTOLERANCE AND DISCRIMINATION. THE AUTHOR CONCLUDES WITH A CHAPTER ON ACTION RESEARCH. GOOD RESOURCE BOOK.

II. NEGRO

ARTICLES

BRENMAN, MARGARET, "URBAN LOWER-CLASS NEGRO GIRLS," PSYCHIATRY, 6:307-324, 1943.

REPORTS THE RESULTS OF A FIELD STUDY OF LOWER CLASS NEGRO GIRLS AND COMPARES THESE OBSERVATIONS WITH A PREVIOUSLY STUDIED GROUP OF MIDDLE-CLASS NEGRO GIRLS. DATA IS PRESENTED ON THE REACTIONS OF THESE GIRLS TO THEIR MINORITY GROUP MEMBERSHIP AND ON THE SEXUAL BEHAVIOR AND STANDARDS OF MORALITY IN THE GROUP. PROCEDURES INCLUDED "PARTICIPANT OBSERVER" AND "INTERVIEWING" TECHNIQUES. THE MIDDLE CLASS NEGRO GIRLS STUDIED SEEMED TO SHOW MUCH INSECURITY RELEVANT TO THEIR MINORITY GROUP MEMBERSHIP; THE LOWER GLASS GIRLS SHOWED LITTLE. THE DIFFERENCE IN SEXUAL STANDARDS AND BEHAVIOR BETWEEN THE MIDDLE AND LOWER CLASS GIRLS WAS ONE OF THE CLEAREST CUT OBSERVATIONS AND WAS THE AUTHOR'S MOST RELIABLE SINGLE CRITERION IN ESTABLISHING CLASS MEMBERSHIP.

CAYTON, HORACE R., "THE PSYCHOLOGICAL APPROACH TO RACE RELATIONS," REED COLLEGE BULL., 25:#1, NOV., 1946.

AN ANALYSIS OF THE INJUSTICES IN AMERICAN CULTURE GIVING RISE TO INTERNAL CONFLICTS WHICH CONFUSE AND PARALYZE THE ACTION OF INDIVIDUALS. CONSIDERS THE RESULT OF THIS CONFUSION ON INDIVIDUAL PERSONALITIES -- WHITE AND NEGRO -- WHO LIVE UNDER A SYSTEM OF RACIAL SUPER- AND SUB-ORDINATION, AND THE DEVASTATING EFFECT THIS HAS ON ATTEMPTS TO ARRIVE AT A MORE MATURE CULTURE. THE AUTHOR TRACES THE DYNAMICS OF AN OPPRESSION PSYCHOSIS WITH A FEAR-HATE-FEAR COMPLEX IN THE NEGRO AND ITS COUNTERPART IN THE WHITE MAN, AN OPPRESSOR'S PSYCHOSIS WITH AN ATTENDANT GUILT-HATE-FEAR COMPLEX.

*****

GREENACRE, PHYLLIS, "CHILD WIFE AS IDEAL: SOCIOLOGICAL CONSIDERATION," AM.J. ORTHOPSYCHIAT., 17:167-71, 1947.

THE AUTHOR DEALS WITH ONE SPECIAL FORM OF EMOTIONAL DEVELOPMENT -- THE CHILD-WOMAN OR ESPECIALLY THE CHILD-WIFE -- AND COMPARES INDIVIDUAL CASES WITH ONE SITUATION IN THIS COUNTRY, LIFE IN WEALTHY SOUTHERN HOMES BEFORE THE CIVIL WAR IN WHICH THE TYPE SEEMED FOR A PERIOD TO BE AN ACCEPTED IDEAL. THE PSYCHOLOGICAL DYNAMICS EXISTING BETWEEN WEALTHY WHITE CHILDREN, THEIR PARENTS AND THEIR NEGRO MAMMYS WERE SUCH AS TO BE PARTICULARLY FAVORABLE FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF A CHILD-WOMAN TYPE OF PERSONALITY.

*****

MERTON, ROBT. K., "INTERMARRIAGE AND THE SOCIAL STRUCTURE: FACT AND THEORY," PSYCHIATRY, 4:361-374, 1941.

PRESENTS A THEORETICALLY ORIENTED TAXONOMY COMB INING CASTE, CLASS AND SEX PROVIDING A FRAME OF REFERENCE FOR ANALYZING INTERMARRIAGE STATISTICS. PREVIOUS WORK ALONG THESE LINES HAS ESTABLISHED CONCEPTS SUCH AS ENDOGAMY, EXOGAMY, CASTE, CLASS, ETC. THE AUTHOR FURTHER REFINES AND SYSTEMATIZES THESE, BELIEVING IT NECESSARY TO WORK WITHIN A THEORY WHILE COLLECTING FACTS. HIS THEORETICAL BREAKDOWN IS LOGICALLY CONSISTENT AND WHEN APPLIED TO FACTUAL DATA COLLECTED BY OTHERS SHOWS THE VITAL GAPS IN SUCH DATA. REFERENCE TO NEGRO-WHITE INTERMARRIAGE SHOWS THAT THE LARGEST PROPORTION OF SUCH CASES ARE BETWEEN WHITE WOMEN AND NEGRO MEN: TECHNICALLY TERMED HYPOGAMY, OR MARRYING DOWN IN CASTE. PROBABLY MORE ILLICIT SEX RELATIONS OCCUR BETWEEN WHITE MEN AND NEGRO WOMEN BUT THESE NEVER REACH THE PROPORTION OF ACTUAL MARRIAGES THAT OCCURS BETWEEN WHITE WOMEN AND NEGRO MEN. THE THEORETICAL TAXONOMY PRESENTED OFFERS A LOGICAL EXPLANATION OF THIS PHENOMENA.

*****

STEVENS, RUTHERFORD B., "RACIAL ASPECTS OF EMOTIONAL PROBLEMS OF NEGRO SOLDIERS," AM. J. PSYCHIAT., 103:493-498, 1947.

THE PURPOSE OF THIS PAPER IS TO AID THE PSYCHIATRIST AND OTHERS DEALING WITH THE EMOTIONAL AND HEALTH PROBLEMS OF NEGROES. IN POSTWAR AMERICA LARGE NUMBERS OF NEGROES NEED PSYCHIATRIC CARE AND WILL GO IN SEARCH OF IT TO CIVIL AND INDUSTRIAL HOSPITALS AND CLINICS AS WELL AS TO THE HOSPITALS OF THE VETERANS ADMINISTRATION. THE OBSERVATIONS ON WHICH THIS PAPER IS BASED REPRESENT FIVE YEARS OF MILITARY SERVICE IN VARIED CAPACITIES WITH NEGRO TROOPS, INCLUDING CONSULTATION SERVICE PSYCHIATRIST. AN ADVANTAGE POSSESSED BY THE AUTHOR WAS THE ABSENCE OF THE BARRIER OF RACIAL DIFFERENCE. THE TEXT DISCUSSES THE EMOTIONAL ASPECTS OF PARTICULAR PROBLEMS FACING NEGRO SOLDIERS IN ADDITION TO THOSE PROBELEMS FACED BY ANY SOLDIER REGARDLESS OF SKIN COLOR.

*****

BOOKS

DAVIS, ALLISON; AND DOLLARD, JOHN, CHILDREN OF BONDAGE; THE PERSONALITY DEVELOPMENT OF NEGRO YOUTH IN THE URBAN SOUTH, AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION, WASHINGTON, D.C., 1940.

THIS BOOK IS AN ATTEMPT, THROUGH INTIMATE LIFE HISTORIES, TO RECREATE THE PERSONALITIES AND TO DESCRIBE THE SOCIALIZATION OF EIGHT NEGRO ADOLESCENTS IN THE DEEP SOUTH. THE CHILDREN PRESENTED IN THESE STUDIES WERE SELECTED UPON THE BASIS OF THEIR CLASS POSITION AND REPRESENT ALL OF THE CLASS POSITIONS IN NEGRO SOCIETY. THEIR EXPERIENCES ILLUSTRATE THE FUNDAMENTAL CONTROLS WHICH EACH CLASS EXERCISES OVER THE SOCIALIZATION OF ITS MEMBERS. THE BEGINNING AND CLOSING SECTIONS OF THE BOOK CONTAIN A THEORETICAL SETTING FOR, AND ANALYSIS OF, THE LIFE HISTORIES. BOTH SOCIAL ANTHROPOLOGICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL TECHNIQUES AND THEORIES ARE EMPLOYED TO ANALYZE THE DEVELOPMENT OF PERSONALITY WITHIN A CASTE AND CLASS SYSTEM .

*****

DOLLARD, JOHN, CASTE AND CLASS IN A SOUTHERN TOWN, YALE UNIVERSITY PRESS, NEW HAVEN, 1937.

THIS BOOK IS AN ATTEMPT TO GIVE A DYNAMIC VIEW OF SOCIAL LIFE IN A SMALL SOUTHERN TOWN. THE AUTHOR IS TRAINED IN BOTH SOCIOLOGICAL AND PSYCHOANALYTIC THEORY AND UTILIZES IN HIS FIELD METHODS -- T HE LIFE-HISTORY AND PARTICIPANT-OBSERVATION -- THE INSIGHTS OF THESE TWO DISCIPLINES.
THE INTERACTION OF NEGROES AND WHITES UNDER A CASTE-CLASS SYSTEM IS DESCRIBED AND ANALYZED IN MANY AREAS OF EVERYDAY LIFE -- SEX, EDUCATION, POLITICS, RELIGION, ETC.

*****

DAVIS, ALLISON; GARDNER, BURLEIGH B.; AND GARDNER, MARY R., DEEP SOUTH: A SOCIAL ANTHROPOLOGICAL STUDY OF CASTE AND CLASS, UNIV. OF CHICAGO PRESS, CHICAGO, 1941.

FOUR SOCIAL ANTHROPOLOGISTS, A NEGRO MAN AND A NEGRO WOMAN AND A WHITE MAN AND A WHITE WOMAN LIVED IN A SMALL CITY IN THE DEEP SOUTH FOR TWO YEARS. THIS VOLUME IS THE REPORT OF THEIR RESEARCH WHICH CONCEPTUALIZES THE SOCIAL ORGANIZATION OF A SOCIETY COMPOSED OF WHITES AND NEGROES IN AMERICA AS A CASTE-CLASS STRUCTURE. THE FIRST SECTION OF THE BOOK IS A DETAILED DESCRIPTION OF THIS CASTE-CLASS SYSTEM AS IT EXISTS IN THE DEEP SOUTH. THE SECOND SECTION IS DEVOTED TO (1) A SOCIOLOGICAL ANALYSIS OF THE ECONOMIC SYSTEM WITH WHICH THE SYSTEMS OF CASTE AND CLASS ARE INTEGRATED AND (2) THE OPERATION OF THE POLITICAL SYSTEM, THE LAW, AND THE COURTS IN MAINTAINING THE CASTE LINES.

******

DRAKE, ST. CLAIR AND CAYTON, HORACE R, BLACK METROPLIS: A STUDY OF NEGRO LIFE IN A NORTHERN CITY, HARCOURT BRACE & CO., N.Y., 1945.

A DESCRIPTION AND ANALYSIS OF THE STRUCTURE AND ORGANIZATION OF THE NEGRO COMMUNITY IN CHICAGO, BOTH INTERNALLY AND IN RELATION TO THE METROPOLIS OF WHICH IT IS A PART. EMPLOYING THE METHODS OF BOT H SOCIOLOGISTS AND SOCIAL ANTHROPOLOGISTS, THE AUTHORS' RESEARCH REVEALS (1) THE RELATIONSHIP OF NEGROES TO WHITES IN CHICAGO, (2) THE KIND OF WORLD NEGROES HAVE BUILT UP UNDER THEIR SEPARATE SUBORDINATE STATUS AND (3) THE IMPACT OF THESE TWIN CONFIGURATIONS UPON THE PERSONALITIES AND INSTITUTIONS OF CHICAGO NEGROES. AN INTRODUCTORY ESSAY BY RICHARD WRIGHT AND A METHODOLOGICAL NOTE BY W. LLOYD WARNER.

*****

FRAZIER, E. FRANKLIN: THE NEGRO FAMILY IN THE U.S. , UNIV. OF CHICAGO PRESS, CHICAGO, 1939.

THE HISTORY OF THE NEGRO FAMILY IN THE U.S. FROM T HE ARRIVAL OF NEGROES FROM AFRICA DOWN TO THE PRESENT. THE FAMILY IS SEEN AS A NATURAL HUMAN ASSOCIATION AND AS A SOCIAL INSTITUTION SUBJECTED TO THE SEVEREST STRAINS OF SOCIAL CHANGE. THE AUTHOR TRACES THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE NEGRO FAMILY BY A SERIES OF IDEAL CONSTRUCTS; AFTER THE ABOLITION OF SLAVERY HE SEES A MATRIARCHAL FAMILY, SUPPLANTED BY A PATRIARCHAL FORM AS THE FREE NEGRO MEN ACQUIRED PROPERTY. THE PATRIARCHAL ORGANIZATION BECOMES UNSTABLE AS LARGE NUMBERS OF NEGROES MIGRATE TO URBAN AREAS. ONCE THE PATTERN OF LIFE IN THE CITIES HAS BEEN FORMED, THE FAMILY TAKES ON ITS MODERN EQUALITARIAN FORM AND THE NEGRO COMMUNITY BECOMESSPLIT INTO MIDDLE AND LOWER CLASSES.

*****

JOH NSON, CHAS. S., GROWING UP IN THE BLACK BELT, AMER. COUNCIL ON EDUCATION, WASHINGTON, D.C., 1941.

A STUDY OF THE PROBLEMS OF PERSONALITY DEVELOPMENT OF RURAL NEGRO YOUTH. EIGHT SOUTHERN COUNTIES WERE SO SELECTED FOR INTENSIVE STUDY AS TO INCLUDE THE MAJOR TYPES OF SOUTHERN AGRICULTURAL LIFE. THE STUDY IS BASED UPON THE EXPERIENCES OF OVER 2,000 NEGRO YOUTH WHO WERE GIVEN SIX TESTS, FIVE OF WHICH WERE SPECIALLY DEVISED FOR THE STUDY. THE TESTS WERE FOLLOWED UP WITH INTENSIVE INTERVIEWS OF ABOUT TWENTY PER CENT OF THE YOUTH AND, IN ADDITION, 916 OF THE FAMILIES WERE INTERVIEWED THE VOLUME BEGINS WITH BRIEF PERSONAL SKETCHES OF TEN YOUTH, FOLLOWED BY A DESCRIPTION OF THE RURAL SOUTH IN WHICH THEY LIVE. THE REMAINDER OF THE VOLUME IS CONCERNED WITH THE DETAILED PRESENTATION OF DATA ON THE EXPERIENCES OF THESE YOUTH IN THE FAMILIAR INSTITUTIONS -- SCHOOL, CHURCH, MARRIAGE -- OF COMMUNITY LIFE.

*****

MYRDAL, GUNNAR, AN AMERICAN DILEMMA, HARPER & BROS, N.Y., 1944.

THIS IS A DEFINITIVE ANALYSIS OF THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN LIFE MADE BY A SWEDISH SOCIAL ECONOMIST AT THE REQUEST OF THE CARNEGIE CORP. AS SUCH, IT WAS DESIGNED TO PRESENT A FRESH, UNBIASED VIEWPOINT. COOPERATING IN THE RESEARCH WITH DR. MYRDAL WERE MOST OF THE AUTHORITIES IN THE FIELD IN THE U.S. THE VAST FACTUAL MATERIAL, CONTAINING INFORMATION AND REFERENCES ON EVERY ASPECT OF NEGRO LIFE,

IS ALL WOVEN AROUND ONE THEME -- THE MORAL DILEMMA OF THE AMERICAN: ".... THE EVER-RAGING CONFLICT BETWEEN, ON THE ONE HAND, THE VALUATIONS PRESERVED ON THE GENERAL PLANE WHICH WE SHALL CALL THE 'AMERICAN CREED,' WHERE THE AMERICAN THINKS, TALKS AND ACTS UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF HIGH NATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN PRECEPTS AND, ON T HE OTHER HAND, THE VALUATIONS ON SPECIFIC PLANES OF INDIVIDUAL AND GROUP LIVING, WHERE PERSONAL AND LOCAL INTERESTS; ECONOMIC, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL JEALOUSIES; CONSIDERATIONS OF COMMUNITY PRESTIGE AND CONFORMITY; GROUP PREJUDICE AGAINST PARTICULAR PERSONS OR TYPES OF PEOPLE AND ALL SORTS OF MISCELLANEOUS WANTS, IMPULSES, AND HABITS DOMINATE HIS OUTLOOK."

*****

WARNER, W. LLOYD; JUNKER, BUFORD H. AND ADAMS, WALTER A., COLOR AND HUMAN NATURE, AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION, WASHINGTON, D.C., 1941.

A STUDY MADE BY ANTHROPOLOGISTS AND A PSYCHIATRIST OF NEGROES IN CHICAGO. THE MAJOR HYPOTHESIS IS THAT WITHIN THE NEGRO COMMUNITY AN INDIVIDUAL'S SOCIAL-CLASS POSITION AND SHADE OF SKIN COLOR ARE FACTORS INFLUENCING THE DEVELOPMENT OF PERSONALITY. IF THE CRITERIA OF SEX, SHADE OF COLOR AND SOCIAL STATUS ARE USED, THEN 32 MAJOR TYPES OF SOCIAL PERSONALITY ARE POSSIBLE. THE TYPES ARE DISCUSSED AND ANALYZED IN DETAIL CONCERNING THE SOCIAL PERSONALITY OF EACH TYPE WITHIN THE NEGRO COMMUNITY AND IN RELATION TO WHITE SOCIETY. ILLUSTRATIVE CASE HISTORIES ARE PRESENTED ON DARK SKIN AND LIGHT SKIN MEN AND WOMEN.

III. ANTI-SEMITISM

ARTICLES

ACKERMAN, NATHAN W., "ANTISEMITIC MOTIVATION IN A PSYCHOPATHIC PERSONALITY," PSYCHOANALYT. REV., 34:76-101, 1947.

THIS REPORT PRESENTS IN GREAT DETAIL THE LIFE HISTORY AND PSYCHOANALYTIC REACTIONS OF A MALE PSYCHOPATHIC PERSONALITY AND SHOWS THE DYNAMIC CONNECTIONS OF A PARTICULAR HOSTILITY PATTERN, ANTISEMITISM, WITH THE DEEPER ELEMENTS OF THE PATIEN'TS PATHOLOGY AND WITH HIS BASIC CHARACTER STRUCTURE.

*****

ACKERMAN, NATHAN W.; AND JAHODA, MARIE, "TOWARD A DYNAMIC INTERPRETATION OF ANTI-SEMITIC ATTITUDES," AMER. JEWISH COMM, NEW YORK, 1947.

THIS STUDY IS CONCERNED WITH THE EXPLORATION OF THE DYNAMIC BASIS OF ANTI-SEMITIC ATTITUDES IN A NUMBER OF PERSONS WHO ARE UNDERGOING OR HAVE ALREADY EXPERIENCE PSYCHOANALYTIC THERAPY. THE MATERIAL WAS COLLECTED FROM ABOUT 30 ACCREDITED PSYCHOANALYSTS. MOST OF THE CASES CONCERNED ANTI-SEMITISM IN NON-JEWS BUT SOME WERE INCLUDED ILLUSTRATING ANTI-SEMITISM IN JEWS AND HALF-JEWS. THE PATIENTS WERE NOT AWARE THAT THEIR ANTI-SEMITIC FEELINGS WERE BEING SPECIALLY INVESTIGATED. THE AREAS OF THE TOTAL RESEARCH DEALT WITH IN THIS ARTICLE ARE (A) THE DYNAMIC SIGNIFICANCE OF ANTI-SEMITISM IN THE CURRENT PERSONALITY STRUCTURE OF THE PATIENT AND (B) THE PATTERN OF INTERACTION BETWEEN INTRAPSYCHIC DETERMINANTS AND GROUP DETERMINANTS RESULTING IN ANTI-SEMITISM. CLINICAL ANALYSIS OF THE CASES REVEALED THAT ANTI-SEMITISM IS NOT THE CONCOMMITANT OF ONE OR ANOTHER CLINICAL CATEGORY OF PERSONALITY.

BETTELHEIM, BRUNO, "THE DYNAMISM OF ANTI-SEMITISM IN GENTILE AND JEW," J.ABNORM. SOC. PSYCHOLOGY, 42:153-168, 1947.

THE AUTHOR WAS A PRISONER FOR A YEAR IN THE GERMAN CONCENTRATION CAMPS AT DACHAU AND BUCHENWALD. IN THIS ARTICLE HE COMBINES HIS THEORETICAL PSYCHIATRIC KNOWLEDGE WITH HIS PERSONAL EXPERIENCES AND HIS OBVSERVATION OF THE ACTIONS OF OTHER JEWISH PRISONERS IN THEIR DEALINGS WITH GESTAPO GUARDS. THE THEORETICAL CORE OF THE ARTICLE IS THAT INSUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION HAS BEEN GIVEN TO THE FACT THAT THE JEWS REACT TO THE ANTI-SEMITIC THREAT WITH PSYCHOLOGICAL MECHANISMS FULLY AS QUESTIONABLE IN REGARD TO THEIR EFFICACY AND ADEQUACY ON A REALITY BASIS, AS THOSE USED BY THE ANTI-SEMITE. IF ANTI-SEMITISM IS TO BE RESOLVED EFFECTIVELY, THERE MUST BE NO CLASH OF STEREOTYPES. PITTING ONE DELUSIONAL SYSTEM, THAT OF THE ANTI-SEMITE'S, AGAINST ITS DELUSIONAL COUNTER-REACTION, THAT OF THE JEW'S, PRECLUDES REAL ACTION AND REAL CHANGE. IT ONLY CREATES A VICIOUS CIRCLE. IN ITS STEAD TRUE AND SPONTANEOUS INTERPERSONAL RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN INDIVIDUALS MUST BE ESTABLISHED.

*****

BOOKS

SIMMEL, ERNST, ANTISEMITISM, INTERN'L. UNIVERSITIES PRESS, N.Y., 1946.

FOLLOWING AN INTRODUCTION BY ALLPORT, THIS BOOK PRESENTS 6 ESSAYS ON ANTI-SEMITISM. MAX HORKHEIMER DISCUSSES SIGNIFICANT CHANGES IN THE SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC STRUCTURE OF MODERN SOCIETY THAT EFFECT ANTI-SEMITISM. OTTO FENICHEL DESCRIBES ELEMENTS OF A PSYCHOANALYTIC FORMULATION -- THAT JEWS ARE HATED AS FOREIGNERS BECAUSE THEY IMPERSONATE THE REPRESSED UNCONSCIOUS OF THE INDIVIDUAL ANTI-SEMITE. THE EDITOR OF THE SYMPOSIUM, ERNST SIMMEL, VIEWS ANTI-SEMITISM AS A BY-PRODUCT OF CIVILIZATION, A MASS PHENOMENA FOR RESTORING A PATHOLOGICALLY DISTURBED MENTAL EQUILIBRIUM. BERNARD BERLINER COMMENTS ON THE RELIGIOUS ASPECT, PARTICULARLY THE PATERNALISTIC CHARACTER OF JEWISH RELIGION. DOUGLAS ORR RELATES "SOCIAL" ANTI-SEMITISM TO THE PSYCHOPATHOLOGY OF EVERYDAY LIFE, PARTICULARLY TO ERROR IN COMPREHENSION AND JUDMENT AND TO THE MECHANISMS OF DISPLACEMENT AND PROJECTION. A RESEARCH STUDY ON THE ANTI-SEMITIC PERSONALITY BY ELSE FRENKEL-BRUNSWIK AND R. NEVITT SANFORD IS REPORTED. T.W. ADORNO IS CONCERNED WITH THE PSYCHOLOGY OF PROPAGANDA.

*****

WIRTH, LOUIS, THE GHETTO, UNIV. OF CHICAGO PRESS, CHICAGO, 1928.

MANY DIVERGENT GROUPS OF PEOPLE LIVE TODAY, AND HAVE LIVED IN THE PAST, IN A GHETTO. IT IS AROUND THE CONCEPT GHETTO AND THE LONG HISTORY OF ONE GROUP, THE JEWS, WHO HAVE LIVED A GHETTO LIFE THAT THIS BOOK IS BUILT. THE GHETTO MAY BE REGARDED AS A FORM OF ACCOMMODATION BETWEEN DIVERGENT POPULATION GROUPS THROUGH WHICH ONE GROUP HAS BEEN SUBORDINATED TO ANOTHER. AS WELL AS BEING A PHYSICAL AREA, THE GHETTO IS ALSO A STATE OF MIND. THIS BOOK TRACES THE HISTORY OF THE JEWISH GHETTO FROM ITS EARLIEST BEGINNINGS TO THE PRESENT DAY IN THE VARIOUS LOCALITIES WHERE JEWS HAVE GAINED A SUFFICIENT FOOTHOLD TO FORM TYPICAL COMMUNITIES. THE AUTHOR, IN TRACING THE EFFECTS OF THE GHETTO UPON THE CHARACTER OF THE JEW, THROWS LIGHT UPON THE EFFECT OF A GHETTO WHEREVER IT EXISTS TO HEM IN ANY RACIAL, RELIGIOUS OR NATIONAL GROUP.

IV. JAPANESE

BOOKS

BENEDICT, RUTH, THE CHRYSANTHEMUM AND THE SWORD, HOUGHTON MIFFLIN CO., BOSTON, 1946.

HERE AN ANTHROPOLOGIST PRESENTS THE PATTERNS OF JAPANESE CULTURE AND THE BASIC CHARACTER STRUCTURE OF JAPANESE PERSONALITY. AMERICANS CAN WORK, PLAY AND COMMUNICATE WITH OTHER AMERICANS BECAUSE OF A PRIOR STEP THAT IS SELDOM MENTIONED: THEY KNOW AND TAKE FOR GRANTED THE CONDUCT OF LIFE AND THE VALUE SYSTEM IN THE U.S. HOWEVER, BEFORE ONE CAN UNDERSTAND INDIVIDUALS COMING FROM A CULTURE OTHER THAN THEIR OWN, THEY MUST BE ABLE TO SEE, AT LEAST APPROXIMATELY, THINGS AS THE OTHER CULTURE'S MEMBERS SEE THEM. THIS BOOK PROVIDES, IN PART, SUCH A FOCUS, MAKING INTELLIGIBLE MANY SEEMING PARADOXES OF JAPANESE LIFE AND PSYCHOLOGY.

*****

LEIGHTON, ALEXANDER H., THE GOVERNING OF MEN, PRINCETON UNIV. PRESS, PRINCETON, N.J., 1945.

JOINING PSYCHIATRIC, SOCIOLOGICAL AND ANTHROPOLOGICAL POINTS OF VIEW FOR THE STUDY OF A SOCIAL PROBLEM -- THE RELOCATION AND ADMINISTRATION OF JAPANESE EVACUEES -- THIS BOOK REPORTS AN EXPERIMENT IN APPLIED SOCIAL SCIENCE. THIS STUDY OF A COMMUNITY UNDER STRESS WAS MADE AT THE JAPANESE RELOCATION CENTER AT POSTON, ARIZONA. WHILE THE IMMEDIATE AIM OF THE RESEARCH WAS TO ADVISE THE ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICERS OF THE CAMP CONCERNING CURRENT SITUATIONS, THE SECOND PURPOSE WAS TO MAKE OBSERVATIONS AND ANALYSES THAT WOULD HAVE BEARING ON GENERAL PROBLEMS OF ADMINISTRATION AND GOVERNMENT, PARTICULARLY IN OCCUPIED AREAS. THIS BOOK IS THE RESULT OF THE SECOND PURPOSE. THE TEXT MAY BE CONSIDERED IN THREE PARTS: (1) THE STORY OF THE EVACUATION OF JAPANESE AMERICAN CITIZENS AND ALIENS FROM THE WEST COAST AND THE SUBSEQUENT PROBLEMS FACED JOINTLY BY THEM AND THE ADMINISTRATORS IN MEETING LIFE IN THE DESERT; (2) THE PRINCIPLES AND RECOMMENDATIONS DERIVED BY THE AUTHOR JOINTLY FROM HIS SOCIAL PSYCHIATRIC BACKGROUND AND HIS EXPERIENCES AT POSTON AND (3) IN AN APPENDIX, AN ADMIRABLE STATEMENT OF THE CONCEPTUAL THEORY AND METHODOLOGY USED TO STUDY THE RELOCATED COMMUNITY.

V. SOCIOLOGICAL AND ANTHROPOLOGICAL

BOOKS

BENEDICT, RUTH, PATTERNS OF CULTURE, PELICAN BOOKS, INC., N.Y., 1946 (1934).

CULTURES ARE INTEGRATED WHOLES AND THE MAJORITY OF INDIVIDUALS IN ONE CULTURE MAY NORMALLY EXHIBIT PERSONALITY CHARACTERISTICS FOUND INFREQUENTLY, AND THOUGHT ABNORMAL, IN ANOTHER CULTURE. HERE DR. BENEDICT COMPARES THREE CULTURES, EACH DOMINATED BY ONE RULING MOTIVATION. THE ZUNI INDIANS ARE APOLLONIAN IN THEIR SOBRIETY AND MODERATION; THE KWAKIUTLS OF VANCOUVER ISLAND ARE THE ANTITHESIS OF THE ZUNI, WITH THEIR DIONYSIAN PREFERENCE FOR INDIVIDUAL RIVALRY AND ECSTASIES; THEY HAVE PARANOID DELUSIONS OF GRANDEUR; THE DOBUS OF MELANESIA ARE SECRETIVE, DOUR AND PRUDISH, ALMOST SCHIZOPHRENIC. DR. BENEDICT POINTS OUT THAT ALTHOUGH THESE CULTURES EVINCE CLINICAL DEVIATIONS FROM OUR NORM, ABNORMALITY IN ANY CULTURE IS SIMPLY THE FAILURE OF THE INDIVIDUAL TO ADOPT SOCIALLY VALUED DRIVES.

KARDINER, ABRAM, THE PSYCHOLOGICAL FRONTIERS OF SOCIETY, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRESS, N.Y., 1945.

THIS BOOK IS AN ATTEMPT TO FURTHER WORK OUT AND CLARIFY THE TECHNICAL PROBLEMS OUTLINED IN THE INDIVIDUAL AND HIS SOCIETY. IT FURTHER REFINES THE TECHNIQUE PRESENTED PREVIOUSLY FOR STUDYING THE RECIPROCAL RELATIONS BETWEEN CULTURE AND PERSONALITY. THE TECHNIQUE CONSISTS ESSENTIALLY OF DETERMINING THE BASIC PERSONALITY TYPE OF A SOCIETY, SHOWING HOW THE TYPE IS DERIVED FROM THE CULTURALLY PATTERNED EARLY EXPERIENCES OF CHILDREN, THEN DEMONSTRATING HOW THIS PERSONALITY STRUCTURE IS REFLECTED IN THE PATTERNED B EHAVIOR OF AS MANY INSTITUTIONS AS POSSIBLE AND IS EXPRESSED IN THE PROJECTIVE SYSTEMS OF FOLKLORE AND RELIGION. THIS TYPE OF ANALYSIS IS PRESENTED FOR THREE SOCIETIES: COMANCHE, ALOR AND A MIDWESTERN AMERICAN COMMUNITY. THE FINAL CHAPTER ATTEMPTS TO OUTLINE THE USE OF THE TECHNIQUE IN ANALYZING THE MAIN CURRENTS OF WESTERN CIVILIZATION.

*****

LINTON, RALPH, THE CULTURAL BACKGROUND OF PERSONALITY, D. APPLETON-CENTURY CO., N.Y., 1945.

ONE OF THE MOST DIFFICULT PROBLEMS IN RESEARCH WHICH OVERLAPS THE FIELDS OF SEVERAL DISCIPLINES IS THE CORRELATING OF THE THEORETICAL SYSTEMS BASIC TO EACH DISCIPLINE. THIS BOOK OUTLINES A THEORETICAL SCHEME FOR VIEWING THE ROLE OF CULTURE IN PERSONALITY FORMATION AND THE INTERRELATIONSHIP OF THE INDIVIDUAL, CULTURE AND SOCIETY.

VI. SUGGESTED READING FOR LAITY

GENERAL

BARUCH, DOROTHY, THE GLASS HOUSE OF PREJUDICE, WM. MORROW & CO, 1946
BENEDICT, RUTH, RACE AND RACISM, ROUTLEDGE & SON, LONDON, 1942; IMPORTED BY ROBERT BRUNNER, 1212 AENUE OF THE AMERICAS, NEW YORK
BENEDICT, RUTH AND WELTFISH, GENE: THE RACES OF MANKIND (PAMPHLET NO. 85, PUBLIC AFFAIRS COMM., 22 E. 38 ST., NEW YORK, 10¢
HARING, DOUGLAS G, RACIAL DIFFERENCES AND HUMAN RESEMBLANCES, SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY BOOKSTORE, 303 UNIVERSITY PLACE, SYRACUSE 10, N.Y., 50¢
WATSON, GOODWIN, ACTION FOR UNITY, HARPERS, 1947

NEGRO

CAYTON, HORACE R., THE PSYCHOLOGICAL APPROACH TO RACE RELATIONS, REED COLLEGE BULL., VOL. 25, NO. 1, NOV. 1946.
DRAKE, ST.CLAIR AND CAYTON, HORACE R., BLACK METROPOLIS, HARCOURT BRACE & CO., 1945.
DAVIS, ALLISON AND DOLLARD, JOHN, CHILDREN OF BONDAGE, AMER. COUNCIL ON EDUCATION, 1940
DAVIS, ALLISON AND GARDNER, BURLEIGH, DEEP SOUTH, UNIV. OF CHICAGO PRESS, 1941
HALSEY, MARGARET, COLOR BLIND, SIMON & SCHUSTER, 1946
HIMES, CHESTER B., IF HE HOLLERS LET HIM GO, DOUBLEDAY DORAN & CO., 1945
LEWIS, SINCLAIR, KINGSBLOOD ROYAL, RANDOM HOUSE, 1947
MYRDAHL, GUNNER, AN AMERICAN DILEMMA, HARPERS, 1944
SURVEY GRAPHIC, SEGREGATION, JANUARY, 1947
WRIGHT, RICHARD, BLACK BOY, HARPERS, 1937

JAPANESE AND JAPANESE-AMERICAN

BENEDICT, RUTH, THE CHRYSANTHEMUM AND THE SWORD, HOUGHTON MIFFLAN CO, 1946
LEIGHTON, ALEXANDER H., THE GOVERNING OF MEN, PRINCETON UNIV. PRESS, 1945
MATSUMOTO, TORU, A BROTHER IS A STRANGER, JOHN DAY CO, 1946
MEARS, HELEN, THE YEAR OF THE WILD BOAR, LIPPINCOTT, 1942
OKUBO, MINE, CITIZEN 13660, COLUMBIA UNIV. PRESS, 1946

ANTI-SEMITISM

HALSEY, MARGARET, SOME OF MY BEST FRIENDS ARE SOLDIERS, SIMON & SCHUSTER, 1944
HOBSON, LAURA, GENT LEMEN'S AGREEMEN, SIMON & SCHUSTER, 1947
PARKES, JUNE, ANTI-SEMITISM, AN ENEMY OF THE PEOPLE, POCKET BOOKS, 1945
SARTRE, JEAN PAUL, PORTRAIT OF THE ANTI-SEMITE, PARTISAN REVIEW, 1946
SINCLAIR, JO, WASTELAND, HARPERS, 1946
WIRTH, LOUIS, THE GHETTO, UNIV. OF CHICAGO PRESS, 1928

ITALIAN

MOTLEY, WILLARD, KNOCK ON ANY DOOR, APPLETON CENTURY, 1947

FOR CHILDREN

BEIM, LORRAINE AND JERROLD, TWO IS A TEAM, HARCOURT BRACE & CO., 1945
EVANS, EVA KNOX, ALL ABOUT US, CAPITOL, 1947
FISHER, LOIS, YOU AND THE UNITED NATIONS, CHILDREN'S PRESS, 1947

3 - Bibliographies

University of North Carolina
Sociology 185
The Negro

SELECTED READINGS ON RACE AND RACE RELATIONS IN THE UNITED STATES

1. Race, Racial Differences, Race Mixture, Etc.

Barzun, Jacques. RACE, A STUDY IN MODERN SUPERSTITION.
✓ Boas, Franz. THE MIND OF PRIMITIVE MAN.
Boas, Franz. "Anthropology." Article in ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE SOCIAL SCIENCES.
Boas, Franz. ANTHROPOLOGY AND MODERN LIFE.
Bruce, Myrtle. FACTORS AFFECTING INTELLIGENCE TEST PERFORMANCE OF WHITES AND NEGROES. (Columbia University Archives of Psychology, No. 252.)
Davenport, C. B., and M. Steggerda. RACE CROSSING IN JAMAICA.
Day, Caroline Bond. A STUDY OF SOME NEGRO-WHITE FAMILIES IN THE UNITED STATES.
Dixon, Roland B. THE RACIAL HISTORY OF MAN.
Dover, Cedric. HALF-CASTE.
✓ East, E. M. MANKIND AT THE CROSSROADS.
Finot, Jean. RACE PREJUDICE.
Fishberg, Maurice. THE JEWS: A STUDY OF RACE AND ENVIRONMENT.
✓ Garth, T. R. RACE PSYCHOLOGY.
✓ Haddon, A. C. THE RACES OF MAN AND THEIR DISTRIBUTION.
Hankins, F. H. THE RACIAL BASIS OF CIVILIZATION.
Herskovits, M. J. THE AMERICAN NEGRO: A STUDY IN RACIAL CROSSING.
Herskovits, M. J. ANTHROPOMETRY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO.
Hirschfeld, M. RACISM.
Hooton, E. A. UP FROM THE APES.
Huntington, Ellsworth. THE CHARACTER OF RACES.
Huxley, Julian, and A. C. Haddon. WE EUROPEANS.
Jennings, H. S. THE BIOLOGICAL BASIS OF HUMAN NATURE.
Jennings, H. S., and Others. SCIENTIFIC ASPECTS OF THE RACE PROBLEM.
Klineberg, Otto. RACE DIFFERENCES.
Kroeber, A. L. ANTHROPOLOGY. (chaps. 3 & 4)
Lewis, Julian H. THE BIOLOGY OF THE NEGRO.
✓ Linton, Ralph. THE STUDY OF MAN. (chapter on Race.)
Radin, Paul. THE RACIAL MYTH.
✓ Ripley, Wm. Z. THE RACES OF EUROPE.
Seligmann, Herbert J. RACE AGAINST MAN.
Sergi, C. THE MEDITERRANEAN RACE.
Weale, B. L. Putnam. THE CONFLICT OF COLOUR.
Wilder, H. H. THE PEDIGREE OF THE HUMAN RACE.

2. The American Historical Background.

Ballagh, J. C. A HISTORY OF SLAVERY IN VIRGINIA.
Bassett, John Spencer. SLAVERY AND SERVITUDE IN THE COLONY OF NORTH CAROLINA.
Brackett, J. R. THE NEGRO IN MARYLAND.
Brawley, Benjamin G. A SOCIAL HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO.
Brown, William G. THE LOWER SOUTH IN AMERICAN HISTORY.
Bruce, Philip A. THE PLANTATION NEGRO AS A FREEMAN.
Carroll, Joseph C. SLAVE INSURRECTIONS IN THE UNITED STATES, 1619-1865.
Catterall, Helen T. JUDICIAL CASES CONCERNING AMERICAN SLAVERY AND THE NEGRO.
Donnan, Elizabeth. DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE HISTORY OF THE SLAVE TRADE TO AMERICA.
✓Du Bois, W. E. B. BLACK RECONSTRUCTION
Flanders, Ralph B. PLANTATION SLAVERY IN GEORGIA.
Fleming Walter L. DOCUMENTARY HISTORY OF RECONSTRUCTION.
Helper, Hinton Rowan. THE IMPENDING CRISIS.
Hundley, D. R. SOCIAL RELATIONS IN OUR SOUTHERN STATES.
Jefferson, Thomas. NOTES ON THE STATE OF VIRGINIA.
Jenkins, Wm. S. PRO-SLAVERY THOUGHT IN THE OLD SOUTH.
Johnson, Guion G. A SOCIAL HISTORY OF THE SEA ISLANDS.
Johnson, Guion G. ANTE-BELLUM NORTH CAROLINA.
Livermore, George. AN HISTORICAL RESEARCH RESPECTING THE OPINION OF THE FOUNDERS OF THE REPUBLIC ON NEGROES AS SLAVES, AS CITIZENS, AND AS SOLDIERS.
Olmsted, Frederick L. A JOURNEY IN THE SEABOARD SLAVE STATES. . . 1853-1854.
Phillips, Ulrich B. AMERICAN NEGRO SLAVERY.
Russell, John H. THE FREE NEGRO IN VIRGINIA, 1619-1865.
Simkins, F. B., and R. H. Woody. SOUTH CAROLINA DURING RECONSTRUCTION.
Turner, Edward R. THE NEGRO IN PENNSYLVANIA.
Warner, Robert A. NEW HAVEN NEGROES, A SOCIAL HISTORY.
Wesley, Charles H. THE COLLAPSE OF THE CONFEDERACY.
Wiley, Bell Irving. SOUTHERN NEGORES, 1861-1865.
✓Woodson, Carter G. THE NEGRO IN OUR HISTORY.
Woodson, Carter G. FREE NEGRO OWNERS OF SLAVES.
Woodson, Carter G. THE MIND OF THE NEGRO AS REFLECTED IN LETTERS WRITTEN DURING THE CRISIS, 1800-1860.

3. Negro Life and Race Relations

Allen, James S. THE NEGRO QUESTION IN THE UNITED STATES.
ANNALS of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Special Issue on the Negro, November, 1928.
Archer, William. THROUGH AFRO-AMERICA.
Arkansas Writers' Project (W.P.A.). SURVEY OF NEGROES IN LITTLE ROCK AND NORTH LITTLE ROCK.
Bailey, Thomas P. RACE ORTHODOXY IN THE SOUTH.
Baker, Paul. NEGRO-WHITE ADJUSTMENT.
Baker, Ray Stannard. FOLLOWING THE COLOR LINE.
Barton, Rebecca C. RACE CONSCIOUSNESS AND THE AMERICAN NEGRO.
Bogardus, E. S. IMMIGRATION AND RACE ATTITUDES.
✓ Bond, Horace M. EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO IN THE AMERICAN SOCIAL ORDER.
Bowen, Trevor. DIVINE WHITE RIGHT.
Brawley, Benjamin G. EARLY NEGRO AMERICAN WRITERS.
Brawley, Benjamin G. THE NEGRO IN LITERATURE AND ART.
Brawley, Benjamin G. THE NEGRO GENIUS.
Brearly, H. C. HOMICIDE IN THE UNITED STATES.
✓✓ Brown, F. J., and J. S. Roucek. OUR RACIAL AND NATIONAL MINORITIES.
Brown, Ina C. THE STORY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO.
Brown, Sterling. NEGRO POETRY AND DRAMA.
Brown, Sterling. THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN FICTION.
✓ Brown, Sterling, and Others. THE NEGRO CARAVAN. (An Anthology of Writings by Negroes.)
Cable, G. W. THE CREOLES OF LOUISIANA.
Cable, G. W. THE NEGRO QUESTION.
Cable, G. W. THE SILENT SOUTH.
Caliver, Ambrose. SECONDARY EDUCATION FOR NEGROES.
Calverton, V. F. (ed.) AN ANTHOLOGY OF AMERICAN NEGRO LITERATURE.
Campbell, Thomas M. THE MOVABLE SCHOOL GOES TO THE NEGRO FARMER.
✓ Cayton, Horace, and George Mitchell. BLACK WORKERS AND THE NEW UNIONS.
Chadbourn, J. N. LYNCHING AND THE LAW.
Chenault, Lawrence. THE PUERTO RICAN MIGRANT IN NEW YORK CITY.
Chicago Commission on Race Relations. THE NEGRO IN CHICAGO.
Cooley, Rossa B. SCHOOL ACRES.
✓ Couch, W. T. (ed.) CULTURE IN THE SOUTH.
✓ Dabney, Virginius. LIBERALISM IN THE SOUTH.
Daniel, W. A. THE EDUCATION OF NEGRO MINISTERS.
✓ Davis, Allison, and John Dollard. CHILDREN OF BONDAGE.
Davis, Allison, and Others. DEEP SOUTH.
Detweiler, F. G. THE NEGRO PRESS IN THE UNITED STATES.
✓ Dollard, John. CASTE AND CLASS IN A SOUTHERN TOWN.
✓ Dowd, Jerome. THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN LIFE.
Doyle, Bertram W. THE ETIQUETTE OF RACE RELATIONS IN THE SOUTH.
Du Bois, W. E. B. THE NEGRO.
Du Bois, W. E. B. SOULS OF BLACK FOLK.
Du Bois, W. E. B. BLACK FOLK THEN AND NOW.
Dutcher, Dean. THE NEGRO IN MODERN INDUSTRIAL SOCIETY.
Edwards, Paul K. THE SOUTHERN URBAN NEGRO AS A CONSUMER.
✓ Embree, Edwin R. BROWN AMERICA.
✓ Embree, Edwin R. AMERICAN NEGROES, A HANDBOOK.
Evans, Maurice. BLACK AND WHITE IN THE SOUTHERN STATES.

Feldman, Herman. RACIAL FACTORS IN AMERICAN INDUSTRY.
Foreman, Clark. ENVIRONMENTAL FACTORS IN NEGRO ELEMENTARY EDUCATION.
Franklin, Charles L. THE NEGRO LABOR UNIONIST IN NEW YORK.
Frazier, E. Franklin. THE FREE NEGRO FAMILY.
Frazier, E. Franklin. THE NEGRO FAMILY IN CHICAGO.
✓Frazier, E. Franklin. THE NEGRO FAMILY IN THE UNITED STATES.
Frazier, E. Franklin. NEGRO YOUTH AT THE CROSSWAYS.
✓Gallagher, Buell G. AMERICAN CASTE AND THE NEGRO COLLEGE.
Garth, T. R. RACE PSYCHOLOGY.
Georgia Writers' Project (W.P.A.). DRUMS AND SHADOWS.
Gleason, Eliza A. THE SOUTHERN NEGRO AND THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.
Gosnell, Harold. NEGRO POLITICIANS.
Green, Elizabeth L. THE NEGRO IN CONTEMPORARY AMERICAN LITERATURE.
Green, Lorenzo, and Carter G. Woodson. THE NEGRO WAGE EARNER.
Handy, W. C. FATHER OF THE BLUES.
Hare, Maud Cuney. NEGRO MUSICIANS AND THEIR MUSIC.
Harmon, J. H. THE NEGRO AS A BUSINESS MAN.
Harris, Abram L. and S. Spero. "Negro Problem," in ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE SOCIAL SCIENCES, Vol. XI.
Harris, Abram. THE NEGRO AS CAPITALIST.
Hayes, Lawrence J. W. THE NEGRO FEDERAL WORKER.
Henderson, E. B. THE NEGRO IN SPORTS.
Herskovits, M. J. LIFE IN A HAITIAN VALLEY.
Herskovitz, M. J. THE MYTH OF THE NEGRO PAST.
Holmes, D. O. W. THE EVOLUTION OF THE NEGRO COLLEGE.
Holmes, S. J. THE NEGRO'S STRUGGLE FOR SURVIVAL.
Johnson, Charles S. THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN CIVILIZATION.
Johnson, Charles S. SHADOW OF THE PLANTATION.
Johnson, Charles S. THE NEGRO COLLEGE GRADUATE.
Johnson, Charles S. A PREFACE TO RACIAL UNDERSTANDING.
Johnson, Charles S. GROWING UP IN THE BLACK BELT.
Johnson, Guy B. JOHN HENRY.
Johnson, Guy B. FOLK CULTURE ON ST. HELENA ISLAND.
Johnson, James Weldon. NEGRO AMERICANS, WHAT NOW?
Kennedy, Louise V. THE NEGRO PEASANT TURNS CITYWARD.
Kiser, Clyde V. SEA ISLAND TO CITY.
Klineberg, Otto. NEGRO INTELLIGENCE AND SELECTIVE MIGRATION.
Klineberg, Otto. RACE DIFFERENCES.
Lasker, Bruno. RACE ATTITUDES IN CHILDREN.
Lewis, Edward E. THE MOBILITY OF THE NEGRO.
Lewinson, Paul. RACE, CLASS, AND PARTY.
Locke, Alain. THE NEGRO AND HIS MUSIC.
Locke, Alain. NEGRO ART, PAST AND PRESENT.
Locke, Alain. THE NEW NEGRO.
Locke, Alain. THE NEGRO IN ART.
Locke, Alain, and M. Gregory. PLAYS OF NEGRO LIFE.
Loggins, Vernon. THE NEGRO AUTHOR.
Lomax, John and Allen. AMERICAN BALLADS AND FOLK-SONGS.
Mangum, Charles S., Jr. THE LEGAL STATUS OF THE NEGRO.
Matthews, Basil. THE CLASH OF COLOR.
Mays, B. E., and J. W. Nicholson. THE NEGRO'S CHURCH.
Mazyck, W. H. GEORGE WASHINGTON AND THE NEGRO.
McGee, A. E. BLACK AMERICA ABROAD.

Mecklin, J. M. DEMOCRACY AND RACE FRICTION.
Miller, Herbert A. RACES, NATIONS, AND CLASSES.
Moton, R. R. WHAT THE NEGRO THINKS.
Muntz, Earle. RACE CONTACT.
Murphy, E. G. THE PRESENT SOUTH.
Murphy, E. G. THE BASIS OF ASCENDANCY.
Murray, Florence (comp.) THE NEGRO HANDBOOK, 1942.
National Youth Administration. NEGRO YOUTH IN GEORGIA STUDY THEIR PROBLEMS.
Nearing, Scott. BLACK AMERICA.
Newbold, N. C. (ed.). FIVE NORTH CAROLINA NEGRO EDUCATORS.
Nowlin, W. F. THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN NATIONAL POLITICS.
Odum, H. W. SOCIAL AND MENTAL TRAITS OF THE NEGRO.
Odum, H. W. SOUTHERN REGIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.
Odum, H. W. RAINBOW ROUND MY SHOULDER.
Odum, H. W., and Guy B. Johnson. THE NEGRO AND HIS SONGS.
Odum, H. W., and Guy B. Johnson. NEGRO WORKADAY SONGS.
Oldham, J. H. CHRISTIANITY AND THE RACE PROBLEM.
Page, Thomas Nelson. THE NEGRO, THE SOUTHERNER'S PROBLEM.
Parrish, Lydia. SLAVE SONGS OF THE GEORGIA SEA ISLANDS.
Peterkin, Julia, and Doris Ulmann. ROLL, JORDAN, ROLL.
Phelps-Stokes Fund. TWENTY YEAR REPORT OF THE PHELPS-STOKES FUND.
Pickett, Wm. P. THE NEGRO PROBLEM, ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S SOLUTION.
Porch, Marvin E. THE PHILADELPHIA MAIN LINE NEGRO.
Porter, Kirk H. A HISTORY OF NEGRO SUFFRACE IN THE UNITED STATES.
Powdermaker, Hortense. AFTER FREEDOM.
Puckett, N. N. FOLK BELIEFS OF THE SOUTHERN NEGRO.
Raper, Arthur. PREFACE TO PEASANTRY.
Raper, Arthur. THE TRAGEDY OF LYNCHING.
Raper, Arthur, and Ira De A. Reid. SHARECROPPERS ALL.
Redding, J. Saunders. TO MAKE A POET BLACK.
Reid, Ira De A. IN A MINOR KEY.
Reid, Ira De A. THE NEGRO IMMIGRANT.
Reuter, E. B. THE AMERICAN RACE PROBLEM (Rev. ed. 1938).
Reuter, E. B. THE MULATTO IN THE UNITED STATES.
Reuter, E. B. RACE MIXTURE.
Reuter, E. B. (ed.) RACE AND CULTURE CONTACT.
Schrieke, B. ALIEN AMERICANS.
Schulze, Andrew. MY NEIGHBORS OF ANOTHER COLOR: A TREATISE ON RACE RELATIONS IN THE CHURCH.
Shay, Frank: JUDGE LYNCH: HIS FIRST HUNDRED YEARS.
Skaggs, W. H. THE SOUTHERN OLIGARCHY.
Spero, S., and A. Harris. THE BLACK WORKER.
Spiller, G. (ed.). PAPERS ON INTER-RACIAL PROBLEMS.
Stephenson, G. T. RACE DISTINCTIONS IN AMERICAN LAW.
Stone, A. H. STUDIES IN THE AMERICAN RACE PROBLEM.
Stuart, M. S. AN ECONOMIC DETOUR: A HISTORY OF INSURANCE IN THE LIVES OF AMERICAN NEGROES.
Styles, Fitzhugh. NEGROES AND THE LAW.
Styles, Fitzhugh. HOW TO BE SUCCESSFUL NEGRO AMERICANS.
Sutherland, Robert. COLOR, CLASS, AND PERSONALITY.
Thomas, William H. THE AMERICAN NEGRO.
Thompson, Edgar T. (ed.). RACE RELATIONS AND THE RACE PROBLEM.

United States, Bureau of the Census. Various publications, but especially:
NEGRO POPULATION, 1790-1915
NEGROES IN THE UNITED STATES, 1920-1932
CENSUS OF POPULATION, 1930 and 1940
CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE, 1930 and 1940
CENSUS OF RELIGIOUS BODIES, 1926 and 1936
PRISONERS IN STATE AND FEDERAL PRISONS AND REFORMATORIES.

Van Deusen, John G. THE BLACK MAN IN WHITE AMERICA.

Voorhis, H. B. NEGRO MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

Walker, Ira, and Others. THIS BE THEIR DESTINY: THE PERSONALITY DEVELOPMENT OF NEGRO YOUTH IN THREE RURAL, COMMUNITIES.

Warner, Lloyd, and Others. COLOR AND HUMAN NATURE.

Washington, Booker T. THE STORY OF THE NEGRO.

Washington, E. Davidson. PUBLIC ADDRESSES OF BOOKER T. WASHINGTON.

Weatherford, W. D. THE NEGRO FROM AFRICA TO AMERICA.

Weatherford, W. D., and C. S. Johnson. RACE RELATIONS.

Wesley, Charles H. NEGRO LABOR IN THE UNITED STATES.

White, N. I. AMERICAN NEGRO FOLK-SONGS.

White, Walter. ROPE AND FAGGOT.

Woodson, Carter G. THE MIS-EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO.

Woodson, Carter G. THE EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO BEFORE 1861.

Woodson, Carter G. THE RURAL NEGRO.

Woodson, Carter G. HISTORY OF THE NEGRO CHURCH.

Woodson, Carter G. THE NEGRO PROFESSIONAL MAN AND THE COMMUNITY.

Woofter, T. J., Jr. BLACK YEOMANRY.

Woofter, T. J., Jr. THE BASIS OF RACIAL ADJUSTMENT.

Woofter, T. J., Jr. NEGRO PROBLEMS IN CITIES.

Woofter, T. J., Jr. (ed.) RACES AND ETHNIC GROUPS IN AMERICAN LIFE.

Woofter, T. J., Jr. LANDLORD AND TENANT ON THE COTTON PLANTATION.

Work, Monroe N. (ed.) BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE NEGRO.

Work, Monroe N. (ed.) NEGRO YEAR BOOK, 1931-1932; 1937-1938.

W.P.A. Writers' Project of Georgia. DRUMS AND SHADOWS.

W.P.A. Writers' Project of Virginia. THE NEGRO IN VIRGINIA.

Wright, Richard. 12 MILLION BLACK VOICES: A FOLK HISTORY OF THE NEGRO IN THE UNITED STATES.

Young, Donald. AMERICAN MINORITY PEOPLES.

Young, Donald. RESEARCH MEMORANDUM ON MINORITY PEOPLES IN THE DEPRESSION.

4. Selected Fiction and Poetry by Negro Authors.

A. Fiction

Attaway, William. LET ME BREATHE THUNDER.
Attaway, William. BLOOD ON THE FORGE.
Bontemps, Arna. GOD SENDS SUNDAY.
Bontemps, Arna. BLACK THUNDER.
Chestnutt, Charles C. THE MARROW OF TRADITION.
Chestnutt, Charles C. THE CONJURE WOMAN.
Cullen, Countee. ONE WAY TO HEAVEN.
Daly, Victor. NOT ONLY WAR.
Du Bois, W. E. B. DARK PRINCESS.
Fauset, Jessie R. THERE IS CONFUSION.
Fauset, Jessie R. PLUM BUN.
Fauset, Jessie R. THE CHINABERRY TREE.
Fauset, Jessie R. COMEDY, AMERICAN STYLE.
Fisher, Rudolph. THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
Hughes, Langston. NOT WITHOUT LAUGHTER.
Hughes, Langston. THE WAYS OF WHITE FOLKS.
Hurston, Zora N. JONAH'S GOURD VINE.
Hurston, Zora N. THEIR EYES WERE WATCHING GOD.
Johnson, James Weldon. AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF AN EX-COLORED MAN.
Larsen, Nella. QUICKSAND.
Larsen, Nella. PASSING.
Lee, John M. COUNTER CLOCK-WISE.
McKay, Claude. HOME TO HARLEM.
McKay, Claude. BANJO.
McKay, Claude. BANANA BOTTOM.
Schuyler, George. BLACK NO MORE.
Thurman, Wallace. THE BLACKER THE BERRY.
Turpin, Waters. THESE LOW GROUNDS.
White, Walter. THE FIRE IN THE FLINT.
White, Walter. FLIGHT.
Wright, Richard. UNCLE TOM'S CHILDREN.
Wright, Richard. NATIVE SON.

B. Poetry

Brown, Sterling. SOUTHERN ROAD.
Cullen, Countee (ed.). CAROLING DUSK. AN ANTHOLOGY.
Dunbar, Paul Laurence. COMPLETE POEMS.
Hughes, Langston. THE WEARY BLUES.
Hughes, Langston. THE DREAM KEEPER, AND OTHER POEMS.
Johnson, James Weldon. FIFTY YEARS AND OTHER POEMS.
Johnson, James Weldon. GOD'S TROMBONES.
Johnson, James Weldon. (ed.) THE BOOK OF AMERICAN NEGRO POETRY.
McKay, Claude. SONGS OF JAMAICA.
McKay, Claude. SPRING IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.
McKay, Claude. HARLEM SHADOWS.
White, N. I., and W. C. Jackson (eds.). POETRY BY AMERICAN NEGROES (Anthology)

5. Autobiographies of Negroes.

Douglass, Frederick. LIFE AND TIMES OF FREDERICK DOUGLASS.
Du Bois, W. E. B. DUSK OF DAWN.
Harrison, Juanita. MY GREAT, WIDE BEAUTIFUL WORLD.
Herndon, Angelo. LET ME LIVE.
Hughes, Langston. THE BIG SEA.
Johnson, James Weldon. ALONG THIS WAY.
McKay, Claude. A LONG WAY FROM HOME.
Moton, R. R. FINDING A WAY OUT.
Powell, Clayton. AGAINST THE TIDE.
Terrell, Mary Church. A NEGRO WOMAN IN A WHITE WORLD.
Washington, Booker T. UP FROM SLAVERY.

6. Some Negro Newspapers.

AFRO-AMERICAN (Baltimore)
AMSTERDAM NEWS (New York)
CAROLINA TIMES (Durham)
CHICAGO DEFENDER
DAILY WORLD (Atlanta)
HOUSTON INFORMER
JOURNAL AND GUIDE (Norfolk)
PITTSBURGH COURIER

7. Important Periodicals.

THE CRISIS. (N.A.A.C.P., 69 Fifth Avenue, New York City.)
OPPORTUNITY. (National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York City.)
JOURNAL OF NEGRO EDUCATION. (Howard University, Washington, D. C.)
JOURNAL OF NEGRO HISTORY. (Association for Study of Negro Life and History, Washington, D. C.)
PHYLON. (Atlanta University Review of Race and Culture, Atlanta, Ga.)

PROGRESS OF THE NEGRO IN THE UNITED STATES

LOVE OF THIS LAND

LOVE OF THIS LAND

Edited by James H. Robinson Illustrated by Elton C. Fax
96 pages $1.00

What the Negro thinks of his country and his opportunities here, his estimate of his own performance, his hopes for the future--these cannot help interesting all those who are concerned about preserving the rights and dignity of all men. Doctor Robinson, who assembled and edited the work of the outstanding Negro contributors, is pastor of the Church of the Master in New York, and the author of Tomorrow Is Today, Road Without Turning, and other books.

New Frontiers in Education
JAMES H. ROBINSON and MABLE M. SMYTHE, a teacher in the New Lincoln School in New York City

Extension of Civil Rights
ROBERT L. CARTER, member of the New York Bar; Assistant Special Counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

Opportunities for Earning a Living
JULIUS A. THOMAS, Director of the Department of Industrial Relations of the National Urban League

Achievement in Business and Ownership
WILLIAM R. HUDGINS, President of Carver Federal Savings and Loan Association of New York; member of Uptown Chamber of Commerce, New York

Brotherhood Through Religion
J. OSCAR LEE, Director, Department of Racial and Cultural Relations of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

Champions in Sports
HUGH H. SMYTHE, faculty member, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Brooklyn College

Contributions to American Culture
JAMES H. ROBINSON and HUGH H. SMYTHE

Equality in the Defense of the Nation
ROBERT M. CIPES, Assistant Editor of Family Week magazine

At your book store

A Christian Education Press publication

OFFICERS
AND EXECUTIVE BOARD
HARRY S. STROZIER
CHAIRMAN
BENJAMIN E. MAYS
VICE-CHAIRMAN
MARGARET FISHER
SECRETARY-TREASURER
CHARLES H. GILLMAN
JOHN A. GRIFFIN
GRACE TOWNS HAMILTON
JOHN E. JONES
M. ASHBY JONES
FRANK PROHL
GLENN W. RAINEY
WILLIAM R. SMITH

ADVISORY COUNCIL
(IN FORMATION)
FRANKIE V. ADAMS
T. M. ALEXANDER
TOMMIE DORA BARKER
WILLIAM Y. BELL, JR.
JULIAN V. BOEHM
DR. HORACE MANN BOND
MRS. JULIA PATE BORDERS
ELIZABETH BOWLES
DR. JAMES P. BRAWLEY
HELEN BULLARD
JOHN H. CALHOUN, JR.
LYLE R. CHUBB
REV. G. E. CLARY
DR. RUFUS E. CLEMENT
W. R. COCHRANE
W. H. CRAWFORD
DEAN RAIMUNDO DE OVIES
JOHN W. DOBBS
DR. WITHERSPOON DODGE
MRS. GENEVIEVE M. FOLGER
MRS. LILLIAN GARNETT
MRS. HARRY M. GERSHON
C. L. HARPER
G. H. HATHAWAY
J. R. HENDERSON
DELKIN JONES
JOHN P. JONES
LUCY RANDOLPH MASON
ARMAND MAY
DR. GEORGE S. MITCHELL
MORRIS R. MITCHELL
MRS. R. M. PATY, JR.
REV. J. MILTON RICHARDSON
C. A. SCOTT
LOUIE A. SHIRLEY
PHILIP E. SHULHAFER
REV. EDWARD T. SMALL
LILLIAN SMITH
PAULA SNELLING
COMMANDER FRANK W. SPENCER
L. B. STANFORD
THOMAS J. STARLING
THEODORE T. TARAIL
MRS. M. E. TILLY
FLORENCE VAN SICKLER
A. T. WALDEN
DR. FORRESTER WASHINGTON
HORACE WHITE
JOSEPHINE WILKINS
REV. DAVID CADY WRIGHT

Committee for Georgia

TELEPHONE: JACKSON 5965

ATLANTA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING
ATLANTA 3, GA.

RECEIVED
OCT 22 1945
Southern Regional Council

Dear Friend:

We believe you will agree with us that the job of achieving good government is the responsibility of every citizen; that an informed and active citizenry is the best safeguard our democratic institutions can have.

Many people have felt there was need for a handbook which might help Georgians become more interested and active in the affairs of their government. In the enclosed pamphlet, YOUR PART IN GEORGIA'S POLITICS, we have tried to meet some of that need. We hope the booklet merits your approval, and that you will find it useful.

Any comments or suggestions you may care to make will be most welcome.

Sincerely yours,

Harry S. Strozier

Committee For GEORGIA

Affiliated with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare

GEORGIA

We Are Proud of Our State of her natural resources—

Her splendid climate, vast forests, mighty waterpower, varied minerals—

Her towering mountains, rolling plains, extensive seashore—and of her human resources—

A fine people with many fine traditions

yet

In the Midst of Great Wealth

Many people in Georgia are

Poor
Ill-housed
Undernourished
Uneducated

Did You Know—

That 41 states have a higher per capita income than Georgia—

(Average income in Georgia $647, in nation $1041)

That the 4½ percent of the nation's farmers living in Georgia receive less than 2 percent of the nation's cash farm income—

That 488,711 homes in Georgia have no running water—

That the infant death rate in Georgia is higher than in 8 of the other 13 southern states—

That Georgia has 5,015 public schools, and 2,117 of them are one-teacher schools—

That the average public school expenditure in the nation is $103.49 per pupil per year—in Georgia it is $45.47?

The COMMITTEE FOR GEORGIA

Is a public affairs and legislative agency

Organized in January 1945

By ministers, farmers, teachers, labor, businessmen, housewives, office workers, doctors, lawyers, social workers, writers, and other professional people

Who Believe we can have

A healthier
A more prosperous
A better educated
A more democratic Georgia

if

All People of Good Will

Are informed on public affairs,
and
Take Part in Their Government

We Work For

International cooperation, full employment, better farm conditions, improved labor laws, federal aid to education, fair employment practices, health legislation, extension of the franchise, and extension of social security.

We Support

Total Victory, Permanent Peace, Full Employment, and Complete Democracy.

We Oppose

Exploitation of or discrimination against any people, any place, any time.

The COMMITTEE FOR GEORGIA welcomes the support of all people who believe in its objectives, and sincerely hopes you will join.

Committee for Georgia
Atlanta Chamber of Commerce Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

I support the objectives of the COMMITTEE FOR GEORGIA, and wish to become a

.....Regular Member at $2.00 a year

.....Contributing Member at $.....

.....Please send me.....copies of this folder for my friends

Name.....Street.....

City.....State.....

Will you please list on the back of this page the names and addresses of those you believe would be interested in receiving this folder?

The Southern Patriot, published monthly by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, 506 Presbyterian Building, Nashville 3, Tennessee, is sent to each member of the Committee for Georgia at no additional cost. Separate subscriptions may be had for $1.00 per year.

Officers and Executive Board

Mr. Harry S. Strozier, Chairman
Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Vice-Chairman
Miss Margaret Fisher, Secretary-Treasurer
The Rev. Roger D. Bosworth
Mr. Charles H. Gillman
Mr. John A. Griffin
Mrs. Grace Towns Hamilton
Mr. John E. Jones
Mr. Glenn W. Rainey
Mr. William R. Smith

★ ★ ★

Advisory Council
(In Formation)

Miss Frankie V. Adams
Mr. T. M. Alexander
Miss Tommie Dora Barker
Mr. William Y. Bell, Jr.
Mr. Julian V. Boehm
Dr. Horace Mann Bond
Mrs. Julia Pate Borders
Miss Elizabeth Bowles
Dr. James P. Brawley
Miss Helen Bullard
Mr. Lyle R. Chubb
The Rev. G. E. Clary
Dr. Rufus E. Clement
Mr. W. R. Cochrane
Mr. W. H. Crawford
Mr. John W. Dobbs
Dr. Witherspoon Dodge
Mrs. Genevieve M. Folger
Mrs. Lillian Garnett
Mrs. Harry M. Gershon
Mr. C. L. Harper
Mr. G. H. Hathaway
Mr. J. R. Henderson
Mr. Delkin Jones
Mr. John P. Jones
The Rev. M. Ashby Jones
Miss Lucy Randolph Mason
Mr. Armand May
Dr. George S. Mitchell
Mr. Morris R. Mitchell
Mrs. R. M. Paty, Jr.
The Rev. J. Milton Richardson
Mr. C. A. Scott
Mr. Louie A. Shirley
Mr. Philip E. Shulhafer
The Rev. Edward T. Small
Miss Lillian Smith
Miss Paula Snelling
Commander Frank W. Spencer
Mr. L. B. Stanford
Mr. Thomas J. Starling
Mr. Theodore T. Tarail
Mrs. M. E. Tilly
Miss Florence Van Sickler
Mr. A. T. Walden
Dr. Forrester Washington
Mr. Horace White
Miss Josephine Wilkins
The Rev. David Cady Wright

Common Ground

Letter to Germany Pearl Buck

TOTAL EQUALITY, AND HOW TO GET IT
Stetson Kennedy

"FOR A KINDER RACE . . ." Helen Papashvily

I CAN TAKE IT—BUT SHOULD I HAVE TO?
A Jewish American

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA: ERSATZ MYTHOLOGY
Carey McWilliams

PEACE CONFERENCE IN AN AMERICAN TOWN
Langston Hughes

THE COLLEGE—AN ACTIVE SOCIAL AGENT
Algo D. Henderson

EQUAL JOB OPPORTUNITY Malcolm Ross

THE "DISLOYAL" AT TULE LAKE G. Eleanor Kimble

50c. WINTER 1946

TOTAL EQUALITY, AND HOW TO GET IT

STETSON KENNEDY

WHAT THE NEGRO WANTS, a volume published last year by the University of North Carolina Press, brings together the answers of 14 prominent Negro leaders who represent various viewpoints—southern, northern, conservative, liberal, radical—but who are unanimous in asserting that what the Negro wants ultimately is total equality: precisely the same rights, opportunities, privileges, and responsibilities as other Americans. It may be assumed that all Negroes are in agreement with this; any who are not are certainly entitled to less. But wanting total equality and getting it are two different things, especially in the South. What white Southerners, and Americans generally, think and do about the matter are the determining factors.

In the South, the formidable institution of white supremacy stands in the way of total equality. Both within and without the South there are a variety of forces which would severally strengthen white supremacy, defend it as is, modify it, or overthrow it. Inside the South, these forces may be identified more specifically as the incumbent political administrators of the exploitive system, who are obligated to defend the status quo and make only necessary concessions; the race-hate demagogues whom the overlords of the South will seek to install in office should appeasement fail to appease; the white "southern liberals" who work for "separate equality"; and the real southern liberals, white and black, who fight for total equality. To identify these elements still further, representative spokesmen are presented herewith.

Speaking for the incumbents—whose order of the day is "concessions in public services; and that's all, colored folks!"—we have Governor Chauncey Sparks of Alabama, orating at the Tuskegee Institute for Negroes. Governor Sparks told his audience that "absolute segregation" and "independent development" should govern the conduct of the white and Negro races in the South. Similarly Governor Broughton of North Carolina has scored "outside agitators, who . . . would flout established and mutually respected conventions and traditions—which cannot in this State, now or ever, be obliterated"; and he went on to say, "We are striving in North Carolina to give the Negro equal protection under the law, equal educational advantages, the full benefits of public health, agricultural advancement, decent housing conditions, and full and free economic opportunity. . . . This is the assured path toward racial harmony and progress, not only in North Carolina, but in all America."

Such sentiments are voiced by virtually the entire southern press. For example, the Atlanta Journal said in a full-length editorial last year entitled "The South's Race Question": "We have tried to outline four constructive ideas for promoting happy and mutually profitable race relationships and for serving the best interests of the South. Each and all of these proposals rest on the major premise that social segregation shall continue."

Perhaps the leading press agent for this school of thought is John Temple Graves, whose Birmingham News-Age Herald column is widely syndicated throughout the South. It was he who very seriously proposed last year that the white "leaders" of the South call a race relations conference at which southern Negro representatives would either be conspicuously segregated or excluded altogether—to demonstrate what he sees as the white South's determination to maintain "perpetual segregation."

Such sentiment is of course reflected among the South's champions of white supremacy in Congress. As a single example, we find Senator Bilbo of Mississippi saying: "We, the people of the South, must draw the color line tighter and tighter, and the white man or woman who dares cross that color line should be promptly and forever ostracized. The white race is the custodian of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Anyone who would in the name of Christianity make us a Negroid people betrays his religion and his race."

Carried to its logical conclusion, such arch-demagoguery must arrive at the formula of the prewar, Nazi-approved "White Front" which cropped up in the South, which proposed to "make negroes wards of the Nation, with special codes to govern their behavior."

Dr. W. T. Couch, former director of the University of North Carolina Press, has recently argued that history demonstrates the inferiority of Negroes, and therefore the white majority in the South has a "democratic" right to impose segregation. This argument has been adopted as official by the other "southern liberals" who believe in "separate equality." These people, it must be recognized, not only believe in separate equality, but do what they can to promote equality, for which Negroes and all liberals can be thankful. What may be taken as the rock-ribbed platform of this group was enunciated by Mark Ethridge of the Louisville Times and Courier, in opening the Birmingham hearings of the FEPC, of which he was then chairman.

"The southern Negro cannot afford to drive from his side, in his march to a greater fulfillment of his rights, the southern white men of good will. He must recognize that there is no power in the world—not even in all the mechanized armies of the earth, Allied and Axis—which could now force the southern white people to the abandonment of the principle of social segregation. It is a cruel disillusionment, bearing the germs of strife and perhaps tragedy, for any of their [the Negroes'] leaders to tell them that they can expect it as the price of their participation in the war. . . . If [the southern white] is not willing to break down segregation—and he is not—he can at least see that it is not achieved on the brutal standards of a Ku Klux Klansman. He can see that it is made as painless as possible."

Ethridge grossly underestimated the potentialities of mechanized armies, but since the Axis armies would hardly have been inclined to enforce total equality in the South, and since the U.S. Army is not likely to be given any such assignment, the gentleman is correct insofar as he suggests that the means for the forcible overthrow of segregation are not in hand.

Late in 1943 something did make a slight dent in the epidermis of Jim Crow. Virginius Dabney, editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, urged that the State's Jim Crow statute be repealed insofar as urban transportation was concerned, "on the ground that it fails to segregate and is a constant source of friction and ill-feeling." While the Negro press made much of the proposal, while generally ignoring its peculiar motivation, the limited significance of Dabney's editorial was brought out shortly afterward in his response to a letter asking if the abolition of Jim Crow on urban transportation might not spread into other fields. He said: "Certainly the Times-Dispatch is not advocating the repeal of any of these laws, except those covering urban street cars and buses. The newspaper has expressed itself in the past as favoring equal, but separate, accommodations, facilities, and opportunities for our colored citizens, and it reiterates that position."

After a few weeks the efforts to get the Virginia legislature to act upon Dabney's proposal were abandoned, with this observation by him: ". . . we have regretfully concluded that the people and their representatives are not ready for the repeal of the segregation law on streetcars and buses."

However, there is in the South a comparatively small but nevertheless dynamic group of white liberals to carry the torch for total equality. Such people are not confined to any one sphere of activity but are to be found in the labor unions, the farmers unions, in education, journalism, and even politics. Among those who have exercised the widest influence is Lillian Smith, author of the best-selling novel Strange Fruit and editor of South Today. Although she has not always given due emphasis to the economic and political causes and effects of segregation, her penetrating diagnoses of its psychological costs are unequaled.

Segregation, however, is not to be abolished by any amount of diagnosis of its psychological costs. Man, as Miss Smith points out, is not just an economic and political unit; but the institution of segregation was created and has been maintained to serve the economic and political purpose of keeping southern labor divided and cheap; therefore the psychologically damaging aspects of Jim Crow are but incidental by-products. The South's Jim Crow psychosis cannot, as I see it, be successfully overcome except through elimination of the economic and political cancer of segregation—and this calls for economic and political operations, without which mental therapy will be to no avail.

Upon the handling of Jim Crow depends all hope for total equality (and progress of all sorts) in the South. The entire system of white supremacy is predicated upon prefabricated prejudices against social equality—and all other forms of equality are denied in that name. Thus the demagogue's favorite assertion is, "If you give a nigger a dollar, he'll take a $1.25." The demagogic formula for maintaining the status quo is that any economic or political concession to Negroes would ultimately prove conducive to social equality. For once the demagogues are correct, but it would be impolitic for southern Negroes to admit as much, as will presently be shown (trusting that demagogues don't read this sort of thing).

One of the undeniable facts of life in the South today is that the case for economic and even political equality can be argued on the street corner—yes, even in a Klan meeting—without necessarily making oneself a candidate for lynching. On the other hand, to so much as mention social equality is sufficient to ruin almost anyone.

Practically everything lies within the realm of immediate possibility, except the abolition of Jim Crow: that is the one change above all others to which white Southerners have been conditioned to react emotionally instead of rationally. Moreover, the majesty of Federal law can be brought to bear in protecting political rights and those economic rights encompassed by the FEPC. The prejudices of 20 million southern whites are no justification for illegal discrimination against 10 million southern Negroes, and the American people as a whole need have no compunctions about curbing the expression of such prejudice, via the Federal government. But it is their responsibility to see that those curbs are accompanied by adequate protection for the Negroes.

When the demagogues threaten that a forced breakdown of Jim Crow will bring on a resurgence of the Klan and mob violence, they are not just bluffing. But when I vouch for this fact, I do so not for the sake of intimidating Negroes and their friends, but to forewarn them so that their attack need not be inadequate nor premature.

It is this factor of kinetic violence that chiefly distinguishes the problem of establishing total equality in the South from the problem elsewhere (Detroit and Los Angeles excepted). Local police, far from dealing appropriately with such violence, would very often be in the forefront of it. When the disorder reached major proportions, southern governors would send in their lily-white, Klux-minded state guards. Federal troops could not be sent in without a legislature's or governor's request—and such requests would no more be forthcoming than they were in the wake of Reconstruction. In short, a massacre rather than a riot would ensue. (In Detroit, 85 per cent of those arrested were Negroes, 75 per cent of those killed were Negroes, and 60 per cent of the Negroes killed were shot by policemen; in the South Negroes would not escape so lightly.)

In 1942 a conference of southern Negroes convened in Durham, North Carolina, and drafted one of the most significant documents ever to come out of the South, now known as the Durham Statement. In addition to outlining a comprehensive program for promoting more equal economic and political opportunities for southern Negroes, the Durham Statement included this realistic pronouncement on strategy:

"We are fundamentally opposed to the principle and practice of compulsory segregation in our American society, whether of races or classes or creeds; however, we regard it as both sensible and timely to address ourselves now to the current problems of racial discrimination and neglect, and to ways in which we may co-operate in the advancement of programs aimed at the sound improvement of race relations within the democratic framework."

The Durham Statement practically demanded acknowledgment from the white South. It was forthcoming in a series of conferences which culminated in the formation of a Southern Regional Council, which absorbed the old Commission on Interracial Cooperation, and attracted to its fold 1,000 white and Negro Southerners of varying shades of liberalism. Without exactly saying so, the SRC adopted the goals of the Durham Statement without specifically endorsing its condemnation of segregation—and outspoken opponents of Jim Crow were quick to make an issue of the fact.

Lillian Smith, in an article in COMMON GROUND entitled "Southern Defensive," said, "Not much is going to be done to bring about racial democracy by this group [the SRC] until its leaders accept and acknowledge publicly the basic truth that segregation is injuring us on every level of our life and is so intolerable to the human spirit that we, all of us, black and white, must bend every effort to rid our minds, hearts, and culture of it." In the same issue, J. Saunders Redding, professor of English at Hampton Institute, charged, "The men who at present writing have policy-making powers in the new organization are pretty effectively enslaved by one big common thing: segregation. Segregation is the sine qua non of race relations in the South."

No doubt there are some white members of the SRC who will go to their graves believing in segregation, but director Guy B. Johnson, in a succeeding issue of COMMON GROUND under the title "Southern Offensive," had this to say:

"Our goal is democracy and equality of opportunity. We are striving to improve the social, civic, and economic life of our region in spite of a deep-seated and undemocratic pattern of segregation. . . . Personally, I should rather help capture the foothills which have to be captured sooner or later than merely to point out the distant peak and urge my comrades to storm it at once! I, too, can see the peak, but I can see no particular virtue in starting an association of peak-gazers."

When Miss Smith was belatedly asked to become a director of the SRC, she declined because of its failure to take a stand against segregation. And so we have revolving in and about the SRC a controversy as to whether or not denunciation of segregation is essential to, or even advisable, in connection with an organized movement of southern whites and Negroes "to do the most and best that can be done here and now."

Even among the Negro drafters of the Durham Statement there was a difference of opinion on this. A minority argued that the Statement, in the interests of diplomacy, could have refrained from mentioning segregation at all. The controversy again came to a head at the 1944 meeting of the SRC. There, two resolutions on segregation were introduced and warmly debated. One said in effect, "We recognize the existence of Jim Crow; we dedicate ourselves to attaining equality of opportunity." A substitute was offered which, after the manner of the Durham Statement, said, "We condemn segregation because . . . ; however, we dedicate ourselves to attaining equality of opportunity." Both were tabled by a vote of 45-25.

Now who is right about this matter?

I would venture to say that the Durham Statement, coming from Negroes, was more or less morally obliged to include a condemnation of segregation, and that it could not have been done in a more statesmanlike manner. I would also say that the SRC, as an organization of southern whites and Negroes faced with the practical necessity of seeking improvements from the incumbent system of white supremacy, would needlessly frustrate itself by condemning segregation at this time. And I would say further that Lillian Smith has done and can do immense good by condemning segregation as an individual, but that she is not being realistic in demanding the same of the SRC.

There is another tangent, which, if pursued to the exclusion of other paths, would likewise lead nowhere. Dr. Gordon B. Hancock of Virginia Union University, a director of the SRC, wrote Miss Smith as follows upon her refusal to join: "You who make the whole issue one of segregation are overlooking the matter of prejudice, the more fundamental issue that we of the SRC are trying to face. . . . You are primarily interested in denouncing the effects; we are primarily interested in attacking and destroying the cause. . . ."

Subsequently in a letter to me Dr. Hancock said: "Race prejudice must be destroyed before discrimination can be taken out of segregation, and the law itself is hopeless and helpless to accomplish this fact where prejudice is too strong. It is true that, here and there, discriminations are being eliminated as in the case of teachers' salaries; but it is also true that this is due to a relinquishment of prejudice in its most rabid form. In my releases to the Associated Negro Press I have been sloganizing as follows: 'Praeiudicium generis delendum est (race prejudice must be destroyed)!' "

All of which is very well, provided no one is given the impression that mere sloganizing, whether in Latin or any number of current languages, can under existing circumstances bring about the abolition of prejudice or segregation or discrimination or white supremacy. To argue whether prejudice or segregation came first is to carry on about the goose and the egg. First came the excess profit motive which gave birth to the institution of white supremacy, and all its bastard offspring might be described as products of artificial insemination.

So long as white supremacy remains an economic and political reality, no amount of education or agitation can bring about the abolition of segregation in the South by the South (any more than mere agitation could have abolished slavery). In other words, short of another civil war, the southern Negro must be emancipated economically and politically before he can be emancipated socially. This means that he must first join democratic unions and beat a democratic path to the polls. Once those two things have been accomplished—gains in one will facilitate gains in the other—the abolition of Jim Crow will be as inevitable as was the abolition of chattel slavery after civil war broke out. Once the economic and political functions of Jim Crow have been negated, its social function will vanish as the subterfuge that it is.

At this point the proper strategy for achieving total equality in America becomes crystal clear.

In non-southern areas (where Jim Crow enjoys a quasi-legal existence only slightly less rigorous than in Dixie), the campaign for total equality can and should be prosecuted by all-out frontal assault.

In the South, the economic and political serfdom of the Negro with its concomitant potential of uncontrolled violence requires that there be no demand for total equality at this time; instead, the case for social equality must be presented entirely apart from the case for economic and political equality of opportunity.

If this strategy is not followed, there may be no progress in any direction, but reaction in all directions. So let it be understood that this is not at all a strategy of appeasement, but the most radical of practical programs for achieving total equality without wholesale violence.

The flanking approach for the South requires elaboration in terms of tactical maneuvers. That the strategy calls for presentation of the demand for social equality apart from demands for economic and political equality will bear repeating. This means that in the South a distinction must be made pro tem between segregation and discrimination—that the separate issues not be confused by indiscriminate application of the "Jim Crow" label to all manner of interracial inequities.

The several groups involved in the struggle for total equality should also assume specialized functions. The case for social equality in the South should be left largely if not exclusively in the hands of the real southern white liberals, who are in a position to present it most effectively. Non-Southerners can help most by concentrating on the basic task of economic and political emancipation for the southern Negro—by working for establishment of a permanent FEPC, by bringing suffrage cases before the Supreme Court, by insisting upon adequate Federal protection of the economic and political rights thus secured, and by aiding the efforts to organize southern Negroes into labor and farmers unions. And southern Negroes themselves should seek first to become union men and democratic voters.

The interim attitude southern Negroes should take toward segregation may at first seem incongruous. It is that they adopt the slogan: "Enforce the Jim Crow laws!" But this is correct procedure because all such laws require that "separate-but-equal" provisions be made, and the U.S. Supreme Court, if none other, will see to it that equality is provided in as many cases as can be brought before it. When the defense makes the countercharge—as it will repeatedly—that "what these niggers is really after is social equality," southern Negroes should insist that segregation and social equality are irrelevant to the economic and political matters at hand, and refuse to discuss them in the same connection.

It is of course true that Jim Crow has always meant injury added to insult. As colored folk say, it has always been a case of:

> White folks in the dinin room,
> Eatin cake and cream;
> Niggers in the kitchen,
> Eatin good old greasy greens.

Nevertheless, by going to court and exercising every other legitimate form of demand, protest, and pressure, the Negro can have an appreciable amount of the physical injury taken out of Jim Crow. This is what he has been doing since Reconstruction; but the accelerator should be pressed to the floor. The reaction of a typical white Southerner to this assertion was, "Hold on a minute! This business of equal rights has got to be fed to us Southerners just so much at a time. It's like tryin' to feed beefsteak to a baby that's never done nothin' but suck titty. You got to wean it away." While there is some truth in that, there is considerably more truth, and justice too, in what the old Negro woman said to the judge who cautioned her that colored folks couldn't expect to get even breaks with white folks all in a minute, "God knows it's been a long minute!"

There is no need for anyone to be concerned over the prospect envisioned by the so-called southern liberals who, under the fancy label of "biracial parallelism," would transform the Jim Crow fence from a discriminatory horizontal line into a vertical line of equal opportunity. Long before then, the preconditions for the abolition of Jim Crow altogether will have been established.

Confidentially (don't tell Talmadge & Co.), every step toward separate-but-equal provisions will prove to be a step toward free-and-equal status for all. Since the South is already spending almost all it can on public services, actually to provide equal facilities would require a lowering of white standards. This being the case, each time more equality is forced, more of the pinch of the Jim Crow shoe will be transferred to the white foot, and as soon as its intolerability becomes mutual, it will be cast aside.

Jim Crow is such a gross creature he has a way of rousing both Jim Crowers and Jim Crowed to an equally blind frenzy. This is forgivable among the latter, but not at all effective. To go at Jim Crow like Don Quixote versus a windmill has often proven less than unavailing.

It is past time Negroes and their friends stopped speaking loosely about the "unconstitutionality" of Jim Crow. Jim Crow may be un-American, un-Christian, undemocratic, and unjust; but under Supreme Court rulings to date, Jim Crow laws are not themselves unconstitutional. At present, as Westbrook Pegler so gleefully maintains, "it is still legal in the United States to hold and express racial and religious prejudices"—even in the form of Jim Crow laws.

The 14th Amendment of the Constitution provides that "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States . . . nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." Now the privileges and immunities of American citizens are not at all nebulous—either they are specified in the Constitution or Federal laws, or they have no legal existence. Freedom from Jim Crow—the right not to be segregated—is not among the rights of citizens so specified—as those Negroes who have traveled the hard road to the Supreme Court have learned. In carrying out the 14th Amendment's guarantee of equal protection of the laws, the Court has merely granted redress in cases where Negroes have complained of unequal Jim Crow facilities; but the Jim Crow laws themselves have been left intact.

One ground for complaint against Jim Crow facilities which has not been fully utilized is that the Constitutional guarantee of equal protection of the laws extends to equal convenience as well as other aspects of equality. For example, Negroes might sue for the right to attend the public school nearest them, regardless of race. The Supreme Court of New Jersey upheld this particular right last year.

But at best such court trials of Jim Crow can only bring about a slow amelioration of the discrimination inherent in segregation and bring to bear economic pressure for its abolition. The end can and should be hastened by Federal legislation. Congress has the power—under its Constitutional authority to enact laws to promote the public safety and welfare—to adopt an anti-segregation law, or an even broader statute establishing the equal rights of races.

Ideally and eventually, total equality should be guaranteed by an amendment to the Constitution. Such an organic law would not be without precedent. The Soviet Union, a land of almost 200 nationalities, has such a law and has found it eminently practicable and salutary. Article 123 of the Soviet Bill of Rights and Duties provides: "Equality of rights of citizens of the U.S.S.R., irrespective of their nationality or race, in all spheres of economic, state, social, and political life, is an indefeasible law. Any direct or indirect restriction of the rights of, or, conversely, any establishment of direct or indirect privileges for, citizens on account of their race or nationality, as well as any advocacy of racial or national exclusiveness or hatred or contempt, is punishable by law."

Unlike a Congressional statute, a Constitutional amendment to this effect would of course require ratification by three-fourths of the states, which means that rejection by 13 states could kill it. It will be recalled that refusal of the southern states to ratify the 14th Amendment following the Civil War led to military occupation. An amendment guaranteeing the equal rights of the races, including as it would a ban on segregation, would unquestionably get a hot reception in the South today. Unanimous ratification by all non-southern states plus one or more borderline states would be necessary for its adoption.

Such a law or amendment would produce more rumors of civil war, but still no war. However, there would be mass violence, and the white supremacists would make good their threat to make life miserable for Negroes. White supremacy is going to die a hard death—almost as hard as slavery's. It will take the South approximately as long to get over the death of Jim Crow as it is taking to get over the passing of Old Black Joe, the slave.

Of course the Negro is entitled to total equality now. But by suffering segregation another decade (no more) before seeking to establish total equality as the law of the land, he can with the help of most Americans build the economic and political framework which will give it a concrete-and-steel substance without which the legal superstructure would be an empty stage-setting.

Stetson Kennedy is a young southern author whose forthcoming book Southern Exposure will be published by Doubleday, Doran. He is also the author of Palmetto Country, a volume in the American Folkways Series edited by Erskine Caldwell. He has supervised a series of social-ethnic studies in his region, and led an expedition recording southern folklore for the Library of Congress.

For Common Ground's own position on the issues raised by Mr. Kennedy, and the articles by Lillian Smith and J. Saunders Redding to which he refers, the reader is directed to the Spring 1944 number. Recommended also are three pamphlets by Lillian Smith (available from South Today, Clayton, Georgia): "Two Men and a Bargain," which, despite Mr. Kennedy, remains the best analysis of the economic base of race prejudice in the South; "Buying a New World with Old Confederate Bills," an analysis of the psychological base; and "The White Christian and His Conscience," a portrayal of the spiritual dilemmas of a society dominated by the concept of racial superiority.

ADOBE ANCIENTS

DOROTHY L. PILLSBURY

"What a weird way for you to spend Christmas," our Anglo friends gasped, "on top of the Rock of Acoma. Those Acoma Indians are the most offish in the Southwest. They've been sitting on that Rock since long before the Spanish came into the country. They haven't changed. They're primitive and they're ignorant. Strange things have happened on Acoma, even in modern times." They wagged mysterious heads. "There was the priest who disappeared not so many years ago. They have secret rooms and underground chambers. And not a civilized person for miles around! It isn't safe for two women alone."

The head-waggings and the mysterious whispers came from people who had lived all their lives in New Mexico, within two hundred miles of the Rock. Lucia and I chuckled, remembering Felicitas. Felicitas' big black eyes had peered hungrily at us from under her scarlet and orange shawl when we had first visited Acoma. Such is the power of repeated assertions that we had been prepared for ignorance, for monosyllables, even for pidgin English. But Felicitas had said, as she led us about her cloud-shadowed, four-hundred-feet-high Rock, "This is the patio of the old Spanish monastery. Willa Cather speaks of it in Death Comes for the Archbishop. Perhaps you are familiar with the book."

"Write to me," she had begged as we left. "I'd love to get a letter. I haven't had one since I left school two years ago."

"But you haven't a post office," we had said, peering up and down the narrow, solid-rock streets of the Sky City, where three-tiered adobe houses clung like swallows' nests.

"Send it to Acomita," she had instructed. "It's our farming center in the valley below. Some one comes up every few days."

So we had sent letters to Felicitas—letters in which we had been very careful of our grammar. Letters had come back to us from "primitive" Acoma. Among them was an invitation to spend Christmas Day on the Rock, that isolated, windswept mesa top.

As we bumped over some of the worst roads in the most desolate waste lands of New Mexico, it did seem a fantastic way to spend Christmas. A bleak wind was blowing down from snow-packed mountain tops. Clouds scudded wildly over the sky and cast a sinister green light over the surrounding country. It was as if we were seeing it for the first time. Grotesque rocks, carved by wind and storm, took on the form of giants standing before their battlemented dwellings. Desolation stretched as far as we could see—sand-clogged arroyos; twisted, stunted, desert vegetation. In the distance, swimming in a sea of unearthly light, the yellow ocher, straight-up cliffs of Acoma reared themselves from a plain already almost seven thousand feet above sea level.

Filled with misgivings, we parked the car in the dubious shelter of a juniper tree, buttoned our coats tight about us, and started up the switch-back trail toward the summit. Each step was a battle with loose sand that came half way to our knees. The wind sucked between chimney-like chasms and whooped it up with catcalls of derision. It hurled sand sharp as cactus thorns in our faces.

Balancing herself on the edge of a precipice, Lucia shuddered. "I can't help feeling that hundreds of unfriendly eyes are watching us climb this trail the way they watched old Coronado as he passed on his way to Cibola back in 1500. Felicitas may want us. But the rest of the Pueblo may not want us messing around in their Christmas—if they have one, which I doubt."

As we pulled ourselves, gasping and sputtering, to a shelf of rock between gargoyled pinnacles on the summit, we jumped as something separated itself from the shadows. It was only a little girl with a yellow shawl pinned with an enormous safety pin under her chin. She crooked a brown finger and whispered shyly, "We have been expecting you for a long time."

As we followed her along the treeless, solid-rock streets of Acoma, we collected an intrigued procession. Silent, round-eyed little boys in blue overalls followed us; dogs sniffed our legs; a lop-eared burro trailed along; and a flat-eyed billy goat brought up the rear. From nearby corrals, sheep baaed, horses snorted and stood on their hind legs. In the midst of the clamor, the little girl paused at the foot of a ladder that leaned against a three-storied adobe whose levels were set back from each other like giants' steps. On the topmost layer stood Felicitas making encouraging gestures.

Gritting our teeth, we climbed the ladder in spite of the onslaughts of the wind. From the first roof top, deep adobe steps sunk in the walls led to the top floor and Felicitas. Those steps gave on illimitable space on either side. There wasn't so much as a hand rail.

"I can get up, all right," Lucia wailed, "if I do it fast on the run. But I know I can never get back down. I'll have to spend the rest of my life up here between the desert and the sky."

Felicitas' home was a skyey penthouse on the topmost layer. Little windows cut in thick walls looked out over space and swirling light far below. In a corner fireplace no bigger than a beehive, piñon chunks blazed and chuckled. By it stood a piñon Christmas tree decorated with dime store tinsel and shining glass balls. It looked exactly like the one we had left at home beside our own corner fireplace. In a hollowed-out niche in the thick walls, Saint Estebán, the patron saint of Acoma, smiled in Spanish dignity. So he might have looked in any adobe house in Santa Fe.

An ornate American brass bed was spread with gorgeous Navajo blankets. In a corner stood an outmoded sewing machine. From an oilcloth-covered table came the fragrance of crisp loaves fresh baked in outside conical ovens.

A girl came tripping in, her feet enclosed in white deerskin boots reaching to her knees. "I dance in the Ceremonial," she explained, pointing to her beautiful costume. Crimson skirts swirled about her boot tops. A fringed shawl floated like a mantle down her back. Turquoise and silver jewelry, enough to stock a curio store, glittered from her neck, her arms, her ears, her fingers. Straight black hair, with purple high lights, hung to her waist and her big eyes were slightly aslant in her face. The eyes and two circles of cerise paint on her high cheekbones made her look as if she had stepped from an Oriental tapestry.

"We dance the Butterfly Ceremonial," she said. "Listen, you can hear the drums pounding from the kiva."

"We'll have to hurry," Felicitas urged. "We dance in the old church. But first, María has something to show you."

Out we hurried and looked at the space-bounded great steps down to the next roof. "How are you going to get down?" I hissed in Lucia's ear. With her usual aplomb, she solved the difficulty. She simply sat down and bumped, bumped down the steps to the accompaniment of laughter and encouraging cheers of Indians assembled on the roof top.

What María had to show us was a new baby—the most beautiful infant we had ever seen. It lay on a cradle board softened with a modern pillow. Its skin was sun-mellowed adobe, its hair as thick and black as the fur of a little rabbit.

"What are you going to call her?" Lucia asked before I could kick her to remind her of good Indian manners.

But María was equal to the social emergency. "What do you think would be a nice name?" she asked.

Not to be outdone, Lucia met the occasion with inspiration. "Rosemary," she said, "because she is a Rose, and Mary for Christmas."

The little room buzzed with approbation. "Next week the priest comes and we baptize the baby," María planned. "He only gets up here once a year. You Catholic?"

I could see Lucia gulp with longing. More than anything in all the world, she wanted to be godmother to an Indian baby on ancient Acoma. "No," she faltered.

People kept crowding into María's thick-walled little room—men in blue jeans, their heads bound with yellow and purple bandas; women swathed to the eyebrows in bright woolen shawls; children in overalls and gay cotton dresses. "My father, the Governor; my uncle, the War Chief; my brother, my husband." Brown hands were extended. "Feliz Navidad," kindly voices kept repeating. "Feliz Navidad." Never had we felt so welcome and never so at home as in this bare, whitewashed room perched high on ancient Acoma. "Stay all night," the Governor urged. "Stay all week. There will be more dancing. And we elect officers for the next year."

Bent before the wind howling over the barren Rock, we struggled toward the old, twin-belfried church. A procession formed again behind us—men, women, children, dogs, burro, and billy goat. As we stumbled into the semi-darkness of the vast building, Lucia whistled in my ear, "An Indian dance with Oriental accents, given in a 17th century Spanish Catholic church! Pinch me!"

That church was built on the very brink of the cliffs that dropped straight down four hundred feet to the desert below. Sixty feet upward its two-feet-thick adobe walls soared to a ceiling upheld by beams that were the shafts of giant pine trees. "Every pound of adobe dirt was dragged up on the backs of our ancients," Felicitas boasted. "And those great pine trees came in on Indian shoulders from the Turquoise Mountain in the country of the Navajo." Little slits of windows looked off into light-filled space. They made the church seem like a lighthouse perched high above a sea of color.

Nearer and nearer came the pom-pom of the drums. The voices of the chanters echoed along the high ceiling. Deep, resonant tones were lifted in spaced, monotonous syllables. As they sang, the chanters bobbed gently up and down to the rhythm of the dancers. Feet patted the hard-packed adobe floor. Each woman dancer held evergreen branches in outstretched hands. Nearly all the feminine dancing was done with those dramatic arms. The feet simply followed the intricacies of the masculine dance formation. Each face was serious. Dark eyes glowed with religious fervor. Some of the younger dancers among the men had short American hair cuts in contrast with the loose flowing locks of their elders. But their expressions and abandon were the same.

Hour after hour the Indians danced in the old church on Acoma. The drums increased their tempo. Bells jangled faster and faster on bronzed legs. Rattle gourds hissed in outspread arms. Fox skins dangled down sweating backs. Parrot and eagle feathers seemed in full flight from black heads.

Lucia and I clung together to keep a grasp on reality. An early winter dusk seeped in the little slits of windows. It veiled the strange world outside in an indigo net. A few candles were lighted here and there, but they only emphasized the shadows and the murk. In spite of ourselves we were transported; we floated in that indigo blue atmosphere. The old church tore loose from its rock moorings and seemed to float, too, like some bewitched galleon.

The dancing stopped. The wearied dancers disappeared kiva-ward. Back they came in blue levis and cowboy shirts—in calico petticoats and gay head shawls. Without so much as catching a breath, they walked to the steps of the great altar where candles had been lighted. Here in a bower of piñon and juniper boughs was the Christ Child surrounded by the animals of the barnyard. The Indians of Acoma seemed strangely at home in such a scene. Through the half-open door came the baaing of their own sheep and the restless pacing of their own flocks.

On either side of the manger stood a young Acoma lad. He wore rough ranchman's shoes and the big-checked shirt of the cowboy. In his hands was an ancient rifle of Civil War vintage. He was there to guard El Santo Niño. His eyes were deep and serious with the vast responsibility. In spite of his modern American clothes and his Spanish setting, he was all Indian.

Silently, without benefit of clergy, the Indians of Acoma gathered about the manger. No word was spoken. No service was held. In that 17th century Catholic church, which a priest visited but once a year, the "uncivilized" Indians of Acoma presented their gifts like the Wisemen of old—blue and purple corn, scarlet chile, exquisite pottery made by their own hands. And they gave what was probably most precious to them—boxes of soda crackers and cans of milk.

As we crept out of the old church, a boy was ringing the ancient bell in one of the square belfries. Its tones reached only the few on the barren Rock. As far as the eye could see in the gathering darkness, there was only desolation.

Felicitas went as far as the edge of the Rock with us and loaded our arms with her beautiful pottery. It made the gifts we had slipped under her piñon tree seem tawdry and without meaning. All the way down the trail we could see the blur of her shawl-wrapped figure outlined against the winter sky. Fainter and fainter came the notes of her repeated, "Feliz Navidad, Feliz Navidad."

We rode home through dry arroyos and hub-deep sand, under the Christmas stars. Once the clip-clop of a horse sounded in the darkness and we could just make out the figure of a mounted Indian headed late for Christmas on the Rock. "Feliz Navidad," he greeted, lisping his labials like a good Spaniard. There was a little spark in the darkness as he passed. He had lighted his waning cigarrillo with an Anglo gadget known as a lighter.

But on the Rock the Christmas candle lifted high over a dark world.

This is one of a series of sketches about the Indian-Spanish-Anglo cultures of the Southwest which Dorothy L. Pillsbury is writing for COMMON GROUND.

The illustration is by Bernadine Custer.

Social Welfare

The Conference Bulletin

PUBLISHED BY THE

NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF SOCIAL WORK

Volume 57 FALL, 1953 No. 1

IN THIS ISSUE

REPORT on OPERATION QUESTIONNAIRE

by MERRISS CORNELL

BASIC PROBLEMS AND ISSUES

by JOE R. HOFFER

PLAN NOW

to attend

THE 81ST ANNUAL MEETING

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. May 9-14, 1954

THE CONFERENCE BULLETIN
of the
National Conference of Social Work
22 West Gay St., Columbus 15, Ohio

President: Brooks Potter, Boston
Treasurer: Arch Mandel, New York City
Executive Secretary: Joe R. Hoffer, Columbus, Ohio
Editor of the Bulletin: Eula Wyatt, Columbus, Ohio

FALL, 1953

Published four times a year by the National Conference of Social Work.

Sent to all members in consideration of payment of three dollars as part of membership fees.

Entered as second-class matter at Columbus, Ohio, August 25, 1936, under the Act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103. Act of October 3, 1917, Authorized August 25, 1926.

Editorial

It is customary for us to devote the fall issue of the Bulletin to a listing of our 30 year members. We still think it is a good idea because it is the continuing members who make it possible for the Annual Meeting, our publications, our services to the state, regional and international conferences to continue year after year. However, because a number of significant developments have occurred which have implications for the Conference and all its members, we have taken the liberty to break our normal pattern.

The Conference has undertaken a continous self-evaluation of the Annual Meeting by the membership of the Conference. This is conceived of as the introduction of research as an integral part of administration and planning. It has importance we believe not only to the National Conference but to every group in the social welfare field which has a forum, planning, action or educational function. It is important because there has been relatively little evaluation in our field of the effectiveness of the "conference technique" in agency training, local, state, regional, national and international meetings. It is our belief that the findings will be helpful to the National Conference and the methods and techniques useful to our members.

The first project in this program was Operation Q, which has been summarized by Merriss Cornell, our research consultant. In this project the major goal was the analysis of attendees. The article on Basic Issues and Problems takes us into the area of long-term program planning and the vital subject of timeliness. We need to make a complete diagnosis of each of the problems and issues and formulate each problem into sub-problems and specific issues so that an interested group can make a fruitful attack on the possible solutions.

The film listing illustrates an ever growing tool for our use in presenting facts and defining issues.

We hope in the future to continue to keep you up to date on these and similar developments. J. R. H.

Headquarters Hotels for 1954 Annual Meeting

The Ambassador and Ritz-Carleton hotels will be headquarters for the National Conference of Social Work at the 81st Annual Meeting which will be held in Atlantic City May 9-14. Associate groups have been assigned to the following hotels;

Advisory Committee on Citizen Participation of Community Chests and Councils of America and the National Social Welfare Assembly	Ambassador
American Association of Group Workers	Chelsea
American Assoc. of Medical Social Workers	Ritz-Carlton
American Assoc. of Psychiatric Social Workers	Brighton
American Association of Social Workers	Chelsea
American Cancer Society	Shelburne
American Federation of International Institutes	Brighton
American Home Economics Association	Brighton
American Legion Natl. Child Welfare Division	Traymore
American National Red Cross	Ritz-Carlton
American Public Welfare Association	Ambassador
Association for the Study of Community Organization	Ambassador
Child Welfare League of America	Ambassador
Community Chests and Councils of America, Inc.	Ambassador
Committee on Social Service Exchange, Community Chests and Councils of America	Ambassador
Council on Social Work Education	Traymore
Family Service Association of America	Mayflower
Florence Crittenton Homes Association	Ritz-Carlton
National Association of School Social Workers	Madison
National Association of Training Schools and Juvenile Agencies	Shelburne
National Association on Service to Unmarried Parents	Ritz-Carlton
National CIO Community Services Committee	Ritz-Carlton
National Committee on the Social Aspects of Epilepsy	Ritz-Carlton
National Federation of Settlements and Neighborhood Centers	Brighton
National Travelers Aid Association	Shelburne
Planned Parenthood Federation of America	Traymore
The Salvation Army	Madison

Conference Calendar

The following meetings have been held recently or are being planned for the near future:

October 2 and 3—Program Committee, New York City

November 4-6—Institute on Methods of Social Action, New Orleans

November 20 and 21—Executive Committee, Columbus

January 8 and 9—Program Committee, New York

January 28—State Conference Secretaries, St. Louis

February 13 and 14—Steering Committee of the Committee on Nominations, Columbus

March 22—Meeting of Officers, New York.

1954 Annual Meeting

PROGRAM COMMITTEE

The Program Committee met in the Carnegie Endowment International Center in New York City on Friday and Saturday, October 2 and 3, under the chairmanship of Brooks Potter, President of the Conference. All of the Section and Common Service Committee chairmen were present, along with most of the members-at-large.

During the course of the two days attention was given to the theme for the 1954 Annual Meeting, subjects and speakers for the General Sessions and the plans for the Section and Common Service Committee meetings. The Program Committe is responsible for the meetings held on Sunday evening, Monday, Wednesday and Friday during the period of the Annual Meeting. It has no responsibility for the content or scheduling of the Associate Group meetings, although frequently suggestions of subjects which might be covered in one or more Associate Group meetings are passed on to the appropriate organizations.

Two innovations for the 1954 Annual Meeting were discussed by the Committee. One was the selection of three social scientists to deliver the Lindeman Memorial Lectures, which were described in the summer issue of the Conference Bulletin. Each of the social scientists will speak at a meeting of one of the three Sections of the Conference. The second was the abstracts which had been submitted by Conference members and others in response to the announcement that the Program Committe was interested in knowing about papers which might be available for the program. Approximately thirty abstracts were received prior to October 1, the closing date for the 1954 Annual Meeting, and have been duplicated and distributed to the appropriate Sections and Committees. These are now being considered along with other program suggestions received from various sources.

Table of Contents

	Page
Basic Problems and Issues	9, 10
Books—New List	12
Conference Calendar	2
Editorial	2
Film Notes	8
Film Program for Atlantic City	11
Hotels for Associated Groups	2
International Conference	4
Madras Book Exhibit	4
NCSW Publications	3, 11
New Orleans Institute	4
Nominations Suggestions	4
Officers of the Conference	5
Operation Questionnaire	6, 7
Plans for 81st Annual Meeting	3

ASSOCIATE GROUPS

A meeting of the program representatives of the Associate Groups of the Conference was held in New York on Monday, October 5. This was devoted to a general discussion of plans for the 1954 Annual Meeting. One of the chief items on the agenda was the Combined Associate Group meetings. Various possible topics for these meetings were discussed, and the Associate Groups were asked to consider the matter further, so that they would be in a position to indicate which subjects they felt were to be of importance when they were asked to do so.

SOCIAL SECURITY

New Volume Just off the press!

Discussion of the program as it now operates and changes under consideration as presented at the 80th

ANNUAL MEETING

63 pp. — $1.25 (to regular members $1.00)

available at

National Conference of Social Work

22 W. Gay Street, Columbus 15, Ohio

Institute on Methods of Social Action

The New Orleans Institute was sponsored by the National Conference of Social Work and the Louisiana Conference of Social Welfare. The theme "Improving Your Community and State—Blue Print for Action in Social Welfare", evoked much interest. More than 200 persons were registered attendees. The National Resource consultants were; Arthur Dunham, Professor of Community Organization, School of Social Work, University of Michigan, Warren Schmidt, Area Project Coordinator, Adult Education Association, Nelson Jackson, Director of Community Services, National Urban League, Joseph P. Anderson, Executive Secretary, American Association of Social Workers, Mrs. Geneva Mathiason, Executive Secretary, Committee on the Aging, National Welfare Assembly, Margaret Berry, United Community Services, and Berkley F. Watterson, National C.I.O. Community Services Committee. The very high quality of the meetings seemed to indicate publication of the proceedings. Plans are under way and Irving Weissman and Ludwig Guckenheimer have been chosen as editors.

News of The International Conference of Social Work

The Seventh International Conference of Social Work will be held in Toronto, Canada on June 27 to July 2, 1954. The theme is "Promoting Social Welfare through Self-Help and Cooperative Action". Registration must be made in advance not later than April 1, 1954, must be accompanied by the $10.00 fee and sent to the U. S. Committee of the Conference at 345 E. 46th St., New York 17, N. Y. It will be necessary to limit the registrations from Canada and the United States, in which case those received first will be given preference. Attendance will be limited to dues-paying members of the International Conference of Social Work. Six writers have been chosen to prepare working papers based on discussions of various phases of the theme by organizations and local groups. If you are interested in participating in these preliminary discussions, the U. S. Committee will be glad to send you more information.

Study tours are being planned for attendance at the Conference, an orientation seminar and group travel after the Conference is over. Detailed information on these tours is also available from the U. S. Committee.

Proceedings of the Madras Conference are now available from the U. S. Committee. The title is "Social Service and the Standard of Living" and includes the papers presented at the Plenary Sessions, the reports of the Commissions, the Open Discussions, the meetings of the International Schools of Social Work and sundry "official papers". The book should be of special interest in continuity of development from Madras to Toronto. Price: 3.00 to members; 4.00 to non-members.

The Madras Combined Book Exhibit Becomes A Permanent Library

American publishers and social welfare organizations contributed 800 books to a Combined Book Exhibit at the 6th International Conference of Social Work held in Madras India last December. Worth mentioning is the fact that, they paid more for the privilege of displaying their books in India with scant hope of receiving enough orders to repay them for the cost. Their fees were turned over to the Indian Conference to defray expenses of the exhibit.

The whole project was an interesting example of cooperation between a number of groups. The NCSW contributed its staff services in promoting and planning the project. The U.S. Committee ICSW sponsored the project and helped developed it. The publishers furnished the books and paid the exhibit costs. The U.S. Department of State transported the books to Madras. The Indian Conference of Social Work made all local arrangements and printed the catalogue.

In May the entire exhibit was presented to the Indian Conference of Social Work in formal ceremonies at the Jehangir Art Gallery in Bombay. Miss Evelyn W. Hersey, Social Welfare Attache, American Embassy at New Delhi made the presentation. Dr. Shri Jivraj Mehta, Minister for Finance, Prohibition and Industries received the gift as President of the Indian Conference of Social Work.

Dr. Mehta said the books would be used as a nucleus of a library to be established by the Indian Conference at its central office in an easily accessible area of the city of Bombay. Before going permanently to the office of the Indian Conference, the 800 books were placed on display for three days in a public hall in Bombay.

"The books on social work could be used by Indian students for solving problems facing them." (Free Press Journal May 1, 1953).

Copies of the Madras Combined Book Exhibit Catalogue are available on request at the office of the U. S. Committee.

Nominations Suggestions

The Steering Committee of the Committee on Nominations will meet in Columbus February 13 & 14. All Conference members are urged to send to the National Office the names of persons qualified for positions as officers of the Conference or members of Committees or Sections. Accompanying these suggestions should be information about these possible candidates. The more information the Committe has the better will be its recommendations to the Nominating Committee. Special forms for submitting names may be secured from the National Office but these are not essential. It is the suggestions we need.

CONFERENCE PERSONALITIES

PRESIDENT

BROOKS POTTER, a lawyer of Boston, Mass., is retiring president of the Family Service Association of America. He is the first lay president we have had for a number of years. His work with Mass. Welfare organizations furnished excellent background for leadership of the Conference.

FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT

MEYER KESTNBAUM has been president of the firm of Hart, Schaffner & Marx since 1941 and has been with the company since his graduation from Harvard. Graduate School of Business Administration. He has been a director of the Community Fund of Metropolitan Chicago, the Chicago Council of Foreign Relations and other civic organizations. President of the Welfare Council, Board of governors of International House, he is now chairman of the Board of Trustees of the committee for Economic Development.

SECOND VICE-PRESIDENT

C. W. PFEIFFER has spent his life in the field of Community organization. He is now executive secretary of the Welfare Planning Council, Los Angeles Region where he has been since 1942. He has worked with Community Chests and Councils of Social Agencies in Minnesota and Missouri and on the national council as Board member. He is a member of the Executive Committee of National Health and Welfare Retirement Association.

THIRD VICE-PRESIDENT

JOSEPH P. ANDERSON is Executive Secretary of the A.A.S.W. He is secretary of the Council on Social Work Education, a member of the National Budget Committee and the Executive Committee of the NSWA. He is active in International Social Work and a member of the U. S. Committee.

SECRETARY

HARLEIGH B. TRECKER Secretary, is Dean of the School of Social work of the University of Connecticut where he has been for the past two years. For ten years prior to that he was professor at the School of Social Work, University of California, Los Angeles, California. He is president of the American Association of Group Workers and has written a number of articles, and books on group work. His most recent publication is "How to Work with Groups" by Woman's press 1952.

TREASURER

ARCH MANDEL is Assoc. Executive Director of the Community Chests and Councils of America where he has served for a number of years.

He has been treasurer of the National Conference of Social Work for the past 17 years.

OPERATION QUESTIONNAIRE

by Merriss Cornell

A Report on the Cleveland Analysis of Attendees

At Cleveland – 1953

This report is a summary of the study of registrants at the Cleveland Annual Meeting, 1953. The study was designed to help in the process of evaluating the National Conference, by providing information about the people who attend and some of their reasons for attending. Your Program Committee will use the results in planning future Annual Meetings. We are indebted to the many persons who participated in planning and carrying out the study to its completion as well as the registrants who provided the basic data. (See the Bulletin, Summer 1953 for more background on the study).

Most registrants cooperated in filling out the questionnaires. The 4698 questionnaires that were sufficiently complete to tabulate represented 9 out of 10 of the registrants. Some of the attendees in the rush to complete registration turned in blank or nearly blank questionnaires. Others went to the other extreme and checked too much.

WHO ATTENDS?

A little less than 90 per cent of the attendees reported that they were employed in social work. Lay attendance was small — 272 persons or 5.8 per cent. The only sizeable group among the lay persons were 97 housewives who were board members or volunteers. The following percentages are based on the 4698 attendees reporting:

	Per cent
Employed in social work	88.8
Other occupations—lay persons	5.8
Students	5.4

The 88.8 per cent who reported that they were employed in social work represented 4174 persons. The largest part of this group was employed in voluntary non-sectarian agencies:

		Per cent
Voluntary		60.6
Sectarian	17.6
Non-sectarian	43.0
Governmental		37.5
Others (and no report)		1.9

SPECIALTY

Specialty in social work was difficult to classify. One out of 8 attendees checked more than one specialty. Others did not find their specialty listed and may have checked a class that was not appropriate. In the following tabulation each specialty was counted whether checked alone or with another:

	Per cent
Child welfare	22.4
Group work and recreation	15.4
Family service	13.5
Medical social work	12.8
Community organization	12.6
Mental health services	12.6
Public assistance	9.6
Research	2.9
School social work	2.7
Other	11.3

Among the "others" were a variety of persons such as, teachers, administrators, clergy, and probation, correctional, and rehabilitation workers.

POSITION

Some have said that the administrator is about the only person who attends the Conference. The administrator did account for a little over one-third of the registrants but he was closely followed by the practitioner. The percentages in the following chart were based on the 4174 registrants employed in social work:

SALARY

The annual salaries of social workers attending the Conference were well above the salaries of all social workers reported in the Bureau of Labor Statistics study in 1950:

	Per cent Cleveland 1953	B.L.S. 1950
Under $3,600	19.1	71.0
$3,600 to $5,999	56.5	25.4
$6,000 and over	24.4	3.6

EXPENSES PAID?

The employing agency paid the expenses of nearly one-half of all the social workers attending at Cleveland. If the attendees from Cleveland Metropolitan Area were excluded, the proportion with all expenses paid would be increased by about four per cent. The following percentages are based on 4085 social workers who answered the question:

	Per cent
All or nearly all	49.3
Partial	21.9
None	28.8

Could we not find a way for more practitioners to attend this Social Welfare Forum? Many of our higher-salaried administrators have their expenses paid.

HERE, THERE, AND EVERYWHERE

The Conference can be proud of the wide geographical representation of its attendees. Of course, there were:

	Registrants	Per cent
From Cleveland Area	702	14.9
From Ohio	1161	24.7

But represented among the registrants were:

4 out of 5 of the 168 U. S. Metropolitan Areas
46 of the 48 States and the District of Columbia
4 U. S. Territories
3 Canadian Provinces
18 Foreign Countries

Besides Ohio there were seven other states with more than 100 registrants, they were in order:

	Registrants
New York	732
Michigan	341
Illinois	339
Pennsylvania	318
District of Columbia	140
Indiana	128
Massachusetts	111
California	86

GEOGRAPHIC LEVEL OF OPERATION

The Conference reaches down to the grass roots and at the same time has wide geographic representation. Nearly three-fifths of the social workers report that their agency operates on the local level:

	Per cent
Local level	56.9
State or district	24.4
National or regional	13.2
International	5.5

WHY ATTEND?

One of the biggest questions for the Conference planner is - why do people attend? Each person was asked to check three major reasons. A few persons checked more than three but more tended to check less than three. The percentages in the check are based on the total of 4698 attendees reporting:

MEMBERSHIP

Over two-thirds of the persons attending the National Conference reported affiliation thru either individual or agency membership. Many of the attendees failed to answer the questions about membership or did not know whether their agency had membership in the National Conference. The results were as follows:

Individual or agency membership	Per cent
Both	16.1
Individual only	21.6
Agency only	29.9
Neither	14.8
No report	17.6

DAILY ATTENDANCE

Closely related to reasons for attendance is the daily pattern. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday June 1, 3, and 5 were set aside for regular Conference Meetings with the opening session coming on Sunday evening Tuesday and Thursday June 2 and 4 plus the three early meeting days of Friday, Saturday, and Sunday were for Associate and other special Group Meetings. The average attendee stayed about four and one-half days. The days from Sunday thru Friday were by far the biggest. About 7 out of 8 persons were in attendance on Tuesday - the peak day. These percentages are also based on 4698 attendees:

		Per cent
Friday	May 29	9.0
Saturday	May 30	14.9
Sunday	May 31	50.8
Monday	June 1	78.8
Tuesday	June 2	87.3
Wednesday	June 3	83.5
Thursday	June 4	71.5
Friday	June 5	49.0

PAST ATTENDANCE

We were curious to learn what if any relationship existed between attendance at Cleveland in 1953 and attendance during recent years. Registrants were asked to check each of the last five meetings they had attended (1948 to 1952) or some earlier meeting. About 30 per cent of the 4698 attendees reporting checked no previous meeting. But among the other 70 per cent, every possible pattern of attendance was represented—from 322 persons reporting at least 6 straight years to 878 persons with but one prior year. The summary of all previous years checked is as follows:

	Per cent
No previous meeting	30.0
Chicago 1952	34.4
Atlantic City 1951	27.4
Atlantic City 1950	26.7
Cleveland 1949	31.7
Atlantic City 1948	22.6
Some earlier meeting	35.1

BUT WHAT NEXT?

We could now put together the imaginary "typical" attendee but we need to know something more important in our evaluation of Annual Meetings. We need to know how he thinks and reacts toward the various meetings and sessions, we need answers to such questions as:

Do you approve of the choice of topics for discussion? of speakers? of discussants? of panel participants? Which topics attracted large attendance? Did the group participate actively in the discussion?

These and many other questions would form a framework for a more complete evaluation. Let's learn more in '54!

Film Notes

by JOHN HORWITZ

CHILDREN IN TROUBLE (10 minutes) was produced by March of Time for the New York State Youth Commission, 66 Beaver St., Albany 7, N. Y. It devotes itself to demonstrating a single principle: joint action by police, schools, home, church and social agencies can cope with juvenile delinquency far more effectively than any group alone. The picture includes several effective animated diagrams.

PASSION FOR LIFE (85 minutes) distributed by Brandon Films, 200 W. 57th St., New York City. This French language film with English titles tells the simple story of a village school teacher who completely changes the flavor of life in his community by the impact of his steadfast devotion to youth. This film is the definitive presentation of "modern" education in terms of the spirit of free inquiry and a passion for freedom—even freedom for children. Without an attractive building, virtually without educational materials, the teacher opens the world to his children and through their lively curiosity stimulates a new civic pride in the adult inhabitants of the village.

TALE OF TWO TOWNS (40 minutes) distributed by Audio Visual Education Center, 4028 Administration Building, Ann Arbor, Michigan. A deliberate and detailed presentation of the effect upon civic organization of personal rivalries in one town and a good natured give-and-take in another. Here, in homely episode after episode is a realistic picture of the mesh of relationship that goes into community organization process. People who live in middle-sized cities, especially, will recognize many familiar types; people who can make or break the collective enterprise every time.

PLAYTOWN, U.S.A. (23 minutes) Association Films, 35 W. 45th Street, New York City 19, N. Y. A blunt exposition of the problems involved in organizing community support for a public recreation program. How recreation fits into people's lives and how they can exert themselves to get adequate facilities and a competent staff.

STEP BY STEP (45 minutes) Institute of Film Techniques, C.C.N.Y., 139 St. & Convent Avenue, New York City, N. Y. In telling how "detached" workers approach and help teen-age youth in delinquent and potentially-delinquent street gangs, this picture gives a notably vivid treatment of group work process. The undergraduate volunteer who takes on the task has surprising success with the most demanding problems, but the overall approach is clear and thought-provoking.

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE (20 minutes) R K O for National Federation of Settlements, 129 East 52nd Street, New York City 22, N. Y. — A vivid presentation, through the eyes of a lonely old man, of the variety of services offered by a modern settlement house. The "story line" centers around a retired shoemaker's dream of setting up a repair service in the House as a community project. While the particular undertaking may be a unique one, the overall treatment of the social roots and objectives of the Agency apply in many other settings.

Philosophy and Social Welfare

A bibliography compiled by William Mansdorf for Master's Thesis — Ohio State University, 1953
All articles are from the Proceedings of the National Conference of Social Work

Austin, Lucile N. "Evolution of Our Case Work Concepts". 1938.

Cannon, Antoinette. "Recent Changes in the Philosophy of Social Work". 1933.

Dressler, David. "Casework With the Adult Offender". 1942.

Dunham, Arthur. "What is the Job of the Community Organization Worker". 1948.

Faatz, Anita J. "Interpretation in the Public Agency". 1941.

Hamilton, Gordon. "The Underlying Philosophy of Casework Today". 1941.

Hathaway, Marion. "Social Action and Professional Education". 1944.

Hoey, Jane M. "Social Work Concepts and Methods in the Post-War World". 1944.

Hoey, Jane M. "Human Rights and Social Work". Social Work in the Current Scene. 1949.

Johnson, Arlien. "Science and Social Work". 1947.

Kasius, Peter. "Conflicting Theories in Public Assistance". 1942.

Lally, Dorothy. "Comments on the International Fellowship Program". 1952.

Lindeman, Eduard C. "Democracy and Social Work". 1948.

Mayo, Leonard. "The Future for Social Work". 1944.

Mayo, Leonard. "Basic Issues in Social Work". 1948.

McGrath, Earl J. "The Cooperation of Education and Social Work". 1949.

Miles, Arthur P. "Meeting Economic Need as Related to Insurance Eligibility". 1942.

Oxnam, G. Bromley. "Goals for Social Work in a Contemporary Society". 1948.

Potter, Ellen C. "The Year of Decision for Social Work". 1945.

Pray, Kenneth L. M. "Social Work and Social Action". 1945.

Pray, Kenneth L. M. "When is Community organization, Social Work Practice?" 1947.

Wilson, Gertrude. "Today's Social Situation—a Challenge for Action". 1949.

Witmer, Helen Leland. "Some Underlying Principles of Research in Social Casework". 1942.

Basic Problems and Issues in Social Welfare

by JOE R. HOFFER

What are the basic problems and issues in social welfare today? How can we marshall our forces to solve them? These and many other questions have been uppermost in our minds for some time.

The National Conference of Social Work feels that if we move with appropriate care and deliberateness in dealing with the basic issues troubling us, we might do much to clarify them, stimulate fruitful consideration of them generally, and assist materially in the advancement of social welfare.

The field of social welfare has vast forum resources in the International Conference of Social Work, the National Conference, state conferences, national agency meetings and many special conferences. Our major task now is to define our targets and close our ranks for the achievement of our common goals.

The Joint Committee on Program Planning (N.C.S.W. and N.S.W.A.) came to grips with this vast problem and presented some tentative conclusions in a Progress Report on Basic Problems and Issues for Forum Treatment. This report grew out of a letter which was sent early in 1951 to approximately one hundred leaders in the social welfare field, and approximately 60 Associated Group members of the National Conference and Affiliates of the Assembly, asking for their views as to the most important social welfare problems and issues requiring forum consideration during the next two or three years both in the Annual Meeting of the National Conference of Social Work and in meetings sponsored by other organizations.

The following criteria were used in selecting the problems and issues:

1. It must be one on which the social welfare community has a contribution to make;
2. It must be generic or of general interest to the social welfare field;
3. It must be appropriate for forum treatment.

The problems and issues which emerged from the material received may be summarized in the following manner:

I. Factors Effecting the Development of Social Service

1. How can we secure better public understanding of social welfare?

   The general public appears to have little understanding of the underlying philosophy and concepts on which social welfare services are based. Much of the publicity about social welfare in the past has been based on a purely emotional appeal with little interpretation of the values inherent in welfare programs or of the reasons why there is a need for them. Many social workers have shied away from telling their story and have been accused of lacking a news sense.

2. Is social work essential to defense?

   Social workers and social welfare organizations are in a dilemma regarding their role in the mounting mobilization and defense efforts. The essentiality of social welfare is being questioned by some individuals and groups who feel that expenditures for the armed forces should have priority and that social welfare services and expenditures should be curtailed.

3. How do the changing patterns of population and of community organization affect social welfare services?

   The country today is faced with many new and broader social problems due to population growth and changes. These problems include housing, with its pressures on the family; the need for additional recreation facilities, new challenges in race relations and unprecedented demands on existing health facilities.

II. Functions of Social Work

1. What can we do to insure security for all our citizens?

   The UN Declaration of Human Rights states "Everyone has a right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and his family". Social workers believe that this principle is basic and that social services, including economic aid, should be available to all persons in need regardless of geographic location, residence, race or religion. In order to accomplish this, adequate financing of both governmental and voluntary programs is essential. Recently there have been evidences of citizen resistance to public spending for welfare, as well as to contributing for increased budgets for voluntary agencies.

2. What should be the role of social work in preventing human erosion and waste?

   As we continue in a period of crisis and the nation moves into high gear in terms of mobilization, the importance of preserving and strengthening each individual increases. We need to look at precisely the nature of the problem and the amount of loss when persons do not function because of emotional and social maladjustments, lack of education and physical handicaps.

3. To what extent should social workers participate in social action?

   It is commonly accepted that social workers are the servants of the people and exist for the purpose of being made use of by them. There are some who believe that in this capacity they should confine their activities to providing knowledge about matters within their special competence.

III. Relationships Within the Field

1. How can we preserve local initiative and citizen responsibility in social welfare?

   There are many factors in both public and voluntary welfare programs which tend to discourage participation and a sense of responsibility on the part of citizens generally. Citizens feel remote from the apparent sources of authority and as a result engage in negative criticism and irresponsible opposition.

2. What should be the inter-relationship of voluntary and government effort in social welfare?

   There appears to be increasing misunderstanding regarding the role and relationship of public and voluntary agencies. In some places competitive feeling has developed which has resulted in poorer quality of service and higher costs to taxpayers and contributors.

3. What should be the role of social work in providing health services?

   The Federal Emergency Relief Administration made a signal contribution to the welfare of needy persons when it declared medical care to be an essential of life. Welfare agencies are one of the largest purchasers of medical services today. Therefore, sound policy and procedures established within the welfare framework would provide leadership and guidance for the administration of medical services for other groups in the population.

4. Have we over-specialized?

   Local planning groups are almost universally concerned with health, welfare, and recreation. Nationally there is a tendency to segregate these three fields despite their close interrelationship as parts of a total community program of services. In addition, many welfare services and problem areas cut across functional lines, e.g. services to age groups, rehabilitation, delinquency and crime, etc. Our practice of setting up categories raises questions not only in terms of planning but also in administration. There is some sentiment that all categories should be abolished and that only need should be the criterion for eligibility.

5. What should be our role in relation to displaced persons and migrants?

   The concern with immigration and problems of resettlement will be a continuing one. As tensions increase in the world and as boundaries shift, the number of refugees will increase and attention will have to be given to the solution of their problems. More than 250,000 individuals have entered the United States under the Displaced Persons Act of 1948. Problems of Americanization, education, etc. need attention. In addition, the problem of migrants within this country is increasing in importance and needs special attention.

6. Federal and State Relationships

   The President has appointed a Commission on Intergovernmental Relations to study and investigate all the present activities in which the Federal aid is extended to state and local government. The appointment of this Commission has highlighted an important area of relationships which is of vital concern to the field of social welfare. They are some who believe that "Charity belongs at home". Still others believe that the federal government should assume even greater responsibilities. In general, it is agreed that we must recognize substantial areas of gray in the landscape of federal, state and local government.

Next Steps

Our first task, I believe, is to re-examine these problems and issues in the light of present developments and the state of the nation and the world. An attempt could be made to determine some priorities although that will be a difficult job. Individual groups may have more success because of their specific objectives and resources. The following criteria have been suggested which individual organizations with forum responsibilities might use in determining priorities.

a. The problems and issues should be appropriate for inclusion in the program of a social welfare organization and for the particular forum or program in which it is included;

b. The seriousness of the problem to the person affected;

c. The seriousness of the problem to the public including the family;

d. The frequency of the problem;

e. The extent of knowledge and techniques available to enable us to do something about the problem if the forum extends beyond the area of research;

f. The readiness of the public to do something about the problem. In other words, as between two problems otherwise equal, there would be sense in tackling the one which the public is willing to accept.

Members of the Conference are requested to review these tentative proposals and send their comments and suggestions to the Conference office. A future issue of the Bulletin will be devoted to the presentation of the returns and the data will be referred to appropriate groups for their study and attention.

Film Program for Atlantic City

by JOHN HORWITZ, NCSW Film Chairman

Screening of films produced by or for member agencies will be a feature of the program planned by the Film Committee for the Atlantic City Conference next May. There also will be the usual series of showings of notable new films of interest to social workers.

Agencies which have produced sound movies of their own on budgets of $500 or less are urged to write to John Horwitz, Film Committee Chairman, care of NCSW, 22 W. Gay St., Columbus, Ohio. The Film Committee will go over descriptions of available pictures and plans to preview close to two dozen, in order to select three or four low-budget "home made" agency pictures for presentation at the Conference. "Shoe string" productions can have real merit and their makers are urged to write and "tell all". However, these films will not be in competition with professionally produced product.

Selected films professionally produced for social agency public relations will be presented at a special showing at the Conference. Agencies, chests and national bodies that feel they have something "out of the ordinary" in the field of interpretation are invited to forward a brief description to Film Committee at the NCSW office.

Pictures dealing with substantive problems and processes in social work and related fields will continue to be the feature attraction of our film schedule. The Film Committee is especially interested in learning about pictures spelling out THE "HOW" OF SOCIAL WORK. There are a goodly number of stories about why families break up, how juvenile gangs get into trouble, why social conditions are oppressive. But when it comes to picturing in equal detail the way social workers cope with such problems, not too many files are available.

The Film Committee will be busy between now and Conference time with a series of preview sessions, to pick "the cream of the crop" for presentation in Atlantic City. Since it is possible to screen only two or three films of every ten offered, NO PICTURES SHOULD BE SHIPPED FOR PREVIEW UNTIL REQUESTED. Film Committee is, however, very desirous of receiving a descriptive paragraph or two about any and all pictures Conference members feel should be considered.

Elsa Volckmann and a group of film specialists with national agencies in New York City are passing along picture suggestions. A preview panel of film people, social work practitioners and executives in Columbus will be making the final selections and arranging program. John Horwitz, who heads up Film Committee work this year has been active in Columbus, Pittsburgh, Washington, and New York film circles for the past eighteen years.

NCSW Publications

	Regular Price	Price to members ($7.50 or more)
1953 Social Welfare Forum—1953 Proceedings	~~$4.75~~	Free
Additional Copies	~~4.75~~ 5.00	~~$4.75~~
1953 Selected Papers in Casework	1.75	1.25
1953 Selected Papers in Group Work and Community Organization	1.75	1.25
1953 Social Security in 1953	1.25	1.00
1952 Selected Papers in Casework	1.75	1.25
1952 Selected Papers in Group Work and Community Organization	1.75	1.25
1952 Selected Papers on Aging	1.00	.75
1952 Social Welfare Forum—1952 Proceedings	4.75	4.75
1951 Selected Papers in Casework	1.75	1.25
1951 Selected Papers in Group Work and Community Organization	1.75	1.25
1951 Social Welfare Forum—1951 Proceedings	5.00	5.00

SIGNIFICANT BOOKS IN SOCIAL WELFARE

Offered at 10% discount to members paying dues of $7.50 or more.

SPECIAL SERVICE TO MEMBERS

	Price
Adolescent and His World by Irene M. Josselyn	$1.75
Attitudes Toward Giving by F. E. Andrews
Better Board Meetings by Mary Routzahn	2.00
Children in Trouble by Frank Cohen	3.50
Children Who Hate by Redl and Wineman	3.50
Creative Group Living by Susanne Schulze	~~3.75~~ 5.00
Community Planning for Human Services by Bradley Buell and Associates	5.50
Community Organization and Agency Responsibility by Johns and DeMarche	~~2.00~~ 3.75
Community Welfare Organization by Herbert Stroup	6.00
Control From Within by Redl and Wineman	4.50
Delinquents in the Making by Sheldon and Eleanor Glueck	3.00
How to be a Board or Committee Member by Roy Sorenson	1.00
How to Work with Groups by Audrey and Harleigh Trecker	3.00
Measuring Results in Social Work by David French	3.00
Patients are People by Minna Field	3.75
Personality in the Making by Witmer and Kotinsky	4.50
Principles of Intensive Psychotherapy by Frieda Fromm	3.75
Readings in Group Work by Dorothea Sullivan	4.50
Recreation for the Aging by Arthur M. Williams	3.00
Social Program for Older People by Jerome Kaplan	3.00
Social Work Education in the U. S. by Hollis and Taylor	5.50
Social Work Year Book	6.00
Supervision—Principles and Methods by Margaret Williamson	3.00
Theory and Practice of Social Case Work by Gordon Hamilton	4.00
Trends in Social Work by Frank Bruno	4.50
Your Committee in Community Action by Clarence King	2.00

MAIL TO 22 W. GAY ST. COLUMBUS 15, OHIO

MEMBERSHIP AND ORDER FORM

Name _____ Date _____

Address _____ Amount for NCSW Books _____

_____ Amount for Significant Books _____

Discount to Regular Members _____

Agency _____ Total Amount for Books _____

Amount for Membership _____

☐ Please Bill Me

☐ Check Enclosed

Total _____

R E P O R T

O F

CONFERENCE ON HUMAN RIGHTS AND WORLD ORDER

The Lutheran Church of the Redeemer
Atlanta, Georgia
May 8 and 9, 1947

Sponsored by

Georgia Council of Church Women
Woman's Society of Christian Service
Southeastern Jurisdiction
Southern Regional Council

Mrs. M. E. Tilly
Chairman

I. PURPOSE

The Conference was planned in order to bring together "representative" individuals of various racial, cultural, and economic groups for the purpose of interpreting "Human Rights" in the world scene today, and adapting them to local, regional and national practices.

An added purpose was to undergird the forthcoming report of President Truman's Civil Rights Committee and to prepare the leaders of women's organizations of the South to face clearly and understandingly that the denial of human rights to any group anywhere affects the peace and safety of all people everywhere.

II. DELEGATIONS IN ATTENDANCE

A. A total of 212 persons attended the Conference.

B. States represented were Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, New York, Tennessee, Mississippi, Kentucky, California, Washington, D.C., Virginia, Oklahoma. - Total 13

C. Denominations represented were Methodist, Episcopal, Christian (Disciples), Lutheran, Presbyterian, Jewish, Salvation Army, Baptist, Congregational, Baha'i World Faith, Unitarian-Universalist, African Methodist Episcopal Church, Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. Total 13.

D. Organizations represented were

Agnes Scott College
American Red Cross
Americans for Democratic Action
Anti-Defamation League
Atlanta Christian Council
Atlanta Civil Liberties Committee
Atlanta Journal
Atlanta Urban League
Atlanta University

Baha'i World Faith
B'nai B'rith Women of Atlanta

Civil Rights Division, U. S. Dept. of Justice
Committee on Woman's Work, Presbyterian Church, U. S.

Emory University

Organizations represented (Continued)

Farm Home Administration
Federal Council of Churches

Georgia Citizens Council
Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation
Georgia Conference on Social Welfare
Georgia Council of Christian Women (Disciples)
Georgia Council of Church Women

Athens Council of Church Women
Atlanta Council of Church Women
Augusta Council of Church Women
DeKalb Council of Church Women
Macon Council of Church Women
Marietta Council of Church Women

Georgia School of Technology
Georgia Workers Education Service

Jewish Council of Women

League of Women Voters

Metropolitan Council of Negro Women

National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
Northern Conference, Woman's Society, Lutheran Synod Georgia-Alabama

Piedmont College

Salvation Army
Scarritt College
Spelman College
Southern Field Division, Nat'l. Urban League
Southern Regional Council
Social Service Index

Teamsters of A. F. of L.

Woman's Auxiliary to the National Council (Episcopal)
Woman's Auxiliary, Synod of Georgia, Presbyterian U.S.
Woman's Bureau, Department of Labor
Woman's Connectional Council, C.M.E. Church
Woman's Division Christian Service (Methodist)

Womans's Society of Christian Service,
Southeastern Jurisdiction

Alabama Conference
Atlanta Conference
(Central Juris.)
Florida Conference
Holston Conference
Kentucky Conference
Louisville Conference
Mississippi Conference
Mississippi Conference
(Central Juris.)
North Alabama Conference
North Carolina Conference
North Georgia Conference
North Mississippi Conference
Savannah Conference
(Central Juris.)
South Carolina Conference
South Carolina Conference
(Central Juris.)
Tennessee Conference
Upper South Carolina Conference
Virginia Conference

III. PROGRAM

Although thirty people are listed as speakers and resource people, we had only one substitution.

A. The first session was for orientation.
Mr. Turner Smith, Chief of Civil Rights Division of U. S. Dept. of Justice defined civil rights under Federal and State legistation.
Dr. Harrison McMaims, First Christian Church, Atlanta - gave the basic spiritual foundations that should underlie study and action in the field of Human Rights. The session was followed by a lunch of cereal served to children of war devasted countries. Persons were privileged to pay any amount they wished for the lunch, the money to be sent to overseas relief. The collection amounted to $100.00.
If the film strips "Seeds of Destiny" and "Brotherhood of Man", shown during the luncheon had preceded it, the collection would have been larger.

B. Three afternoon workshops ran simultaneously for three hours. In the workshops discussion was intensive and full and sometimes heated. Agreement or compromise was attained on all points before others were taken up.

C. The findings committees met from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock. The reports were mimeographed overnight. The next morning an hour was given to the quiet study of reports so that every person had an opportunity to read through them and have his or her notations ready for discussion.

Two hours were given over to the discussion. Great pains were taken with phrases, etc. I have never been with a more serious or hard working group.

See Report of Findings Attached.

D. The night session presented 3 speakers, Dr. Williams Holmes Border Miss Lillian Schaerer, Dr. Richard Fagley.

IV. FROM THE CLOSING CHALLENGE BY DR. JOHN A. BROKHOFF:

"We have been sitting here, discussing and deciding about basic human rights. If you could put into action the recommendations you have here, you would change society - you would be bringing the Kingdom of God on earth. You have done well in terms of knowledge, but knowledge is not enough - and if there is any unforgivable thing about a convention or conference or study group it is that we spend so much time in studying and thinking and do nothing. We merely work out nice phrases in terms of "we recommend" and do nothing. We need action now. One of the things we have to possess in addition to knowledge is determined aggressiveness. Jesus went to meet his enemies - He did not wait to be called. Aggressive determination depends upon this fundamental: Are these rights or are they not? If they are right, they are a part of God. If they are a part of God, they must be put into action. Too, you must have the courage of your convictions. If you want action, then you must sense the urgency of this day. Communism and fascism flourish on lack of these very human rights. The greatest stake we have is our stake in "Christianity itself."

V. EXPRESSIONS AND EXCERPTS FROM LETTERS FROM DELEGATES IN ATTENDANCE

A. President Kentucky Conference W.S.C.S.: "..The Greatest experience I ever had."

B. A South Carolina minister: "What a great Conference! It should be repeated in every state and community."

C. From Alabama: "'Twas surely a worthwhile Conference. How grateful I am to the Southern Regional Council for this experience."

D. A Social Worker: "It was most stimulating."

E. From Tennessee: "The Human Rights meeting gave me a working inspiration."

F. From Oklahoma: "Thanks sincerely for the grand privilege of being in that very significant meeting. I think I have never attended a meeting any where more progressive and far-reaching in its objective."

G. Vice-Chairman, the Woman's Advisory Committee, Woman's Auxiliary, Presbyterian Church: "I had no idea of the magnitude of that Conference on Human Rights and World Order. Not until I began to meet the people and hear the speakers and until I heard the report of Credentials when all the states and organizations were listed. Thank you with all my heart for what it meant to me personally."

IV. FINDINGS AND ACTION-
Work Shop Groups.

Preamble

> This day... I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing; therfore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live.

The root problem of world order are spiritual and moral. Character is the fundamental issue in the control of the new weapons of mass destruction. A new sense of human solidarity, of community, is prerequisite to adequate reconstruction and development of war-torn and underprivileged areas. A deeper belief in common moral principle, and in methods of tolerance is necessary to a solution of Soviet Western tension. A greater recognition of the rights of undeveloped peoples is needed to meet the problems in dependent regions. The basically moral and spiritual character of these world order issues challenges the people of our churches.

To meet our Christian responsibility we need to do all we can to help build a common foundation of moral principles to undergird international organization. Central in this task is an effort to restore the sense of the dignity and worth of the human person. This means to present and to practice the concept of man as the child of God in all its implications.

Within the United States there are 13 million Negroes, 2 million or more Mexicans, 5 million Jews, 750,000 Indians and 250,000 Orientals. Add to these the Puerto Rican and the Italian and we have a total of 20 million (between 1/6 and 1/7 of our population) who are restricted as to where they can live, work, go to school, or have recreational advantages. A large part of these groups have no voice in the government under which they live and can get neither protection nor justice in courts.

Human hands must reach up and pull into realization the dreams of the prophet that "They shall set every man under his vine and under his fig tree. None shall make them afraid; for the mouth of the Lord of Hosts hath spoken it" (Micah 4:4)... the dream of the Declaration of Independence that "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights".... the dream of the Charter of the United Nations that "We, the people of the United Nations, determined...to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small...and to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbors...."

The right to earn a living is a basic human right without which the human personality becomes undermined by fear, the most devastating of all human emotions. Yet there are an estimated 20 million people in our American population whose right to work is constantly abridged because of economic uncertainty, displacement, prejudice, and discrimination. Among those against whom such factors operate are Negroes, Mexicans, Japanese, Italians, Porto Ricians, Jews, and women of all nationalities and creeds.

Our economy is organized so tightly on the side of capital and management that the right of workers to earn a living can best be safeguarded through unions. Yet unions themselves sometimes limit the right of certain groups to work.

Christian attitudes can settle these differences between groups if we will but apply these principles in a spirit of cooperation and brotherhood. It is the responsibility of the church to minister to all peoples and all groups to the end that the welfare of all groups may be served with equity. The community centered church functions best in such a capacity.

WORKSHOP NUMBER I

HUMAN RIGHTS AND WORLD ORDER

Findings

Because human progress can be based only upon certain rights which must be enlarged to include fundamental freedoms of humanity, we must assume as citizens the responsibility of bringing about a situation in which orderly change can take place.

In our acceptance of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, we must contribute individually to world order.

1. By education. Inform ourselves of world problems, such as the hunger and destruction in many areas, the Palestine Question, minority groups, displaced persons, and understanding and appreciation of cultural distinctions of other countries.

2. By developing right attitudes, influencing public opinion, and making definite plans. "We must be careful," as Mr. Turner Smith pointed out, "of name-calling," because it is making many people afraid to do good and stand up and be counted on the right side lest they be labeled with some odious ideology.

3. Acting upon plans. With the new educational process keying the human personality as most important, the church can reach out into local communities and bring together in forums and discussion groups the best thoughts of religious leaders, industrialists, scientists, politicians, educators, and other lay people and thus shape the order of the world which will include and be representative of all people.

Action Recommendations

1. Without food and clothing and medical care to sustain life itself, human rights to political, religious, and intellectual freedom are hollow and meaningless. Therefore, we advocate: (a) prompt action in setting up an International Children's Emergency Fund, the primary United Nations relief agency succeeding UNRRA in the relief field, and urge United States participation to the full extent of our needed share in the Fund; (b) revitalization of our community overseas relief program by sending food and clothing through the Church, World Service, and other established private agencies of relief.

2. We recommend widespread study and discussion among church and other community groups of the draft using International Bill of Human Rights as a guiding set of principles for the Commission on Human Rights of the United Nations. We also suggest the appointment of local committees to implement the findings of study groups.

3. Realizing that our own success in making basic civil rights universal at home has a profound bearing on our moral leadership in the United Nations, we urge unremitting efforts in putting Judeo-Christian principles of brotherhood into practice in our own neighborhoods and states. Violations of civil rights of Negroes and all minority groups should be condemned and brought to justice. Civic practices in our communities and churches should be checked against the principles we stand for in our own Bill of Rights and as a member of the United Nations.

4. As a basis for better understanding among nations, we urge an enlarged program of cultural exchange with other countries, and especially the increased exchange of students.

5. We urge adjustment of our immigration laws and the adoption of temporary legislation (HR 2910) to make possible the entry into our country of refugees from devastated war areas.

6. Develop and support the evangelistic, missionary, relief and reconstruction work of our churches in all of its phases.

7. Demonstrate in daily life and the life of our church and community that regard for human beings which we know to be essentially Christian.

8. Study, support and pray for the growth of the United Nations and its undertakings for human rights and welfare.

9. Hold firmly to our Christian faith in the possibility of a better world order, in the possibility of a new beginning through repentance and God's grace.

WORKSHOP NUMBER II

HUMAN RIGHTS UNDER THE LAW

Findings

The emphases made in the Workshop are given briefly as follows:

Necessity for understanding what constitutes Human Rights, what guarantees Human Rights, and the relation of Federal to State and to local government in safeguarding Human Rights.

Necessity for creating and maintaining a "climate" of public opinion that is right and just and that encourages obedience to the law. It is dangerous to have a "climate" that permits people to think that things can be adjusted beyond the law. Daily violation of decent rights is a serious thing.

People must know what is going on, must make sure of the caliber of men administering justice, and must continue an educational program that includes the teaching of human relations.

Citizens should know the rights that are guaranteed Labor by the First and Fourteenth amendments of the Federal Constitution and by the NIRA, and should constantly exercise their own rights and persistently help to safeguard the rights of others. A high sense of moral responsibility must be developed and we should seek to keep on the Supreme Court men who value Human Rights above property rights.

Necessity to change attitudes, to plan and carry out a program for developing right and just attitudes in the home and in the school. Information alone is not enough; experiences are also needed.

Sensitivity to the needs of people and a sense of moral responsibility toward securing rights to all people must be developed. Influence of teachers and parents stressed.

The concept of segregation denies equality. (This statement was questioned by some in the group.) "Separate but equal" is an attitude that has crystalized into law.

Understanding the law is important. In enforcement of rights, difficulties are encountered. More people should know the law of the land as given in the State and Federal Constitution. White people should be willing to give testimony when it would set forward justice, and should be willing to accept jury service. We must create an atmosphere favorable to Negroes serving on juries. Ignorance maintains prejudice and mutual suspicion. The dominant group should maintain contact with a like-minded Negro group.

Dr. Guy B. Johnson spoke of the inadequate protection of Negroes due to:

a. the inadequate number of police and too few Negro police
b. police too quick to abuse Negroes
c. police often rely too much on show of force, and forget scientific principles in dealing with Negroes.

Such treatment of Negroes has built up over a long time an attitude of evasion of or non-cooperation with police, or even a bitter hatred of them on the part of Negroes.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Dr. E. G. Mackay emphasized the place of the home in teaching Christian ideals and the need to make real in the home things taught in the school. He encouraged the group, as he called to mind the evidence of progress being made by the Church and also by the press. "The Church is the basic workshop and most ministers are teaching social justice and the great Christian concept of the supreme value of human personality."

Action Recommendations

We recommend:

1. That we study our laws in order to learn a true definition of civil rights as they relate to Federal, State, or community.

2. That our efforts for social change start where we are—at home, next door, and across the tracks.

3. That individuals and groups voice their disapproval when the civil rights of any person or group is disregarded.

4. That we study the organization and education programs of labor groups as they relate to our total economy.

5. That we study the personal and public record of every candidate whose name is presented for public office.

6. That we continue our effort to build Christian attitudes toward all people through home, church, and school, realizing experiences as well as information are needed.

7. That we work toward the training of all public officers, particularly policemen. Work toward higher standards of personal conduct of all officers of the law.

8. That we accept jury service as a responsibility and opportunity to serve.

9. That we know conditions in penal institutions—who are there and why.

10. That the Christian idea of the supreme worth of individuals be put into actual practice.

11. We also earnestly deplore the injection of Race as an issue in any political campaign because doing so—.

provides a smokescreen to hide real issues:
breeds hatred, injustice and lynchings and encourages Hate organizations;
destroys good government;
undermines World Peace by causing other nations to doubt our sincerity.

12. And we pledge ourselves to work against such propaganda by publicly voicing our disapproval and requesting radio stations not to give time for political campaigns based on racial hatred.

WORKSHOP NUMBER III

HUMAN RIGHTS IN EARNING A LIVING

Findings

We, the Findings Committee, present the following report on Human Rights in Earning a living:

There is a definite ceiling to occupational opportunity for Negroes which acts as a blanket to the development of thrift, industry and ambition. The major obstacles to earning a decent living which the Negro faces are:

1. Occupations which are closed to him by organized labor, private enterprise, and political expediency in distribution of public jobs.

2. Limits to promotion and upgrading.

3. Restrictions on the purchase of good farm land.

The umhampered right of the Negro to earn a living considered controversial even where equal opportunity for health, housing, education and religion are granted. This is due to (1) fear within ourselves, and (2) fear of upsetting the status quo.

Some possible ways to surmount the obstacles are:

1. Labor unions should be open to all those who qualify, without restrictions based on race.

2. Employers have the power to make changes in the employment practices if they had the courage.

3. Fair employment practices should be extended at once to all federal employment and to other jobs where public funds are expended. In addition, someone should have the authority to inquire into private employment practices with the privilege of making recommendations.

4. Training in trades and industries should be provided on the basis of individual abilities regardless of race.

Earning a living in rural areas of the South has some problems that are peculiar to the Region, especially when the major crop is a southern crop. Some of the problems are:

1. Low average annual income due to seasonal demand for labor in cotton production.

2. The practice on the part of landlords of increasing the rent for land when the industrious tenant improves it. Insecurity of tenure, transient labor are direct results of such practice.

3. The tendency to retain old habits of production and marketing—to resist change.

4. Increasing opportunities for ownership for men of good character is needed.

Improvment of rural living included six major needs:

1. The rural worker needs education for production and for change to new and improved methods. So many rural families are so poor in experience that they do not want to change.

2. More non-farm work opportunities are needed.

3. Facilities for health and medical care are woefully inadequate.

4. A consistent program of land improvement is needed.

5. Too many rural people know how to do too few things well. Their workskills need to be increased and improved.

6. A most pressing need is for better rural preachers. The church occupies a very important place in rural life. Carefully chosen, adequately prepared ministers are needed for such service.

The law requires labor unions to represent minority groups as well as majority. Labor unions are a group of people getting together and deciding to do something about wages and better conditions.

With increasing pressure on a family to maintain standard of living, women need to work to supplement family income and to improve the standard of living. Women should have opportunity to work in their field of interest. Solutions are improved working conditions and plant facilities, vacation with pay, sick leave, maternity leave, equal pay for equal work.

The church must minister to all people and groups.

Christian attitudes if applied can settle all difficulties.

Actions Recommended

1. Make Community Surveys

The woman of the church have a definite responsibility for bringing about desired changes in the total picture of opportunities to make a living for all people. Church women in each community should assume the responsibility of finding out what kind of community they live in--information about workers, white and colored, men and women in the following areas:

1. Wages
   a. Health
   b. Recreation
   c. Living conditions
   d. Wage scales and working conditions
   e. Educational Opportunities
   f. Church life

2. Advance Education Program all along the line.
   a. Begin with public school system and church school program.
   b. Promote vocational education for all races, classes and groups.
   c. Work for Federal aid to education
   d. Study groups on: The right to make a living.

3. Advocate better employment practices.
   a. Work for civil rights as embodied in F.E.P.C.
   b. Work for protection of domestic employees and others not covered by social security.
   c. Womens rights to earn a living.
      Mimimum wages, maximum hours, better working conditions and wage scales based on job, not on sex.

4. Work for a rural program to include
   a. More concrete aid to give medical services to rural people.
   b. Cooperate and aid farm agencies for soil conservation.
   c. More skilled farmers through training programs.
   d. Seek security of tenure
   e. Encourage youth to prepare for farming as a vocation.

5. Arouse Church to its full opportunity.
   a. Revise the definition of Brotherhood.
   b. Make program of Church so comprehensive as to draw all men into it.
   c. Allow the church to be used for community meetings to include labor meetings.

PROGRAM

May 8, 1947

11:00 A. M.

Hymn - America, The Beautiful

Introductions and Greetings - Mrs. C. M. Lancaster,
President, Georgia Council of Church Women

Purposes and Plans - Mrs. M. E. Tilly, Chairman

Our Civil Rights - Mr. Turner Smith, Chief, Civil Rights Section of U. S. Department of Justice

Basic Spiritual Foundations - The Rev. Harrison McMains, Pastor
First Christian Church, Atlanta

Luncheon Hour

The lunch will be the cereal served to children of war devastated countries. Persons will be privileged to pay any amount they wish for the lunch and it will be sent to overseas relief.

Film Strips - BROTHERHOOD OF MAN
SEEDS OF DESTINY

(Courtesy, Georgia Workers Education Service)

1:45 P. M.

Workshops

I. Human Rights and World Order

Chairman - Mrs. Chester Martin, President
Atlanta Council of Church Women
Leader - Dr. W. B. Stubbs, Emory University

Panel -

Dr. Richard Fagley, Secretary of Commission on a Just and Durable Peace, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America
Mr. Ralph McGill, Editor, Atlanta Constitution
Dr. Forest C. Weir, Executive Secretary of the Southeastern Inter-Council Office
Mr. Sady Machado, Brazil; Student, Emory University
Mr. Robert Chaplin, England; Student, Emory University
Mr. Sophocles Lolis, Greece, Student, Emory University

Discussion

II. Human Rights Under the Law

Chairman - Mrs. A. A. Hardy, Secretary Christian Social Relations, Georgia Council of Church Women
Leader - Atty. Devereaux McClatchey, Atlanta

Panel -

Mr. Turner Smith, Chief, Civil Rights Section of
U. S. Department of Justice
Mr. Alex Miller, Director Southeastern Regional Office
Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith
Mrs. Agnes Douty, Assistant to Director
Georgia Workers Education Service
Atty. A. T. Walden, Atlanta, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
Dr. A. E. Elder, Head Department of Education,
Atlanta University
Dr. Guy B. Johnson, Consultant, Southern Regional Council
Dr. E. G. Mackay, Atlanta, President of Christian Council

Discussion

III. Human Rights in Earning a Living

Chairman - Mrs. C. M. Lancaster, President Georgia
Council of Church Women
Leader - Dr. Glenn Rainey, Georgia School of Technology

Panel-

Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director,
Southern Regional Council
Mrs. Olive Haskins, Field Program Leader,
Georgia Workers Education Service
Mr. Nelson Jackson, Director, Southeastern Area,
National Urban League
Mr. R. L. Van Sant, Director,
Georgia Farm Home Administration
Mr. Frank Prohl, Southern Conference Teamsters,
American Federation of Labor
The Rev. Rembert Sisson, Pastor,
Haygood Memorial Methodist Church, Atlanta
Miss Lillian Schearer, Woman's Bureau,
Social Security Administration

Discussion

Evening Session
7:30 P. M.

Worship - The Rev. William Holmes Borders, D. D., Pastor
Wheat Street Baptist Church, Atlanta
Woman's Right to Make A Living, Miss Lillian Schearer, Woman's Bureau,
Social Security Administration
Human Rights and World Order - Dr. Richard Fagley, Secretary of Commission on a Just and Durable Peace, Federal Council of Churches in America

May 9, 1947 9:30 A. M.

Continuation of Workshops

10:30 A. M.
Worship

Discussion of Findings and Action Program

12:00 A. M.

Challenge - GO FORWARD
The Rev. John A. Brokhoff, Pastor, Lutheran Church of the Redeemer
Atlanta

25 SRC - Historical Materials

2 for file

A CONFERENCE

on

The South's Post War Economy

Atlanta Biltmore Hotel
Atlanta, Georgia

April 11-12, 1945

Sponsored by the

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

The Economic South . . .

- Is a community of approximately 42,000,000 people, containing approximately one-third of the Nation's total population, but more than one-half of its farm population.

- Has more children born per 1,000 women of each generation than any other region. It is able to offset the large migration to other regions by having the Nation's highest rural-farm net reproduction rate. Yet Southern urban communities have the lowest net reproduction rate in the Nation.

- Contains approximately one-third of the Nation's workers whose annual median salary or wage in 1939 (based on reports made by 9,000,000 of them) was $599—almost one-third lower than the national average wage of $877.

- Paid a lower per capita income tax in 1943 than any other region. For every dollar per capita of income tax reported from the United States as a whole, the southeastern states reported 63 cents and the southwestern states reported 77 cents.

- Has 42 per cent of the Nation's houses regarded as "needing major repairs." In every 1,000 Southern dwelling units there are 271 such structures; in every 1,000 houses for the United States 183 need major repairs.

- According to the United States Senate's Special Committee to Investigate Industrial Centralization, ten Southern states, having 15 per cent of the Nation's land area, 14 per cent of its minerals, 10 per cent of its manufacturing, and 39 per cent of its farm population, receive only 11 per cent of the national income and 20 per cent of the national farm income. They had a smaller volume of war contracts than any other region, and in 1943 had the lowest increase in value of manufactures over 1939—69 per cent. Other groups of states increased this value by 227 per cent, 270 per cent, and 639 per cent in the same period. The committee's report says if the "per capita income of these states were raised to the level of national per capita income, total national income would be increased by $10,000,000,000 annually."

- Pertinent to a discussion of current problems in this field is this statement from the Monthly Review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta (September 30, 1943):

  > "It would seem therefore that a soundly based regional economy should be related to the region's own great resources and to a peacetime market structure rather than be tied, as a result of uneconomic conversions of war plants, to capacity designed for a totally different economic situation."

Program

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11

10:30 A. M.

THE PURPOSE OF THIS CONFERENCE. Guy B. Johnson, Executive Director, Southern Regional Council.

HOW SOUTHERN GOVERNMENT-OWNED WAR PLANTS CAN AID SMALL BUSINESS. Roger Stevens, Chief of the Industrial Plant Division, Smaller War Plants Corporation

* * * *

2:30 P. M.

Presiding: Guy B. Johnson, Executive Director, Southern Regional Council

POST WAR FOREIGN TRADE AND THE SOUTH. August Maffry, Chief of the International Trade Unit, U. S. Department of Commerce

SOUTHERN INDUSTRY AND POST WAR MARKETS. Wilford White, Acting Chief, Division of Small Business, U. S. Department of Commerce

* * * *

8:00 P. M.

Presiding: E. B. Schultz, Chief, Personnel Relations Staff, Tennessee Valley Authority, Knoxville

IMPACT OF THE WAR ON SOUTHERN LABOR. A. F. Hinrichs, Acting Commissioner of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor

SOUTHERN POST WAR AGRICULTURE. Mordecai Ezekiel, Economic Adviser, U. S. Department of Agriculture

THURSDAY, APRIL 12

10:30 A. M.

Presiding: C. F. Palmer, President of Palmer, Inc., Atlanta

FREIGHT RATES AND SOUTHERN INDUSTRIAL GROWTH. Judge Edgar Watkins, Special Assistant Attorney General of Georgia, Atlanta

THE SOUTH'S POST WAR HOUSING PROBLEM. Coleman Woodbury, Assistant Administrator, National Housing Agency

* * * *

2:30 P. M.

Presiding: M. T. Van Hecke, Chairman, Regional War Labor Board, Atlanta

POLITICAL FACTORS IN ECONOMIC PROGRESS, Glenn Rainey, Georgia School of Technology

WHAT NEXT? Lawrence Drake, Research Specialist for Southern Regional Council.

The Southern Regional Council

ORIGIN The Southern Regional Council is the outgrowth of a number of factors. One was the growing consciousness among progressive Southerners of the need for a Southwide agency for the promotion of constructive social and economic reforms. Another was the Durham-Atlanta-Richmond Conferences of 1942-43, in which Southern leaders, white and Negro, covenanted together to work for a better South for all. The Council was chartered by the State of Georgia on January 6, 1944, and it held its charter meeting on February 16, 1944.

PURPOSE The Council represents the forward-looking conscience and efforts of liberal Southerners to give democracy a chance in the South. Although it is bi-racial in its membership and staff, it is not exclusively a "race relations" organization. It believes in the improvement of economic, civic, political, and educational conditions for the good of all people.

METHODS The Council believes that sound information, honest discussion, and cooperation, rather than agitation, are the best methods for promoting social progress. Its functions are: (1) research and survey to find the facts and to determine the possibilities of constructive action; (2) educational work through its own publications and through the press, radio, exhibits, conferences, and personal contacts; (3) cooperation with other agencies which have liberal and humanitarian aims; (4) consultative services to private or public agencies; and (5) formulation of constructive plans and proposals for "the South that could be."

MEMBERSHIP It welcomes to membership persons who believe in its purposes and methods. Voting members must be residents of the Council area: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. Dues are one dollar a year, but members are urged to contribute additional amounts according to their financial ability. Members receive all Council pamphlets.

OFFICERS and DIRECTORS The officers of the Council are: President: HOWARD W. ODUM, Chapel Hill, North Carolina; Vice Presidents: P. B. YOUNG, Norfolk, Virginia, HOMER P. RAINEY, Austin, Texas, CARTER WESLEY, Houston, Texas; Executive Director: GUY B. JOHNSON; Associate Executive Director: IRA DEA. REID; Secretary-Treasurer: EMILY H. CLAY, 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

Among the members of the Board of Directors are some of the outstanding Southern leaders in education, religion, business, and labor.

Loyalty Investigation

(Not printed at Government expense)

United States of America

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 80th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

RECEIVED JUN 24 1948 Southern Regional Council

The Mundt-Nixon Bill

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. ELBERT D. THOMAS

OF UTAH

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

Friday, June 4 (legislative day of Tuesday, June 1), 1948

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Appendix of the RECORD an address delivered by me at a luncheon given by the Committee of One Thousand on the Mundt-Nixon bill at the Hotel Biltmore, New York City, Thursday, June 3, 1948.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE MUNDT-NIXON BILL

A leader in the field of the art of government or the science of politics must come to the conclusion that society and nations, like individuals, suffer from ill health. Disease, poverty, and ignorance seem to be with us always. Perhaps they are with us to induce the incentive necessary to overcome in order to become strong. History shows that a victorious nation sometimes adopts in a more virulent form the very ideas and practices which it fought to destroy. If history is repeating itself again, we must strengthen that eternal vigilance which is the price of liberty.

In my lifetime and in your lifetime we have passed through revolutions—social, political, and economic—so great that when we compare them with periods in the past we marvel at the momentum for change modern man has developed. Let us take an illustration. When the Manchus conquered China, they imposed upon all Chinese men the custom of wearing a Chinese queue. It was a sign of servitude, but it became so universal that some people said that George Washington's wig, with its little queue in the back, was an adaptation of John Chinaman's sign of servitude. Washington, who gave us liberty, wore, while he did it, the sign of slavery. I am not giving you that as absolute fact, I am giving it to you as a deduction and as a point I should like to make about society, nations, and people.

The serious minded among us, who feel and know that there are great values in our way of life which must be preserved, think we should study the crises in the history of nations because we then could keep our heads a bit better above the hysteria of the day. I heard a great British Ambassador, who spent his life in foreign service and who is now retiring, say that that which is considered today's crisis turned out to be merely yesterday's wind. We are living in chaotic times, but I have full faith that that which is attempted through the Mundt-Nixon bill will not happen, and the next generation will be forever grateful to the even-tempered minds of this generation for refusing to take on the ills of single-will ideas.

The great principle of my life has been absolute faith in democracy. I have always sought to live up to the precept of that greatest of American democrats, Thomas Jefferson, who said: "I have sworn upon the altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man."

The letter and the spirit of our Constitution and its Bill of Rights is directed to guaranteeing our people certain fundamental freedoms. It is not intended to impose tyrannical proscriptions. Our country has grown great and strong, despite the fact that throughout its history, there have been periods in which reaction, dictated by fear, burned witches, drove men further into the wilderness, threw men into prison, and chased them from public life and office. The spirit of democracy as embodied in our Constitution always triumphed in the end. Peoples all over the world seeking freedom, have looked to our democracy as a beacon light, have looked to our Constitution as a model for their own charters of freedom. These people have not looked upon our country as the land that burned witches, but as the land whose Constitution proclaims; "Congress shall make no law respecting establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; of abridging the freedom of speech or of the press or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

It is for these reasons that I am unalterably opposed to the Mundt-Nixon bill. In my opinion, this bill, and the vagueness of its language, threaten the fundamental constitutional American right to openly and freely discuss and criticize political and social ideas and institutions.

The great discussion and the debate which have been developed around this bill, are, in my opinion, in the best American tradition. The bill itself is not.

In this discussion, much has been said about the alien and sedition laws of 1798. Many parallels have been drawn between the purpose of those laws and the victorious struggle against them—and the situation we are facing today. In the days of the alien and sedition laws, Thomas Jefferson was called subversive, an infidel, a Jacobin, since it was the French Revolution that the conservatives of those days feared. His supporters were also accused of being Jacobins, engaged in international conspiracies directed against the Government of the United States. In the hysteria whipped up against the supporters of Jeffersonian democracy, it was wildly stated that they—and I quote: "Had applied the torch, and having commenced to burn cities, they would soon begin to murder the citizens." Anyone bold enough in those days to suggest that fires might have been started natural causes, would have been dubbed a Jacobin. "A Frenchman was a natural enemy to America," and all should be wiped out.

Think of our feelings when we were suffering from an attempt to crush something we did not like in the first third of the last century, when the anti-Masonic party came into existence. Read your history and see how much you loved the Americans during the drive against the "know-nothings," or see how you cherished the idea of the "know-nothings" in their particular days. Read the Copperhead philosophy during the Civil War and after, and then concerning the zeal of the followers of that element in Congress who were set upon crushing, punishing, and even impeaching our President. Go back and read the period after the First World War. Think of the things that happened when somebody suggested there was a Bolsheviki present. Then come down to the present and analyze the Mundt-Nixon bill.

In 1919 Jefferson would have been labeled a Bolsheviki. In 1948—in the spirit of the Mundt-Nixon bill—he would be dencunced as a Communist.

Such thinking was the product of fear in 1798. Such thinking is the product of fear in 1948. For a long time now, I have been combating fear as an instrument of national policy. In 1944, I wrote a little book called the Four Fears, and with your indulgence, I will quote a few words from it, because I feel that they apply to the problem of the Mundt bill that we are facing today. I said: "If we are so terrified of communism, it must be because we have lost confidence in ourselves, it must be that we have a very uneasy feeling about the living reality of our own democracy. I have no uneasy feeling about the reality of our democracy. It will be here stronger than ever, after communistic and fascistic adjustments have been made."

It is probably true what Jefferson said—"that the rule of the majority is the natural law of society"—but the rule of the majority can become a single will and crush the best thought there is in society. The genius of America is not that the majority rule, but that we have set up institutions to see that the minority is protected. There can be no majority rule for thought, for art, for aspiration, for expression. There can be no freedom if any element in society becomes a single will and by force directs all elements.

The reality of our democracy will be here stronger than ever, if we reject all efforts to legislate thought—to legislate conformity. The warning words of the Supreme Court in the Barnette case are worth pondering. The Court declares: "Those who begin coercive elimination of dissent soon find themselves exterminating dissenters. Compulsory unification of opinion achieves only the unanimity of the graveyard."

The American Constitution was set up under the theory that the people should rule. That of necessity means deliberation, freedom of discussion, substitution of ballots for bullets. Let us go back and read Milton's ideas and see how plain he made it: "That man could not be free in a proscribed society; that freedom to print was essential in a free government." The whole world has had to face this problem probably more often than any other problem.

Think through those things that are facing us today by answering to yourselves where you think you would have been in your sentiments and feeling when Socrates drank the hemlock. Would you like the actions of the proscribers during the period of the triumvirate, where one of the three had to allow his friend to be killed if another of the three considered that friend his enemy? Oh, of course, you will all say conditions are different; the evils that face our democracy must be crushed. But the techniques of crushing are not different. If we become a single-will state, there will be a technique of a single-will idea that is working and democracy will be destroyed. We cannot kill ideas by force or by outlawing them.

May I cite a case—one I like best when I am discussing these questions? It is far enough away from us so that no one can get particularly mad, nor can they say our conditions are different. The greatest of all of the Chinese—Confucius—became completely rejected after he was dead and all of his books were ordered burned throughout the whole nation. They were preserved by zealots who knew their worth. But Confucius thought he knew what was right for his people so well that he wrote a book, The Spring and Autumn Annals of Lu, to hold a nation to his thinking "for 2,000 years." He almost did it. Now, compare that idea with John Marshall's words: "Gentlemen, it is a Constitution we are expounding—a Constitution set up to endure through the ages."

Shall we be ruled by fear or shall we accept Marshall's theory about the Constitution and be ruled by reason. If the Constitution is to endure through the ages and is to meet changing conditions it must meet them on the basis of its own experience. One hundred and fifty years of American constitutional history shows us that the founding fathers knew the worth of freedom and knew the meaning of liberty. They knew that we could have no government of the people unless the people could aspire and think new thoughts. They knew that we could have no government by the people unless the people had a chance to express themselves, to deliberate, to discuss, and feel free in their discussion. And they knew that we could have no government for the people unless we acted in accordance with the fundamental theory that man is a rational, reasonable being; and that if he is free to use his head his decisions will be good. Shall we respond to the emotions to hit against something we do not like, or shall we say to ourselves—John Marshall grasped the meaning of America and the place of the Constitution of the United States in the development of man. I know that if the Mundt bill were left to the people of the United States and considered by them it would never become a law.

Now what does our American constitutional theory say to the individual? It says to him: Believe as you wish, worship as you choose. This is the essence of man's right to think for himself. This is the essence of the state's duty to restrain itself. American constitutional guarantees of freedom depend on the restraint placed upon the state through fundamental law. That is to say, the state puts a limit on its own power so that the individual may have freedom. It is a poor state that cannot leave a man his own soul. And once again in the words of Thomas Jefferson: "It behooves every man who values liberty of conscience for himself, to resist invasions on it, in the case of others; or their case may —by change of circumstances—become his own."

It seemed to me that our country had learned that lesson in the long years of the Second World War. Our boys died in far-flung corners of the world resisting invasion of liberty in the case of others, as well as defending our own liberties as Americans. They went willingly into battle against Hitler and his attempt to impose tyranny over the minds of men—as well as over their bodies. The ultimate lengths to which the enemies of human freedom went in World War II were brought home to me with particular sharpness, when, in company with a number of my colleagues from the United States Senate, I stood in the Nordhausen concentration camp in the summer of 1945. It began with persecuting men's religion, men's social and political rights and it ended by throwing even women and little children into death ovens.

We went to war against dictatorship. Our Constitution, our Bill of Rights, our American way of life rejects dictatorship. Why, then, should we in any manner imitate any of its methods? I say we have better methods than Mundt bills for protecting our liberties. I say we must not destroy the freedoms we hold dear under the guise of safeguarding them.

It was very gratifying to me to find support for my position in such a citadel of conservatism as the Wall Street Journal, whose editorial on May 20, 1948, said the Mundt bill was of doubtful usefulness. What impressed me most about that editorial was the reasoning on which it based that opinion. It said: "If we sincerely believe, as we profess to, that freedom under law is incomparably better than any species of dictatorship, that the individual has rights of which the State cannot deprive him, we should not begin to betray the political ideals we honor by risking any infringement of that freedom or those rights. Our Constitution permits the people to change it as they see fit; that is part of the freedom which the Constitution was established to protect. As for attempts to change the nature of our Government by other than lawful constitutional means, we already have enough laws to punish and defeat them."

I leave to the practicing lawyers the task of analyzing the legal weaknesses and faults of the Mundt-Nixon bill. Many eminent legal minds have said that this bill violates not only the first amendment to the Constitution—but also the fifth amendment which guarantees American due process of law; the sixth amendment which protects citizens from compulsory self-incrimination; and article 1 of the Constitution itself, which prohibits bills of attainder.

I have studied this bill carefully and also the debate upon it in the House of Representatives. I am much impressed by many of the arguments presented by the Congressmen who opposed the bill.

I agree with those who said that this bill represents a grave danger to the working men and women of our country. I especially agree with those who asked why we don't spend as much time praising our form of government as we do denouncing communism—and those who said why don't we do something about the things that may cause the spread of communism. I agree with those who said this is not a good bill because it is the same kind of legislation that drove Roger Williams out of Massachusetts into Rhode Island 300 years ago.

It is the kind of law that not only seeks to legislate how men shall think, but it also places inordinate power into the hands of nonelective officials. It even condemns in advance people who, for example, may wish to band together to work for the repeal of the bill should it become law. Under its broad and general terms about persons who in any manner do one thing or another—what is to prevent administrators of this law to declare an organization called Committee to Repeal the Mundt-Nixon Law a Communist-front organization and require it to register with the Department of Justice.

But I wish to state here that the arguments that most impressed me with regard to the Mundt-Nixon bill were those advanced by a great patriot and an able lawyer—Mayor William O'Dwyer, of New York City. They were sober and intelligent arguments. They were good American arguments. O'Dwyer said he considers this bill a "dangerous short-cut to thought control and police-state regulation" because it would establish the undemocratic and dangerous principal of guilt by association without proof of actual guilt. He pointed out that it empowers a Government officer to determine the subversiveness or disloyalty of any political, civic, or religious organization.

Mayor O'Dwyer went still further and courageously touched upon a subject that needs courageous discussion. He disagreed with his fellow Catholic War Veterans who criticized him for opposing the Mundt bill. He reminded them of some of the anti-Catholic intolerance that has existed and still exists in our country. To them he said: "It is not impossible to imagine a situation where a Ku Klux administrator in some local community that is hostile to the Catholic minority, might declare a Catholic organization subversive, disloyal, or subservient to a foreign domination. This may sound impossible, but the proposed bill opens the door and opens the door wide, to just such fantastic possibilities."

As a member of a church which has known persecution even in this free country, I understand something of what O'Dwyer warned against.

In conclusion, I would like to call attention to another fact that has been made very well known in the discussion for and against the Mundt bill. There are already some 27 laws on our statute books directed against the evils which the supporters of the Mundt bill say we must be protected. It would seem to me that there is nothing to be gained from passing a twenty-eighth law. On the contrary, it seems to me that there is danger of losing a great deal, if we do pass the law. We shall be losing much of our proud heritage as free men, dedicated to building and strengthening a country based on the fundamental political rights and freedoms embodied in our Declaration of Independence. Our country must never fear ideas—new or old. Our country must not fear the idealism of our own great revolution. We don't need restrictive laws directed against political opponents, if we do not lose the conviction that here in the United States—with political and economic democracy for all, with absolute faith in democracy—with complete freedom from fear—we can keep ours the greatest and freest country in the world.

792009—25906

U. S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE: 1948

(Not printed at Government expense)

Congressional Record

United States of America

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 85th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Statement by American Civil Liberties Union on Jury Trial Amendment to Civil Rights Legislation

REMARKS

OF

HON. CLIFFORD P. CASE

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

Wednesday, May 22, 1957

Mr. CASE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I should like to call the attention of my colleagues to a statement which the American Civil Liberties Union has released today opposing the jury trial amendments to the civil rights bill.

As Senators know, the heart of the attack upon the right to vote bill (S. 83), now pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee, is the allegation by its opponents that persons cited for contempt of court under the bill's provisions would be denied the right to jury trial.

The bill in question would permit the Attorney General to bring a civil suit in the Federal district courts to enjoin State officials or others from depriving citizens of their right to vote. In the normal court case, of course, the party who is enjoined from a given course of action can be expected to comply with the court's order. Contempt cases arise only when the court's order is disobeyed.

It is in the latter kind of case that opponents of right to vote legislation now seek to impose a jury trial.

The injection of this issue into the discussion of S. 83 has engendered confusion not only in the press but in Congress as well. No supporter of constitutional rights likes to be charged with denying another's rights, particularly a right so fundamental as trial by jury. And much of the public does not understand that neither the Constitution nor prior legal precedent provides for a jury trial in contempt cases of the kind which might arise under S. 83.

It is, therefore, particularly gratifying to note the Civil Liberties Union's release today of a lucid and concise analysis of the jury trial amendment.

During its long career the Civil Liberties Union has steadfastly refused to temporize with any of our constitutional liberties. For this reason, its opposition to the jury trial amendment assumes particular significance at this time.

The jury trial is, of course, one of our most prized institutions of justice. While our Constitution does not guarantee jury trial in contempt cases, Congress has on occasion extended the right to jury trial to cases where the Constitution does not require it. I, for one, appreciate fully the jury's value as a check upon the arbitrary exercise of governmental power. But I am convinced that it has no place in so-called civil-rights legislation.

As the ACLU's memorandum points out:

> While there is always need to guard vigilantly against the misuse of Government power, including injunctions which are too broad and restrain constitutional activity (as we have recently argued is the case in the Clinton, Tenn., injunction), there is also need to prevent weakening of the power of our courts to uphold the law of the land. The right of equal treatment under law is fatally undermined when community sentiment blocks the enforcement of law.

Enforcement of the law has been undermined in some sections of the country where community sentiment has blocked effective enforcement of the right to vote. If court orders are to be respected in cases of this kind in which the Federal Government seeks to uphold public policy, the courts must be able to punish contemptuous acts. In conclusion, I quote once more from the ACLU's memorandum:

> To grant jury trials in the civil-rights legislation would protect officials who are failing to do their duty in protecting the constitutional rights of citizens. Jury trials in contempt cases growing out of such legislation would give a privileged position to State officials who might defy Federal judges upholding the law of the land.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the statement from the American Civil Liberties Union be printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ACLU STATEMENT ON JURY TRIAL AMENDMENT TO CIVIL RIGHTS LEGISLATION

The American Civil Liberties Union believes that all Americans are entitled to all the civil liberties guaranteed in the Constitution, free speech and association, due process and equality before the law. To advance equality before the law for all Americans, particularly the Negro citizens of the South who have been denied equal treatment, the ACLU is supporting Federal legislation toward this objective—bipartisan legislation suggested by the administration and backed by influential leaders in the Democratic Party.

The key sections in this legislation authorize the Federal Government to seek by the civil remedy of injunction a more effective protection of the right to vote and other constitutional rights, against deprivation especially by State officials. This is proposed to insure more effective protection for Negroes against intimidation, coercion and physical assault which prevent their voting and enjoying other constitutional rights. The need for this civil relief was pointed up by the Attorney General, in his testimony of February 14, 1957, before the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights:

"Criminal prosecutions of course cannot be instituted until after the harm actually has been done, yet no amount of criminal punishment can rectify the harm which the national interest suffers when citizens are illegally kept from the polls. Furthermore, criminal prosecutions are often unduly harsh in this particular field where the violators may be respected local officials."

Civil rights legislation has been blocked for years by the filibuster and other devices. This year it is being opposed especially on the ground that persons who are charged with contempt of a Federal court injunction restraining interference with the right to vote will not receive a trial by jury. Opponents of the legislation correctly state that under present law, although a person charged with criminal contempt is generally entitled to a jury trial when the enjoined acts would be a violation of the criminal law, he is not entitled to it in a case where the United States has brought the action for injunction, as would happen under the proposed civil rights legislation.

The right of trial by jury is rooted deep in our constitutional guarantees, to prevent the power of Government being used as a weapon of oppression, among other purposes. The American Civil Liberties Union has been a vigorous defender of this right, even in some areas where it is not strictly required constitutionally, because of our strong belief that the abuse of governmental power can be limited by juries, which represent a cross-section of community sentiment rather than the views of a single judge. This concern for the citizen's liberty has made us apprehensive of broadening the power of Federal courts to prohibit criminal conduct under the threat of punishment for criminal contempt, as indicated in our February 27 statement on the Clinton, Tenn., case. That case concerned John Kasper and 16 other anti-integrationists who were arrested for contempt of the court order enjoining them from interfering with the Clinton school integration program.

The Constitution guarantees jury trial only in criminal cases, and in civil suits involving more than $20; there is no such guarantee in contempt cases. Until 1914, Congress made no provision at all for jury trials in contempt proceedings. Then, in the Clayton Act, it allowed jury trials in contempt cases where the acts were also violations of Federal or State criminal laws except, in order that the Federal Government might carry out its functions and enforce the laws of the land, in cases to which the United States is a party. Another exception was made in 1932, when the Norris-LaGuardia Anti-Injunction Act accorded labor unionists jury trials when they were charged with contempt of court injunctions in strike situations.

The absence of a jury trial in suits brought by the Government is not unusual. There are at least 28 other laws under which the United States is authorized to seek injunctions, without provision for jury trials; these include the antitrust laws, the Atomic Energy Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act, the Securities and Exchange Act and acts affecting the Interstate Commerce Commission and Federal Trade Commission. Moreover, jury trials in contempt proceedings are not generally required under the constitutions or laws of the States, including the Southern States.

After full and careful study of the possible need for a jury trial amendment to the proposed civil rights legislation, we are convinced that the present jury trial argument is chiefly a contrived obstruction to defeat the desperately needed civil-rights legislation. So, we are vigorously opposed to any amendment requiring a jury trial.

What are the reasons for the ACLU's opposition to the jury amendment?

1. While there is always need to guard vigilantly against the misuse of Government power, including injunctions which are too broad and restrain constitutional activity (as we have recently argued is the case in the Clinton, Tenn., injunction), there is also need to prevent weakening the power of our courts to uphold the law of the land. The right of equal treatment under law is fatally undermined when community sentiment blocks the enforcement of law. The injunction is an effective legal technique to protect constitutional rights. As the Attorney General pointed out in his testimony, this method of protection would seek to prevent State officials from committing acts violative of a criminal statute. It is far better for all concerned—including those officials—to enjoin these acts before they are committed than to prosecute after the harm has been done. The main point to be kept in mind is that the proposed legislation aims simply at providing more effective enforcement of voting and other constitutional rights for all citizens.

2. Supporters of jury-trial amendments contend that to grant power to the courts to restrain criminal conduct would circumvent due process. However, before a person is enjoined he is entitled to all the guaranties of a fair hearing, with every opportunity to prove the invalidity of the application for the order. He also has a full right to appeal to higher courts, a check on arbitrary decisions. Even temporary restraining orders are issued only if the Government's affidavits show clearly that an immediate and irreparable loss will be suffered, so that no notice can be given and a hearing held. Then hearings on temporary restraining orders are quickly scheduled; the orders are of minimal duration; preliminary injunctions cannot be issued without notice and a hearing, which gives the defendants an opportunity to be heard. Then, at the trial for a permanent injunction, the Government has to present its case that there is a threat of irreparable injury; the defendants are represented by counsel, they may confront and cross-examine witnesses and present information to show that the injunction is unwarranted. Finally, if the order is disobeyed, it must be established beyond reasonable doubt that the disobedience was willful before a person can be punished for criminal contempt. The act of disobedience is an act of contempt of court, not an act violating a criminal statute, and it is penalized in order to maintain the court's traditional and indispensable authority to uphold the law—and the due process requirements provide a safeguard against the fear that Federal judges will not administer justice impartially, because of regarding violation of their injunctions as a personal affront or because of owing loyalty to the national administration under their appointment by the President.

3. A major argument advanced for the jury-trial amendment is the alleged discriminatory treatment of persons disobeying an injunction to guarantee civil rights, as compared with the treatment of labor unionists under the Norris-LaGuardia Act. But the very purpose of the Norris-LaGuardia Act was to support a congressional policy, that workers should be free to organize and bargain collectively; it was passed for the very reason that judges had been going beyond the law. As Senator PAUL DOUGLAS said, in a brief submitted to Congress on the jury-trial question on April 18:

"In the decades prior to the 1932 * * * courts would issue injunctions and use their contempt power indiscriminately, not to prevent violations of law but to prevent labor organization and freedom of collective bargaining. Decades of such demonstrated hostility by the courts to labor and its interests prompted Congress to implement the growing national policy in the labor field by specifically curtailing the Federal injunctive power in many areas of labor litigation and by providing that juries rather than judges determine whether contempt had been committed."

In short, the jury trials granted under the Norris-LaGuardia Act were included to protect people against oppressive government. To grant jury trials in the civil-rights legislation would protect officials who are failing to do their duty in protecting the constitutional rights of citizens. Moreover, Congress subsequently limited the Norris-LaGuardia Act jury trial provision by providing in the Taft-Hartley Act that such provision would not be applicable to injunctions sought by the United States under the new act.

The current congressional proposals to strengthen our civil-rights laws are the least dramatic and most cautious approach to the enforcement of basic constitutional rights. Their purpose is not to punish, but to prevent infringement of the right to vote. Jury trials in contempt cases growing out of such legislation would give a privileged position to State officials who might defy Federal judges upholding the law of the land.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I wish to compliment my colleague, the Senator from New Jersey, for inviting the attention of the Senate to the document he has just offered, which refers to the key question on the proposed civil-rights legislation, the right to a trial by jury on a contempt citation brought by the United States Government.

I believe the procedure mentioned is nothing but begging the question. The procedure of citation for contempt is a time-honored method of procedure, and I am very glad to see that other organizations, in addition to those which are discussing the matter here, are coming to grips with it. I compliment the Senator from New Jersey for bringing this statement of the American Civil Liberties Union to the attention of the Senate.

429921—62808

U. S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE: 1962

(Not printed at Government expense)

EXCERPTS FROM

Congressional Record

United States of America

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 85th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

July 10, 1957

PROPOSED CIVIL RIGHTS LEGISLATION—THE JURY TRIAL AMENDMENT

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, the Senate Committee on the Judiciary has adopted an amendment to S. 83, the civil-rights bill, providing for jury trials in all contempt cases which might arise under the provisions of the bill.

I may say in all kindness, without reflection upon the motives of any Senator, that this particular amendment is designed to weaken and destroy the effectiveness of the civil-rights bill and, in particular, to destroy those sections which would help to guarantee the right of Negroes to vote.

I have secured for the information of Members of Congress—and I ask unanimous consent to have it made a part of the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks—a memorandum prepared by the Research Office of the Southern Regional Council, which I received from the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress, concerning Negro voter registration in 11 Southern States. In most cases classified by county. I shall include in the RECORD the explanation of how the figures were gathered and some comments on their accuracy, all of which I ask unanimous consent to have printed at an appropriate point in the RECORD.

GEORGIA

County	Nonwhite population over 18, 1950	Negroes registered, 1956
Appling	1,356	1,068
Atkinson	897	408
Bacon	558	8
Baker	1,819	0
Baldwin	8,461	2,487
Banks	229	32
Barrow	1,235	413
Bartow	2,404	702
Ben Hill	2,659	918
Berrien	1,107	738
Bibb	28,993	5,140
Bleckley	1,588	39
Brantley	451	175
Brooks	4,603	707
Bryan	1,269	885
Bulloch	4,755	1,795
Burke	8,797	399
Butts	2,168	1,414
Calhoun	3,232	126
Camden	2,062	1,556
Candler	1,494	1,174
Carroll	3,578	939
Catoosa	183	129
Charlton	772	12
Chatham	38,272	9,720
Chattahoochee	1,510	8
Chattooga	1,030	1,020
Cherokee	473	320
Clarke	6,249	2,866
Clay	2,148	97
Clayton	2,070	275

The Montgomery Advertiser

Published Every Week Day By
THE MONTGOMERY ADVERTISER
Established 1828
Entered at the Post Office at Montgomery Ala as Second Class Matter Under Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

B F HUDSON ..... Chairman of Board
B F HUDSON JR ..... Publisher
GROVER C HALL JR. ..... Editor-In-Chief
J FRED THORNTON ..... Associate Editor
WILLIAM H McDONALD ..... Assistant Editor

Alabama's Negro Vote By Counties

The rock bottom race issue in the South is not race mixing in schools, but the registration of Negro voters. In the Senate debate over providing jury trial in the civil rights bill, the enemies of jury trial saw away at the theme that white Southerners would not vote for conviction and Negroes are excluded from juries because they are not qualified voters. Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois argued last week:

> We believe that in the interest of justice . . . this cause will be better aided by having the judges, who are Southern whites, who come from Southern communities, and who share the mores of those communities, but who are somewhat insulated from improper pressure by life tenure, make the decisions, than by having cases tried by juries chosen from carefully culled jury lists, which either completely or preponderantly exclude Negroes.

In this connection, Senator Douglas had inserted into the Congressional Record a county-by-county breakdown on the number of Negro voters in Alabama. His figures were supplied by the Southern Regional Council. There is no perfectly accurate count of Negro voters, but this compilation is perhaps as accurate as any available:

County—	1950 potential Negro Voters	1956 number of Negroes registered
Autauga	4,042	73
Baldwin	4,493	625
Barbour	7,158	220

Birmingham Post-Herald

A SCRIPPS-HOWARD NEWSPAPER — TELEPHONE 53-5381

JAMES E. MILLS Editor JOHN W. FRIERSON President

Douglas Blasts Alabama Juries

BY GENE WORTSMAN
Post-Herald Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 12 — Sen. Paul Douglas (D., Ill.), warming up to the civil rights fight, yesterday lambasted Southern juries and customs, particularly those in Alabama.

He said low registration of Negro voters in Alabama and other Southern states "is the very reason" why civil rights legislation is needed.

Douglas' remarks were printed in full in today's Congressional Record.

Accompanying his statements was a county-by-county breakdown of the number of Negro residents in 11 Southern states in 1950 and the number of Negro voters in those counties in 1956.

Douglas said the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress obtained figures for him from the research office of the Southern Regional Council.

Citing Alabama, Douglas declared:

"There were 516,245 Negro males and females over the age of 21 who were entitled to vote; but the number of Negroes registered was 53,396, or 10.3 per cent."

He said Southern states vote fewer people by percentage than other regions.

Alabama, with 28.5 per cent of the population voting, ranks 46th, followed by South Carolina and Mississippi.

His figures showed in part:

Jefferson County with 121,667 Negroes had 7000 Negro voters; Calhoun with 8304 had 1800; Cherokee, 736 had 250; Chilton, 2027 had 350; Cleburne, 380 had 60; Colbert, 4519 had 291; Cullman, 249 had 81; Etowah, 7672 had 2000.

Fayette, 1497 had 326; Franklin, 700 had 200; Lamar, 1204 had 100; Lauderdale, 4022 had 495; Lee,

Douglas Takes On South

A View That the Senator Is Emerging As Chief Champion of Civil Rights Bill

By JAMES RESTON
Special to the New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 11—Senator Paul H. Douglas, Democrat of Illinois, is emerging as the most effective advocate of the Eisenhower Administration's civil rights bill in the Senate.

The white-thatched professor from the Middle West is contending with another powerful orator in the Democratic party, Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr. of North Carolina, for domination of what promises to be the most acrimonious debate of the session.

Every few days now, Senator Douglas appears on the floor armed with heavy catalogues of facts, to prove that the Negro in the South is being deprived of his right to vote in Federal elections.

The New York Times

ESTABLISHED 1851 REG. U. S. PAT. OFF

"All the News That's Fit to Print"

ADOLPH S. OCHS, Publisher 1896-1935

Vol 107; 87th Congress
JAN. 30, 1961 #19

He was cofounder of Medico—the Medical International Cooperation Organization. He gave to it the proceeds from his compelling writings. Now with widespread public support Medico flourishes in at least 10 countries, with 17 programs, with its own staff of able doctors, and a small legion of local assistants and trainees.

In the simple story of Dr. Dooley there must be an accent on heroics. But unless we accept the heroics along with the humility and the humanity of this dedicated being, we shall have lost the lesson of Dr. Dooley's life.

Against the pain, hunger, and ignorance that fashion the common denominator of man's fear and hatred of man, Dr. Dooley taught us that the deadliest weapons are the kindliest gifts—intelligence, gentleness, good will.

May that lesson live with us, and may Dr. Dooley's memory linger forever.

MESSAGE TO THE CONGRESS BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, we were fortunate today to listen to the remarks of the President of the United States. It was a masterly diagnosis of the world situation and the domestic situation. I use the word "diagnosis" because physicians differ in their diagnosis of the ills of the human body. Nevertheless, it was a masterly diagnosis by a great American of our domestic and foreign problems and the challenges that lie ahead.

I remember other occasions when this country was privileged to listen to great addresses about situations which confronted it. The other day I called attention to the time when, in 1933, President Franklin Roosevelt took office he made a great speech in which he said that the only thing we had to fear was fear itself. I thrilled to that statement, and I am sure all America did. But we waited and waited for the panaceas. They did not come.

We are talking now about 4 to 5 million unemployed. Back in the 1930's, the number of unemployed was as high as 10 million, with only 30 million employed. What we are all hoping and praying for is that the panaceas which will be forthcoming now will not be attempts to find solutions as were attempted to be found then. It took a war to solve those problems, and the war did not really solve them; it merely multiplied them. We are all hoping and praying that, under the new administration, the light that is necessary—and by "light" I mean understanding—will be forthcoming so that solutions will be found. I say again the address was a masterly diagnosis by a great American.

PROPOSALS OF SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I should like to comment on the report which has been made by the Southern Regional Council. This is a very distinguished council, composed of both Negroes and whites, leading southerners, generally considered moderate southerners.

I ask unanimous consent that a sketch of the principal executive of the council, Mr. Harold Fleming, may be made a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, Jan. 30, 1961]

A FIGHTER WITH HUMOR—HAROLD CURTIS FLEMING

ATLANTA, January 29.—Behind the Southern Regional Council's blueprint for Presidential action on civil rights, made public today, stands an unassuming Georgian whose name is a legend in the race relations field.

Harold Curtis Fleming took a temporary job with the council more than 13 years ago and never left. He first became information chief and later executive director of white and Negro leaders in 14 Southern States.

The advice to "see Fleming" has become commonplace for those with more than passing interest in the region's most pressing problem. Sociologists, Government officials, foundation executives, visitors from abroad, and writers have listened for hours to his calm, reasoned interpretation of the complexities of the racial crisis.

The 38-year-old executive's telephone rings frequently with calls for advice from officials of some State or city caught in an explosion touched off by racial change. On many occasions, respect for his opinion among both whites and Negroes has enabled him to help bring about a solution.

PUBLIC OPINION INFLUENCED

He has directed a staff of 16 specialists in its efforts to advance the cause of equal opportunity for "all the South's people." This has been achieved primarily through a program of research, information, and education, which has influenced public opinion and legislation by making it impossible to ignore the facts.

Ralph McGill, noted liberal spokesman for the South, publisher of The Atlanta Constitution and a founder of the Southern Regional Council, advised Mr. Fleming to join the organization. He says of him today:

"I've never known a man who has so met the needs of the times. He is a dedicated, intelligent person with all of the necessary courage—one of the great figures of the new South."

Hal Fleming, as he is known, was born in Atlanta on July 27, 1922. He spent his early years here and on a farm in Elbert County in the red clay hills of northeast Georgia. He attended Atlanta's now defunct Boy's High School some years after Dean Rusk, the new Secretary of State.

WON HARVARD SCHOLARSHIP

He accepted a scholarship from Harvard University, worked on the college newspaper, the Crimson, and the literary magazine, the Advocate, and was elected to membership in the Signet Society.

His college education was interrupted by World War II. Mr. Fleming, who is white, served as captain of a Negro quartermaster company on Okinawa. After the war he returned to Harvard.

He and his wife, Jane, a Vassar graduate from St. Paul, Minn., live with their two small sons in a Dutch Colonial home in Atlanta's Ansley Park. Indicative of his favorite pastime is her complaint that they have "too many books and not enough bookshelves."

The slim, blond, and somewhat bald executive also is something of a ragtime virtuoso on the ukulele. He can and does switch to hill-billy tunes when friends insist.

AVOIDS THE DOCTRINAIRE

One characteristic sets Mr. Fleming apart from many others in his field. This is his refusal to adopt a doctrinaire stance on racial questions or to lose his sense of humor.

This attitude has caused some hotheads to consider him at first as irreverent.

"Those who know him well," says one friend, "are aware that he is seething inside over the injustice done to Negroes. They also know that he can be counted upon for the intelligent answer, the fine assessment of the facts, the sound judgment, the knowledgeable insight."

While Mr. Fleming's analysis may be profound, according to one who has known him for years, "he laces it with a mild, delightful humor like that of the classic British soldier in 'Journey's End.'"

Neither his personality nor his views are typically southern. But his associates contend that he is deeply concerned about the region's problems and that he has shown a greater sense of dedication than most in the search for a solution.

Mr. JAVITS. The significance of this report is that it calls for major areas of Executive action by the President. I have noted six such areas. I think the report emphasizes the fact that the implementation of great words will be what will count, rather than the brave words alone, admirable as they are.

I agree thoroughly with the statement of the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY], which have just been uttered concerning the President. I was sorry to see that civil rights was "kissed off" in the message to Congress by one sentence, and not a very powerful one. The President's message related not only to foreign policies of this country, but domestic policies. I am deeply disquieted that we have been hearing only about legislative action, and not executive action as well, because I am completely convinced that school desegregation cannot be successfully carried through except with executive action as well as legislative action.

Executive action is called for in the report in six areas. I shall conclude my statement by mentioning them:

First, the President is urged to publicly affirm his full support of the Supreme Court's 1954 decision and his intention to employ his Executive powers as needed to assure orderly compliance with it.

Second, it is urged that an announcement be made that, at a date certain, no research funds will be granted by the Federal Government to any institution of higher learning, or its faculty, public or private, which refuses admission to anyone because of race, creed, color, or national origin.

Third, a national registration drive, under the personal sponsorship of the President, should be launched and supported by publications describing registration and voting qualifications and procedures in each State.

Fourth, desegregation of the National Guard in Southern States is urged.

Fifth, there is a need for certification by Government contractors in advance that no one will be denied employment because of race. This can be done by executive action.

Sixth, a declaration by the President that Federal housing programs will be guided by integration rather than by segregation policies.

These are the specifications set forth by a distinguished group. Here are policies that can be implemented, to the credit of America.

I ask unanimous consent that the specific proposals of the Southern Regional Council may be included in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the extract was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

We urge upon the President that he publicly affirm his full support of the Supreme Court's 1954 decision and his intention to employ his Executive powers as needed to assure orderly compliance with it;

* * * * *

An announcement ought to be made that, at a date certain, no research funds will be granted by the Federal Government to any institution of higher learning (or its faculty), public or private, which refuses admission to anyone because of race, creed, color, or national origin.

* * * * *

A national registration drive, under the personal sponsorship of the President, should be launched, and supported by publications describing registration and voting qualifications and procedures in each State.

The National Guard in Southern States is the remnant of segregation in the armed services; segregation in southern colleges and universities, and the mode of selection of academy cadets and misdshipmen, restrict the opportunities for Negroes to become military officers. All of these situations are within the power of the President to remedy or ameliorate.

* * * * *

There needs to be more effective enforcement of the bar against discriminatory employment by Government contractors. Large contractors can be appropriately charged with a special responsibility for positive recruitment of Negroes; an appropriate means of requiring this would be prior certification as a condition for award of contract.

* * * * *

A declaration by the President that Federal housing programs will be guided by a belief in the values of integration would be the soundest basis for an Executive order prohibiting discrimination.

FORTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF UKRAINIAN INDEPENDENCE

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, January 22 marked the 43d anniversary of the proclamation of the independence of the Ukrainian National Republic. Since the middle of the 17th century these hard working and courageous people had been living under Russian regimes. Unhappily, their experience as a free people was brief. In 1920 the Red army attacked the new republic and the Ukraine was made part of the Soviet Union.

The freedom loving people of Ukraine, who number 42 million in Europe, have maintained their national unity through great adversity, and they still do so. They represent a force for freedom in the struggle against Russian Communist imperialism.

Americans of Ukrainian descent, many of whom live in Minnesota, celebrated Ukrainian Independence Day last January 22. I wish to acknowledge the efforts of the Minnesota branch of the Ukrainian Congress Committee of America and that of Mr. Wasil Dombrowsky, its president, and Mr. Mvkola Derbush, secretary, in calling attention to the plight of the Ukrainian people and their continuing fight for freedom.

Ukrainian Independence Day presents the Congress with an opportunity to recall our position made officially in the enactment on July 17, 1959, of the joint resolution designating "Captive Nations Week." On that occasion the Ukraine was listed as one of the captive nations enslaved by Communist Russia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further morning business? If not, morning business is closed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. SMATHERS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I should like to be heard on the motion, to ask the Senator whether he feels we should have a quorum call.

Mr. SMATHERS. I shall suggest the absence of a quorum as soon as the Senate proceeds to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Florida.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, and withdrawing the nominations of Charles H. King, of Michigan, to be a member of the Federal Communications Commission, Walter C. Wallace, of New York, to be an Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Theodore F. Stevens, of Alaska, to be Solicitor for the Department of the Interior, tranmitted to the Senate on January 10, 1961; which nominating messages were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

Mr. SYMINGTON. Mr. President, from the Committee on Armed Services, I report favorably a group of nominations of flag and general officers in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force, and ask that these names be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nominations will be placed on the Executive Calendar, as requested by the Senator from Missouri.

The nominations are as follows:

Rear Adm. Edward C. Kenney, Medical Corps, U.S. Navy, and sundry other officers of the Navy, for appointment and promotion;

Lt. Gen. Robert Frederick Sink, and sundry other officers, for appointment and promotion in the U.S. Army;

Lt. Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson, (major general, Regular Air Force), U.S. Air Force, to be placed on the retired list in the grade of lieutenant general;

Brig. Gen. Joe C. Moffitt, and sundry other officers, for appointment as Reserve commissioned officers in the U.S. Air Force; and Richard A. Evans and Robert B. Bell, for temporary appointment to the grade of brigadier general, Marine Corps Reserve.

Mr. SYMINGTON. Mr. President, in addition, I report favorably a total of 12,095 nominations in the Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force in the grade of colonel and captain and below. All of these names have already appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. In order to save the expense of printing on the Executive Calendar, I ask unanimous consent that they be ordered to lie on the Vice President's desk for the information of any Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations will be held at the desk, as requested by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. SMATHERS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate proceed to the consideration of nominations on the Executive Calendar.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Department of State.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimuos consent that the nominations in the Department of State be considered en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations will be considered en bloc.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I wish to say a word about the nomination of Mr. George W. Ball to be Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, by way of emphasizing to the Senate the critically important nature of this office and the great expectations which many people hold, that George Ball may carry on in the very distinguished tradition of Douglas Dillon, whom he is succeeding in this critically important office, and to highlight the fact that what will be before us and what Mr. Ball will be called upon to deal with immediately is the ratification by the Senate of the treaty for the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development. In that regard I point out that notwithstanding all the talk about initiative in terms of foreign policy in the Eisenhower administration and the administration that preceded it, the OECD represents one of the most distinguished of our foreign policy initiatives ever taken in this country, with the purpose and the form of the organization far greater than the size and aggregate economic power of the whole Atlantic community, aggregating almost $1 billion in productive power, infinitely outshining the Communist bloc. This initiative was the initiative of the previous administration, carried through by Secretary of State Herter and Under Secretary of State Dillon.

Mr. Ball will now have, I think, the great privilege and honor of carrying that program through to completion.

Vol. 107; 87th Congress
Jan. 31, 1961 #20

Attached are copies of Senator HART's letter to Freeman and a memorandum of a national forest program for the State of Michigan.

JANUARY 21, 1961.

The Honorable ORVILLE L. FREEMAN,
Secretary of Agriculture,
U.S. Department of Agriculture,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: In the counties in and adjacent to all five of Michigan's national forests, and in particular in the Upper Peninsula area, there is substantial unemployment. This has been a condition which has prevailed for some time. It is due in a large measure to the underdevelopment of the renewable natural resources and the recreational possibilities.

For some time, along with other Members of the Senate, I have been deeply concerned about the need better to develop our natural resources, particularly those in public ownership.

Last year, when the Secretary of Agriculture requested that the Congress enact the multiple-use bill for the national forest, and we agreed, I looked quite closely into forest matters. I was encouraged to find that there had been prepared a comprehensive program to develop these public forest resources. I was disappointed to discover that the Eisenhower administration viewed this plan—its own product—as either impossible or not worthy of attainment.

The program for national forest development involving a $1.7 billion investment stands on its own feet as a conservation measure of superlative merit. There is not a shadow of doubt that with our projected population growth and our growing resource needs, this program is modest both in scope and projected rate of accomplishment. It is already behind schedule.

Of special significance just now is the capability of a forest work program to meet certain criteria for selection in a recession situation. A substantial portion of the work is in or near areas of chronic unemployment. Many of the projects take relatively few skills, thus able-bodied jobless can be readily utilized without extensive retraining. The Forest Service, by virtue of its extensive fire control experience, can rapidly expand or contract its personnel base. Much of the work can be undertaken at once—not being contingent upon extensive planning or specification preparation.

Several of the more important program elements, such as reforestation, recreational site developments and timber stand improvement, assure that as much as 75 percent of every dollar invested is utilized for salaries yet the capital investment ratio is still extremely high.

The combination of recognized conservation needs and suitability for acceleration at a time and in an area of recession are compelling reasons for a decision to move now. The new frontier of this decade lies in the reconstitution of our resources for the service they can render now and in the critical years ahead.

Permit me therefore to urge that immediate steps be taken to move in the last quarter of this fiscal year on the national forest program.

The current Forest Service budget is $143 million. The program I suggest involves a supplemental appropriation for fiscal year 1961 of approximately $50 million, an increase for fiscal year 1962 over the resulting 1961 budget of $92 million as outlined in the attached document, and action in fiscal year 1963 which will bring the Forest Service budget up to the level of $320 million. In the process, special consideration should of course be given to programs of work in areas of chronic unemployment and to provide jobs for these now jobless.

I know you will give this your thought and hope you will find it sound.

Sincerely,

PHILIP A. HART.

NATIONAL FOREST PROGRAM ESTIMATES FOR THE STATE OF MICHIGAN

Work projects listed are a portion of the 12-year program for national-forest lands in Michigan. Many of these projects could be started within 1 or 2 weeks after receipt of funds. Surplus trees are available in the nurseries for expanding reforestation programs.

While the attached lists of projects represent about a 12-year program, the major part of the work could effectively be telescoped into about 3 years. There is also a reservoir of work that goes beyond the 12-year program. This would normally have been programed at a much later date, but much of this work could be moved ahead and accomplished in the next 3 to 5 years.

This work program provides for balanced development of national-forest lands in Michigan. Most of these projects require a relatively high percentage of labor, thus offering maximum employment opportunities. Cost data are based on local going wages.

National forest program estimates

Type of work	Approximate man-days	Estimated cost
MICHIGAN—UPPER PENINSULA
Timber resource management: Plant trees on 154,000 acres and cultural treatment of 431,000 acres	625,000	$12,644,000
Recreation-public use: Construct 980 family units and related facilities on public campground areas	37,000	1,200,000
Wildlife habitat: Improve 20,000 acres of game habitat, 80 miles of fishing streams, and 230 acres of lakes; control rodents on 60,000 acres	14,000	240,000
Soil and water management: Stabilize gullies, roads, and streams and rehabilitate eroded lands	5,000	101,000
Forest fire protection: Reduce fuel on 8,000 acres and construct 600 miles of firebreaks	75,000	1,548,000
Structural improvements: Construct 20 housing units, 20 service buildings including lookouts and special structures; betterment of existing structures; new radio installations and replacement of substandard telephone lines	15,000	568,000
Forest roads and trails: Construct or reconstruct approximately 1,900 miles of roads and assist in construction of roads by timber purchasers	150,000	8,970,000
Total	921,000	25,271,000

Type of work	Approximate man-days	Estimated cost
MICHIGAN—LOWER PENINSULA
Timber resource management: Plant trees on 77,000 acres and cultural treatment on 218,000 acres	300,000	$6,000,000
Recreation-public use: Construct 420 family units and related facilities on recreation areas	17,000	428,000
Wildlife habitat: Improve 40 miles of fishing streams, 230 acres of lakes, and 13,000 acres of game habitat; control rodents on 20,000 acres	10,000	177,000
Soil and water management: Stabilize and rehabilitate eroded lands, gullies, roads, and streams	3,000	61,000
Forest fire protection: Reduce fuel on 400 acres and construct 400 miles of firebreaks	37,000	775,000
Structural improvements: Construct 10 housing units, 10 service buildings, 1 research office-laboratory, lookouts and special structures, new radio installations, replace substandard telephone lines	10,000	364,000
Forest roads and trails: Construct or reconstruct about 1,000 miles of roads and assist in construction of roads by timber purchasers	75,000	4,480,000
Total	452,000	12,285,000

THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE,
Washington, D.C., January 28, 1961.

Hon. PHILIP A. HART,
U.S. Senate.

DEAR SENATOR: You will be interested to know that I have this date urged on the Chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers that as a part of the antirecession program there be included an active program of forest improvement and reforestation. Dr. Welch, Assistant Secretary of Federal-States Relations, and Dr. McArdle, the Chief of our Forest Service, are working to submit specific figures as to man-hours of labor and costs. In this connection, it might well be of interest to your constituents that we are moving aggressively here at your instance.

Sincerely yours,

ORVILLE L. FREEMAN.

RACE STUDY URGES USE OF EXECUTIVE'S POWER

Mr. HART. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article, which appeared yesterday in the Washington Post, entitled "Race Study Urges Use of Executive's Power." This study and group of recommendations were prepared under the auspices of one of the Nation's most respected organizations concerned with improving race relations in America—the Southern Regional Council. The report contains a well-reasoned, constructive group of recommendations which, if put into action, would go a long way toward providing the kind of leadership and policy which have long been needed in the field of civil rights.

But this is not all that might be done. There remains need for legislative action, as well. I, for one, am hopeful that this Congress will assume its share of responsibility for making progress in civil rights, too. If this can be done, the legislative branch will take its proper place, along with the executive and the judicial, in making the Constitution a living instrument in the protection of the rights of all our citizens.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RACE STUDY URGES USE OF EXECUTIVE'S POWER

(By Elsie Carper)

An independent survey suggests that existing Presidential powers, "diligently exercised, could carry the country far toward racial relations that are sane and honorable."

The study, prepared by the Southern Regional Council, a nonprofit organization seeking ways to improve race relations in the South, was published yesterday. The council has offices in Atlanta.

The 48-page report was issued at a time when President Kennedy's administration is formulating policies and programs. Broad recommendations on ways the President may use his powers to combat discrimination are outlined in the report.

One of the major recommendations is a Presidential staff adviser to keep the President informed on racial matters and to coordinate activities of the Commission on Civil Rights and the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

The report states that consideration be given to setting up an office, with adequate staff, to serve as a watchdog over Federal programs for compliance with a policy of nondiscrimination.

The Federal Government's own operations, the report declares, need to be a model of just race relations. The Government must hire, fire and promote with obvious regard for racial equality and eradicate segregation in its offices.

While the survey is limited to official activities of the President, the report makes it clear that the President's personal attitudes and actions also are important.

"A President of robust conviction will lose no occasion, however trivial," the report states, "to show by purely personal action his admiration of principles of equality. Such demonstration may be worth fully as much as Executive orders and formal pronouncements."

Presidential leadership is defined in the report as "a showing of concern, in all the countless acts of the office, that America be a place where men live with each other in confidence, and society cooperates with each of its members in the fulfillment of his search for a good life."

"There would be inestimable value if the President gave, simply and clearly, a declaration of national intent to move vigorously to end all discrimination and disadvantage of race, and pledge that the Federal Government in the conduct of its own affairs would show the way," the report declares.

The council points out that race relations is America's oldest unsolved problem, once again at a stage of crisis. In the past the crises were resolved by compromise, war, and from 1877 to 1933 by national avoidance of responsibility.

"This ancient and always divisive issue has a claim on us not only for settlement, but for decisive resolution," the report states. "It is a burden which national self-respect demands that we finally lay down."

Honest dealing by the Government and the public toward nonwhite citizens, the report declares, would strengthen the prestige of the United States abroad while continuing discrimination will weaken it.

The report states that Negroes are a disadvantaged tenth of Americans from, literally, the cradle to the grave. America has no undeveloped resources comparable to the reservoir of human talent, which, in the Negro population, is going to waste.

Negroes are not the only minority at a disadvantage and discrimination exists elsewhere than in the South but the racial problems of the South are the acute test of the American ideal of liberty and equality.

The council finds little in the record to encourage the belief that the situation in the South will improve "unless recognized as the Nation's failure, and properly subject to national policy."

National unity, the report states, will be served best if the President speaks forthrightly about racial problems in the South and if statements are confined to what he and the administration are prepared to enforce.

In an obvious reference to the recent riots in New Orleans that followed desegregation of two schools, the report makes this veiled criticism of the Eisenhower administration:

"That a state of near anarchy could exist for weeks in one of our largest cities without any public remark by the Chief Executive is well nigh incredible."

The report declares that within the South there are numerous whites who will give practical, effective support for reform if there is national leadership. Frequent conferences and consultations by the President with southern economic and political leaders would broaden this base of support.

"Preeminently the most compelling unfinished business is school integration," the report states. "Respect for law and Federal authority requires a prompt resolution."

The council urges the President to "publically reconfirm his full support" of the Supreme Court school desegregation decision and his intention to employ his Executive powers to insure compliance.

Throughout the South the burden of desegregating schools has fallen upon Negroes. The council urges the President to direct the Attorney General to look closely into authorizations he has for initiating or intervening in school desegregation cases.

It also urges the President to direct the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to provide information and counsel to school administrations and schools engaged in desegregation of schools.

The report states that in the field of housing the policies of the Federal Government, through its mortgage credit aids, public housing and slum clearance programs, "has been a principal architect of housing segregation."

The President should issue an Executive order stating that the national policy is to encourage integration in housing, the report states. It recommends that the administration study proposals to reduce the size and increase the number of public housing projects and scatter them in biracial and all-white neighborhoods rather than place them in Negro and transition neighborhoods.

The administration also should consider a system of "benign quotas" in public housing projects to keep them from becoming all Negro or all white.

The council recognizes that a strict nondiscriminatory order for FHA and PHA housing will reduce the number of starts in the South and hamper or halt urban renewal but believes that Southern opposition should not be a deterrent. Benefits of participation in Federal programs have such a powerful attraction that there is every reason to believe that the slowdown will not last long, the council states.

Other recommendations by the council:

Federal employment practices should be reviewed with the aim of immediate compliance with nondiscrimination. Special effort should be made to recruit qualified Negroes for offices concerned with race relations such as U.S. attorneys, Federal Bureau of Investigation, U.S. marshals, Civil Rights Division, Commission on Civil Rights and housing agencies.

Negroes should be appointed to the Foreign Service but not restricted to positions in African countries.

Federal grants in aid for vocational education and research funds should be withheld from schools and colleges which restrict admissions because of race. The Federal Government should insist that public schools attended by children of military personnel be nonsegregated.

Discrimination in the National Guard and in ROTC units in universities should be ended. The President in making appointments to the service academies should give special attention to Negro candidates who are at a disadvantage in receiving congressional appointments.

The Department of Justice should enforce vigilantly existing statutes and precedents to assure orderly school desegregation and the right of peaceable assembly. Action could prevent violence, reprisal, and intimidation surrounding school desegregation, sit-in controversies, and Negro voting.

The Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department should be staffed with an adequate number of attorneys. Working relationships with U.S. district attorneys should be so defined to permit widespread enforcement of voting provisions of the 1957 and 1960 Civil Rights Acts.

The Federal Government should undertake a national registration drive, under sponsorship of the President. A side result would be an upsurge in Negro registration in the South.

The separate but equal clause in Hill-Burton Act funds for Federal aid for hospital construction should be reexamined.

The Department of Justice should study ways to end discrimination in interstate travel now clearly established as unconstitutional.

The Federal Government should insist that its contractors follow practices of nondiscriminatory employment. Federal cooperation with discrimination should be ended at once in programs of the Bureau of Apprenticeship and the U.S. Employment Service.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR NEUBERGER

Mr. MANSFIELD. Madam President, before the Senate adjourns, I wish to take this occasion to compliment the present Presiding Officer, the distinguished junior Senator from Oregon [Mrs. NEUBERGER], on the skill and the efficiency she has shown in presiding over the Senate today, during what really is the first full day of business the Senate has transacted this year. She has been diligent in carrying out her duties and she has been fair in her judgments; and I believe that the Senate as a whole is greatly honored to have this distinguished lady as its Presiding Officer on this occasion.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Madam President, will the majority leader yield to me?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I am glad to yield.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Madam President, I concur in the sentiment the majority leader has expressed. Let me add that in addition to the distinguished way in which the able junior Senator from Oregon presides over the Senate, she fairly suffuses this entire Chamber with her charm and removes from some of the exchanges the severities and the asperities which sometimes mark our deliberations.

ADJOURNMENT TO THURSDAY

Mr. MANSFIELD. Madam President, on that gracious note, I move that the Senate now adjourn until 12 o'clock noon, on Thursday.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 6 minutes p.m.) the Senate adjourned until Thursday, February 2, 1961, at 12 o'clock meridian.

United States of America

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 91st CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 115 WASHINGTON, MONDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1969 No. 203

VITA–U.S.A.

HON. DANIEL E. BUTTON

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, December 8, 1969

Mr. BUTTON. Mr. Speaker, in view of President Nixon's recent announcement of the creation of a National Center for Voluntary Action to help motivate and mobilize citizen-volunteers to "master common needs and problems," I think it is timely and appropriate to inform the Congress of a volunteer program in my home district which has already achieved outstanding success in mobilizing large numbers of volunteers to help solve the problems of poverty in the United States. I am speaking of the new U.S.A. Division of Volunteers for International Technical Assistance.

On past occasions I have commented on VITA's more than 9 years' experience in successfully providing technical consultation through its volunteers in helping to improve conditions in the developing world. Working with private citizens, missionaries, Peace Corps volunteers, and AID personnel, VITA's international operation continues with that important task. Recently, VITA counterpart organizations were established in the Philippines and Ceylon, and more are planned in the coming months.

Now I am happy to report that VITA, through its new USA program, is calling on its roster of over 6,000 volunteers to provide technical and professional assistance to both public and private antipoverty efforts. At a time when we are reviewing the authorization for the Office of Economic Opportunity, I think it significant to point out that VITA–U.S.A. was created with a grant from OEO last January. As an example of cooperation between a Government agency and the private sector in helping to seek solutions to some of America's critical problems, the VITA–U.S.A. program is very much in keeping with the President's recent remarks on voluntarism and the innovative thrust of OEO under Mr. Rumsfeld.

In a November 4 statement on voluntarism the President said:

> From the beginning of our country, Americans have worked together voluntarily to help master the common needs and problems. A major goal of this administration is to recognize and enlist the energies and resources of the people themselves, as well as government, in a renewal of this historic American approach.

A recent review of the first 9 months of VITA–U.S.A.'s operation indicates solid success in enlisting the energies and resources the President spoke of. Under unanimous consent I insert excerpts from that review and from a recent program description prepared by VITA:

VITA–USA: A PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The USA Division of Volunteers for International Technical Assistance (VITA) came into being with the signing of an OEO contract in January 1969. This was the culmination of discussions which OEO initiated in the summer of 1968 and reflected the reputation VITA had acquired in providing volunteer technical assistance to the developing nations since 1960.

VITA–USA shares an expanding roster of over 6,000 Volunteers with the organization's International Division. In the first nine months of operation, VITA–USA received more than 300 inquiries from all parts of the United States and its territories.

VITA–USA accepts requests for technical assistance from any organization, group, or individual—public or private—engaged in domestic anti-poverty work. The single criterion applied is that the recipient of VITA consultation not be able to afford normal fees for such services.

Requests are sometimes answered by mail but more frequently involve face-to-face contact. This is accomplished in one of two ways. In the first method, a volunteer living near the requester visits the client and often accomplishes the assignment in his spare time. Presently there are two field offices with small staffs who support the community service activities of VITA's Boston and Washington, D.C. Chapters.

Second method: the volunteer spends a block of time on "short term assignment". In such cases volunteers are usually required to travel to another area and must take leave from their jobs. Travel expenses are paid by VITA. The volunteer's employer makes a vital contribution by continuing his salary during the leave period. Duration of the assignments vary from one day to several weeks.

VITA Volunteers represent a wide range of skills from architecture and engineering to business management, systems analysis, education, and psychology. In the USA program they have assisted self-help housing groups, trained hotel employees, done marketing surveys, developed a volunteer manpower management system, and designed simple, easy to build playground equipment.

To date, new volunteers have been recruited on the basis of need in specific skills categories. On-board Volunteers are frequently used to recruit or refer others and even help in the selection and screening process when assignments are made. Many volunteers, particularly in the national headquarters area, give administrative assistance to staff members by working in the inquiry service, serving on research committees, and by representing VITA at meetings and conferences.

Once a request is received, the Inquiry Service staff check the roster to locate one or more volunteers with the skills required. They use a telephone interview guide to determine the person's willingness, availability, and suitability in terms of experience and attitude. The client himself usually participates in the selection process by also speaking with the candidate to make a final suitability determination. The volunteer's effectiveness is measured following receipt of reports submitted by him and by the client with whom he has dealt.

Although VITA–USA is still a new program, the response by those who have been assisted indicates that it has been very successful. Acceptance by community people being helped is based on two factors: responsiveness—we assist only those who request help, and performance—the volunteers have consistently provided competent professional assistance.

Basic elements of our plan for the second and third years of operation are the considerable expansion of local staff supported chapters in a number of American cities to better serve concentrated urban areas and an enlarged National Consulting Service to handle requests from smaller towns and rural areas.

VITA–USA: A SUMMARY REVIEW OF THE FIRST 9 MONTHS

General Conclusions: Based on the success of the program it may be said that the major hypothesis of the demonstration has been proven: "VITA's volunteer force, which has been utilized effectively in aiding developing countries, can be applied to help solve problems of poverty in the USA."

The USA program is unique in its ability to mobilize and apply volunteers for use in urban and rural poverty settings and on a national scale. The basic principles that have led to acceptance by community people needing help are:

1. Responsiveness: assistance is given only to those who request help and only in the form that it is requested.

2. Performance: the staff has shown an ability to handle volunteer selection, logistics of volunteer assignments, and follow-up. Volunteers have consistently demonstrated their ability to provide competent, professional asisstance.

The first two chapter projects established in Boston and Washington demonstrate the need for additional ones in metropolitan areas where manpower resources covering a broad skills spectrum can be mobilized.

The National Consulting Service is mostly needed by small cities and rural areas.

Quantity of Effort: During the nine months covered by the review, 316 requests were received by the program. Responding to them, over 500 volunteers contributed 7000 hours.

The program start-up was smooth, with top-notch staff being recruited within targeted dates. (Interestingly, six of the staff are ex-Peace Corps volunteers.) Methods and procedures have been developed, and an ongoing evaluation permits continual improvement of these procedures.

Voluntary technical assistance is extremely economical since the consulting time is free.

Quality of Effort: Evaluations of the Boston Project and the National Consulting Service include the following conclusions on operating procedures: (1) the requesters give VITA–USA high marks on volunteer selection and speed of response. (2) VITA–USA cases involve mostly "soft technology" and are much more complex than previous international requests. They require more in-depth, on-site help, and follow-up. (3) the volunteer's interest in providing repeated or long term assistance to our requests is increased when the staff provide him with up-to-date feedback on the results of his efforts. (4) there are still many potential users of VITA's services who do not clearly understand how to take advantage of the program or who have as yet not even heard of it.

Unique Characteristics: (1) Flexibility and Concern: there is frequent intermittent involvement, thanks to VITA's flexibility and lack of "red tape", (2) VITA–USA often serves as a bridge to other private or governmental resources, in many cases bringing together for the first time those in need with those in the best position to provide assistance, (3) Availability: for the first time in many communities VITA represents a source of free technical assistance. Too often in the past community projects needing such assistance have gone without and failed; (4) Objectivity: volunteers serve as objective outsiders; their advice can be used publicly or privately to help the requester achieve his goals. Examples illustrating these points:

A California Community Action Agency director reports valuable assistance in changing organization structure and personnel methods as a result of management analysis by a VITA Volunteer.

An Urban League housing project in Omaha is being considered for a $160,000 grant and is using a report by two qualified volunteers to back up its case.

Quote from a crafts project in Harlan, Kentucky: "VITA provided the assistance needed to this small agency which had neither funds nor confidence to seek elsewhere. In areas where volunteers were not available, excellent referrals were made, quite unlike others I have dealt with." As a result of VITA's help in costing and market sources, a grant providing initial capital has been obtained and a market established in Washington, D.C. Sixty people are involved.

Quote from Wyoming Community Health Council, New Richmond, Virginia: "I had contacted OEO in Washington and was told that the chances of getting a consulting firm were very dim. I contacted VITA but did not expect any results . . . VITA provided the assistance asked for and more . . . provided a stimulus to the project when many were discouraged and about to give up hope. Dr. Starkweather has shown the way. We have hired a health specialist and are preparing the proposal for funding."

Areas of Greatest Contribution: Based on experience to date, VITA's staff has been able to define areas where the program seems to be able to have its greatest impact. One of the areas is the field of business development in rural areas and small cities. Three ventures off to a successful start, due heavily to VITA volunteer assistance, are:

1. "Jack of All Trades Service Corporation", a maintenance business formed by the Bennington-Rutland Opportunity Council, Inc., received help from volunteer Richard Bowen on systems of floor maintenance, equipment procurement, job bidding. "Mr. Bowen brought over a floor machine and worked day and night to train the men. He visited our customers and set up a program of cleaning for each. Also helped with calls on new customers, increasing business."

2. A quilting group in North Carolina received information on production, marketing, and design. The co-op has been formed, and the first quilt samples are in production.

Other areas of special competence include

Management Methods and Systems Analysis, Fund Raising Assistance, Engineering—particularly rural water systems and sanitation, Education of the Disadvantaged, Recreation and Playgrounds, and Business Development.

VITA–USA has developed a model for establishing a nationwide network of effective urban chapter programs. Whereas one chapter program was the goal for the first year, two staffed projects have been stated. The Boston Project is already up to over 500 volunteer man hours per month being devoted to projects with high success potential. The District of Columbia Project is well under way.

A Declaration of Equality

The bus sped cross-country, topping one low hill after another, putting the white ribbon of concrete behind it. It was hot. The air quivered with heat, and the tar in between the huge cakes of concrete softened, melted, and became a jet black with the brilliant eye of the sun shining in it.

It was hot in the bus. Some of the windows were open, and men with open shirts lolled their heads on the seats, appreciating the hot stream of air. But some of the windows were closed. The women had closed them because the air marred their hair. They sweated, patiently.

But it was hotter in the top of the bus. The sun beat down upon the shiny steel covering, heating the air inside. The hot, heavy air made the Negro soldier sweat. He was standing up; everyone else was sitting. Every seat had been taken when he got on the bus. That had been seventy miles ago. Every seat was still taken. He shifted his weight to his right foot, leaned his right arm and shoulder against the baggage rack, and waited.

A man up front, a white passenger, reached for the bell cord, grasped it, and pulled twice. The bell beside the driver's seat tinkled, and the driver involuntarily lifted his foot from the accelerator pedal, the bus slowed, and stopped alongside a little path which led to a house. The door opened; the man got up and stepped out of the bus. The driver meshed the gears, and the bus moved along its montonous way. The seat remained empty.

Twenty miles later, twenty hot, sweaty miles later, the seat was still empty. The soldier watched it, longed to sit down. He was angry and tired and hot. He looked at his uniform, the American uniform which he had worn for — for such a long time. And then, his mind made up, he took six steps up the aisle and sat down. His white neighbor had been busy looking at the landscape, watching the telephone poles as they rushed by, reading the advertisements. Now he began to lose interest, and stole a few quick, sideward glances at the soldier. He was slightly embarrassed, and he was very angry. He had difficulty controlling his voice when he said:

"Get out of this seat. You can't sit here."

The soldier shuddered inwardly, but it didn't show on his face. He just turned slowly, and asked:

"Who says so?"

"The law says so, that's who," rejoined the white man. The soldier gripped the back of the seat ahead, and slowly pulled himself erect.

"I was a fool," he told himself. "I was a fool to think that I could sit there." He took six steps toward the back of the bus and resumed his old position. The driver, having watched the proceeding through the rear-view mirror, relaxed and began to pay complete attention to his driving.

The soldier shifted his weight to his right leg and leaned his right arm and shoulder against the baggage rack. He rested his head on his arm, and looked at his sweaty uniform, and pondered.

The bus continued its Southward journey. It was not concerned.

THE Southland; nation within a nation; a tradition.

The Old South, the land of plantations and slaves, is changed now. It no longer has the plantations. It has substituted tenant farms and absentee ownership. It no longer has legal title to any slaves, but it is laden with economic slaves, both white and black. Students of history speak of the Civil War as being won by the Union, or more commonly, the North. Such a statement is not completely true. Militarily the South was defeated. The 13th, 14th and 15th amendments were passed, and the forces which fought for slavery could do nothing. But in 1867 the South won the war, or a large portion thereof. It was in that year that the right of a railroad to segregate passengers according to race was upheld.[1] Jim Crow had arrived. The South had begun to adopt the "Black Codes" which were nothing more than discriminatory legislation aimed at the Negro, when Congress enacted the Civil Rights Act in 1875. This Act guaranteed nondiscrimination and gave weight to the constitutional amendments enacted immediately after the Civil War. The Supreme Court, holding that the Congress could not enact such legislation without exceeding its powers, declared the Act unconstitutional in 1883. The South, although not a participant in this fight, had won another battle. The "Black Codes" flourished and became the Jim Crow laws which the southern states abide by today.

No mention is made in the United States Constitution of the power of states to legislate discriminatory laws against a portion of their citizenry. The states claim validity for the Jim Crow laws by virtue of the "police powers" reserved to them by the Constitution. That no one who participated in the framing of the Constitution had in mind the "policing" and discriminating between one citizen and another is manifest. When the original Jim Crow laws were passed racial prejudice was at its height, a part of the chaos which followed the war. It was to be expected in the beginning. The ruling class had lost its hold, had lost its slaves, but it had not lost its influence over the other classes in the South. It had not lost its life.

---

[1] Westchester Railroad Co. v. Miles. 55 Pa. St. 209.

The legislators of the 1870's, through the passage of Jim Crow measures, thereby insured that prejudice would continue. Through legal means, they wrought discrimination. That discrimination produced prejudice, which in turn produced more discrimination. Inspired by racial prejudice, and enacted under the protection of court decisions, the Jim Crow laws of today, throughout the Southland, continue to subvert the Constitution of the United States which makes no distinction regarding race.[2] Even when the facilities in southern transportation have been equal, the injustice is still obvious to all. It is a matter of elementary psychology; to place a man in a certain position because of his alleged inferiority is to degrade him, regardless of how clean or convenient or expansive the position happens to be.

It is the contention of many that prejudice cannot be legislated into nonexistence. The truth of such a statement is unchallenged. But what is ofttimes a producer of prejudice, namely, discrimination through laws, may be legislated away. To separate people, or animals for that matter, to set them apart, is only to create fear and distrust. The key to the problem lies in association and understanding between the races, not alienation of one from the other.

THE judicial tides of the nation move slowly, almost imperceptibly, but sometimes they engrave their message upon the beaches with startling clarity. National emergencies; depression, famine, war; all these help to accelerate these processes, to create new needs, new ideas. The cases in the courts give a clue to what is happening. More and more cases involving Jim Crow laws, more and more emphasis upon the Interstate Commerce Clause mark a change in attitude.

It was well known that the "equal protection" clause would be hard to enforce in discrimination cases. Just what constituted "equal facilities" would be a laborious question to decide in each

[2] See the 14th amendment; the "equal protection of the laws" clause.

". . . As there is no federal act dealing with the separation of races in interstate transportation, we must decide the validity of this Virginia statute on the challenge that it interferes with commerce, as a matter of balance between the exercise of the local police power and the need for national uniformity in the regulations for interstate travel. It seems clear to us that seating arrangements for the different races in interstate motor travel require a single, uniform rule to promote and protect national travel. Consequently, we hold the Virginia statute in controversy invalid."

(From Supreme Court decision on the case of Morgan v. Commonwealth of Virginia, June 3, 1946, 66, Supreme Court Reporter, 1058.)

case; and even if such adjudication took place, there would be no uniform law effective throughout the nation. It has been just such a desire for uniformity in matters of economics which, in recent years, has promoted Congress to accord more significant meaning to the so-called "Interstate Commerce" clause which gives the Congress power to regulate interstate commerce.[3] The Fair Labor Standards Act (The Wage and Hour Law) was passed under the authority given Congress to regulate the "Commerce among the several States." By that Act the Congress decreed that workers making products which were transported in interstate commerce were themselves engaged in interstate commerce. For the well-being of the interstate commerce, it was necessary that the workmen receive a sufficient wage.

The reasoning was thought to be farfetched and it was. But since that time (the passage of the FLSA in 1938) more things "farfetched" have come forth. The Southeastern Underwriters Case declared that insurance was a commodity of interstate commerce, and therefore subject to Federal control. A Supreme Court case recently held that an Arizona state law prohibiting the length of trains to 14 cars was unconstitutional on the ground that it imposed too great a burden upon interstate commerce.[4]

The difficulty was that when a long train crossed the Arizona border, it had to have removed from it several cars in order not to exceed the maximum. This caused delays, necessitated more trains. The court said: "When the regulation of matters of local concern is local in character and effect, and its impact on the national commerce does not seriously interfere with its operation, and the consequent incentive to deal with them nationally is slight, such regulation has been held to be within state authority.

"But . . . the states have not been deemed to have authority to impede substantially the free flow of commerce from state to state, or to regulate those phases of the national commerce which, because of the need of national uniformity, demand that their regulation, if any be prescribed by a single authority."

THUS we have a well-defined trend. When the Court begins to apply what it has to say about freight cars to human beings, the Jim Crow laws will disappear. Even now, as the Southland casts inquiring eyes toward industrialization, and the massed strength of labor unions slowly but inexorably is applied, the cases in the courts make strides forward and place long avoided issues squarely before the tribunals. A few cases will serve to illustrate:

The suit by Mrs. Yolanda Barnett Wilkerson against the Texas and Pacific Railroad Company, which charged dining car discrimination, was settled out of court with the payment of $1,000 damages. Mrs. Wilkerson, Negro educator, was traveling from St. Louis to Dallas aboard the Sunshine Special on February 11, 1944. She went to the diner, and was told by the steward that she could not be served at that time. She was told that she would have to sit in the Jim Crow section, to which she agreed. However two white persons were in the Jim Crow section at the time, and Mrs. Wilkerson was refused service until they had finished. She was asked to leave the diner and wait outside until they had finished their meal. She preferred to wait inside the car. The conductor ejected her.

[3] Art. I, Sec. 8, U. S. Constitution: "The Congress shall have power: . . . To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes."

[4] Southern Pacific Co. v. State of Arizona ex rel. Sullivan. (1945) 65, S. Ct. 1515.

After being ejected, she returned to her seat in the Pullman Car. Later a steward told her that she could be served. She declined, and shortly sued the railroad. A New York Circuit Court of Appeals, reversing a District Court decision, took jurisdiction of the case, thereby allowing suit against a southern railroad in a northern state in which the railroad does business but does not operate.

The railroad offered to settle out of court for $1,000, and upon strong advice of counsel, Mrs. Wilkerson took the settlement, although it did not fully pay the expenses.

Evidently, in this case, the railroad did not think that its position was very secure. However, according to the traditional Jim Crow system, it had no cause for worry. The actions of the railroad gave rise, therefore, to much speculation regarding various carriers' desires not to have the specific discrimination question litigated because of the possible adverse results.

The Irene Morgan case, however, is more than a straw in the wind. The question appears to be squarely put, and the Supreme Court will have difficulty in not answering it squarely.

Mrs. Morgan was traveling on July 16, 1944, on a bus of the Richmond Greyhound Lines, Inc., from Hayes Store, Gloucester County, Va., to Baltimore on a through ticket. At Saluda, Va., the bus driver ordered her to move to a seat in the rear in conformity with the Virginia law. She refused, and as a result she was arrested and found guilty in the circuit court of Middlesex County of violating the Virginia Jim Crow law.

Mrs. Morgan appealed the case to the Supreme Court of the United States, and on June 3, 1946 that court handed down a favorable decision, with but one dissenting vote. The opinion of the court that racial segregation in interstate travel placed too great a burden on interstate commerce, thus made Jim Crow in travel across state lines illegal.

Some of the bus lines have announced their willingness to comply with the Supreme Court ruling. But in some cases, either out of individual initiative or upon company orders, drivers are seating white passengers first and then allowing Negroes to occupy the remaining seats — in the rear, thus maintaining the old Jim Crow in effect. In some other cases there seems to be a tendency for interstate buses to be stopped at state lines and passengers changed to "intrastate buses," in an effort to evade the court ruling.

The railroads, with the lone exception of the Richmond-Fredericksburg-Potomac line, have made no important effort to surrender their Jim Crow practices. In all probability a good test case on trains will be required to secure their change of policy.

Intrastate travel, not covered by the Supreme Court ruling, still remains under the jurisdiction of state segregation laws. A typical southern state Jim Crow law, that of Tennessee, reads as follows:

Williams
Tennessee Code, Annotated 1934

5518. "All railroads carrying passengers in this state (other than street railroads) shall provide equal but separate accommodations for the white and colored races, by providing two or more passenger cars for each passenger train, or by dividing the passenger cars by a partition, so as to secure separate accommodations; but any person may be permitted to take a nurse in the car or compartment set aside for such persons. This law shall not apply to mixed and freight trains which only carry one passenger or combination passenger and baggage car, but, in such instances, the passenger car so carried shall always be partitioned into apartments, one apartment for the whites and one for the colored."

5519. "The conductors of such passenger trains shall have power and are required to assign passengers to the car or compartments of the car when it is divided by a partition used for the race to which such passengers belong, and should any passenger refuse to occupy the car to which he is assigned by such conductor, said conductor shall have power to refuse to carry such passenger on his train; and, for such refusal, neither he nor the railroad company shall be liable for any damage in any court."

5527. "All persons, companies, or corporations operating any street car line in the state are required, where white and colored passengers are carried or transported in the same car or cars, to set apart and designate in each car or coach, so operated, a portion thereof or certain seats therein to be occupied by white passengers; but nothing in this article shall be construed to apply to nurses attending children or other helpless persons of the other race."

5529. provides that the conductor may increase or diminish the space for either race, and may require a change of seats as often as he deems it necessary.

Similar provisions apply for motor buses.

Others vary in detail, but not in essence. These laws are an ugly anachronism in light of the world-wide upsurge toward democracy and freedom. They can be repealed. There is even more probability that they can progressively be ignored, and eventually killed by the sword of disease.

By JAMES WALLACE

If you have not renewed your subscription . . .
to PROPHETIC RELIGION, do so immediately so you will not miss the next issue.

Send $1.00 (check or bill) to:

PROPHETIC RELIGION
Box 577
Chapel Hill, N. C.

SRC

81

DESEGREGATION IN EDUCATION

TOWARD DEMOCRACY

IN THE CLASSROOM

Prepared by

Anna Holden, Information Assistant

Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Ave. NE, Atlanta, Ga.

THE DESEGREGATION DECISION

"Color Line in U.S. Schools is Unconstitutional: Texts of Two U.S. Supreme Court Opinions," U .S. News, v. 36 (May 28, 1954), 94-97

New Jersey Department of Education, Division Against Discrimination. "Text of the Supreme Court Decision on Segregation in Public Schools with Selected Comments from the Nation's Press and the New Jersey Story in Brief." August, 1954. 46 pp. Available from the Department, 1060 Broad St., Newark, N.J.

"Supreme Court Decision Banning School Segregation -- Text of the Decision," National Education Association Journal, v. 43 (September, 1954), 349-350

"Supreme Court Decision Banning School Segregation -- Text of the Decision," Current History, v. 27 (July, 1954), 53-55

"Supreme Court Rules on School Segregation -- Text of the Opinions," School Life, v. 36 (May, 1954), 117-118

LEGAL AND SOCIAL IMPLICATIONS

Borinski, Ernst. "Legal and Sociological Analysis of the Segregation Decision of May 17, 1954," University of Pittsburgh Law Review, v. 15 (Summer, 1954), 622-634

Brock, E. L. "Christians and the Court Decision," Christian Century, v. 71 (August 18, 1954), 975-976

"The Churches Speak," New South, v. 9 (August, 1954), 1-6

Fey, John T. "Segregation in the Schools: A Legal View," New South, v. 9 (September, 1954), 1-5

"Implementation of the Segregation Decision," Northwestern University Law Review, v. 49 (No. 4, September-October, 1954), 557-566

Indriz, Phineas. "The Meaning of the School Decisions: The Break Through on the Legal Front of Racial Segregation," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 355-363

Johnson, Charles S. "Some Significant Social and Educational Implications of the U.S. Supreme Court Decision," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 364-371

Kauper, Paul G. "Segregation in Public Education: The Decline of Plessy v. Ferguson," Michigan Law Review, v. 52 (June, 1954), 1137-1158

Kennan, C. "Church Leaders on School Segregation," America, v. 91 (July 10, 1954), 378-379

McWhinney, Edward. "End to Racial Discrimination in the United States? The School Segregation Decisions," Canadian Bar Review, v. 32 (May, 1954), 545-566

Murphy, Jay. "Can Public Schools be Private?" Alabama Law Review, v. 7 (No. 1, Fall, 1954), 48-73

Nicholson, Francis B. "Legal Standing of the South's School Resistance Proposals," South Carolina Law Quarterly, v. 7 (No. 1, Fall, 1954), 1-64

Maher, Richard. "Supreme Court and Segregation," University of Detroit Law Journal, v. 18 (November, 1954), 64-73

Redding, Louis L. "Desegregation in the Schools -- Background, Development and Proposals," Lawyer's Guild Review, v. 14 (No. 4, Winter, 1954-1955), 163-167

Ribaudo, Anthony. "Segregation in Education," Boston University Law Review, v. 34 (November, 1954), 463-478

Sanders, Paul H. "School Segregation Cases -- A Comment," Vanderbilt Law Review, v. 7 (August, 1954), 985-996

"Schools in the South: Answers for Action," New South, v. 9 (June-July, 1954), 3-32

"Segregation Decision: Its Impact on Schools as Reported from the South by Twelve Educators," Nation's Schools, v. 54 (July, 1954), 27-32

Smith, Lillian. Now is the Time. New York: Viking Press, 1955, $2.00 Also available in Dell Pocketbook edition, $.25

"Supreme Court Decision: Eleven Southern Educators Comment," School Executive, v. 73 (July, 1954), 48-51

"Supreme Court Equity Discretion: The Decrees in the Segregation Cases," Yale Law Review, v. 64 (November, 1954), 124-136

Sutherland, Arthur E. "Segregation by Race in Public Schools -- Retrospect and Prospect," Law and Contemporary Problems, v. 20 (No. 1, Winter, 1955), 167-183

PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURES OF SCHOOL DESEGREGATION

"Build Democracy in the Classroom: How Rapidly Should Desegregation Proceed?" Brief for the CIO as Amicus Curiae in the Supreme Court of the United States, October, 1954. 17 pp. Available from the Congress of Industrial Organizations, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D.C.

Clark, Kenneth B. "Some Principles Related to the Problem of Desegregation," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 339-347

Clark, Kenneth B. "Desegregation: An Appraisal of the Evidence," Journal of Social Issues, v. 9 (No. 4, May, 1953), 1-76. Special issue, available from Association Press, 291 Broadway, New York, N.Y. $1.75

"Courts and Racial Integration in Education," Journal of Negro Education Yearbook, v. 21 (Summer, 1952), 229-444. Special issue containing proceedings of the National Conference on Courts and Integration in Education, Howard University, April 16-18, 1952. Topics covered: court action and other means of obtaining integration; tactics and problems related to integration in education; experiences in desegregation in higher education.

Granger, Lester B. "Some Suggested Next Steps in Furtherance of Desegregation in Education," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 390-399

Greenberg, Jack and Hubert Hill. Citizen's Guide to Desegregation. Boston: Beacon Press, 1955. Cloth, $2.50. Paper, $1.25. To be released Spring, 1955.

Jackson, Wagner D. "Working with School Boards to Implement Desegregation," Crisis, v. 62 (No. 1, January, 1955), 5-9, 59+

"Memo on School Integration: Steps in Implementing the Supreme Court's Decision " National Civil Liberties Clearing House, 1637 Mass. Ave., N.W., Washington 6, D.C. 8 pp $.10

Mitchell, George S. "Next Steps in Racial Desegregation in the South," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 384-389

Nabrit, James M. "An Appraisal of Court Action as a Means of Achieving Racial Desegregation in Education," Journal of Negro Education, v. 21 (Summer, 1952), 421-430

"Next Steps in Racial Desegregation in Education," Journal of Negro Education Yearbook, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 201-399. Special issue devoted to desegregation in education. Contents include: evaluation of nonschool experience in desegregation, case studies of desegregation in education, next steps in racial desegregation of public schools.

"Racial Integration: Some Principles and Procedures," Journal of Educational Sociology, v. 28 (October, 1954). Special issue including experiences in integration of churches, sports and education.

Reid, Ira DeA. "Integration: Ideal, Process and Situation," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 348-354

Rice, Pamela. "A Legislative Attack on Educational Discrimination," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Winter, 1954), 99-106

Stanley, Eugene. "Basic Principles of Educational Integration," Journal of Educational Sociology, v. 28 (November, 1954), 138-144

Walker, Harry J. "Some Basic Factors Involved in the Development of Community Acceptance of Desegregated Schools," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 372-383

Wright, Marion A. "Implementing the School Decision," New South, v. 10 (March, 1955), 3-7

PROBLEM AREAS IN DESEGREGATION

Ashmore, Harry S. The Negro and the Schools. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1954. Cloth, $2.75. Paper, $1.00.

_____. "Racial Integration with Special Reference to Education in the South," Journal of Negro Education, v. 21 (Summer, 1952), 250-255

Atwood, R.B. "The Public Negro College in a Racially Integrated System of Higher Education," Journal of Negro Education, v. 21 (Summer, 1952), 352-363

Cox, Oliver C. "Negro Teachers -- Martyrs to Integration?" Nation, v. 176 (April 25, 1953), 347-348

Doddy, Hurley H . and G. Franklin Edwards. "Apprehensions of Negro Teachers Concerning Desegregation in South Carolina," Journal of Negro Education, v. 24 (Winter, 1955), 26-43

Gauerke, W.E. "The Supreme Court and the Separation of Races for School Purposes," Journal of Public Law, v. 3 (No. 1, Spring, 1954), 129-150

Hill, Mozell. "Impact of the Supreme Court Decision on Southern Communities," Journal of Public Law, v. 3 (No. 1, Spring, 1954), 151-155

Jenkins, Martin D. "Problems Incident to Racial Integration and Some Suggested Approaches to the Problems -- A Critical Summary," Journal of Negro Education, v. 21 (Summer, 1952), 411-421

MacLachlan, John M. "Population Factors Affecting Education in the South," Journal of Public Law, v. 3 (No. 1, Spring, 1954), 108-121

Miller, Ward I. "Anticipated Problems Incident to Racial Integration in Public Schools and Some Suggested Approaches," Journal of Negro Education, v. 21 (Summer, 1951), 285-292

"Negro Teachers for the North?" U.S. News, v. 37 (August 27, 1954), 35-37

Patterson, F.D. "The Private Negro College in a Racially Integrated System of Higher Education," Journal of Negro Education, v. 21 (Summer, 1952), 363-369

Reinemer, V. "Southern City Debates Nonsegregation," N.Y. Times Magazine, September 26, 1954, 17

Swanson, Ernst W. "Some Economic Effects of the Supreme Court Decision," Journal of Public Law, v. 3 (No. 1, Spring, 1954), 122-128

Templeton, Furman L. "An Integrated Parent-Teacher Association Organization," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Winter, 1954), 85-87

COMMUNITY EXPERIENCES IN DESEGREGATION

Bernard, R. "South Moves Toward Desegregation," America, v. 92 (October 2, 1954), 9-11

Bustard, Joseph L. "The New Jersey Story: The Development of Racially Integrated Public Schools," Journal of Negro Education, v. 21 (Summer, 1952), 275-285

Cater, Douglas. "Washington, 'A Model for the Rest of the Nation,'" Reporter, v. 11 (December 30, 1954), 12-15

Culver, Dwight W. "Racial Desegregation in Education in Indiana," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 296-302

Grambs, Jean D. "Education in a Transition Community." 124 pp. National Conference of Christians and Jews, 381 Fourth Avenue, New York 16, N.Y. $.25

"In the First Steps, Few Stumbles," Business Week, October 16, 1954, 196-198

James, Selwyn. "The Town that Surrendered to Hate," Redbook, v. 104 (April, 1955), 35, 70-73

Knox, Ellis O. "Racial Integration in the Public Schools of Arizona, Kansas and New Mexico," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 290-295

Lee, Alfred McClung. "Milford, Delaware, Round by Round," Crisis, v. 61 (November, 1954), 521-532, 577

Lewis, Richard. "The Crisis that Never Came Off: Indianapolis, Ind.," Reporter, v. 6 (December 6, 1949), 12-14

Ming, William R., Jr. "The Elimination of Segregation in the Public Schools of the North and West," Journal of Negro Education, v. 21 (Summer, 1952), 265-275

Mitchell, Clarence. "Foes of Integration in Baltimore and Washington," Crisis, v. 61 (November, 1954), 533-541, 576-577

"No School Segregation at Military Posts," America, v. 90 (February 13, 1954), 493-494

Osborne, Irene. "Desegregation of Washington Schools: The First Sixty Days," Journal of Negro Education, v. 24 (Winter, 1955), 78-86

Peters, William. "Schools that Broke the Color Line," Redbook, v. 103 (October, 1954), 29-33, 73+

Phillips, Cabell. "What Happens When Segregation Ends: Jeffersonville, Ind.," New York Times Magazine, May 30, 1954, 7-9+

"St. Louis Integrates Its Schools." January, 1955. 10 pp. League of Women Voters of St. Louis, 4740a McPherson, St. Louis 8, Mo. About $.10.

Shagloff, June. "A Study of Community Acceptance of Desegregation in Two Selected Areas," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 330-

"Southern Catholic Schools in Lead in Putting Court Segregation Ban in Effect." September 13, 1954. Catholic Interracial Council, 20 Vesey St., New York, 7, N.Y. 7 pp. No charge

Stanley, Eugene. "Educational Desegregation in Baltimore: A Status Report," Journal of Negro Education, v. 24 (Winter, 1955), 71-77

Stephan, Stephen. "Integration in Arkansas," Christian Century, v. 71 (November 24, 1954), 1426-1427

Templeton, Furman L. "The Admission of Negro Boys to the Baltimore Polytechnic Institute 'A' Course," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Winter, 1954), 22-29

Tipton, James H. Community in Crisis: The Elimination of Segregation from a Public School System. New York; Bureau of Publications, Teachers College, Columbia University, 1953. $3.75

Valien, Bonita. "Racial Desegregation of the Public Schools in Southern Illinois," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 303-309

Wertham, F. "Psychiatric Observations on the Abolition of School Segregation," Journal of Educational Sociology, v. 26 (March, 1953), 333-336

"When Negroes Go To School with Whites," U.S. News, v. 37 (September 24, 1954), 24-29

Williams, Robin M. and Margaret W. Ryan. Schools in Transition: Community Experiences in Desegregation. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1954. $3.00

Wright, Marion T. "Racial Integration in the Public Schools in New Jersey," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 282-289

DESEGREGATION IN HIGHER EDUCATION

Boyle, Sarah Patton. "Southerners Will Like Integration," Saturday Evening Post, v. 227 (February 19, 1955), 25, 133-134

Catchings, L. Maynard. "Desegregation -- Can it Come Voluntarily in Church-Related Institutions," Intercollegian, v. 72 (January, 1955), 12-13

Gill, R.L. "Impressions of a Negro College Professor in a Mixed University," Journal of Negro Education, v. 20 (Winter, 1953), 241-248

Hammack, William D. "Admission of Negroes to Washington University," Phylon, v. 10 (Fourth Quarter, 1949), 414-416

Jans, R.T. "Racial Integration at Berea College, 1950-1952," Journal of Negro Education, v. 22 (Winter, 1953), 26-37

Johnson, Guy B. "New Ways on the Campus," New South, v. 10 (February, 1955), 1-6

_____. "Racial Integration in Public Higher Education in the South," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 317-329

Lee, J. Oscar and A.S. Kramer, "Racial Inclusion in Church-Related Colleges in the South," Journal of Negro Education, v. 22 (Winter, 1953), 16-25

Morse, A.D. "When Negroes Entered a Texas School -- Del Mar College," Harper's Magazine, v. 209 (September, 1954), 47-49

Plaut, Richard L. "Racial Integration in Higher Education in the North," Journal of Negro Education, v. 23 (Summer, 1954), 310-316

"Schools of Higher Learning Lower the Color Bar: A Current List," New South, v. 10 (February, 1955), 7-9

SOURCES OF CONTINUING INFORMATION ON DESEGREGATION

Journal of Negro Education. Quarterly. Howard University Press, Washington, D.C. $4.00 per year.

Southern School News. Monthly. Southern Education Reporting Service, P.O. Box 6156, Acklen Station, Nashville 5, Tenn. Available on request.

IN THESE 10 CITIES

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

discrimination in housing

- ★ Charlottesville
- ★ Sledge
- ★ Phoenix
- ★ Los Angeles
- ★ Denver
- ★ Springfield
- ★ Chicago
- ★ Detroit
- ★ Waterbury
- ★ New York

THIS pamphlet tells how minorities are housed in ten communities of the United States. The house generally determines the family's place in the community. A segregated house leads to discrimination in schools, churches, employment and recreation.

Segregation is too often identified with the south. Many northern cities enforce housing segregation more rigorously than the south does. The nation's largest ghettos, for example, are not in New Orleans or Atlanta but in Chicago and New York.

Where people are working to end segregation, the pamphlet gives details. These efforts are of crucial timeliness. Most cities are preparing low-rent housing programs or urban redevelopment programs—or both—under the federal Housing Act of 1949.

The key fact is that urban redevelopment (the clearing and rebuilding of blighted areas) cannot be handled intelligently unless the principle of democratic housing is accepted. Central slums cannot be torn down until decent housing is provided elsewhere for their inhabitants, who are usually minority groups. And in nearly every city the only vacant land suitable for relocating these families is outside the segregated districts. The first step in redevelopment is to recognize the right of minorities to live anywhere they choose. Federal funds must not be used to build new ghettos.

This pamphlet is not meant to be a scientific study of racial discrimination. The ten cities are not a statistical sample. Rather, the pamphlet is a report, made as accurate as possible through checking with local and national authorities. The ten cities were picked for importance, size, location and special interest. Charlottesville and Springfield were chosen for their ties with Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln. California is represented by Los Angeles, where the city housing authority has done a fine job (although San Francisco also deserves praise for its Council for Civic Unity and its Board of Supervisors—the first local governing body to block both discrimination and segregation in urban redevelopment projects). Washington was omitted because its story has been fully told in the pamphlet, Segregation in the Nation's Capital, by Kenesaw M. Landis.

As this pamphlet goes to press, the federal government has announced a vast war housing program. In the last war we failed to make public and private war housing available to whites and Negroes alike. But segregated war housing gives the lie to our democratic faith. The rest of the world judges us by what we do, not by what we say. And in this country segregation divides the people at a time when unity is more vital than guns.

CONTENTS

Charlottesville	1
Sledge	3
Phoenix	5
Los Angeles	7
Denver	10
Springfield	13
Chicago	15
Detroit	20
Waterbury	24
New York	26

Photographs by MARION PALFI

Written and designed by ALEXANDER L. CROSBY

Edited by HORTENSE W. GABEL and MAXWELL S. STEWART

Cover by AJAY

If you are interested in doing something about segregation in your community, write to the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, 35 West 32 Street, New York 1. Ask for two helpful pamphlets: Forbidden Neighbors (20¢), which turns a spotlight on little known facts about segregation, and How to End Segregation in Housing (15¢).

PUBLISHED MARCH 1951

CHARLOTTESVILLE

THOMAS Jefferson, the great democrat, wrote for his epitaph: "Author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the statute of Virginia for religious freedom, and father of the University of Virginia."

"This institution," he wrote in 1820 to a friend, "will be based on the illimitable freedom of the human mind. For here we are not afraid to follow truth wherever it may lead, nor to tolerate any error so long as reason is left free to combat it."

The campus of the university today is a fine blend of lawns, old trees, red brick, and white columns. Until September 1950 Negroes could enter only to work in the hospital, the cafeteria, and the dormitories.

Negro housing in Charlottesville is concentrated along the railroads, in the damp hollows, and on a few small hills. The dwellings of Happy Hollow, Gospel Hill, and Vinegar Hill are, with few exceptions, rotten and overpriced.

Jefferson once planned an interracial farm colony of Germans and Negroes. Earlier he had tried unsuccessfully to include a condemnation of slavery in the Declaration of Independence. Charlottesville pays no homage to his belief in racial equality. The Negroes are trapped. They cannot buy land elsewhere and their present living space is threatened. Some of the land occupied by Negroes has become so valuable that attempts have been made to rezone it for business use. If these plans suc-

Dogwood trees grace the Charlottesville railroad station. Across the tracks, Negro slums are in full blossom.

A student weighs the question: "Should Negroes be admitted?"

Joyce Mayo says: "No. I think segregation works better."

"Yes," says Marea Jo Wiard. But James R. Bickley is opposed.

"No, sir," Frank Talbott adds, sharing the majority view.

ceed, the displaced families will have to move out of Jefferson's university town. There is no public housing, although a movement is under way to create a local housing authority.

Negroes are about one-fifth of the city's estimated 24,000 persons. They are strictly segregated in a genteel way. The Paramount theater and other movie houses do not have signs marking the "Colored Gallery" entrance around the corner. But every Negro knows he must go around the corner, just as every Negro knows he must sit in the rear of the buses. No Negro mechanic would apply for a job at the Southern Welding and Machine Company, the largest machine shop of the area. And no Negro expects to see Mr., Mrs., or Miss used before a Negro name in the Charlottesville Progress.

A handful of professors and other citizens of good will belong to the private Interracial Commission, which has tried to end segregation in buses. The commission has tried also to get Negroes accepted in skilled trades. But the new Negro high school, planned by an all-white school board, is being built by all-white mechanics.

The Virginia constitution of 1902, described by one of its framers, the late Senator Carter Glass, as intended "to discriminate to the very extremity of permissible action," forbids unsegregated public education. Carter Glass cannot be resting peacefully for there is a stirring in Virginia. A special federal court ordered in September 1950 that a Negro law student be admitted to the university.

A few months before this decision I visited the campus and asked ten men and five girls — all Virginians — how they felt about admitting Negroes. Seven were opposed ("I'd leave the university," a law student said), five were in favor, and three were doubtful. Only one girl was opposed. Two students asked not to be quoted because their parents would object.

"I sat at table with Negroes in Officers Training School," said J. L. Clough of Charlottesville. "I wouldn't mind."

"I approve. I went to Ohio Wesleyan, where the Negroes were leaders in our class," said Marea Jo Wiard of Keswick.

On the way back to the hotel I asked the cab driver if Charlottesville had any traces of Thomas Jefferson. "Never heard of any," he said. It seemed to me that Marea Jo Wiard and J. L. Clough were two who could be counted as "not afraid to follow the truth wherever it may lead."

SLEDGE

SOUTH from Memphis the concrete highway into Mississippi runs through rolling country where fat cattle graze. The cuts have been planted with Kudzu vines to check erosion. We turned off to a dusty, graveled road, bordered with thick hedgerows which yielded the music of the cardinal, the catbird, and the mockingbird.

After a dozen miles we dropped to the flat, black lands of the Mississippi Valley. The hedgerows disappeared. In place of them were broad, shallow ditches, bridged every few hundred yards or so with rough planks leading to the cabins of the sharecroppers. The cabins are monotonously alike in age, architecture, and ugliness. Weeds grow in the front yards except where they have been trampled to death. Cotton grows everywhere.

Sledge, Mississippi, is a village of several hundred. It was chosen for this pamphlet because it is a typical farm community of the deep south and because of an Associated Press story from Memphis on May 22, 1950, which made three inches of type. The story told how the life of Bennie Lee Bradley, a 7-year-old Negro girl who had been badly burned when her dress caught fire, was being saved through skin donated by whites. It seemed worth while to find out for what kind of life Bennie Lee was being saved.

Bennie Lee's father, L. Q. Bradley, is a sharecropper in the Sledge district where he has lived all of his 30 years. A friendly, direct man, he told about working in cotton since he was seven, with only two years of school. (Mississippi's 1948 investment in school property was $217 for each white pupil, $41 for each Negro.) The Bradleys have 10 children, ranging in age from 11 to 1: William, Frank, L. Q. Jr. (nobody knows what L. Q. stands for), Douglas, Bennie Lee, Charles Henry,

L. Q. Bradley, Mississippi sharecropper, with three of his ten children.

Liston, Bobbie Jean, Etheline, and Paul Edward. All 12 sleep in two rooms. "I just kind of guess at how they sleep," said Mr. Bradley. "Sometimes it's four or five with me, sometimes it's five or six with their mother."

Mrs. Bradley and the three oldest children help chop cotton and pick. When the boll weevil permits, the family makes $500 or $600 a year after a series of deductions for tractor, fertilizer, and other expenses.

Segregation in Sledge is a paradox. On the one hand, white and Negro sharecroppers often live side by side; the luxury of segregated housing is prohibited by cotton's need for manpower. Yet the very poverty of the Mississippi culture makes the poor whites seek some distinction from the Negroes who live in identical squalor. Thus the miserable little store across the road from the Bradley cabin is divided by a beaverboard partition so that black hands may never touch the counter where white ones reach for a coke.

In the village of Sledge the main street has a dingy row of stores on one side, the railroad track on the other. Negroes may sit in the balcony of the movie house and they may occupy benches on the sidewalk. Oddly, they are no longer allowed to play "the Seeburg" (jukebox) on Sundays, although whites may.

Sledge is now a dry town. "The time when we had whisky, that was the greatest pleasure there was," a young white sharecropper told me. "Now there's nothing to do except work and then sit around and look."

A citizen of Sledge at the movie theater's door for "Colored."

PHOENIX

PHOENIX, a desert city on a broad plateau, is mostly horizontal. There are few tall buildings to block the view of the serrate mountains that ring the plateau. The city is divided roughly by the railroad tracks into a good residential section with paved streets, green lawns, palm trees, oleanders, and flowers, and the slum section, where the unkillable tamarisks are bathed in clouds of yellow dust from the streets and dirt yards. Here the Mexican-Americans, Negroes, and poor whites live in houses of old brick, adobe, frame and packing boxes. Few cities can boast of more wretched slums.

On several acres of bare dirt behind a warehouse there is a colony of migrant farm workers who pay $4 a month and up for 35 shacks built literally from the junkpile. Pedro Tellez rented a one-room hut for his wife and their three children: Ramona, 12, Manuela, 10, and Bobbie, 3. The rent is $6 a month with electricity; water is available two blocks away. Mr. Tellez collected enough packing boxes to add two rooms, one with a corrugated paper floor, so Ramona could have her own bedroom. Since he earns only $1.50 or $2 a day (when he can get work), Mr. Tellez could not afford lumber. Mrs. Tellez keeps the house immaculate. Ramona hauls water for her little patch of onions and her yucca plant.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Tellez and their three children.

One of the most profitable residential properties in Phoenix is a row of flimsy frame stables on an alley. A structure that once housed 20 horses has been converted into miniature two-room apartments for 20 families, without water or toilets, renting for $20 a month.

Except that Negroes may sit anywhere in buses, Phoenix is as stanchly jim crow as the average southern city. Roadside restaurants have signs reading "Colored trade not solicited." Negroes go to separate schools, eat in separate restaurants. Few Negroes are permitted to buy property in the better districts.

The Mexican-Americans, who are legally whites, fare a little better. They can usually get restaurant service and their children are not segregated in school. But the Mexican-Americans also find it hard to buy in good neighborhoods and the better jobs are not open to them.

The population of Phoenix has doubled within a decade to reach about 100,000, of which some 10 percent is Negro. Many of the Negroes came to Phoenix without meaning to—the city was just a temporary stop on the road to fabulous California. Poorly organized and poorly educated, the Negroes have made little headway against the city's southern white majority.

Little help has come from the city administration, except for an independent park commission which had the nerve to build a first-class recreation center and swimming pool—unsegregated—in the heart of the slum district.

A Monument to Decency

Across the street from the swimming pool is Arizona's foremost monument to racial justice: St. Monica's Hospital, built in 1944 by the Federal Works Agency as the successor to a tiny frame institution founded by Emmett McLoughlin, a young man with a dynamic conscience. In 1948 Mr. McLoughlin became full-time superintendent of the 230-bed institution.

St. Monica's was the first American hospital founded with a definite interracial policy. Of the 68 student nurses, 40 percent are Negro (mostly from cities all over the United States). The hospital cafeteria, open to the public, is one of the few places where Negroes can eat.

Top: Emmett McLoughlin, founder of St. Monica's. Below: Two nurses in the hospital cafeteria.

Despite modest prices, the cafeteria's $56,000 net income in 1949 almost covered the hospital deficit.

The American College of Surgeons rated St. Monica's in 1948 as "a good hospital . . . exceedingly important in the medical service of the area." Local doctors say it has the best equipment in the city. More and more paying patients are choosing St. Monica's, which needs them to balance its losses in serving the poor.

The three public housing projects of Phoenix were built under Mr. McLoughlin's direction as chairman of the housing authority. They are segregated projects because it seemed a decade ago to be a choice between segregation or no housing at all. Mr. McLoughlin and two other members of the five-man authority decided in 1949 that the scheduled 1,000 new dwellings should be wholly interracial. That was one reason why Mr. McLoughlin was dropped when his term expired in 1950. The city administration replaced him with a man who provided a 3 to 2 majority in favor of segregation.

"The purpose of public housing should be to make better citizens," Mr. McLoughlin says. "Segregation does just the opposite. We have proved at St. Monica's that an interracial policy is sound."

LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES is undergoing two kinds of surgery. Freeways fit for Buck Rogers are being carved through hills, the downtown business section, and old residential areas so the hordes of motorists can get to work in a city of 1,954,000 without subways.

The second operation is less conspicuous. It can be recognized by a Negro child playing on a street that was solid white a year ago. Many "For Sale" signs on new bungalows mean that whites have been frightened into selling by the arrival of Negroes in better neighborhoods.

"The Negroes are gradually breaking out of the ghetto," one housing expert told me. "The Klan often used to burn crosses in front of houses that were sold to Negroes. Now the Negroes are slowly moving west, sometimes at the rate of one or two blocks a week, and there has been little violence."

Negroes report that many of the fleeing whites showed no prejudice. "The family next door treated us fine," said one Negro. "They had my son over to spend the night in their youngster's tent. All the kids play together. But these people are afraid that property values will go down so a lot of them are pulling out. Those who stay make good neighbors."

The fact, as Dr. Robert C. Weaver has ably explained in The Negro Ghetto, is that both whites and Negroes are being taken for a ride by real estate speculators. The broker encourages the white owner to sell, often at a loss. The panic causes a temporary drop in values. Speculators buy at this point and then sell to the Negro at 30 to 100 percent above normal value. Ultimately prices become stabilized at or above the original level.

← Los Angeles scene, with the city hall.

Occasionally there is an organized protest when Negroes buy in the more exclusive neighborhoods. Oscar Reichow, a sports announcer, sold his $25,000 house in Leimert Park to a Negro family. Indignant residents formed the Neighborly Endeavor Inc. and raised about $3,000 to sue Mr. Reichow for fancied damage to their property values. They also got him fired from his radio job. But Mrs. Daniel Marshall, president of the Catholic Women's Club and the wife of a distinguished liberal attorney, arranged a large Sunday tea to welcome the new family to Leimert Park.

Mexican-Americans Gain

The 200,000 Negroes of Los Angeles have won more freedom of residence than Negroes in other large cities. The pioneer spirit still survives west of the Rockies and the Negroes have done some pioneering for themselves. The Mexican-Americans are also fighting for a place in the community. For the first time in sixty years a Mexican-American, Edward R. Roybal, is serving on the city council — and he is making a brilliant record. More persons of Mexican stock (about 300,000) live in Los Angeles than in any city except Mexico City. Increasing numbers of Mexican-Americans are enrolled in the colleges and universities, and more are getting responsible jobs in government and industry.

The Japanese-Americans, who numbered 38,000 in 1940 before they were uprooted, are making real headway in regaining their economic position. They are working with Negroes and Mexican-Americans to get recognition as full-fledged citizens.

Stumbling Blocks

Urban redevelopment has not gone beyond the planning stage, despite a state enabling act of 1945. Administrative delays and cost problems have been the chief handicaps. Many of the most logical sites are those occupied by Mexican-Americans and other minorities. These isolated groups are bitter and vocal about the prospect of being thrown out of their shacks. Early in 1951, however, the city council adopted an ordinance opposing any discrimination in redevelopment projects, and the redevelopment commission said it would comply with the new policy.

Whether enough low-rent housing could be provided for displaced families is doubtful. The real estate lobby won a major victory in California in November 1950 when the voters approved a law requiring a local referendum on any proposed new public housing. Los Angeles supplied the decisive majority for the new law. Thus the realtors who want the chance to make a pretty penny out of redevelopment for upper income families may have picked their own pockets by making it impossible to rehouse displaced families.

Interracial Policy Works

The brightest official record in race relations has been made by the Housing Authority of the City of Los Angeles (not to be confused with the county housing authority). Until recently, a few of its 24 projects were segregated. Without fanfare the authority has converted all of them to interracial occupancy. The 11,061 families in public housing are 45 percent white, 33 percent Negro, 20 percent Mexican-American and 2 percent Oriental.

Placing Negroes in formerly all-white projects has been accomplished without trouble or protests. Two reasons for this success are: first, the authority has made a reputation for honest, efficient, and humane administration. Second, and more important, the authority made up its mind to have an interracial policy and has carried out the decision firmly and intelligently. Every tenant receives upon admission a short letter from Chairman Nicola Giuli, which includes this paragraph:

> You will find among your neighbors Americans of various races and creeds. Our facilities are open to all persons without discrimination. The policy of the authority is to permit no intolerance of any kind and it will terminate the lease of any persons who disturb the peace with intolerant activity.

Nisei mother and her two children.

A new arrival in a once solidly white district.

The alleys are playgrounds in the slums.

This warning is reinforced by an unusual paragraph in the lease: "It is expressly agreed that this lease shall be subject to immediate termination for any disturbance caused, aided or abetted by occupant, including disturbances based on racial intolerance."

The slums of Los Angeles have been less publicized than its bougainvillaeas, blondes, and brave new freeways. A few blocks from city hall are 19th century frame dwellings, about 85 percent occupied by minorities, which are in much worse shape now than in 1906 when they shocked a distinguished visitor, Jacob Riis.

Five blocks from the Biltmore Hotel the housing authority relocated families from Bunker Hill to clear the way for new civic buildings. A derelict had holed up in a condemned dwelling and died. When wreckers found his body, it was half-eaten by rats.

Steel corsets around the trunks of the Pershing Square palm trees, to keep rodents from nesting in the tops, are reminders that rats infest the heart of the city. The health department knows that the highest disease rate is within a five-mile radius of city hall, where slums are concentrated. Los Angeles needs a large dose of urban redevelopment, with complete freedom of residence for all minorities, to become a healthy place. The right example has been set by the city housing authority, which was commended by the Los Angeles County Conference on Community Relations for establishing "the most enlightening, liberal and complete interracial policy to be effected anywhere in public housing."

DENVER

MOST cities show an ugly face to the traveler. Not Denver. The airport taxi runs through a handsome residential section, thick with trees, and passes an immaculate park where the sweep of the lawns is unmarred by warnings to keep off the grass. To the west and northwest are the snow-capped Rockies. You look twice to make sure you aren't seeing white clouds close to the horizon.

At first glance the city has no slums. Except for bad spots in the bottom lands of the South Platte River, Denver has nothing to compare outwardly with the miserable shacks of Los Angeles and Phoenix.

Until 1947, Denver was ruled by Mayor Benjamin Franklin Stapleton, who also ran most of the state. The aging mayor had reigned for 25 years and his administration had failed to grow with the city. The voters dismissed him by electing Quigg Newton, then 36, a lawyer and war veteran from a distinguished Colorado family.

Making his first campaign for public office, Quigg Newton had promised to act against discrimination in Denver. To the surprise of many citizens the mayor proceeded to carry out his campaign pledge. One week after taking office he abolished segregation in public swimming pools. Next he created a permanent Mayor's Committee on Human Relations, one of 35 similar official agencies throughout the nation. As chairman he named William Grant Jr., his campaign manager, also a lawyer and a member of a leading family. Mr. Grant admits with a grin that his grandfather was a founder of the Ku Klux Klan in Alabama.

Patrolman Spidahl and Mrs. Helen Peterson visit some minority citizens.

The committee's director is Mrs. Helen L. Peterson, 32, dynamic, experienced, and sensitive from the memory of a childhood on an Indian reservation where she was treated as the Spanish-speaking people of Denver have been treated. One-quarter Sioux, Mrs. Peterson was named Wacin Yanpe Wi by Chiefs Henry Standing Bear and Hollow Horn Bear. The name means "One woman to trust."

The Human Relations Committee faces tremendous problems. Of the city's 400,000 population, about 40,000 are Spanish-Americans and Mexican-Americans. There are about 15,000 Negroes, 2,500 Japanese-Americans and 16,000 Jews.

The Nisei are respected for honesty and industry. But they are discriminated against in housing, employment, and some public places. The Negro population, which includes many long established and well educated families, is better accepted in Denver than in most cities. Whites are alarmed, however, when an occasional Negro family enters their neighborhood, and private employers rarely hire Negroes for any but menial jobs. Anti-semitism is common in housing, employment and resorts.

The biggest problem is that of the Spanish-speaking people. Most of them were imported during the past forty years for farm labor, principally in the sugar beet fields. Their pay is poor, their education meager, their leadership inadequate. Their housing is the worst in the city. Each year a new wave of importees complicates the old problems.

The single-family dwellings that are characteristic of the city often conceal shoddy and overcrowded interiors. For example, in one house 20 persons share three beds in shifts.

Top: Mayor Quigg Newton. Below: Chairman William Grant Jr. of the Human Relations Committee, his son, and Urban League Secretary W. Miller Barbour.

Only a fraction of the housing need has been met by the Denver Housing Authority, which built 770 low-rent dwellings in 1941. The authority's policy of segregation served to heighten racial tensions. Recently, however, the authority has cautiously begun to mix racial groups in some of these dwellings.

One aspect of the Denver housing problem.

Under the Newton administration, construction of 4,000 low-rent dwellings is planned (the federal government has already approved 2,500). In pleasant contrast to the story in Chicago and Detroit, the new projects will be built on relatively vacant sites in areas where minorities have not lived. There will be no segregation.

"Our objective," the mayor told me, "is to improve every phase of Denver's life—everything from street cleaning to human relations."

In tackling human relations the Mayor's Committee works with everybody else instead of trying to carry the ball alone. "It's the city departments and the citizens generally who can and do change the pattern of human relations," said Mrs. Peterson. "Invaluable contributions are being made by the Urban League, the Japanese-American Citizens League, the Anti-Defamation League, the Latin-American Council and the Unity Council. One of the Committee's main jobs is to make the city government an example of fair practices."

An example is being set. The General Hospital, once notorious for discrimination, is becoming a model of fair treatment. The recreation department has established a complete policy of non-segregation without the riots that have occurred in other cities. The police department, which used to be feared and hated by the Spanish-speaking citizens, is seeking recruits from the Spanish and Negro population. The soft-spoken and intelligent chief, Herbert Forsyth, is accompanying Mrs. Peterson on visits to police districts where they help to iron out minority problems. Many teen-age boys who used to be thrown into jail are now taken to the Juvenile Bureau and turned over to social workers.

The city's employment policies have been changed. Negroes, Spanish-Americans, Jews, and Nisei hold jobs all through the city government—some of them in top spots. "I work in the motor vehicle bureau," said Ben Kamada, a Nisei I met in a drugstore. "We have Spanish and colored working there, too. This administration is it." Kamada's father came to the United States in 1896. The son was held in a relocation camp during the war.

A Negro has been appointed to the library board, the most exclusive board in the city. A Spanish-American is serving his second term as president of the city council. Harvey V. McDaniel, a Negro and director of one of the city's popular recreation centers, has been elected president of the Community Center Council, composed of the staffs of all public and private centers.

"We are getting a real response from the citizens," Mrs. Peterson said. "If white people object when a Negro family moves into their neighborhood, friends of ours will call us right away. We can generally stop any trouble before it starts."

Denver has made an honest start. If it keeps moving, it will become an outstanding example for the nation.

SPRINGFIELD

SPRINGFIELD, the capital of Illinois, is known for Lincoln's house and Lincoln's tomb. The sidewalks are empty early in the evening. People work and go home.

The only house that Lincoln ever owned, the place where he lived from 1844 to 1861, is kept painted a fresh white by the State of Illinois. About 350,000 people visit the house every year. The site is a few blocks from the center of town, in a deteriorating middle-class neighborhood, across the street from a Piggly Wiggly grocery and two blocks from the Wabash tracks. Towering elms and maples shaded the house and garden in June when I was there. Along a white board fence in the rear were coreopsis, day lilies, roses, iris, sweet william, and, in a secluded corner, 12 tomato plants.

On a brick retaining wall in front of the house, a bronze tablet bears these words from "Lincoln Walks at Midnight," written by a later resident of Springfield, Vachel Lindsay:

> By his homestead, or in shadowed yards
> He lingers where his children used to play,
> Or through the market, on the well worn stones
> He stalks until the dawn stars burn away.

In Springfield today (population 75,505, fifth largest city of Illinois) there is only the faintest echo of Lincoln's footfalls. The tourist house next door to the Lincoln house has no rooms for Negroes. Neither does the principal hotel, the Abraham Lincoln. The Lincoln Cafe, two blocks from the Lincoln house, has a portrait of the Civil War president flanked by two silk flags. The Lincoln Cafe also has a sign reading, "We reserve the right to refuse service to anyone."

Lincoln's house is two blocks from the boundary line between the white and Negro sections.

Two of the three business schools do not accept Negro students. There are no Negro teachers in the city schools. The fire department has a Negro company, which is segregated. The Methodist, Episcopal, and Lutheran churches have separate churches for Negroes. The Catholic church and the YMCA do not segregate.

Although the public schools are interracial, Negro children must use separate wading pools and segregation is enforced on the public beaches at Lake Springfield. No city official will accept responsibility for this practice. The playground and recreation department says the park board and the Red Cross have authority; the park board refers inquiries to the water and light department; the water and light department says the playground and recreation department should be consulted. "It's a kind of an underground policy," one official admitted.

Nearly all of the city's 6,000 Negroes live east of the Wabash tracks, which became the color line after the race riot of 1908. Public housing has changed the picture somewhat. Although there are separate buildings for Negroes and whites, both races share a single project (John Hay Homes) with many common facilities.

In November 1949 the city established a Mayor's Committee on Human Relations. Seven months later it had accomplished nothing because the chairmanship was unfilled. "There is a fear here to experiment in democracy," said E. B. Winston, executive secretary of the Springfield Urban League.

The place where Lincoln's children used to play is the site of the present Lincoln school, a few blocks from the house, where an earlier school once stood. About 25 percent of the children in the big brick building east of the Wabash tracks are Negroes.

A fourth grade teacher, Miss Martha Miller, was supervising a ball game when the photographer and I walked by. "Color doesn't make any difference to these children," Miss Miller said. "I have children who suck off the same sucker, eat off the same apple, and go home and sleep together." When the children grow older, color makes a big difference in Lincoln's home town.

Freely translated, the sign means: "No Negroes served."

CHICAGO

CHICAGO is getting ready to build new ghettos under the 1949 Housing Act. No large city is doing more than Chicago to keep the Negro in segregated neighborhoods.

The citizen of Chicago is probably no more prejudiced than the citizen of Minneapolis or Muscatine. But his city is run by forces which seek to preserve their power by preserving the status quo.

The housing shortage is disgraceful and so is much of the housing. The Chicago Housing Authority says 292,000 dwellings should be added to the present 1,050,000 to ease the shortage. One-sixth of the city's dwellings have no toilet or no running water — an increase of 20 percent over 1940.

Negro housing is concentrated more rigidly than in southern cities. In the past decade the Negro population has soared past 400,000, an increase of close to 45 percent as against 6 percent for whites. The new arrivals have been wedged into the old slums. A survey by the Real Estate Research Corporation in 1949 showed 3,580 families and 646 roomers in dwellings built for 1,127 families.

Landlords have hit the jackpot by carving up old tenements into one-room kitchenettes renting at around $80. Firemen carried the bodies of five children from one building in which 67 families, separated by celotex partitions, had occupied space designed for six families.

A resident of the Chicago ghetto. ⟶

The federal Housing Act of 1949 gave Chicago two big opportunities to enlarge its housing supply. Low-rent public housing would help many families (especially Negroes, whose plight is worst). The urban redevelopment section of the law could serve thousands of middle-income families.

The race issue has been a main factor in blocking both opportunities.

When there is practically no vacant housing, common sense requires that new housing be built on vacant land. It's great to tear down slums but unless new shelter is provided first for the displaced families, the effect is like that from bombing.

The only good vacant sites are in the outlying white neighborhoods. Low-rent and middle-income housing should be built there so the central slums can be gradually emptied, razed and redeveloped. But politicians, real estate men and residents of outlying areas have successfully resisted the entry of Negroes or other minorities from the slums.

In 1950 the housing authority planned to build 12,000 low-rent dwellings as its first postwar program. Eight thousand were to go on vacant land in white neighborhoods, the rest on slum sites in Negro areas. The housing authority's fine policy of interracial occupancy was to have been maintained outside the boundaries of the ghettos.

The most revealing picture of Chicago's slums is one obtained from the rear.

This program was spurned by Mayor Martin H. Kennelly and the city council. The aldermen toured the city by bus to choose politically acceptable sites. Upshot was a plan to build only 2,100 dwellings on vacant land (a figure later reduced to 1,300). About 9,000 more would be on congested and expensive slum sites.

Clearing these slums would displace 6,000 Negro families whose incomes are too high for low-rent housing. Most of them would be thrown to the mercies of landlords elsewhere in the overcrowded ghetto.

The major forces in the Chicago drama are:

Politics

Chicago's government is antiquated, cumbersome and corrupt. Citizens pay fixed prices for the privilege of erecting a sign or breaking the curb for a driveway. The city council has 50 aldermen, each representing his own little duchy. To stay in office the alderman must have a stable machine and a stable constituency. There are a few men of integrity in the council, but the majority goes along with the higher bosses and bows to the prejudices of realtors and organized property owners. Efforts to break down the ghetto walls can be prevented by the aldermen's recently acquired and unusual power to approve sites for public housing.

An indirect role is played by the Syndicate, the spiritual and fiscal heir to the old Capone organization. Its influence reaches the state legislature and its systematic benefactions to the local police command a certain loyalty. Chicago's hoodlums are neither anti-public housing nor anti-Negro. Their attitude is that of the practical businessman: a customer is a customer. But the mutually profitable relationship between the politicians and the Syndicate creates another reason for avoiding major shifts in population. Replanning and redeveloping the West Side slums might lead to redevelopment of the city council itself, a distressing prospect for those who enjoy the Syndicate's favors.

Property

Chicago is the headquarters for three powerful real estate organizations—the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the United States Savings and Loan League, and the Mortgage Bankers Association of America. They are primarily hostile to public housing and rent control but they also dislike changes in racial patterns. Defeated in 1949 when Congress passed the Housing Act, they have schooled their local affiliates in ways to sabotage new public housing programs. The race issue makes a handy tool for their campaign against public housing.

← This dwelling is inhabited.

Racial hatred has created terror where white and black neighborhoods meet. Four times since 1945 there have been riots by white mobs numbering several thousand.

Police guard daily a white home, once attacked when Negroes visited it.

Bigotry in Action

Although thousands of Negroes have escaped from the ghetto to nearby neighborhoods since the U. S. Supreme Court ruled against racial restrictive covenants in 1948, pioneers in most white districts face the possibilities of insults, threats, broken windows, clubbings, arson or shootings. Mrs. Roscoe Johnson, a Negro social worker who moved with her husband into a newly purchased house on South St. Lawrence Avenue in July 1949, told what happened:

> We didn't put the lights on in the house. We stayed downstairs in the room next to the kitchen. We barricaded the doors with the furniture and put a mattress behind it. We crawled on our hands and knees when the missiles started coming in through the windows. Then they started to throw gasoline-soaked rags stuck in pop bottles. They also threw flares and torches. As fast as they came in, either the firemen or the policemen would step in and put them out. The police did not try to push the crowd away from the house until we heard a riot car screaming.

Police have often winked at rock-throwing hoodlums and houses have been attacked while police were on 24-hour daily guard. The Chicago Human Relations Commission reports two "major anti-racial disturbances" since the July 1949 riot, one in August 1950. But instead of lasting for days this outbreak was stopped by wholesale arrests, thanks to a new in-service training program for police. If this policy is continued there will be less risk of a city-wide riot.

The White Circle League of Joseph Beauharnais has urged "self-respecting white people" to oppose "mongrelizing the white race." Fortunately the League has lost most of its influence along with its state charter.

The Real Opposition

Most self-respecting whites squirm at mention of the League but several thousands are enrolled in 70 or more neighborhood improvement associations. With two or three outstanding exceptions, these organizations of realtors and property owners use every pretext to keep Negroes out of white areas. Their leaders' influence has multiplied since a city-wide federation was created and their lobbyist has been admitted to city council sessions from which even the press was barred.

Chicago's Negroes need more leadership in the fight against segregation. Negro political power is concentrated in the pockets of Representative William L. Dawson, a vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who prefers to keep his constituents where they now vote. Dawson failed to buck the city hall housing program. Robert R. Taylor quietly resigned as chairman of the Chicago Housing Authority and gave his support to the Kennelly plan. Many influential Negroes are themselves owners of the notorious kitchenette apartments and their views are no more enlightened than their slums. Thousands of Negro slum dwellers fear—with reason—that slum clearance will make them homeless.

U. S. Can Decide

The housing authority, with Commissioner Claude A. Benjamin dissenting, acquiesced in the city hall program. What happens next is up to the federal Public Housing Administration, which has power to approve or veto the city administration's plan. Under its own administrative rules the PHA could reject the slum clearance program by citing the need for building on vacant land and the dislocation of the 6,000 Negro families ineligible for public housing. The housing authority could still go ahead with the 1,300 dwellings on vacant sites and later move into the second phase of its program, which calls for construction on vacant land only.

A veto of the slum projects by PHA would prevent the building of a new central ghetto and would strengthen the campaign of decent civic organizations for use of vacant land.

There are some bright spots in Chicago. The Public Housing Association, a private citizens' agency, is fighting for a sound program. The Chicago Council Against Racial and Religious Discrimination, representing more than 100 religious, labor and civic organizations, has undertaken public education. Michael Reese Hospital, the Illinois Institute of Technology and the South Side Planning Board have a long-term plan for developing seven square miles of South Side slums. This project could become the nation's most dramatic example of replanning for interracial living. Again, however, the great need is to solve the problem of relocating displaced families.

In contrast to these private efforts, the city itself has made no real plans. The Chicago Plan Commission has failed to give the leadership needed for slum clearance, rehousing and general development.

A veteran's wife and another veteran's child in a Housing Authority project.

The stumbling block in Chicago is the aldermen and their unsavory bosses. Mayor Kennelly once used his influence in the city council to defeat an ordinance that would have extended the housing authority's interracial policy to private housing that enjoys government aid. Kennelly has wronged more than the Negroes. He has wronged his city. There can be no sound redevelopment so long as racism rules. A central ghetto means a sick and stagnant town, no better than its venal government.

DETROIT

AT THE Capitol Coffee Shop, around the corner from the Statler Hotel, I asked the pretty waitress with light brown hair and a browning gardenia where the nearest Negro district was.

"They live all over," she said. "We've had to move three times to get away from them."

Detroit's Negro population (about 300,000, which is double the 1940 figure) does not live all over. It is concentrated in about eight districts. More and more Negroes are leaving the ghettos, however, and the once exclusively white Northwest section is not so exclusive today.

Like the Negroes of Chicago, those in Detroit are buying houses to escape the squalor and exorbitant rents of kitchenette apartments. "A friend of mine is paying $97.50 a month for a living room with a studio couch, a kitchen the size of a bathroom, and a toilet in the hall that he has to share with two other families," a steel worker told me. "I guess I'm lucky. I'm only paying $80 for the same setup."

Race Issue in Open

In Detroit the race question is an acknowledged political issue, more so than in any large northern city. The nation's fifth largest city (1,837,613 population) is an adolescent, physically and sociologically. Southern whites and southern Negroes have migrated to jobs in the automobile factories, bringing prejudice and tension with them. In neighboring Dearborn prejudice is so entrenched that Mayor Orville L. Hubbard was able in 1948 to defeat a much-needed housing project planned by a life insurance company. He circulated the printed slogan, "Keep Negroes Out of Dearborn."

Twice within a decade Detroit has been seared by race riots. Angry whites in 1942 attacked Negroes moving into the Sojourner Truth public housing project which the whites had hoped to occupy. Tensions boiled over a year later when 25 Negroes and 9 whites were killed in a general riot.

How Cobo Was Elected

Preserving the sanctity of white neighborhoods was a main issue in the last mayoralty campaign. Candidate George Edwards wanted to use vacant land for the first 10,000 new units of public housing. That is the only sane course since vacant land in the Negro sections is barely 3 percent as against 22 percent for the city as a whole. Edwards would have broken the boundaries of the ghettos. Supporters of Albert E. Cobo spread the word, "You wouldn't want niggers living across the street, would you?" Cobo won.

Mayor Cobo's plan is to tear down some 8,550 Negro dwellings in the central slum area and replace them with 8,900 dwellings, mostly for Negro occupancy. There would be no building on vacant land. Nobody has explained how Negro families flushed out of the clearance area could be decently housed elsewhere. Cobo would simply replace an old ghetto with a new one.

Advocates of the Ghetto

The mayor's plan of containment is supported by the three daily newspapers, the realty interests and the neighborhood improvement associations. It is condemned by the Detroit Council for Better Housing, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Urban League of Detroit, and other civic organizations.

The neighborhood improvement associations represent the attitude and often the personnel of the old Ku Klux Klan and Black Legion. One builder who had announced a policy of no discrimination was told by a delegation from the Seven Mile-Fenelon Improvement Association, "Those houses will be burned down as fast as you can build them." Since arson has not been uncommon, the developer decided to sell to whites only.

Public housing, which should express the civic conscience, is solidly jim crow in Detroit. Negroes, whose housing need is most acute, have been allotted a smaller proportion of dwellings than in many southern cities. The executive secretary of the Detroit Housing

UAW-CIO members at River Rouge. ⟶

Commission is Harry J. Durbin, a founder of the National Association of Home Builders and the principal developer of the white West Side.

The housing commission says its projects simply conform to "the neighborhood pattern." The Detroit branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has retorted that all-Negro projects do not conform to the pattern of neighborhoods where a white minority once lived, and has filed suit in federal court to abolish segregation in public housing.

When white and Negro children go to the same school, they get along fine.

The public schools do not segregate in theory but geography does the job. The few Negro teachers are almost invariably assigned to Negro schools. Only 1.5 percent of the high school teachers and ½ of 1 percent of the administrative personnel are Negroes.

Records of the NAACP show countless examples of police violence against Negroes. One man had been beaten up three times (as of June 1950) for walking on the sidewalk with a white woman, his wife.

Police Methods Changed

There are a few heartening contrasts. One is the Mayor's Interracial Committee, directed by quiet, hard-working George Schermer. The committee hasn't been able to remold the police force but it is making headway. A few years ago the policeman sent to investigate an attack on a Negro family would say, "Why don't you move back where you were?" He would then make routine inquiries of the white neighbors and sympathize with those who condemned the Negroes. Now there is a special investigation squad trained for interracial problems. It reports directly to the police commissioner.

The Interracial Committee's two field men try to spot symptoms of tension before serious trouble starts. They specialize in neighborhood educational work. Thanks to the committee, some of the local improvement associations have accepted Negro members. The YMCA, completely segregated until 1950, now admits Negroes to five of its seven branches.

Under NAACP leadership, Wayne University students and other citizens sat down during the noon rush for prolonged 10¢ orders in dozens of restaurants that were refusing to serve Negroes. The restaurants capitulated.

A hundred committees sponsored by the Fair Practices and Anti-Discrimination Department of the 1,000,000-member United Automobile Workers (CIO) have launched a campaign against third-rate lunchrooms that won't sell a bowl of soup to Negro auto workers. Proprietors are changing their policy. The UAW-CIO also broke the solid white front of the Detroit bowling alleys with its tournaments for mixed teams of union members.

Some observers think Cobo may reverse himself on the vacant land issue. One citizen remarked, "The mayor wants to leave a few monuments around town, and Cobo's Ghetto would be a hell of a memorial."

Detroit is a powder keg. A trifling spark could touch off wholesale murder. Paradoxically the hopeful aspect is that the race issue is naked. It's in the open. It can be talked about, fought about. In Chicago racism is just as much a political issue but a concealed one.

Detroit can ride the crisis if the housing problem is solved. There is no solution to housing until the ghetto walls go down.

Although whites and Negroes work and study together in Detroit, most Negroes live in ghettos.

WATERBURY

THE train from Bridgeport, Connecticut, runs north through the green-walled Housatonic Valley, continuing up the narrower valley of the Naugatuck, crossing and recrossing the stream until the rails reach Waterbury. On May 9, 1800, the day that John Brown of Osawatomie was born at Torrington, 18 miles upstream from Waterbury, the river ran clear between gravelly banks. Now it is brown and oily with the waste of factories, disfigured with old tires and refuse, hemmed by masonry.

Waterbury lies in a bowl where the Mad River, Turkey Hill Brook, Hancock Brook, and Steel Brook join the Naugatuck. The brass mills (Waterbury is called the brass capital of the world) are in the bottom, close by the business district and the village green. Most of the houses are on the hill slopes. From the center of the bowl, a 240-foot brick tower rises above the railroad station, outreaching factory smokestacks and church spires. This landmark, a copy of the Torre del Mangia in Siena, Italy, was the cultural inspiration of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

The founding Yankees of Waterbury have long since been outnumbered by the Irish, the Italians and the Slavs. The Negroes, about 4,500 of the city's 104,000 population, are at the bottom of the scale. Jews cannot easily buy houses in the best districts.

Slum on the Naugatuck River. ⟶

The big three in brass are American Brass Company (an Anaconda subsidiary), Chase Copper and Brass Company (a Kennecott subsidiary) and Scovill Manufacturing Company (independent). The social and economic destiny of the city is controlled by the five families who manage the brass mills.

What Waterbury Found

In 1946 a committee of the Community Council (the welfare federation) took a careful look at race relations in Waterbury. William W. Vosburgh Jr., editorial director of the Waterbury Republican and American, was chairman. "I have some prejudices myself," Mr. Vosburgh told me. "But I want to see everybody get a fair shake."

The committee reported that the churches often exchange ministers to present the viewpoints of other races and faiths. Public accommodations were found open to all races.

On the debit side, the report said: "We have restricted most of our Negro population to what amounts to a ghetto. . . . We have no colored teachers in our schools and no colored girls training to be nurses in either of our hospitals. . . . Local factory training schools are closed to Negro high school graduates."

The committee recommended that the mayor appoint an official committee to work for better group relations "in a wise, quiet and steady way to give the people of Waterbury a sense of moving towards solution of this problem."

The mayor did not act. But it was not long before several Negroes called on Mr. Vosburgh and two of his associates. They pointed out that the newspapers' policy of identifying Negroes in every petty crime story was hurtful to good race relations. From that day the papers have minimized references to race.

Other things have happened. In the fall of 1950 the city's first two Negro teachers went to work, most of their students being white. Waterbury Hospital has taken Negro girls in training. St. Mary's Hospital, a Catholic institution, had pioneered with Negro nurses and an intern. The State Interracial Commission sponsored a 6-week lecture course on the roots of prejudice and what can be done by good citizens. Those who attended the institute have organized formally and plan to establish an interracial day nursery on the pattern used successfully in New Haven.

As yet there has been little progress in opening jobs as skilled mechanics to qualified Negroes. In the brass mills the white man is the caster, the Negro is the caster's helper.

Public housing was segregated until a year ago. Pressure from the State Interracial Commission was one factor in bringing about a cautious change in policy. The 400 scheduled new low-rent dwellings are to be interracial.

Several years ago Dr. James Lee, a prominent Negro dentist, bought a house that was more than a mile from the nearest Negro family. His white lawyer warned Mrs. Lee that the children would be stoned. "I want that house," said Mrs. Lee. An officer of the East End Community Club urged the bank not to give a mortgage. But the deal went through.

Dr. James Lee and one of his patients.

"We have no more trouble with our neighbors than the whites have with theirs," Dr. Lee said. "Our children are accepted in school. I took my boy to see the Yankees play Cleveland and I took a Lithuanian boy and an Italian boy with us. My white neighbors have become my patients."

Waterbury is just about what Mr. Vosburgh's committee called it: "No horrible example, nor yet a model." It could move higher in the scale if that 1946 report by seven good citizens were taken seriously.

NEW YORK

THE teeming, low-lying blocks of Harlem are separated from Morningside Heights and Columbia University by Morningside Park, a narrow belt of green covering the shoulder of the heights. Along the bottom edge of the park is Morningside Avenue. At 119th Street and Morningside Avenue is an old apartment house of gray brick, heavy with cornices. On the fifth floor, in five small rooms, live Mr. and Mrs. Madison T. Jones, their 17-year-old son Madison Jr., and Mr. Jones's parents.

The Jones's living room is comfortable and attractive, although there is hardly enough space for the piano, radio-phonograph, television set, table, sofa, upholstered chair, two straight chairs and three small tables. Two walls are largely covered with books. A copy of Kingsblood Royal is inscribed "To my only rival in chess, Madison Jones — Sinclair Lewis." On a hassock is a fat file of The New Yorker and the Saturday Review of Literature.

Flanking the fireplace are five more shelves solidly filled with record albums. Mr. Jones prefers Bach, but he has not neglected Mozart, Brahms, Beethoven, and such off-trail compositions as Cimarosa's Concerto in C for oboe and strings.

The photographer and I spent a July evening with the Joneses and their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gayles. Mr. Jones, a graduate of St. John's College, Brooklyn, is administrative assistant with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. His attractive wife is a physician's daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Madison T. Jones in the living room of their Harlem apartment.

Mr. Gayles is a native of Denver. After the war he picked New York for a career in music and played the saxophone four years in Dizzy Gillespie's band. In 1949 he married Miss Anna Keller, a secretary at the NAACP.

The fundamental need of both families is a decent place to live. "We want to get out of Harlem," said Mrs. Jones. "The public schools are poor and we don't want our son to grow up just with Negro children—that doesn't make him a real American."

"The trouble is," Mr. Jones explained, "we are not eligible for low-rent public housing and there isn't any good private housing for Negroes. We saw one advertisement for an

Looking toward Morningside Heights from 119th Street. The Joneses live on the corner. →

FRANKFURTERS
AND ROLLS
SODA
10¢

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gayles — they need a house.

uptown apartment at $55. The girl at the real estate office didn't look up when I asked if the apartment was still available. She just said 'Yes' and then she saw us. 'Oh—it's not for colored,' she said."

"We had to hand over $300 to get a small furnished sublet in Harlem a year ago," Mrs. Gayles put in. "Now the tenant wants it back. We may have to go to a furnished room."

I asked about Levittown, the vast development of small houses on Long Island. "No use applying," said Mrs. Gayles. "They don't sell to Negroes."

"Sometimes I get mad," Mr. Jones said. "As a youngster I went to work for a large company. I stayed with them ten years, all through college. When a clerk finally died they promoted me. But they kept me on a messenger's pay. I asked for a raise. They said I had gone as far as a Negro could, so I quit."

"There was a redheaded teacher at P.S. 81," Mrs. Gayles recalled. "She always used a piece of paper when she opened the door so she wouldn't touch the knob we'd touched."

"I used to hate that part in history about the happy slaves singing in the cotton fields," Mrs. Jones said. "I was so ashamed of the Negroes because they submitted to slavery. Then I read in one of my father's books about the slaves' insurrections and the next day I tried to tell about them in school. 'They fought!' I told the teacher. 'They really fought!' She just said, 'Sit down, Muriel.' She didn't understand. Nobody tells our children what they have to be proud of."

I asked Mr. Gayles how it was, traveling around the country with the band.

"Bad. When we played for mixed dances in the south, there would be a rope down the middle of the floor to keep the Negroes separate.

"In Europe it is different. We played in Denmark, Sweden, France, Germany and Italy. Mexico, too. They treat you like a man. Any time you leave the U.S. you are free."

"We've got to remember that the Negroes are not alone," Mrs. Jones said. "In New York the Spanish people are discriminated against and the Jewish people worry about their children being hurt when they go to college. There really isn't much difference if you belong to a minority."

A Good Example

New York State set an example for the nation in 1950 with the Wicks-Austin law which prohibits discrimination or segregation in any new publicly assisted housing projects. The New York City Council had enacted a similar law in 1949.

These laws were a heartening contrast to the record of the Mortgage Conference of Greater New York, formed by banks and insurance companies controlling the bulk of the mortgage money. Until federal action under the anti-trust laws led in 1948 to dissolution of the Mortgage Conference, its members conspired to prevent Negroes and Spanish-speaking people from buying outside the segregated districts. Negroes and Puerto Ricans still find it hard to buy or rent in white neighborhoods although violence is rare.

Many apartment houses on Park, Madison and Fifth Avenues will not take any of the city's more than 2,000,000 Jews as tenants.

For several years the most imposing symbol of discrimination has been Stuyvesant Town, the big development of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The project got a $75,000,000 tax subsidy from the city with the right to bar Negroes. Under heavy pressure from civic organizations the insurance company in September 1950 assigned a few of its 8,755 dwellings to Negro tenants.

The low-rent projects of the New York City Housing Authority, wholly interracial, have accomplished most for the city's 500,000 Negroes. The authority's vast postwar program comprises 125,000 dwellings, half of them completed or under construction. An important part of the program is self-supporting projects at moderate rents, providing 22,000 dwellings on an interracial basis for families with incomes of less than $4,900.

But the Joneses and the Gayleses do not qualify. What they need is non-segregated private construction on vacant sites under the urban redevelopment law. The Citizens' Housing and Planning Council of New York has pointed out that unless redevelopment is wisely executed, Harlem will remain a ghetto: "an uncoordinated collection of community facilities and of public housing projects tenanted by low-income Negroes and Puerto Ricans."

East Harlem, for example, is an area designated by the City Planning Commission for redevelopment. Thus far the housing authority has built or scheduled seven low-rent projects in East Harlem, several of them separated only by a street. But private enterprise hasn't stirred (except for Metropolitan's Riverton project). The city has made no plans for badly needed parks and playgrounds, for coordination of community facilities.

Citizens have got to make planning their own political business. What citizens can do is being shown in Morningside Heights and Manhattanville, two adjoining communities on the western edge of Harlem. The Heights has Columbia University, Barnard College, Teachers College, Union Theological Seminary, Jewish Theological Seminary, Juilliard School, International House, and other well-known institutions. Manhattanville, in the Harlem valley, has some of the city's worst housing and a record for harmonious interracial living.

Under the leadership of the institutions, a program for redeveloping the entire area has been drafted. New private housing is planned for middle-income families, more public housing for low-income people.

The Need in Every City

Planning in every city must be extended from city hall to the neighborhood level if racial tensions and urban blight are to be eradicated. Planning commissions must be given two things that most of them lack: money and power. With those tools they can produce sensible master plans.

Cities that do not have redevelopment agencies should hasten to establish them—and the citizens must see to it that redevelopment is planned on a democratic, non-political basis. Finally, the local and federal governments must accept full responsibility for relocating all displaced families without segregation.

Rear view of typical Harlem tenements.

It makes no sense to argue, as some will, that action against segregation should be postponed until peace is restored. We cannot postpone the need for a united nation.

To replan our cities for democratic living there must be joint action by PTAs, church groups, labor unions, business associations and every organization that wants a healthy community. When citizens of good will match their strength against that of a few bigots and unenlightened leaders of realty and finance, the ghetto will disappear from the map of the United States.

A PUBLIC AFFAIRS PICTURE PAMPHLET • 30¢

IN THESE TEN CITIES is published by the Public Affairs Committee, a nonprofit, educational organization, at 22 East 38th Street, New York 16, N. Y. The purpose of the Committee is to bring readable facts on economic, social, health and family problems to American readers at minimum cost. Issuing a new pamphlet about every month, the Committee has distributed more than 16,000,000 pamphlets. In These Ten Cities is the second in a new series of picture pamphlets.

The Committee's officers are Mark Starr, chairman; F. Ernest Johnson, vice-chairman; Erling M. Hunt, secretary, and Miss Beulah Amidon, treasurer. Maxwell S. Stewart is editor of the pamphlet series, Miss Mabel C. Mount is associate editor and Mrs. Dallas Johnson is educational director.

In These Ten Cities was prepared by the New York State Committe on Discrimination in Housing, organized in 1949 by representatives of racial, religious, housing, labor and other groups. Citizens and public officials in other states got interested in the new organization. Result was that conferences called by the Committee attracted delegates from Boston to San Francisco.

Naturally enough, all this commotion led to action. The most important achievement of the Committee was the Wicks-Austin law of 1950, through which the New York legislature prohibited discrimination in publicly assisted housing. Algernon D. Black is chairman of the Committee, Mrs. Hortense W. Gabel is executive director and Miss Katherine Morton is administrative secretary.

CIO COMMITTEE TO ABOLISH DISCRIMINATION

James B. Carey, Chairman
Willard S. Townsend, Secretary
Harry Read, Director
W. Richard Carter
Arthur Goldberg
Bessie Hillman
James J. Leary
William H. Oliver
Morris Pizer
Thomas Shane
George L. P. Weaver
M. Hedley Stone
Philip Weightman
Boyd L. Wilson

From the original resolution establishing the CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination, September 2nd, 1942:

> . . . To explore the reasons and causes of discrimination against minority and racial groups in America and institute corrective measures at the roots . . .

Order extra copies of this pamphlet from

CIO Department of Education and Research

718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

30¢ a copy, 4 for $1, 25 copies for $5. Write for prices on larger quantities.

to establish justice to insure domestic tranquility

Introduction and Summary of Recommendations from the Final Report of

THE NATIONAL COMMISSION ON THE CAUSES AND PREVENTION OF VIOLENCE

Introduction

This Commission was created by the President in June, 1968, to determine the causes of violence in the United States and to recommend methods of prevention.

Last January we issued a Progress Report, stressing the enormous complexities involved in understanding this vexing and multi-faceted problem. We noted that to understand violence, we had to study American society itself, past and present, and the traditions and institutions which accept or condemn, generate or reduce the various forms of violence in our society. We indicated, too, that rather than depending solely on our own knowledge and preconceptions, we had found it necessary to enlist the assistance of more than two hundred of the nation's leading scholars in criminology, psychology, history, political science, sociology, and law.

We have now completed our study. We present the results in this Report. The full scope of our endeavor will be apparent to those who study not only what we say here but also the work of our seven research task forces and five investigatory study teams. Their reports to us fill fifteen volumes. We also held a series of hearings and conferences, receiving the views of more than 150 public officials, scholars, educators, religious leaders, and private citizens from media executives to young students. We are publish-

VIOLENT CRIME

[1] Homicide, Forcible Rape, Robbery, Aggravated Assault

VIOLENT CRIME (U.S. 1968)

	NO. REPORTED CRIMES	RATE PER 100,000 POP.
HOMICIDE	13,650	6.8
FORCIBLE RAPE	31,060	15.5
ROBBERY	261,730	131.0
AGGRAVATED ASSAULT	282,400	141.3
TOTAL	588,840	294.6
TOTAL REPORTED SERIOUS PROPERTY CRIME U.S. 1968 (Burglary, Larceny Over $50, Auto Theft)	3,877,700	1940.0

COMPARISON OF U.S. HOMICIDE RATES WITH THOSE OF OTHER NATIONS, 1966

Source: Task Force Report, Crimes of Violence (National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence, to be published.)

ing the transcript of six days of hearings on the mass media; transcripts of the other hearings will be available for study in the National Archives.

Extensive as our study was, it could not embrace every aspect of such a complex problem. Others must build on our work, just as we have built on work that preceded ours. But within the confines of the time and resources available to us, we believe we have gained some valuable insights. We believe we have identified the causes of much of the violence that plagues contemporary America. We are convinced that most of this violence can be prevented, for our work has illuminated for us the strengths of this great nation, as well as its shortcomings. Our institutions and the spirit of our people are equal to this challenge, no less than to the challenges we have met in the past.

* * * * *

Violence in the United States has risen to alarmingly high levels. Whether one considers assassination, group violence, or individual acts of violence, the decade of the 1960s was considerably more violent than the several decades preceding it and ranks among the most violent in our history. The United States is the clear leader among modern, stable democratic nations in its rates of homicide, assault, rape, and robbery, and it is at least among the highest in incidence of group violence and assassination.

This high level of violence is dangerous to our society. It is disfiguring our society—making fortresses of portions of our cities and dividing our people into armed camps. It is jeopardizing some of our most precious institutions, among them our schools and universities—poisoning the spirit of trust and cooperation that is essential to their proper functioning. It is corroding the central political processes of our democratic society—substituting force and fear for argument and accommodation.

We have endured and survived other cycles of violence in our history. Today, however, we are more vulnerable to violence than ever before. Two-thirds of our people live in urban areas, where violence especially thrives. Individual and group specializations have intensified our dependence on one another. Men are no longer capable of solitary living and individual self-defense; men must live together and depend upon one another to observe the laws and keep the peace.

The American people know the threat. They demand that violence be brought to a halt. Violence must be brought under control—to safeguard life and property, and to make possible the creation of the understanding and cooperation needed to remedy underlying causes. No society can remain free, much less deal effectively with its fundamental problems, if its people live in fear of their fellow citizens; it is ancient wisdom that a house divided against itself cannot stand.

In this Report we suggest a number of specific measures for the better control of violence. We urge, for example, that the nation should double its investment in the prevention of crime and the administration of justice, as rapidly as that investment can be wisely planned and utilized. We recommend that central offices of criminal justice be created at the metropolitan level to make all parts of the criminal justice process—police, courts, corrections—function more effectively, and that private citizens' organizations be formed to work as counterparts of these offices in every major city in the nation. We urge that public officials, including law enforcement officers, intensify their efforts to develop more effective tactics in handling both peaceful demonstrations and violent disturbances. As we show by comparing successful and unsuccessful strategies of control of major mass demonstrations of the past few years, official behavior may determine whether protest remains peaceful or erupts into serious violence.

Further, we recommend the adoption of a national fire-

VIOLENT CRIME IN THE CITY

VIOLENT CRIME BY CITY SIZE (U.S. 1960 and 1968)

CITIES:	[RATES PER 100,000 POP.] 1960	1968
OVER 250,000	293.7	773.2
100,000–250,000	154.0	325.3
50,000–100,000	104.3	220.5
25,000–50,000	70.1	150.8
10,000–25,000	57.3	126.6
UNDER 10,000	47.7	111.4
SUBURBAN	N.A.	145.5
RURAL	N.A.	96.5

REPORTED URBAN ARREST RATES FOR VIOLENT CRIMES BY AGE

RATE PER 100,000 POPULATION U.S. 1967	AGE	INCREASE IN RATE 1968 TO 1967
123.0	10-14	222.0%
408.2	15-17	102.5%
222.1	10-17	138.8%
436.1	18-24	45.5%
127.3	25+	41.1%
189.1	ALL AGES (10+)	65.7%

- Violent crime in the city is overwhelmingly committed by males.
- Violent crime in the city is concentrated especially among youths between the ages of fifteen and twenty-four.
- Violent crime in the city is committed primarily by individuals at the lower end of the occupational scale.
- Violent crime in the cities stems disproportionately from the ghetto slum where most Negroes live.
- The victims of assaultive violence in the cities generally have the same characteristics as the offenders: victimization rates are generally highest for males, youths, poor persons, and blacks. Robbery victims, however, are very often older whites.

SOURCE: Task Force Report, Crimes of Violence (National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence, to be published.)

arms policy that will limit the general availability of handguns.

* * * * *

Necessary as measures of control are, they are only a part of the answer. They do not cure the basic causes of violence. Violence is like a fever in the body politic: it is but the symptom of some more basic pathology which must be cured before the fever will disappear.

* * * * * *

Indeed, if measures of control were this society's only response to violence, they would in the long run exacerbate the problem. The pyramiding of control measures could turn us into a repressive society, where the peace is kept primarily through official coercion rather than through willing obedience to law. That kind of society, where law is more feared than respected, where individual expression and movement are curtailed, is violent too—and it nurtures within itself the seeds of its own violent destruction.

In this Report, we analyze basic causes which underlie the chief varieties of contemporary violence. We make a number of recommendations directed to removing these causes. They cannot be eliminated entirely; even in a perfectly just society in which all have a fair and nondiscriminatory stake, there will always be some violent individual, in rural as well as in urban areas, and measures of control will always be required to restrain them. But we can improve the conditions and opportunities of life for all citizens and thus reduce sharply the number who will commit violent acts.

Thus, we urge that young people must be given a greater role in determining their own destiny and in shaping the future course of our society. Responsible participation in decision-making may, for many, be a substitute for the violence that is born in frustration. We propose lowering the voting age, reforming the draft, and providing a massive expansion in opportunities for youth to engage in public service activities whose goals young people wholeheartedly embrace.

While we categorically condemn all illegal violence, including group violence,* as incompatible with the survival of a just, democratic, and humane society, we state emphatically that aggrieved groups must be permitted to ex-

* In this Report we define group violence as unlawful threat or use of force by any group that results or is intended to result in the injury or forcible restraints or intimidation of persons, or the destruction or forcible seizure of property.

GROUP VIOLENCE

COMPARATIVE LEVELS OF POLITICAL VIOLENCE (U.S. 1819-1968)

Rate of Incidents of Political Violence (Excluding War) Adjusted for Population, 10-Year Intervals
[Based on Sampling of Newspapers]

Source: Task Force Report, Assassination and Political Violence (National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence, Nov. 1969).

DEMONSTRATIONS, RIOTS AND INDIVIDUAL VIOLENT CRIMES (U.S. JUNE 1963–MAY 1968)

	POLITICAL DEMONSTRATIONS AND PROTESTS INVOLVING MORE THAN 100 PERSONS[1]	URBAN RIOTS[2]	INDIVIDUAL ACTS OF VIOLENT CRIME[3] HOMICIDE	AGGRAVATED ASSAULT
POPULATION	2,000,000 PARTICIPANTS	200,000 PARTICIPANTS	195,000,000 CITIZENS	195,000,000 CITIZENS
INJURIES	1,100	8,000	———	1,124,200
DEATHS	NONE	190	53,200	———
ARRESTS	21,000	50,000	39,000	457,500

[1] Civil Rights Demonstrations, Antiwar Demonstrations, Student Protests on Campus Issues, School Anti-Integration Demonstrations, Segregationist Clashes and Counter-Demonstrations. 642 Events Identified.

[2] 239 Events Identified.

[3] Based on Uniform Crime Reports, FBI, Adjusted for Mid-1963 to Mid-1968.

Source: Task Force Report, Violence in America (National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence, June 1969)

ercise their constitutional rights of protest and public presentation of grievances. Accordingly, we believe the President should seek legislation that would confer jurisdiction upon the United States District Courts to grant injunctions, upon the request of the Attorney General or private persons, against the threatened or actual interference by any person, whether or not under color of state or federal law, with the rights of individuals or groups to freedom of speech, freedom of the press, peaceful assembly, and petition for redress of grievances.

We must have the perception to recognize injustices when they are called to our attention, and we must have the institutional flexibility to correct those injustices promptly. To enable the less affluent to obtain effective and peaceful redress of grievances, we recommend that additional steps should be taken to meet their needs for lawyers, and that state and local jurisdictions should be encouraged to experiment with the establishment of grievance agencies to serve all citizens.

The way in which we can make the greatest progress toward reducing violence in America is by taking the actions necessary to improve the conditions of family and community life for all who live in our cities, and especially for the poor who are concentrated in the ghetto slums. It is the ghetto slum that is disproportionately responsible for violent crime, by far the most acute aspect of the problem of violence in the United States today.

To be a young, poor male; to be undereducated and without means of escape from an oppressive urban environment; to want what the society claims is available (but mostly to others); to see around oneself illegitimate and often violent methods being used to achieve material gain; and to observe others using these means with impunity—all this is to be burdened with an enormous set of influences that pull many toward crime and delinquency. To be also a Negro, Puerto Rican or Mexican-American and subject to discrimination and segregation adds considerably to the pull of these other criminogenic forces.

Safety in our cities requires nothing less than progress in reconstructing urban life. We must meet the 1968 Housing Act's goal of a decent home for every American within a decade. We must take more effective steps to realize the goal, first set in the Employment Act of 1946, of a useful job at a reasonable wage for all who are able to work. We must provide better educational opportunities for all our children. We must act on current recommendations that those American families who cannot care for themselves receive a basic annual income. We must restructure our local governments, restore their fiscal vitality and accomplish a host of other major tasks of the kind discussed in this Report.

* * * * *

As these brief introductory comments indicate, we believe that the twin objectives of the social order must be to make violence both unnecessary and unrewarding. To make violence unnecessary, our institutions must be capable of providing justice for all who live under them—of giving all a satisfactory stake in the normal life of the community and the nation. To make violence unrewarding, our institutions must be able to control violence when it occurs, and to do so firmly, fairly, and within the law.

The Preamble of our Constitution does not speak merely of justice or merely of order; it embraces both. Two of the six purposes set forth in the Preamble are to "establish justice" and to "insure domestic tranquility." If we are to succeed in preventing and controlling violence, we must achieve both of these goals.

We are well aware that our recommendations for attaining these objectives—and the recommendations of other national commissions before us—will require far-reaching improvements in our institutions and unprecedented levels of public funding. We adopt as our own the verdict which the Kerner Commission pronounced upon the scope and costs of its recommendations:

> [T]hey neither probe deeper nor demand more

ASSASSINATION ATTEMPTS AGAINST PRESIDENTS & PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

Year	Victim	Assailant and professed or alleged reason	Method of attack and result	Location	Activity of victim at time of attack
1835	Andrew Jackson	Richard Lawrence; declared insane, said Jackson was preventing him from obtaining large sums of money.	pistol, misfired	Washington, D.C.	Attending funeral service in Capitol rotunda
1865	Abraham Lincoln	John W. Booth; loyalty to the Confederacy, revenge for defeat, slavery issue.	pistol, killed	Washington, D.C.	Attending theatrical performance in Ford Theatre
1881	James Garfield	Charles Guiteau; disgruntled office-seeker, supporter of opposite faction of Republican Party.	pistol, killed	Washington, D.C.	Passing through train station to go on vacation
1901	William McKinley	Leon F. Czolgosz; anarchist ideology	pistol, killed	Buffalo, N.Y.	Standing in reception line at Pan-American Exposition
1912	Theodore Roosevelt (Candidate)	John Schrank; declared insane, had vision that McKinley wanted him to avenge his death.	pistol, wounded	Milwaukee, Wisc.	Leaving hotel to deliver a campaign speech
1933	Franklin D. Roosevelt (President-Elect)	Guiseppe Zangara; hated rulers and capitalists.	pistol, bullets missed the President	Miami, Fla.	Leaving after delivering speech in Bayside Park
1950	Harry S. Truman	Oscar Collazo and Griselio Torresola; Puerto Rican independence.	automatic weapon, prevented from shooting at President	Washington, D.C.	Inside Blair House as assassins attempted to break in
1963	John F. Kennedy	Lee H. Oswald; motive unknown.	rifle, killed	Dallas, Tex.	Taking part in motorcade through Dallas streets
1968	Robert F. Kennedy (Candidate)	Sirhan Sirhan; opposition to U.S. mid-East policy.	pistol, killed	Los Angeles, Calif.	Leaving primary campaign headquarters through hotel kitchen after delivering speech than the problems which called them forth. There can be no higher priority for national action and no higher claim on the nation's conscience.

Source: Task Force Report, Assassination and Political Violence (National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence, October, 1969)

For the past three decades, the primary concerns of the federal government have been the national defense, the conduct of wars and foreign affairs, the growth of the economy, and, more recently, the conquest of space. These problems have consumed the major part of the public attention. They currently devour more than two-thirds of federal expenditures and approximately 50 percent of federal, state, and local expenditures combined.

Traditionally we have left the problems of social justice, provision of essential community services, and law enforcement primarily to the states and cities. In recent years, the federal government has made some major efforts in diverse fields such as rural development, civil rights, medical care, housing, employment, and education, but these efforts have been subordinated to the claims of the "national security."

Yet the federal government still collects the lion's share (about 65 percent) of all tax receipts. Tax revenue available to the states and cities falls woefully below what is needed to discharge their responsibilities. Each one percent rise in the Gross National Product increases the income of the federal government by one and one-half percent, while the normal income of state and city governments increases by less than half that percentage. Concentrating on "national" and international problems at the expense of "local" and domestic concerns has left us with an enormous deficit of unmet social needs and deeply-felt social injustices.

Ironically, this gap has appeared despite rapidly accelerating technological, economic and social gains. For the first time in man's history, this nation is nearing the capability of releasing all citizens from the poverty and social privation that hitherto have been accepted as the inevitable lot of mankind. We have also achieved an enormous capacity to communicate: the poor, the black, and other deprived groups among us can see daily on their television sets what they are missing, and how near their release from bondage can be. But our institutions have not yet made it possible for an expectant populace to achieve what our economy and technology are becoming capable of providing.

In our judgment, the time is upon us for a reordering of national priorities and for a greater investment of resources in the fulfillment of two basic purposes of our Constitution—to "establish justice" and to "insure domestic tranquility."

* * * * *

We solemnly declare our conviction that this nation is entering a period in which our people need to be as concerned by the internal dangers to our free society as by any probable combination of external threats. We recognize that substantial amounts of funds cannot be transferred from sterile war purposes to more productive ones until our participation in the Vietnam war is ended. We also recognize that to make our society essentially free of poverty and discrimination, and to make our sprawling urban areas fit to inhabit, will cost a great deal of money and will take a great length of time. We believe, however, that we can and should make a major decision now to reassess our national priorities by placing these objectives in the first rank of the nation's goals.

The decision that has the greatest effect on the level of our expenditures for these objectives is what we decide to spend on the national defense. For three decades, the national defense has ranked first by far in our scale of priorities, much of the time necessarily so. With occasional exceptions, whatever the Administration has requested for the Armed Forces has been readily granted. Since 1939 there have been a number of occasions when the Administration's budget requests for the Armed Forces have been exceeded by Congressional appropriations; for most other

FIREARMS

1. TOTAL NUMBER OF FIREARMS IN CIVILIAN HANDS (U.S. 1968)

2. ANNUAL INCREASE IN NUMBER OF FIREARMS IN CIVILIAN HANDS (U.S. 1962 vs. 1968)

RIFLES:	1962, 0.7 MILLION	1968, 1.4 MILLION
SHOTGUNS:	1962, 0.7 MILLION	1968, 1.4 MILLION
HANDGUNS:	1962, 0.6 MILLION	1968, 2.5 MILLION
TOTAL:	1962, 2.1 MILLION	1968, 5.3 MILLION

3. CRIMINAL USES OF FIREARMS (U.S. 1964 vs. 1967)

HOMICIDES:	1964, 55% WITH FIREARMS	1967, 63% WITH FIREARMS
AGGRAVATED ASSAULTS:	1964, 15% WITH FIREARMS	1967, 21% WITH FIREARMS
ROBBERIES:	1964, NOT AVAILABLE	1967, 37% WITH FIREARMS

4. DEADLINESS OF FIREARMS ATTACK VS. KNIFE ATTACKS (U.S. 1967)

FIREARMS ATTACKS RESULTING IN DEATH: 12.8%
KNIFE ATTACKS RESULTING IN DEATH: 2.9%

FIREARMS ATTACKS ARE THUS 4.4 TIMES AS DEADLY AS KNIFE ATTACKS.

5. TYPE OF GUN USED IN CRIMES COMMITTED WITH FIREARMS (LARGE U.S. CITIES 1967)

Source: Task Force Report, Firearms and Violence in American Life (National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence, July, 1969).

federal programs the opposite is true. For example, actual appropriations for the general welfare (health, labor, education, housing, pollution, and law enforcement) are currently running more than five billion dollars annually below the amounts previously authorized by the Congress.

Our Commission is not competent to recommend a specific level of national defense expenditures. We recognize that without the deterrent capability essential for security against external attack, internal freedom and security would not be possible. It is to be expected that our military leaders will, like other government officials, stress the extreme urgency of the programs under their charge. But we believe the time has come to question whether expenditures for the general welfare should continue to be subordinated to those for national defense.

Defense expenditures, stated in 1968 prices, fell from about 78 billion dollars in 1953 (at the end of the Korean War) to about 60 billion dollars in 1954 and remained at that level for the decade 1955 to 1964. But by 1968 they had risen again to the present 81 billion dollar level as the result of our major commitment of troops to Vietnam.*

Federal expenditures for the general welfare, while they have increased substantially over the past several years, are now approximately 60 billion dollars, of which $25 billion represents social security payments.

As a first step, we should try to reverse this relationship. When our participation in the Vietnam War is concluded, we recommend increasing annual general welfare expenditures by about 20 billion dollars (stated in 1968 dollars), partly by reducing military expenditures and partly by use of increased tax revenues resulting from the growth of the Gross National Product. We suggest this only as an initial goal; as the Gross National Product and tax revenues continue to rise, we should strive to keep military expenditures level (in constant dollars), while general welfare expenditures should continue to increase until essential social goals are achieved.*

* For fiscal 1970, the budgeted figure is $77 billion.

Based on estimates of the Council of Economic Advisers, the funds needed to achieve this goal without inflationary consequences could be obtained from two sources:

(1) The end of the Vietnam war should reduce defense expenditures by 19 billion dollars annually. The Council anticipates that this reduction will be offset in part by war-end program adjustments and deferred weapons programs. Hence, defense expenditures should go down to about 65 billion dollars (at 1968 prices).†

(2) The Gross National Product is expected to increase over the next decade (in constant dollars) at the rate of about four percent a year. The same should be true of federal tax revenues, which should grow in

---

* Some experts believe that since military expenditures were successfully held to an annual level of 60 billion dollars (in 1968 prices) for the decade from 1955 to 1964, a comparable plateau can and should be maintained for the decade of the seventies. Indeed, it has been urged that, assuming the success of strategic arms limitation talks and a reevaluation of our foreign commitments, it would be feasible to hold the military budget for the early 1970s to 50 billion dollars (at 1969 prices). See Kaysen. "Military Strategy, Military Forces and Arms Control," in Agenda for the Nation (Washington, D.C.: Brookings Institution, 1969), p. 549.

 Annual Report of the Council of Economic Advisers, January, 1969, pp. 199-200.

† At estimated 1972 prices, for example, actual outlays would be 73 billion. At this point, defense expenditures would be at seven percent of forecast GNP, as compared to perhaps eight percent at present. In other industrially advanced democratic countries, according to the Institute for Strategic Studies, defense expenditures (in 1966) were 6.4 percent of GNP for the United Kingdom, 4.4 percent in France, 3.6 percent in West Germany, 3.3 percent in Italy, 2.2 percent in Canada and 1.1 percent in Japan. For Soviet Russia, the estimated figure is 8.9 percent, but this represents a total 1966 defense outlay of less than 30 billion dollars as compared to about 68 billion dollars for the United States.

real terms at an annual increment of approximately 15 billion dollars.* Of this amount, approximately half will be required to meet expected annual increases for "baseline" federal non-defense expenditures other than general welfare programs. Hence, about seven or eight billion dollars more each year than the preceding year should be available for new and expanded programs in the general welfare field.

Whether somewhat more or less than the amounts we have indicated should be provided to overcome social ills is not the important point. What is important is that the people of this nation recognize both the possibilities and the need for choice. For an entire generation, we have necessarily been more aware of and responsive to the external dangers to our society than to the internal dangers. In this Commission's opinion, the internal dangers now demand a greater awareness and a more substantial response—one that can only be made if we face the need to reorder our priorities. It is time to balance the risks and precautions we take abroad against those we take here at home.

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare has made a suggestion which merits careful consideration as a potentially valuable supplemental step toward reordering national priorities, namely, the preparation of an "Annual Social Report."† The Annual Social Report, comparable

---

* This estimate assumes that the present 10 percent surcharge will have been repealed, but that other tax reform measures will be neutral in their effect on aggregate revenues. Any substantial reduction in federal tax revenues incidental to tax reform will make it more difficult to reorder our priorities as we have proposed.

 We further note that the same point can be strongly made for other non-military categories of expenditure that have been built into the federal budget, including agricultural and maritime subsidies, the postal service as presently structured, and space exploration. See Schultze, "Budget Alternatives After Vietnam" in Agenda for the Nation (Brookings, 1969), p. 44.

† Toward a Social Report, Government Printing Office, 1969.

to the present Annual Economic Report, would provide us with a set of measurements—of "social indicators"—on how well we have done in providing housing, education, health care, public safety, and opportunities for the upward advancement of all sectors of our population. It would tell us whether the disadvantaged groups among us have been advancing at a rate sufficient to foster hope and to quiet the desperation that drives men to violence. It would significantly aid the nation and its leaders in establishing national priorities.

The Social Report would be prepared by social scientists recruited for stated periods of public service from among the nation's best scholars, just as the members and staff of the Council of Economic Advisers are today. They could be organized as a Council of Social Advisers, as are the Economic Advisers, or in some other visible and independent form. A major function of the social science staff would be to develop tools for measuring the comparative effectiveness of social programs. While we have learned a good deal about social stresses and the gross causative factors that require correction, we still know very little about whether particular remedial programs work at all, which ones work better than others, and why. We lack practicable means for measuring cost-benefit ratios, for establishing and observing parallel programs with significant variables, and for putting an end to programs which have failed to justify their continuance.* A central staff charged with this responsibility could do much to improve the accuracy of our social planning and the efficacy of ongoing programs.

Two decades ago, the Council of Economic Advisers was created by the Full Employment Act of 1946, amid much skepticism about the "science" of economics and particularly about the wisdom and effect of governmental efforts to stimulate or restrain economic activity. Today we recognize the importance of the government's economic role and of national economic measurements, imprecise and imperfect as the economist's tools still are. The other social sciences may now have as much potential for informing wise government policy as economics had twenty years ago.

---

* Daniel P. Moynihan, Maximum Feasible Misunderstanding (New York: MacMillan, 1968), pp. 190-203.

* * * * *

In a democratic society, the citizens possess the basic social power, and national priorities reflect the value judgments of the majority. Skeptics may thus take a pessimistic view of this Commission's recommendation that our national priorities be reordered. They will point, for example, to the reluctance of the public, despite the penetrating reports and the excellent recommendations of previous presidential commissions, to take the comprehensive actions needed to curb crime, eliminate racial discrimination, and alleviate the problems of the ghetto poor. They will point especially to middle-class America—to the "forgotten American"—and his concern over some consequences of racial integration, his rebellion against rising taxes, his distrust of dissent on the campus and protest movements in the capital. How realistic is it, they will ask, to think that the majority of Americans will support a reallocation of our national resources to deal with social problems?

Skepticism is understandable. But the majority of Americans have always responded constructively to national crises when they have been fully informed and responsibly led. The "silent majority," like most other Americans, do not wish to surrender any of the most important freedoms of our open society—freedom of movement, freedom from harm, freedom from fear. They stand to benefit from the programs necessary to retain these freedoms just as much as any disadvantaged minority. All Americans—the majority and our various minorities—must come to grips with the basic causes of violence in our society and do what must be done to achieve liberty and justice for all.

Some, with little faith in our nation, predict that majority indifference will result in a violent revolution of some kind.

Indeed, nihilists and anarchists openly espouse this course. We see signs, however, that a peaceful revolution is already under way: a spirit of needed reform is rising steadily among the people and in the ranks of local and national leaders. We see a growing readiness to formulate new values, to set new priorities, and to make firm commitments now, to be honored as soon as resources are available.

Some ordinary citizens feel they can do nothing to influence the direction and the destiny of their nation. But more and more Americans are proving this to be a myth. A growing number of our citizens have found they need not stand idle while our cities rot, people live in fear, householders build individual fortresses, and human and financial resources flow to less urgent endeavors. A new generation of Americans is emerging, with the energy and the talent and the determination to fulfill the promise of the nation. As it ever was, the young—idealistic but earnest, inexperienced but dedicated—are the spearheads of the drive toward change, and increasing numbers of adult Americans are joining their ranks.

When in man's long history other great civilizations fell, it was less often from external assault than from internal decay. Our own civilization has shown a remarkable capacity for responding to crises and for emerging to higher pinnacles of power and achievement. But our most serious challenges to date have been external—the kind this strong and resourceful country could unite against. While serious external dangers remain, the graver threats today are internal: haphazard urbanization, racial discrimination, disfiguring of the environment, unprecedented interdependence, the dislocation of human identity and motivation created by an affluent society—all resulting in a rising tide of individual and group violence.

The greatness and durability of most civilizations has been finally determined by how they have responded to these challenges from within. Ours will be no exception.

Summary of Recommendations

THE COMMISSION RECOMMENDS—

Introduction

1. that "the time is upon us for a reordering of national priorities and for a greater investment of resources in the fulfillment of two basic purposes of our Constitution—to establish justice and to insure domestic tranquility."
2. that "when our participation in the Vietnam War is concluded, we recommend increasing annual general welfare expenditures by about 20 billion dollars (stated in 1968 dollars), partly by reducing military expenditures and partly by use of increased tax revenues resulting from the growth of the Gross National Product."
3. that "as the Gross National Product and tax revenues continue to rise, we should strive to keep military expenditures level (in constant dollars), while general welfare expenditures should continue to increase until essential social goals are achieved."
4. that, to aid in the reordering of national priorities, consideration should be given to establishing a counterpart of the Council of Economic Advisers to develop tools for measuring the comparative effectiveness of social programs, and to produce an "Annual Social Report," comparable to the present Annual Economic Report.

Chapter II.
Violent Crime

5. that "we double our national investment in the criminal justice process, that central offices of criminal justice be created at the metropolitan level, and that complementary private citizen groups be formed." (See Chaper 6 for detail.)
6. that cities provide "increased day and night foot-patrols of slum ghetto areas by interracial police teams, in order to discourage street crime against both blacks and whites; improved street lighting to deprive criminals of hiding places from which to ambush victims; increase in numbers and use of community neighborhood centers that provide activity so that city streets are not deserted in early evening hours."

7. that cities undertake "increased police-community relations activity in slum ghetto areas in order to secure greater understanding of ghetto residents by police, and of police by ghetto residents."
8. that there be "further experimentation with carefully controlled programs that provide low cost drugs such as methadone to addicts who register, so that addicts are not compelled to resort to robbery and burglary in order to meet the needs of their addiction; increased education about the dangers of addictives and other drugs in order to reduce their use."
9. that we devise means of "identification of specific violence-prone individuals for analysis and treatment in order to reduce the likelihood of repetition; provision of special schools for education of young people with violence-prone histories, special psychiatric services and employment programs for parolees and released offenders with a history of violent criminal acts."
10. that "concealable handguns, a common weapon used in violent crimes, must be brought under a system of restrictive licensing." (See Chaper 7 for detail.)
11. that we "meet the 1968 Housing Act's goal of a decent home for every American within a decade."
12. that we "take more effective steps to realize the goal, first set in the Employment Act of 1946, of a useful job for all who are able to work."
13. that the Congress "act on current proposals that the federal government pay a basic income to those American families who cannot care for themselves."
14. that "a more sophisticated understanding and appreciation of the complexity of the urban social system is required—and this will in turn require the development of new, dependable and lasting partnerships between government, private industry, social and cultural associations and organized groups of affected citizens."
15. that "the President might profitably convene an Urban Convention of delegates from all the states and major cities, as well as the national government, to advise the nation on the steps that should be taken to increase urban efficiency and accountability through structural changes in local government."

16. that "a primary object of federal urban policy must be to restore the fiscal vitality of urban government, with the particular object of ensuring that local governments normally have enough resources on hand or available to make local initiative in public affairs a reality."
17. that "federal urban policy should seek to equalize the provision of public services as among different jurisdictions in metropolitan areas."
18. that the federal government "assert a specific interest in the movement of people, displaced by technology or driven by poverty, from rural to urban areas, and also in the movement from densely populated central cities to suburban areas."
19. that the federal government must work with state governments to encourage a more progressive, responsible exercise of the state role in the management of urban affairs.
20. that the federal government should "sponsor and subsequently evaluate alternative—in a sense 'competing'—approaches to problems whose methods of solution are imperfectly understood, as is increasingly being done in the areas of medical and legal services for the poor and educational assistance for disadvantaged children."
21. that the federal government should "provide more and better information concerning urban affairs, and should sponsor extensive and sustained research into urban problems."
22. that the federal government discourage further "unrestrained technological exploitation of the resources of land, air and water" and take the lead in encouraging and acting consistently with "a new conservation ethic more appropriate to a crowded urban society."

Chapter III.
Group Violence

23. that "those of us who find authoritarianism repugnant have a duty to speak out against all who destroy civil order. The time has come when the full weight of community opinion should be felt by those who break the peace or coerce through mob action."
24. that "when group violence occurs, it must be put down by lawful means, including the use of whatever force may be required. But when it occurs—better still, before it occurs—we must permit aggrieved groups to exercise their rights of protest and public presentation of grievances; we must have the perception to recognize injustices when they are called to our attention, and we must have the institutional flexibility to correct those injustices promptly."

25. that police departments throughout the nation "improve their preparations for anticipating, preventing and controlling group disorders, and to that end to study the approaches that have been employed successfully on the three most recent occasions in Washington and Chicago."
26. that "the President seek legislation that would confer jurisdiction upon the United States District Courts to grant injunctions, upon the request of the Attorney General or private persons, against the threatened or actual interference by any person, whether or not under color of state or federal law, with the rights of individuals or groups to freedom of speech, freedom of the press, peaceful assembly and petition for redress of grievances."
27. that "private and governmental institutions encourage the development of competing news media and discourage increased concentration of control over existing media."
28. that "the members of the journalism profession continue to improve and re-evaluate their standards and practices, and to strengthen their capacity for creative self-criticism, along the lines suggested in the staff report of our Media Task Force."

Chapter V.
Assassination

29. that there be a "selective expansion of the functions of the Secret Service to include protection of any federal officeholder or candidate who is deemed a temporary but serious assassination risk."
30. that state and local governments provide "improved protection of state and local officeholders and candidates, and strengthened ties between those holding this responsibility and the appropriate federal agencies."
31. that Congress enact legislation requiring the restrictive licensing of handguns. (See Chapter 7 for detail.)
32. that the federal government encourage the "development and implementation of devices to detect concealed weapons and ammunition on persons entering public meeting places."
33. that the President (and presidential candidates) minimize the risk of assassination "by carefully choosing speaking opportunities, public appearances, his means of travel to engagements, and the extent to which he gives advance notice of his movements."
34. that the Congress enact "a law that would grant free television time to presidential candidates during the final weeks preceding the national election" in the interest of the safety of Presidents and presidential candidates.

35. that the news media clearly present the complexities of the institutions of government, fully and fairly report the issues these institutions face, and delve into the issues deserving governmental attention.
36. that the news media lessen the attention given to the personal lives of the President and his family and give greater attention to the working nature and limitations of the presidency.
37. that the nation's schools emphasize in American history and social studies the complexities and subtleties of the democratic process; shun the myths by which we have traditionally made supermen of Presidents, "founding fathers," and other prominent persons; and restore to history books a full and frank picture of violence and unrest in America's past, in the hope that children can be educated to repudiate violence and recognize its futility.

Chapter VI.
Violence and Law Enforcement

38. that "the Legal Services Program of the Office of Economic Opportunity, which already has won the strong support of the organized Bar and the enthusiasm of graduating law students across the country, should be continued and expanded."
39. that all states "should provide compensation to attorneys appointed to represent indigent criminal defendants in the state and local courts."
40. that the federal government and the states "should provide adequate compensation for lawyers who act in behalf of the poor in civil cases."
41. that the federal government "allocate seed money to a limited number of state and local jurisdictions demonstrating an interest in establishing citizens' grievance agencies."
42. that there should be "extension and vigorous enforcement of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, and intensified efforts to persuade all qualified citizens to vote."
43. that "we should give concrete expression to our concern about crime by a solemn national commitment to double our investment in the administration of justice and the prevention of crime, as rapidly as such an investment can be wisely planned and utilized."
44. that "the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and the state planning agencies created pursuant to the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act take the lead in initiating plans for the creation and staffing of offices of criminal justice in the nation's major metropolitan areas."

45. that we should create and support, with private and public funding, "private citizens' organizations to work as counterparts of the proposed offices of criminal justice in every major city in the nation."
46. that "the President call upon leading private citizens to create a National Citizens Justice Center."

Chapter VII.
Firearms and Violence

47. that the National Rifle Association and other private organizations devoted to hunting and sport shooting aid in undertaking a public education campaign to "stress the duties and responsibilities of firearms ownership so that a new awareness of the proper role of firearms in American life can prevail in the more than 30 million homes which possess firearms."
48. that because of the risks of firearms accidents, individual citizens "reflect carefully before deciding that loaded firearms are necessary or desirable for self-defense in their homes."
49. that "further research be undertaken on the relationships between firearms and violence and on the measures that can reduce firearms violence."
50. that "research should be intensified on devices to assist law enforcement personnel in detecting the presence of concealed firearms on the person."
51. that "the federal government should join with private industry to speed the development of an effective nonlethal weapon."
52. that federal legislation be enacted "to encourage the establishment of state licensing systems for handguns. The federal legislation would introduce a federal system of handgun licensing, applicable only to those states which within a four-year period fail to enact a state law that (1) establishes a standard for determining an individual's need for a handgun and for the licensing of an individual who shows such a need and (2) prohibits all others from possessing handguns or buying handgun ammunition."
53. that "a system of federal administrative or judicial review be established to assure that each state system is administered fairly and does not discriminate on the basis of race, religion, national origin, or other unconstitutional grounds."

54. that federal legislation be enacted "to establish minimum standards for state regulation of long guns under which (1) an identification card would be required for long gun owners and purchasers of long gun ammunition (a system similar to that recommended by gun manufacturers) and (2) any person 18 and over would be entitled to such a card, except certain classes of criminals and adjudicated incompetents."
55. that "persons who transfer long guns be required to fill out a single card giving the serial number, type, make, and model of the weapon, the transferee's social security and firearms identification card numbers, the transferor's name and social security number, and the date of the transaction."
56. that "the Gun Control Act of 1968, which is intended to curtail the import of firearms unsuitable for sporting use, should be extended to prohibit domestic production and sale of 'junk guns.' "
57. that "a federal firearms information center should be established to accumulate and store information on firearms and owners received from state agencies; this information would be available to state and federal law enforcement agencies."
58. that "licensed gun dealers should be required by federal statute to adopt and maintain security procedures to minimize theft of firearms."

Chapter VIII.
Violence in Television Entertainment Programs

59. that "the broadcasting of children's cartoons containing serious, non-comic violence should be abandoned."
60. that "the amount of time devoted to the broadcast of crime, western and action-adventure programs containing violent episodes should be reduced."
61. that "more effective efforts should be made to alter the basic context in which violence is presented in television dramas."
62. that "the members of the television industry should become more actively and seriously involved in research on the effects of violent television programs, and their future policies, standards and practices with regard to entertainment programs should be more responsive to the best evidence provided by social scientists, psychologists, and communications researchers."

63. that "adequate and permanent financing, in the form of a dedicated tax, should be provided for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting so that it may develop the kind of educational, cultural, and dramatic programming not presently provided in sufficient measure by commercial broadcasting."
64. that "parents should make every effort to supervise their children's television viewing and to assert their basic responsibility for the moral development of their children."
65. that parents "should express to the networks and to the local stations both their disapproval of programs which they find objectionable and their support for programs they like. We believe that most families do not want large doses of violence on television, and thus we urge them to make the weight of their opinion felt."
66. that there be "an evaluation of the effectiveness of the new movie-rating system with an emphasis on the question of the validity of the ratings as they relate to violence and the enforcement of the admission standards regarding minors."

Chapter IX.
Campus Disorder

67. that in "the university community a consensus should be achieved among students, faculty and administration, and embodied in a code of conduct, concerning both the permissible methods of presenting ideas, proposals and grievances and the responses to be made to deviations from the agreed-upon standards."
68. that "universities should prepare and currently review contingency plans for dealing with campus disorders."
69. that procedures for campus governance and constructive reform should be developed especially by the faculties, to permit more rapid and effective decision-making.
70. that "faculty leaders and administrative officers need to make greater efforts to improve communications both on the campus and with alumni and the general public."
71. that the American people do not let their understandable resentment for the few students who foment and engage in campus disorders lead them to support legislation or executive action which would withhold financial aid from students or universities.
72. that the American people recognize that the campus is a mirror of the "yearnings and weaknesses of the wider society" and that their focus ought to be on "the unfinished task of striving toward the goals of human life that all of us share and that young people admire and respect."

Chapter X.
Challenging Our Youth

73. that "the Constitution of the United States be amended to lower the voting age for all state and federal elections to eighteen."
74. that there be implementation of all of "President Nixon's proposals for reform of the draft system, which are similar to those recommended in 1967 by the Marshall Commission and by the Clark Panel."
75. that "renewed attention be given to the recommendations of the Marshall Commission for building a greater measure of due process into the exercise of draft board discretion."
76. that "in exercising his power to appoint the members of local draft boards, the President name at least one person under 30 years of age to each local board."
77. that the President "seek legislation to expand the opportunities for youth to engage in both full-time and part-time public service, by providing federal financial support to young people who wish to engage in voluntary, non-military service to their communities and to the nation."
78. that "the President, the Congress, and the federal agencies that normally provide funding for youth programs—notably the Office of Economic Opportunity, the Department of Labor, and the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare—take the risks involved in support of additional innovative programs of opportunity for inner-city youth."
79. that "the National Institutes of Health, working with selected universities, greatly expand research on the physical and psychological effects of marijuana use."
80. that "federal and state laws make use and incidental possession of marijuana no more than a misdemeanor until more definitive information about marijuana is at hand and the Congress and state legislatures have had the opportunity to revise the permanent laws in light of this information."
81. that all our citizens, young and old, try to bridge the "generation gap" by observing the guidelines for understanding and communicating with one another as set forth in Chapter 10.

(listing continued from reverse side)

National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice
1307 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. 60605

National Conference of Christians and Jews
43 West 57 Street, New York, N.Y. 10019

National Council of Catholic Women
1312 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C. 20005

National Council of Jewish Women
1 West 47 Street, New York, N.Y. 10036

National Council of Negro Women
1346 Connecticut Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C. 20036

National Council on Crime & Delinquency
44 East 23 Street, New York, N.Y. 10010

National Urban League, Inc.
55 East 52 Street, New York, N.Y. 10022

Scholarship, Education and Defense Fund for Racial Equality, Inc.
164 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, NW, Atlanta, Ga. 30303

United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers of America
8000 East Jefferson Avenue, Detroit, Mich. 48214

United Church of Christ
Council for Christian Social Action and Commission for Racial Justice
289 Park Avenue S., New York, N.Y. 10010

United Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO
300 Park Avenue S., New York, N.Y. 10010

United Methodist Church, Board of Christian Social Concerns
100 Maryland Avenue, NE, Washington, D.C. 20002

United Methodist Church, Women's Division, Board of Missions
475 Riverside Drive, New York, N.Y. 10027

U.S. Conference of Mayors
1612 K Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20006

United Steelworkers of America
1500 Commonwealth Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15222

United Synagogue of America
3080 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10027

The Urban Coalition
2100 M Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20037

YMCA, National Board, Urban Action Commission
291 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10007

YWCA, National Board, Bureau of Communications
600 Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022

Published as a public service by:*

A. Philip Randolph Institute
217 West 125 Street, New York, N.Y. 10027

Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, AFL-CIO
15 Union Square, New York, N.Y. 10003

American Civil Liberties Union
156 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10010

American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO
1155 15 Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20005

American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO District Council 37
71 Worth Street, New York, N.Y. 10013

American Federation of Teachers
1012 14 Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20005

American Jewish Committee
165 East 56 Street, New York, N.Y. 10022

American Jewish Congress
15 East 84 Street, New York, N.Y. 10028

Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith
315 Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016

Apostolate of Human Relations, Archdiocese of New York
487 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022

Brotherhood in Action, Inc.
560 Seventh Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10018

International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, AFL-CIO
1710 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10019

International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, AFL-CIO
1126 16 Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20036

National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
1790 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10019

(listing continued on reverse side)

Additional copies of this Summary may be obtained from any of the organizations above at 25¢ each and $15 per hundred.

*Reprinted from Award Books edition of To Establish Justice, To Insure Domestic Tranquility, available at $1.25. For quantity prices write Award Books, 235 E. 45 St., N.Y., N.Y. 10017.

PRESS COVERAGE
of
THE FEDERAL EXECUTIVE AND CIVIL RIGHTS

The Federal Executive and Civil Rights was released to the press January 30, 1961, after having been previously submitted to President Kennedy and members of his administration.

The press coverage has been heartening, and it seemed to the staff that members of the Council would wish to know about it. Consequently, this summary, with exhibits, has been prepared.

The New York Times gave the report front page treatment, in an article under the by-line of Claude Sitton. Several Southern papers used the Times story; these included: Chattanooga Times, Houston Chronicle, and Corpus Christi Caller. The Chattanooga Times ran the story on page one, and even added to it.

PRESIDENT PUSHED ON DESEGREGATION BY SOUTHERN BODY

Chattanooga Times

1-30-61

Regional Council Proposes Major Program in Field of Civil Rights

TO AID NEGRO STATUS

Report Touches on Jobs, Education, Voting and Armed Services

By CLAUDE SITTON
© New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — The Southern Regional Council has urged President Kennedy to adopt a sweeping program of executive action in the civil rights field.

In a 48-page report to the President, the council makes 18 proposals for strengthening the rights of Negroes. It is thought to be the most far-reaching blueprint of its kind yet received by the new administration.

"The presidency is the center of American energy," the council noted. "What the President says and does will mark the direction and the speed with which the country moves to perfect its racial relations."

The council also urged that President Kennedy move swiftly to give a public statement on the national goals his administration will set in the civil rights field. In contrast to past performances, the council suggested, the White House should frequently issue guiding statements "genuinely helpful to public understanding" in this area since "the nation as a whole needs to feel the impulse of presidential concern and activity."

Areas Covered

The report's proposals cover executive leadership, federal employment, education, personal and property rights, voting, the armed services, propaganda, health and recreation, transportation, government contracts and housing.

"The President holds power under the constitution and existing statutes which, diligently exercised, could carry the country far toward racial relations that are sane and honorable," the council argued.

The council called on President Kennedy to make it unmistakably clear to the South where he stands on matters of racial discrimination and to underscore specific policy statements that his administration is prepared to enforce.

It also urged the President to give consideration to holding frequent consultations, private or public, with Southern economic and political leaders to the end of wooing regional support for equal opportunities for all citizens and the abatement of sectionalism.

There are millions of Southerners, white and Negro, who want to "break loose from enfeebling customs and who would respond with gratitude to presidential leadership," the council declared. In consequence, it said, "an earnest, informed and tactful effort should be made to reduce antagonisms and enlist Southern good will and cooperation."

Ideas Transmitted

The proposals, entitled "The Federal Executive and Civil Rights," were transmitted to President Kennedy, his Cabinet and chief advisers before the inauguration. They were released Sunday by the Atlanta headquarters of the council, an organization of white and Negro Southerners formed in 1944 to advance "equal opportunity for all the South's people."

Harold C. Fleming, executive director, noted that there had been indications that President Kennedy would approach civil rights "with somewhat more vigor" than previous administrations. "As a Southern organization that had worked with the problem of race relations, we felt we had a re-

See Page Seven, Column Six

KENNEDY PUSHED ON RACE ISSUES

Regional Council Proposes Major Program in Field of Civil Rights

From Page One

sponsibility to give our thinking on the question to the new administration."

The council advocated clarity of policy, "inward commitment," imaginative action and sustained effort to achieve definite civil rights goals. "A new administration cannot give itself a civil rights policy, tie it together, and expect its unwinding over the years to satisfy the problems that will arise," it asserted.

Not Minimized

Discussion of personal as opposed to official presidential activities was omitted. But the council said "their importance is in no degree minimized." It continued:

"Since the presidency is a focal point of American interest, all of the acts of an occupant of that office receive national attention and thus set an example for millions of Americans."

Appointment of a staff adviser on race relations was recommended. He would assist the President in interpreting developments to the nation, in framing and supervising executive orders and providing "intimate coordination" between the federal Civil Rights Commission and the Justice Department.

The council criticized as inadequate the present executive committees on government employment and contracts. These should be replaced with a single agency, it said. That agency would serve as a watchdog "to review the execution of all governmental programs and expenditure of all government funds, for compliance with the policy of nondiscrimination."

The importance of outspoken presidential leadership was emphasized. "Controversy and conflict are only worsened when there is any arguable doubt of the belief and intentions of the chief executive," said the document.

Frankness Urged

The United States Information Agency should be candid in explaining our racial difficulties, it said. "We should relate them frankly, as a people mindful of its troubles and working, as are the former colonial nations themselves, to remove them."

The council charged that Civil Service prohibitions against discrimination were being flouted. It proposed "prompt suppression of segregation wherever it may be practiced in federal offices."

The President was asked to choose deliberately competent Negroes for appointive positions. Moreover, the organization said some should be placed in the South, "which needs to get used to the idea of Negro competence and recognition."

The most compelling unfinished business, asserted the council, is school integration. "The basic problem is two-fold: to reestablish a climate of respect for law, and to move quickly beyond the pitiful beginnings and steadily toward an end to desegregated public education."

President Kennedy was urged to affirm publicly his full support for the Supreme Court's 1954 desegregation decision. The council also said he should direct the attorney general to study the possibility of intervening in school desegregation cases under the present laws.

Obligation Noted

While turmoil over school desegregation continues, it declared, "the Department of Justice has an obligation to enforce vigilantly the existing statues which protect personal security."

Stepped up enforcement of voting laws was called for along with "a national registration drive, under the personal sponsorship of the President."

The council advocated immediate desegregation of the National Guard. Because Southern units are all white, it said, Negroes are denied the option of enlisting in the guard or being drafted.

Federal expenditures for health programs, aid to public schools and higher education and for recreation facilities such as beaches should be administered in line with a basic policy of non-discrimination, the council said.

The council proposed "a final, decisive effort" to end segregation on common carriers. It said large contractors on government projects should be required to recruit Negro employes.

An end to cooperation with discrimination in federal-state ap-

The New York Times also carried a profile of Harold Fleming as its "Man in the News" for the day; this was used in the Chattanooga Times as well.

The Washington Post and Times-Herald ran a front page story (by-line Elsie Carper) and an inside page analysis by James Clayton.

Race Study Urges Use Of Executive's Power

By Elsie Carper
Staff Reporter

An independent survey suggests that existing presidential powers, "dilligently exercised, could carry the country far toward racial relations that are sane and honorable."

The study, prepared by the Southern Regional Council, a nonprofit organization seeking ways to improve race relations in the South, was published yesterday. The Council has offices in Atlanta.

The 48-page report was issued at a time when President Kennedy's Administration is formulating policies and programs. Broad recommendations on ways the President may use his powers to combat discrimination are outlined in the report.

One of the major recommendations is a presidential staff adviser to keep the President informed on racial matters and to coordinate activities of the Commission on Civil Rights and the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

Long-range view considered best for suggested program of Executive action on civil rights.
Page A6.

The report states that consideration be given to setting up an office, with adequate staff, to serve as a watchdog over Federal programs for compliance with a policy of nondiscrimination.

The Federal Government's own operations, the report declares, need to be a model of just race relations. The Government must hire, fire and promote with obvious regard for racial equality and eradicate segregation in its offices.

While the survey is limited to official activities of the President, the report makes it clear that the President's personal attitudes and actions also are important.

"A President of robust conviction will lose no occasion, however trivial," the report states, "to show by purely personal action his admiration of principles of equality. Such demonstration may be worth fully as much as executive orders and formal pronouncements."

Presidential leadership is defined in the report as "a showing of concern, in all the countless acts of the office, that America be a place where men live with each other in confidence, and society cooperates with each of its members in the fulfilment of his search for a good life."

"There would be inestimable value if the President gave, simply and clearly, a declaration of national intent to move vigorously to end all discrimination and disadvantage of race, and pledge that the Federal Government in the conduct of its own affairs would show the way," the report declares.

The Council points out that race relations is "America's oldest unsolved problem," once again at a stage of crisis. In the past the crises were resolved by compromise, war and from 1877 to 1933 "by national avoidance of responsibility."

See RIGHTS, A7, Col. 1

RIGHTS—From Page A1

Race Unit Asks President's Aid

"This ancient and always divisive issue has a claim on us not only for settlement, but for decisive resolution," the report states. "It is a burden which national self-respect demands that we finally lay down."

Honest dealing by the Government and the public toward non-white citizens, the report declares, would strengthen the prestige of the United States abroad while continuing discrimination will weaken it.

The report states that "Negroes are a disadvantaged tenth of Americans from, literally, the cradle to the grave." America has no undeveloped resource comparable to the reservoir of human talent, which, in the Negro population, is going to waste.

Negroes are not the only minority at a disadvantage and discrimination exists elsewhere than in the South but the racial problems of the South are the acute test of the American ideal of liberty and equality."

The Council finds little in the record to encourage the belief that the situation in the South will improve "unless recognized as the Nation's failure, and properly subject . . . to national policy."

National unity, the report states, will be served best if the President speaks forthrightly about racial problems in the South and if statements are confined to what he and the Administration are prepared to enforce.

In an obvious reference to the recent riots in New Orleans that followed desegregation of two schools, the report makes this veiled criticism of the Eisenhower Administration:

"That a state of near anarchy could exist for weeks in one of our largest cities without any public remark by the Chief Executive is well nigh incredible."

The report declares that within the South there are numerous whites who will give practical, effective support for reform if there is national leadership. Frequent conferences and consultations by the President with Southern economic and political leaders would broaden this base of support.

"Pre-eminently the most compelling unfinished business is school integration," the report states. "Respect for law and Federal authority requires a prompt resolution."

The Council urges the President to "publically reconfirm his full support" of the Supreme Court school desegregation decision and his intention to employ his executive powers to insure compliance.

Throughout the South the burden of desegregating schools has fallen upon Negroes. The Council urges the President to direct the Attorney General to look closely into authorizations he has for initiating or intervening in school desegregation cases.

It also urges the President to direct the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to provide information and counsel to school administrations and schools engaged in desegregation of schools.

The report states that in the field of housing the policies of the Federal Government, through its mortgage credit aids, public housing and slum clearance programs, "has been a principal architect of housing segregation."

The President should issue an executive order stating that the national policy is to encourage integration in housing, the report states. It recommends that the Administration study proposals to reduce the size and increase the number of public housing projects and scatter them in bi-racial and all-white neighborhoods rather than place them in Negro and transition neighborhoods.

The Administration also should consider a system of "benign quotas" in public housing projects to keep them from becoming all Negro or all white.

The Council recognizes that a strict non-discriminatory order for FHA and PHA housing will reduce the number of starts in the South and hamper or halt urban renewal but believes that Southern opposition should not be a deterrent. Benefits of participation in Federal programs have such a powerful attraction that there is every reason to believe that the slowdown will not last long, the Council states.

Other recommendations by the Council:

- Federal employment practices should be reviewed with the aim of immediate compliance with nondiscrimination. Special effort should be made to recruit qualified Negroes for offices concerned with race relations such as United States Attorneys, Federal Bureau of Investigation, United States Marshals, Civil Rights Division, Commission on Civil Rights and housing agencies.
- Negroes should be appointed to the Foreign Service but not restricted to positions in African countries.
- Federal grants in aid for vocational education and research funds should be withheld from schools and colleges which restrict admissions because of race. The Federal Government should insist that public schools attended by children of military personnel be non-segregated.
- Discrimination in the National Guard and in ROTC units in universities should be ended. The President in making appointments to the service academies should give special attention to Negro candidates who are at a disadvantage in receiving Congressional appointments.
- The Department of Justice should "enforce vigilantly" existing statutes and precedents to assure orderly school desegregation and the right of peaceable assembly. Action could prevent violence, reprisal and intimidation surrounding school desegregation, sit-in controversies and Negro voting.
- The Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department should be staffed with an adequate number of attorneys. Working relationships with United States District Attorneys should be so defined to permit widespread enforcement of voting provisions of the 1957 and 1960 Civil Rights Acts.
- The Federal Government should undertake a national registration drive, under sponsorship of the President. A side result would be an upsurge in Negro registration in the South.
- The "separate but equal" clause in Hill-Burton Act funds for Federal aid for hospital construction should be reexamined.
- The Department of Justice should study ways to end discrimination in interstate travel now clearly established as unconstitutional.
- The Federal Government should insist that its contractors follow practices of nondiscriminatory employment. Federal cooperation with discrimination should be ended at once in programs of the Bureau of Apprenticeship and the U. S. Employment Service.

Washington Post and Times Herald 1-30-61

Difficulties Are Many

Long-Range View Held Best For Rights Executive Action

By James E. Clayton
Staff Reporter

The program of Executive action on civil rights suggested by the Southern Regional Council is best thought of as a long-range goal rather than something President John F. Kennedy is likely to put into effect immediately.

Clayton

Although many of its suggestions coincide with campaign promises made by President Kennedy, the political and social difficulties involved in putting even some of those into effect are likely to be deterring factors to the President's program.

The two political factors involved are the strength of the Southern bloc in Congress and importance of the Southern electoral vote to the Democratic Party.

Any proposals which require new civil rights legislation require a weighing of the need for that as against the effect of such a legislative push on other parts of the President's program. Any proposals which rely exclusively on executive action require a weighing of what Southern Congressmen might do in reprisals.

Some of the ideas put forward by the Southern Regional Council would make deep inroads quickly into segregation practices. Action cutting off universities from Federal funds if they segregate would drive some Southern universities to the wall. Action to require desegregated conditions in Federal-supported housing programs would certainly upset some urban renewal programs and many housing developments.

How strong and how deep the political repercussions of such moves would be are certain to be carefully studied before the President takes such steps. It is quite clear that he knows there is no turning back once the step is taken.

It is interesting, however, to note how many of the Southern Regional Council's proposals overlap with President Kennedy's campaign promises. During the campaign, he made these pledges:

- To provide "moral and persuasive leadership . . . to create the conditions in which compliance with the constitutional requirements of school desegregation takes place."
- To make a major effort in 1961 to be sure "that everyone has the right to vote."
- To be prepared "to put an end to racial and religious discrimination in every field of Federal authority. . ."
- To establish a "Federal Bureau on Intergroup Relations to help solve such problems of discrimination.
- To find for the Attorney General "power to enforce all constitutional rights—not just the right to vote."

It can be expected that he will follow through, more or less immediately, on some of these.

One area where such action could come quickly is in housing. An executive order requiring no segregation in federally supported housing programs is all that is required, many legal experts believe, to initiate the program. But the political repercussions of such an order would be legion.

Another area is voting where the next year is likely to see a great increase in the attacks on discrimination at the polls. All the necessary power is already in the hands of the Attorney General

A third area likely to see immediate action is inside the Federal Government. There, the Vice President's Committee on Governmental Contracts is likely to step up its drive to keep contractors who deal with the Government from discriminating in their hiring policies.

With a push from the President, this committee could become far more effective. With the same kind of push, the use of more Negroes in Government jobs would come quickly.

These, then, are the areas in which something is likely to happen in the months ahead. But as to the suggestion which is the key to the Council's report, there may be no action soon.

That is the suggestion calling for an office in the White House to coordinate civil rights activities throughout the Government. This idea was pushed at President Kennedy by many of his advisers last spring.

The closest he came to publicly accepting it was to promise a Bureau of Intergroup Relations. But such a Bureau might require legislation and might be set up away from the White House.

The President's objection, apparently, to a White House office for civil rights is his desire to keep his staff there as small as possible. There has been no clear indication yet as to whether this desire will outweigh the urgings of those near him who want to see such an office created.

On civil rights, as in other fields, the men around President Kennedy have been remarkably reluctant to talk since the election about what will be done in the next few months.

The AP did a straightforward and long account, which cited all 18 of our proposals. Southern newspapers which have carried it in whole or in part include: Birmingham Post-Herald, Mobile Press, Mobile Register, (Ala.); Athens Banner-Herald, Augusta Chronicle, Columbus Ledger, Macon Telegraph, Macon News, Savannah News, Thomasville Times-Enterprise, Valdosta Times (Ga.); New Orleans Times-Picayune, Baton Rouge Advocate, Shreveport Times, Lake Charles American Press (La.); Tampa Times (Fla.); Charlotte News (N.C.); Louisville Courier Journal (Ky.); Oklahoma City Times (Okla.); Dallas Times-Herald, Fort Worth Star-Telegram (Texas); Greenville Delta Democrat-Times, Gulfport Biloxi Herald, McComb Enterprise-Journal, Jackson Clarion Ledger, Starkville News, Vicksburg Post (Miss.).

Atlanta Journal 1-30-61 p. I

Regional Council Urges Kennedy to Fight Race Bias

By DOUGLAS KIKER

The Atlanta-based Southern Regional Council submitted a long report to President John F. Kennedy Monday, urging him to take decisive, far-reaching executive action to end racial segregation and discrimination in nearly all phases of national life.

The report, entitled "The Federal Executive and Civil Rights," proposed that the President "affirm his support of the Supreme Court's 1954 decision and his opposition to segregated schools."

It strongly suggested, additionally, that he act immediately to end segregation in federal housing, the National Guard, and in college-based Reserve Officer Training Corps units.

• • •

IT RECOMMENDED that federal funds for research be cut off to colleges and universities operated on a segregated basis.

It said that the Justice Department should be "vigilant in the prevention or control of violence and intimidation connected with sit-in demonstrations.

And it recommended that the President appoint more qualified Negroes to high level government posts "here and abroad."

The council — a biracial organization whose purpose is to "advance equal opportunity for all the South's people" — said that President Kennedy holds the power to "carry the country far toward good race relations."

"A president of robust conviction will lose no occasion, however trivial, to show by purely personal action his admiration of principles of equality," the report stated.

• • •

THE LISTING of areas in which the council said the President could act was a long one. In all, it made 18 different specific proposals for executive actions aimed toward ending discrimination.

"The President speaks the moral tone of America," the council said. "He has an incomparable position from which to define the problems of our policy and to indicate by word and example what needs to be done."

• • •

IN OTHER proposals included in the report the council also said that:

1. The Department of Justice

Turn to Page 20, Column 1

COUNCIL

Continued From Page 1

should test in court its existing authority to intervene in or initiate school desegregation suits.

2. A presidential staff adviser on race relations should be appointed and a single office created to replace the current Committee on Government Employment and the Government Contract Committee. This new office would review all federal programs to see that no discrimination is practiced in governmental operations.

3. The "separate but equal" clause in the Hill-Burton hospital construction law should be examined for unconstitutionality.

4. A final, decisive effort should be made to end segregation on both interstate and intrastate trains and buses.

5. Large government contractors should be required to recruit Negro employes as a condition for contract award.

6. Special attention to racial equality should be given in federal aid for vocational training and education of children of military personnel.

7. The Civil Rights division of the Justice Department should be "adequately staffed."

8. The President should sponsor a national voter registration drive, supported by a wide distribution of information on voter qualifications and procedures in every state.

9. The U.S. overseas information programs should interpret the country's racial troubles "truthfully and candidly."

10. There should be a continual review of federal employment to insure nondiscrimination, rather than reliance on the processing of complaints.

The report was prepared by the Southern Regional Council staff and reviewed and approved by its officers.

The Atlanta Constitution had an inside page account. The early edition of the Atlanta Journal carried a front page article by Douglas Kiker, which was moved inside in later editions.

The Nashville Tennessean had a top of the page two-column spread on page 2.

The Christian Science Monitor carried a long and comprehensive article under the byline of Joseph Baird.

Senators Hart (Dem., Mich.) and Javitts (Rep., N. Y.) have each read parts of the report into the Congressional Record (January 30 and 31).

Atlanta Dateline N.Y.Times 2-5-61

The latest argument for civil rights comes from the Southern Regional Council, a bi-racial group, with headquarters in Atlanta. Those responsible for this report include the council's director, Harold Curtis Fleming, who was born in Georgia of Georgian parents. The report is in the hands of the Kennedy Administration and covers such subjects as equal rights in employment, voting and schools, the desegregation of public conveyances, equal opportunities in housing, the desegregation of all Federal services and offices and the abolition of segregation in the National Guard.

These are not radical doctrines. Substantially the same things were pledged in the Democratic platform adopted at Los Angeles and the Republican platform adopted at Chicago, last July. The Republicans, who can get along without Southern votes when they absolutely have to, took a firm position, for example, in favor of integration in the schools and against discrimination in housing and in public vehicles. The Democrats, who can't get along without some Southern votes, nevertheless stated definitely that the time had come "to assure equal access for all Americans to all areas of community life, including voting booths, schoolrooms, jobs, housing and public facilities."

Not all the recommendations in both platforms are likely to get through this year's Congress. In our elections both sides always promise more than they can do or even wish to do.

But the Southern Regional Council is on the right track and neither the Governor of Louisiana nor the Governor of Georgia, nor any less respectable force, can permanently prevent the carrying out of the program the council proposes.

The UPI's story has been used in the South by the Augusta Herald, Cordele Dispatch (Ga.); Jacksonville Times-Union, Miami Herald, Miami Beach Sun (Fla.); Raleigh Times, Wilmington News, Wilmington Star (N.C.); Tulsa World (Okla.); Columbia Herald, Kingsport News, Memphis Commercial Appeal, Memphis Press-Scimitar, Nashville Banner (Tenn.); Shreveport Journal (La.); Tupelo Journal, Natchez Times (Miss.); Harlingen Valley Star (Texas).

The Negro press has given wide coverage to the report, some using the wire service story of ANP, and others writing their own. Papers covering the report include: Atlanta World, St. Paul Recorder, Oklahoma City Black Dispatch, Minneapolis Spokesman, Washington Afro-American, Knoxville Independent Call, Philadelphia Afro-American, Memphis World, Chicago Daily Defender.

Roy Harris's Augusta Courier printed all the proposals, under the headline "Ralph McGill's SRC Urges 18 Point Reign of Terror on the South."

To date, we have seen nine editorials: laudatory ones in the New York Times, Washington Post and Times-Herald, Cleveland Call and Post, Atlanta Daily World, Memphis World, and Chattanooga Observer; uncomplimentary ones in the Orangeburg (S.C.) Time and Democrat, Wheeling (W.Va.) Intelligencer, and Danville (Va.) Bee.

Rights and Leadership

Washington Post 2-2-61

Executive initiative and leadership can do much to promote sane and healthy racial relations in the United States. This appears to be the principal thesis of a study prepared for submission to the new President by the Southern Regional Council, an organization singularly qualified to proffer advice in this field. The study calls for a vigorous assault against the evils of segregation and racial discrimination on a variety of fronts and by diverse techniques.

Despite the importance of legislation in outlawing practices which run counter to public policy and in giving the sanction of law to moral principles, presidential power and influence have a place of their own. By simple executive order, the President can do much to eliminate discrimination in Government contracts, in Federally financed housing projects, in Federal employment, in allocation of Federal funds to universities. The Federal Government's own operations, the report stresses, need to be a model of just race relations.

But of even greater impact than the exercise of presidential power, the Southern Regional Council suggests, is the impact of presidential influence through attitude and example. This was a thought often expressed by President Eisenhower during his occupancy of the White House. At a news conference in 1956, for example, he said in response to a question about school desegregation:

> Well, I can say what I have said so often: it is difficult through law and through force to change a man's heart. It seems to me that all of us who are so interested in this question of equality of rights regardless of religion and of race and color should do more about it. I try to miss no opportunity to urge people—I have done it; I have asked the clergy in, and I have asked them to help. I have asked educators in, I have asked them to help. Whenever I see a Governor I ask him to help.

The indubitable difficulty of changing men's hearts through force adds importance to presidential precept and example. In his casual remarks even more perhaps than in his formal utterances, in his social relations even more than in his official appointments, the President sets the tone for his countrymen. If he loses no opportunity to preach and practice democracy, he can do much to mold men's thinking. If he moves imaginatively to dramatize the issue, he can touch men's consciences. Among free men, this is the essence of leadership.

FEDERAL RIGHTS UNDER SCHOOL DESEGREGATION LAW

STAFF PAPER PREPARED FOR THE

LOUISIANA STATE ADVISORY COMMITTEE to the

U.S. COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

March 1966

Free choice plans for desegregating schools under Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 tend to place the burden of desegregation on Negro students and their parents.[1/]

The vast majority of plans submitted by school authorities in Deep South States have been free choice plans. All five of the plans accepted by the Office of Education from Louisiana employ the free choice method exclusively. There are other school districts which are operating under court orders. According to estimates made by the Southern Education Reporting Service in December 1965, the number of Negroes attending school with white students in Louisiana was 2,187 or less than one per cent of the State's Negro school population.

At the request of the Louisiana Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, the Commission staff prepared this paper to assist Negro pupils and their parents in understanding their rights under current Federal school desegregation law.

1/ U.S. Office of Education (Dept. H.E.W.) Revised Statement of Policies for School Desegregation Plans Under Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, March 1966.

1. DESEGREGATION PLANS

Q. HOW CAN I FIND OUT IF MY SCHOOL DISTRICT RECEIVES FEDERAL MONEY?

A. Most school districts receive Federal assistance. You can find out about your school district by writing to the U.S. Office of Education, Washington, D.C.

Q. IF IT DOES RECEIVE FEDERAL MONEY WHAT REQUIREMENTS MUST IT MEET?

A. If a school district is not under court order to desegregate, it must either be desegregated or follow a plan for desegregation of students, teachers, facilities, transportation, services, etc. If it is under court order, it must obey the court order. If it does not meet any of these three requirements, the Office of Education may refuse to give Federal money to that district. In addition, a suit can be brought by a parent or organization.

Q. WHAT KINDS OF DESEGREGATION PLANS ARE ACCEPTABLE?

A. There are several kinds of desegregation plans acceptable to the Federal government. Most of the communities in the South use a "Freedom of Choice" plan. Others divide the community into attendance areas and assign each child to the school for his area. Some districts close small Negro schools and assign the Negro children and teachers to white schools. Still others put only a few grades in each school and assign children by grade regardless of race.

Q. HOW LONG WILL THE PLANS TAKE TO ACHIEVE DESEGREGATION OF ALL GRADES?

A. Most of the plans called for desegregation of all 12 grades for the 1965-66 school year. All plans must provide for desegregating 12 grades by 1967-68.

Q. WHAT IF MY CHILD'S GRADE IS NOT YET COVERED BY THE DESEGREGATION PLAN?

A. The child can transfer to a white school under any of the following conditions: (1) his present school does not offer the course of study he desires, (2) he wants to attend a desegregated school already attended by a brother, sister or any relative living in his household, (3) he meets all the requirements for transfer under ordinary circumstances, (4) he would otherwise have to attend school outside of the school district.

Q. WHAT IF MY CHILD IS ENTERING THE SCHOOL SYSTEM FOR THE FIRST TIME IN A GRADE THAT IS NOT COVERED BY THE CURRENT "FREEDOM OF CHOICE" PLAN?

A. He may attend the school of his choice.

Q. HOW WILL I KNOW IF MY SCHOOL DISTRICT HAS A "FREEDOM OF CHOICE" PLAN?

A. Most school districts in the South use "Freedom of Choice" plans. If the district is under this plan, each pupil and his parents will receive a letter in the spring explaining their rights under the plan along with a Choice of School Form and a notice explaining the plan.

Q. WHAT WILL THE "FREEDOM OF CHOICE" LETTER SAY?

A. The letter will come from your school superintendent in the spring. It will ask parents and pupils to choose a school within 30 days. The choice form will list all schools that you may choose from (both white and Negro) and their grades and locations. The notice will explain the plan in detail.

Q. WILL STUDENTS WHO RETURN THEIR FORMS EARLY HAVE A BETTER CHANCE OF GETTING INTO THE SCHOOL OF THEIR CHOICE?

A. No. All letters must be mailed to parents on the first day of the choice period. There can be no preference given to those who return their forms early in the 30-day period.

Q. CAN THE CHILD CHOOSE HIS OWN SCHOOL?

A. Yes, if he is over 15 years old or will enter grade 9, 10, 11 or 12 next year.

Q. WHAT IF I DON'T RETURN THE CHOICE FORM DURING THE 30-DAY CHOICE PERIOD?

A. You may return it at any time before the child begins school next year. If the form is not filled out by the end of the first week of school, the child will be assigned to the school nearest his home where space is available, without regard to race.

Q. CAN A TEACHER OR PRINCIPAL TELL ME WHICH SCHOOL TO CHOOSE?

A. No. You and your child decide which school he will choose. Teachers, principals and other school officials may not tell you which school to choose or to influence your choice in any way.

Q. CAN MY CHILD'S NAME BE PRINTED IN THE NEWSPAPER OR PUBLICIZED IF I CHOOSE A WHITE SCHOOL?

A. No. It is a violation of Federal regulations to publicize information about choices made by individual students or about the schools to which they are assigned.

Q. WHAT IF ONLY A FEW NEGRO CHILDREN ENTER WHITE SCHOOLS IN MY SCHOOL DISTRICT UNDER A "FREEDOM OF CHOICE" PLAN?

A. If your school district has a sizable percentage of Negro children and most of them are still in Negro schools, the Federal government can require the school district to take additional actions to desegregate, such as holding a new choice period, increasing teacher desegregation, or putting into effect some other kind of plan.

2. COURT ORDERS

Q. WHAT IS A SCHOOL DESEGREGATION COURT ORDER?

A. A School Desegregation Court Order is the instruction given by the court after a school district has been sued and found to have been maintaining segregated schools. It tells the school district what it must do to achieve desegregation.

Q. WHAT IF THE SCHOOL DISTRICT DECIDES TO DO WITHOUT FEDERAL MONEY - AND CONTINUES TO HAVE SEGREGATED SCHOOLS?

A. The law requires a school district to desegregate whether or not it receives Federal money. If a school district has been sued and ordered to desegregate it must obey the court's order. If it has not been sued, one or more parents or an organization can sue a school district to force it to desegregate. If a parent can't afford to sue, cannot get a lawyer, or is otherwise unable to sue, he can make a complaint to the Civil Rights Division, U.S. Dept. of Justice, Washington, D.C. and ask the Federal government to sue.

Q. HOW DO I FIND OUT IF MY SCHOOL DISTRICT IS UNDER COURT ORDER?

A. To find out about your district, write to the Office of Education, Washington, D.C. or the Dept. of Justice, Washington, D.C.

Q. HOW DO I FIND OUT WHAT MY SCHOOL DISTRICT MUST DO UNDER THE COURT ORDER?

A. Since court orders are often hard to understand, you might ask a lawyer to explain it to you. He, or you, can get a copy from the Clerk of the Federal Court for a fee.

Q. HOW CAN A COURT ORDER BE CHANGED TO BRING ABOUT FASTER SCHOOL DESEGREGATION?

A. One or more parents or an organization can sue a school district for a better method of school desegregation. Parents can also make a complaint to the Civil Rights Division, U.S. Dept. of Justice, Washington, D.C. asking the Federal government to sue.

3. VIOLATIONS AND COMPLAINTS

Q. WHAT CAN I DO IF LOCAL OFFICIALS DO NOT OBEY THE DESEGREGATION PLAN OR COURT ORDER?

A. You can make a complaint to the Civil Rights Division, U.S. Dept. of Justice and to the Equal Education Opportunities Program, U.S. Office of Education, Washington, D.C.

Q. HOW DO I KNOW WHETHER TO SEND MY COMPLAINT TO THE OFFICE OF EDUCATION OR THE DEPT. OF JUSTICE?

A. To be sure it gets to the right one, send the same information to both.

Q. WHAT INFORMATION SHOULD BE IN THE COMPLAINT?

A. The complaint can be a letter. It should contain the facts you are complaining about, including the name and address of the schools involved, names of people, dates of incidents, and any other details that you are able to give.

Q. DO I HAVE TO SIGN THE COMPLAINT?

A. You must sign all complaints to the Dept. of Justice, but it is not necessary to sign complaints to the Office of Education. However, it makes it easier for them to investigate if they know who complained. If you do not wish to give your name, just write out what happened and mail it without signing it.

Q. CAN I COMPLAIN TO THE OFFICE OF EDUCATION BY TELEPHONE?

A. Yes. The number in Washington, D.C. is (202) 962-0333. Ask for the Equal Educational Opportunities Office and tell them you have a complaint.

Q. WHERE ELSE MAY I SEND A COPY OF MY COMPLAINT?

A. You may send a copy of your complaint to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, Washington, D.C. You should also keep a copy for yourself.

Q. AFTER MAKING A COMPLAINT, WHAT KIND OF RESPONSE SHOULD I EXPECT?

A. You should expect a letter acknowledging that your complaint has been received. In some cases a Federal representative may come to discuss it with you. He will have identification to show that he is a Federal official. In other cases he may telephone you.

Q. WHAT IF I RECEIVE NO ANSWER?
A. If you do not receive an answer within a reasonable period of time, you should write or call Washington again to see if your complaint has been received, and what is being done about it.

4. PROTECTION

Q. WHAT KIND OF PROTECTION SHOULD I EXPECT FOR MY FAMILY IF I AM ONE OF THE FIRST TO SEND MY CHILD TO A WHITE SCHOOL?
A. The school authorities are responsible for seeing that no student or staff member interferes with persons exercising rights under the plan or affected by it. Such protection must be given both on and off the school grounds. If they can't provide necessary protection they must seek assistance from other officials.

Q. WHAT IF WE DO NOT RECEIVE PROTECTION FROM LOCAL AUTHORITIES?
A. Notify the nearest FBI office. Also, make a complaint to the Civil Rights Division, Dept. of Justice, Washington, D.C. and to the Equal Educational Opportunities Program, Office of Education, Washington, D.C.

5. NEWLY DESEGREGATED SCHOOLS

Q. WHAT ABOUT TRANSPORTATION TO SCHOOL?
A. Whatever transportation is provided for white children must also be provided for Negro children.

Q. WHAT SHOULD I EXPECT IN THE WHITE SCHOOLS IN TERMS OF DESEGREGATION OF FACILITIES, SERVICES AND ACTIVITIES?
A. The law says that there can be no discrimination in school facilities, services and activities. This includes sports participation, social and educational activities, drinking fountains, washrooms, lunchrooms, classroom seating, auditoriums, locker rooms, use of materials, buses, etc. Also, Negro parents can attend PTA Meetings, commencement exercises and all other school events.

Q. WHAT IF MY CHILD IS TREATED BADLY AND INSULTED IN A NEWLY DESEGREGATED SCHOOL BY TEACHERS AND OTHER STUDENTS?
A. It is the responsibility of school officials to see that these things don't happen. You can make a complaint to the local school officials or to the Equal Educational Opportunities Program, U.S. Office of Education, Washington, D.C. and Civil Rights Division, U.S. Dept. of Justice, Washington, D.C. or to all of these.

Q. WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO NEGRO TEACHERS AS SCHOOLS ARE DESEGREGATED?

A. It is a violation of Federal regulations for a school system to dismiss, demote or pass over teachers for retention, promotion or rehiring because of race. If a teacher must be displaced because of desegregation, no teacher from outside the system can be brought in unless the displaced teacher is not qualified to fill the vacancy. If the district is going to have fewer teachers because of desegregation it must retain those who are best qualified regardless of race. Where teachers need to upgrade their skills the Federal government finances programs to train them to be better teachers.

Q. WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR TEACHER DESEGREGATION?

A. The superintendent and school boards have the responsibility for hiring and assigning teachers. They are required to desegregate teaching staffs. A Negro teacher who wishes to be assigned to a white school can so advise the proper school officials in the district.

Q. WHAT CAN BE DONE ABOUT DIFFERENT SALARIES FOR WHITE AND NEGRO TEACHERS?

A. It is a violation of the Constitution for school authorities to pay different salaries to teachers based on race. A teacher or a group of teachers or a teachers organization can sue the school officials to force them to equalize pay. The Attorney General can join in the suit.

.....

ADDRESS FURTHER QUESTIONS TO:

Equal Educational Opportunity Program
Office of Education
U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare
Washington, D.C.

Civil Rights Division
U.S. Department of Justice
Washington, D.C.

U.S. Commission on Civil Rights
Washington, D.C.

The American
Federationist
NOVEMBER 1966

Equal Rights: To Realize the Prom

The American Federationist

Official Monthly Magazine of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations

Vol. 73 NOVEMBER 1966 No. 11

In this Issue

GEORGE MEANY
Editor

SAUL MILLER
Executive Editor

ROBERT B. COONEY
Assistant Editor

Articles dealing with economics, research and education have been prepared in cooperation with the staffs of the Department of Research and the Department of Education.

An Editorial: Labor's Commitment 1

The Moral Basis of Civil Rights 2
All men are members of the human family and so are brothers. On this basis, all men are equal and entitled to dignity. A veteran civil rights leader says this is the foundation of the mutual interests of Negro and white workers. A. Philip Randolph

The Roots of the Negro-Union Alliance 3
United, the labor and civil rights movement can become a powerful force for achieving common objectives good for the nation. Divided, these movements will dissipate their energies and strengthen their enemies. This article examines the history and evolution of Negro-union relations. Dr. Ray Marshall

Labor's Role: Democracy on the Job 8
In the continuing process of making democracy complete, unions play a vital role. This is a record of how the AFL-CIO and its unions acted on their own and in support of civil rights laws to make equal opportunity more of a reality. Donald Slaiman

Making Apprenticeship Work 13
To help jobless youth, the Workers Defense League in New York organized both the apprenticeship information and the Negro youngsters interested in learning a trade.

The Urban League Expands Opportunities 14
The National Urban League boasts a long history of opening job frontiers and widening opportunities for minorities. This is an account of its current activities. Whitney Young

Civil Rights at the Crossroads 16
The first phase of a peaceful revolution is over. Now a crossroads. One road leads to full employment and equality in keeping with America's ideals. The other road leads to failure, frustration and strife. The argument here is for an alliance of labor-liberal-civil rights groups to fight for a better America. Bayard Rustin

Negroes and Jobs 20
Negro unemployment is double the white jobless rate; Negro teenage unemployment is explosively high. The reasons why are explained and the remedy urged is a great expansion of federal programs to create jobs, along with special training measures. Nathaniel Goldfinger

Making Equal Rights Laws Work 25
The public policy of the United States clearly aims at ending discrimination because of race, color, religion or national origin. This is a description of the federal agencies and programs responsible for pursuing this objective. Walter G. Davis

The NAACP and the New Strategy 30
With many civil rights goals achieved, a new strategy is developing for cracking the complex problems of unemployment, poverty, low skills and low pay. The problem is economic and one which the nation must solve in the interest of all its citizens. Roy Wilkins

Books, Pamphlets and Films ..... Inside Back Cover

Cover photo by Vytas Valaitis

Published monthly by the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations at AFL-CIO Building 815 Sixteenth St., N.W., Washington, D. C. 20006. Editor — George Meany. Director of Publications — Saul Miller. Subscriptions, $2 a year in U. S. and Canada. Other rates on application. Second class postage paid at Washington.

Forestry and Park Notes

JUNE Published Quarterly by S. C. State Commission of Forestry 1950

FORT WATSON MEMORIAL DEDICATED

One of the most accessible and least known Revolutionary battlegrounds in South Carolina was dedicated recently as the Fort Watson Memorial. Located less than a half mile off heavily travelled U. S. 15, just north of the bridge and causeway across Lake Marion, the two-acre memorial tract is near the tip of a finger of land which protrudes into Lake Marion.

The old fort stood atop the 48-foot high Indian mound which still looms up over the adjoining countryside and is visible for miles across the waters of the lake. The mound is said to have been built by Indians bringing small sacks of soil as a gift for a chief. The soil, according to legend was dumped on one spot for many years, creating the mound.

The mound, attributed to the Siouan tribe of Santee Indians who frequented the region, made the battle of Fort Watson an unusual event in the military career of General Francis Marion, South Carolina's "Swamp Fox".

In 1781 the British maintained a fort atop the mound and garrisoned it to keep open their routes of communication not only by land, but by the Santee River, which flowed close by the mound.

On April 15, 1781 General Marion and Colonel "Lighthorse" Harry Lee disposed their combined forces of some 380 men about Fort Watson. Their particular interest in capturing the fort was to obtain the quantities of ammunition known to be there. An added incentive was the fact that part of these munitions had fallen back into British hands by treachery after General Marion had seized them earlier in the combat.

Marion and Lee looked with disgust at the low land about the fort. The British, from their stockade atop the mound were able to fire with almost complete security into the ranks of any Americans trying to storm the post.

Colonel Maham, one of Marion's officers, suggested a scheme for capturing the fort. For five days and nights the troops of "Lighthorse" Harry Lee and the "Swamp Fox" worked like beavers felling yellow pine and cypress trees and hewing them into beams. On the fifth night

(Continued on page 4)

FORMER STATE HISTORIAN A. J. SALLEY SPEAKING AT DEDICATION CEREMONIES OF FORT WATSON MEMORIAL AREA

VIEW OF INDIAN MOUND AT FORT WATSON MEMORIAL AREA

Form SP-57 5/52

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA
DEPARTMENT OF CONSERVATION AND DEVELOPMENT
DIVISION OF STATE PARKS

APPLICATION FOR CABIN RESERVATION

AT _____ STATE PARK

PERIOD: List preferred and alternate dates. (Cabin reservations begin and end on Monday).

(1) FROM _____ TO _____ 19 ___.

(2) FROM _____ TO _____ 19 ___.

(3) FROM _____ TO _____ 19 ___.

No. adults in party (including children 18 and older)_____. Children 18 and under _____.

NOTE: The park does not supply bed, bedding, etc. for children too small to use regular single beds. Cabin renter must supply such bed, bedding, etc.

Cabin rental payments are due thirty (30) days prior to the reservation date.

NOTE: A deposit of $5.00 in cash will be required from the cabin renter when he takes up his reservation at the park. This deposit is to cover any loss or breakage of cabin equipment and will be refunded, less any deductions for loss or breakage, when the cabin is vacated.

I hereby agree that all use made of any cabin rented to me will be in accordance with North Carolina State Park Regulations and the Conditions on the reverse side of this application.

THIS APPLICATION FORM IS REQUIRED.

Please Supply All Information Requested

Name _____

Address _____

_____

Phone No. _____ Race _____

Please fill out and mail to: Division of State Parks, Box 2719, Raleigh, North Carolina.

For 1953, reservations will be accepted on a "first come first serve" basis, except that preference will be given to residents of the State of North Carolina.

RESERVATIONS ARE NOT TRANSFERABLE EXCEPT WITH THE CONSENT OF THIS OFFICE.

CONDITIONS

1. Cabin rentals are payable in full thirty (30) days in advance of date on which reservation begins. The Division of State Parks reserves the right to cancel reservations if this advance payment is not made.

2. No refund of a paid reservation will be made unless a cancellation request is made to this office at least fifteen (15) days prior to date on which reservation begins. Money will be refunded on a notification of less than fifteen (15) days only when the cabin is re-rented.

3. From the last Monday in May to Labor Day, cabins will be rented only on a weekly basis beginning at 4:00 p. m. on Monday and ending at 10:00 a. m. the following Monday for a minimum of one week and a maximum of two weeks.

4. Reservations shall not be transferred or assigned without written consent of the Division of State Parks.

5. The Division of State Parks reserves the right to reject any request for reservation not submitted on this application blank. Application blanks may be obtained either from the Park Superintendent or the Division of State Parks, Box 2719, Raleigh, North Carolina.

6. No animals or pets, except a dog on a leash (leash not to exceed six feet in length), may be brought into any park. NO DOGS, ANIMALS OR PETS WILL BE ALLOWED IN THE CABINS, CABIN AREA OR SWIMMING AREA AT ANY TIME.

RECEIVED
DEC 12 1952
Southern Regional Council

LAWS OF THE FLORIDA PARK SERVICE

Compiled By
THE FLORIDA PARK SERVICE
Tallahassee, Florida

INFORMATION ON VACATION CABINS AT HANGING ROCK STATE PARK AND MORROW MOUNTAIN STATE PARK

SIZE: Two bedrooms, bathroom, living room, kitchen with dining space. Accommodates up to six persons which is the maximum number of persons who may occupy one cabin.

FURNISHINGS AND EQUIPMENT: Four single beds, one double day bed, tables, chairs and other necessary furniture; electric stove, electric refrigerator and electric hot water heater; dishes, silverware, glassware and cooking utensils for six people; blankets, sheets and pillow cases; bath towels, dish towels, dish cloths.

RENTAL RATE: $49.00 per week from the last Monday in May to Labor Day; $6.00 per day from Labor Day to about November 1 and from about March 15 to the last Monday in May. Rental covers electric current, water and free use of swimming facilities.

WHEN RENTALS PAYABLE: Cabin rentals are payable in full thirty (30) days in advance of date on which reservation begins. The Division of State Parks reserves the right to cancel reservations if this advance payment is not made.

REFUNDS: No refund of a paid reservation will be made unless a cancellation request is made to this office at least fifteen (15) days prior to date on which reservation begins. Money will be refunded on a notification of less than fifteen (15) days only when the cabin is re-rented.

RENTAL PERIODS: From the last Monday in May to Labor Day, cabins will be rented only on a weekly basis beginning at 4:00 p. m. on Monday and ending at 10:00 a. m. the following Monday for a minimum of one week and a maximum of two weeks.

From Labor Day to about November 1 and from about March 15 to last Monday in May, cabins may be rented either by the day or by the week.

DAMAGE DEPOSIT: A deposit of $5.00 in cash will be required from the cabin renter when he takes up his reservation at the park. This deposit is to cover any loss or breakage of cabin equipment and will be refunded, less any deductions for loss or breakage, when the cabin is vacated.

CHILDREN: The park does not supply bed, bedding, etc. for children too small to use regular single beds. Cabin renter must supply such bed, bedding, etc.

HOW TO MAKE RESERVATIONS: For 1953, reservations will be accepted on a "first come first serve" basis, except that preference will be given to residents of the State of North Carolina.

Reservation requests for all rental periods between the last Monday in May and Labor Day will be handled by the Division of State Parks, P. O. Box 2719, Raleigh, North Carolina.

OVER

Reservation requests for rental periods between Labor Day and about November 1 and between about March 15 and the last Monday in May will be handled for Morrow Mountain State Park by the Park Superintendent, Rt. 2, Albemarle, North Carolina; and for Hanging Rock State Park by the Park Superintendent, P. O. Box 126, Danbury, North Carolina.

PETS: No animal or pets, except a dog on a leash not exceeding six feet in length may be brought into any state park. NO DOGS, ANIMALS OR PETS WILL BE ALLOWED IN THE CABINS, CABIN AREA OR SWIMMING AREA AT ANY TIME.

GROCERIES AND SUPPLIES: At Morrow Mountain State Park, groceries and supplies may be purchased in Albemarle (7 miles from the park), or in Badin (2 miles from the park.) At Hanging Rock State Park, groceries and supplies may be purchased in Danbury (4 miles from the park), or in Walnut Cove (14 miles from the park.)

LOCATION: Morrow Mountain State Park: Stanly County, 7 miles east of Albemarle. Accessible over paved roads from North Carolina Highways 27, 73 and 740.

Hanging Rock State Park: Stokes County, 4 miles west of Danbury and 32 miles north of Winston-Salem. Reached from North Carolina Highways 89 and 66.

WILDLIFE SANCTUARY: All North Carolina State Parks are wildlife sanctuaries and hunting, trapping, or in any way molesting animals and birds, is not permitted.

Friends Committee on Legislation ☆ Northern California Office

1830 Sutter Street, San Francisco 15, Calif. Telephone WEst 1-1764

IRVING MORRISSETT
Chairman
S. J. PATTERSON
Treasurer
TREVOR K. THOMAS
Executive Secretary
GEORGES AND MARJORIE WEBER
Sacramento Representatives

A Regional Office of Friends Committee on National Legislation
104 C St. N. E.
Washington, D. C.

E. RAYMOND WILSON
Executive Secretary

July 30, 1953

Mrs. M. E. Tilley
Southern Regional Council Inc.
63 Auburn Ave. N.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mrs. Tilley:

Fred Ross of the Federation for Civic Unity called me yesterday regarding a request he had from you concerning the California Un-American Activites Committee.

The Friends Committee on Legislation has worked closely with Fred on legislative matters so I am happy to ~~through~~ throw as much light on the subject as possible.

First of all, I am sending you under separate cover two committee reports: one which is the seventh report of the State Senate Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities. The other is the eleventh report of the Senate Investigation Committee on Education. I was not sure of the source of material being circulated in your area, so hope these will be of some use to you. As we have only a few copies of these reports I would appreciate your returning them.

Both of the Committees are official ones, sanctioned by the State Legislature. Additional funds in the amount of $65,000 have just been granted to continue their investigations. Both have been in operation for a number of years. As you will note from examining the reports the yardstick used to measure "subversive activity" is quite a flexible one, very often based on the premise that those who disagree with the members of the committee are suspect. If an individual or organization makes the mistake of supporting similar measures as the Communist Party happens to be plugging at the time, (civil liberties, public housing, the U.N. etc.), the Committee takes this as evidence of an unholy alliance. Unfortunately, these committees have the stamp of officialdom, and carry a good deal of weight in California while truly objective reports are seldom attempted. If you will check the back of the Education report (page 180) you will see an example of the type of laws that California is enacting, authored by members of these committees.

If you have any specific questions I will try to answer them. I would be very interested in hearing about the type of material that is being distributed and any other details. Please excuse the typing, as my secretary is on vacation and letter writing is not one of my talents.

Sincerely,

Trevor Thomas

Trevor Thomas
Executive Secretary

100

Loyalty Investigations

Washington Newsletter

of the

FRIENDS COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL LEGISLATION

104 C STREET, N. E.
WASHINGTON 2, D. C.

ANNUAL COST $2

Editors: E. RAYMOND WILSON, WILMER A. COOPER

WASHINGTON NEWSLETTER NO. 121 DECEMBER 7, 1953

CONGRESS, THE EXECUTIVE, AND CIVIL LIBERTIES

INTRODUCTION

Today the global struggle between the Communist and the non-Communist world overshadows the lives of all of us. This struggle is on two levels, for physical control of territory and for the capture of men's minds. In the former, the Communists have made notable gains since 1945. Understandably, fear has developed in this country – fear that is due, in part, to the knowledge of the awful destruction that would result from open warfare in the atomic age. It is also due to the shock of the discovery that many people in other countries, seeking to realize their own nationalist aspirations, are ready to accept Communist leadership, which to us seems unthinkable.

Part of the hold of the Communists in the United States has been their championing the cause of the unemployed during the depression, the removal of segregation and discrimination, and the rights of various minorities. The current fear of Communism, however, has obscured the fact that, on the whole, in this country the Communist ideology has failed miserably. At its peak in 1947, when the United States still thought of Russia as an ally, the Communist Party had only about 80,000 members. At the present time, it has less than 30,000. At no time has it been able to hold the allegiance of a large proportion of its members. Many of those who passed through the concourse of Communism, the open Party, ended it because they thought it only a short-cut to true democracy. Once they realized its antagonism to the American ideal of democracy, they left. For many of them, might it be said they were guilty of error more than of intentional disloyalty?

The greatest barrier to Communist capture of the minds of Americans has been the strength of our belief in our traditions and institutions of freedom and fair play, and the influence of those traditions and institutions in shaping the minds and characters of the American people. These are the rights that we call our civil liberties – freedom of speech, religion, and conscience; the principle that guilt is personal, not a matter of association; that accusation cannot be substituted for proof of guilt; that everyone must be given the opportunity to face his accuser; that punishment must not be extra-legal, but must be the result of due process of law, and a fair trial; and the principle that every individual should be treated equally, regardless of his race, religion, ancestry, or political beliefs.

CONGRESSIONAL INVESTIGATIONS

The 83rd Congress has already appropriated $719,000 for the use of the three major committees conducting investigations – $200,000 for the Permanent Investigations Sub-Committee of the Senate Government Operations Committee, $219,000 for the Internal Security Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and $300,000 for the House Un-American Activities Committee. In addition, the House has established a Select Committee to investigate tax-exempt foundations, and has appropriated $50,000 for its use. Congressman Harold H. Velde of Illinois now heads the Un-American Activities Committee of the House.[1] Senator William E. Jenner of Indiana is the Chairman of the Internal Security Sub-Committee.[2]. Senator Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin is Chairman of the Permanent Investigations Subcommittee of the Senate Government Operations Committee.[3] The Democratic members of this latter Committee all resigned in protest at the appointment to its staff of J. B. Matthews, who had just written an article claiming that "the largest single group supporting the Communist apparatus" in the United States is to be found in the ranks of the Protestant clergy. Mr. Matthews resigned shortly thereafter.

According to an article in Look Magazine for October 6, 1953, by Fletcher Knebel, 175 former Federal employees or members of the armed forces have refused to answer Congressional investigators who asked them about Communist affiliations. Mr. Knebel states that persons who have refused to affirm or deny membership in the Communist Party held key posts in 71 bureaus, agencies and departments of the Federal government from 1933 to 1952. Only 8 of the 175 former Government payrollers who refused to testify as to Communist membership made their first appearance before the Government Operations Subcommittee, under the chairmanship of Senator McCarthy. The FCNL Washington Newsletter for November reported that employment in Federal executive agencies at the end of August was 2,430,412 and that the size of the military establishment is nearly 3,500,000 now.

---

[1] Members of the House Un-American Activities Committee are: Harold Velde (Ill.), Bernard Kearney (N.Y.), Donald Jackson (Cal.), Kit Clardy (Mich.), Gordon H. Scherer (Ohio), Francis Walter (Pa.), Morgan M. Moulder (Mo.), Clyde Doyle (Cal.), James B. Frazier, Jr. (Tenn.).

[2] Members of the Senate Internal Security Sub-Committee are: William Jenner (Ind.), Arthur Watkins (Utah), Robert Hendrickson (N.J.), Herman Welker (Idaho), John M. Butler (Md.), Pat McCarran (Nev.), James Eastland (Miss.), Olin Johnston (S.C.), John McClellan (Ark.).

[3] Members of the Senate Permanent Investigations Sub-Committee are: Joseph McCarthy (Wis.), Karl Mundt (S.D.), Everett Dirksen (Ill.), Charles Potter (Mich.), John McClellan (Ark.), Henry Jackson (Wash.), Stuart Symington (Mo.).

All three of these Committees have dealt to some extent with the issue of Communism in education. Senator Jenner announced that his Committee intended to investigate the Communist conspiracy to penetrate education. Congressman Velde stated that he intended to expose individual Communists in both private and public schools. Senator McCarthy, in the course of his investigation of the Overseas Libraries maintained by the State Department, has called individual teachers before his Committee. Carrying out their announced purposes, these Committees have investigated teachers in the New York and Brooklyn public school systems, in the Philadelphia school system, in Harvard University, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Columbia University, and other private institutions of higher learning. Many of the persons called before them were known to be former, not present, members of the Communist Party. There is evidence that some few others, who have refused to testify, may actually be Communist Party members. Leading educators have pointed out, however, that these investigations pose a threat to freedom of thought which may outweigh any gain. Former President Conant of Harvard, who is opposed to the employment of Communists on university faculties, was nonetheless very specific on this point, saying, "...the damage that would be done to the spirit of this academic community by an investigation by the University, aimed at finding a crypto-Communist would be far greater than any conceivable harm such a person might do."

Activities and Methods of Investigators

The House Un-American Activities Committee has continued its investigations of Communists in Hollywood, and announced its intention to investigate Communism in the Churches. This Committee announced that Agnes E. Meyer, wife of the Chairman of the Board of The Washington Post, and an outspoken critic of the Committee, had written a pro-Soviet letter which was quoted in the Communist daily, Pravda. Only after Mrs. Meyer publicly denied the charge was it discovered that it was based on a mistake in identity, which could easily have been checked. In competition with the Internal Security Sub-Committee, the House Un-American Activities Committee issued a subpoena to President Truman for investigation of Attorney-General Brownell's charges that President Truman promoted a man about whom he had substantial information indicating that he was a Communist.

The Internal Security Sub-Committee has been continuing its investigation of Communists in Government, and is now investigating the charges against President Truman mentioned above.

The Permanent Investigating Sub-Committee of the Senate has investigated both the Overseas Libraries of the State Department, and the Department's employees who are charged with the conduct of overseas information and education. The Chairman has repeatedly implied that books in our Overseas Libraries should be selected on the basis of the "patriotism" of the author rather than on the basis of the book's contents, and that only the Committee's conception of orthodoxy should be presented. This Committee has also investigated alleged Communism in government employment at home, and claims to have information indicating that there may have been Communists working in the Government Printing Office. It has also called before it a few government employees who had been investigated and cleared by the Executive Branch. Their resignations followed. The Chairman announced that he would follow this procedure in any case in which he was not satisfied by the judgment reached by the Executive Branch. In a later investigation the Committee called before it a former Loyalty Board Member who had voted, after hearings, to clear an employee, as to whose own loyalty the Committee was not satisfied.

This Committee has also concerned itself with Communism in unions in plants that have government contracts, and it is presently investigating charges of espionage at the Army Signal Corps center in Fort Monmouth, a subject of previous investigations. At the same time, the Army had been conducting its own investigation of alleged espionage there, and had suspended 33 scientists, engineers, and technicians. On November 13, the Secretary of the Army announced that no evidence of current espionage had been found at Fort Monmouth, and that several of the suspended employees were already in the process of being restored to duty. None of those suspended then had been charged with espionage, and in some cases no charges at all had been filed against them.

In connection with the investigation of Overseas Libraries, the Chairman of this Committee called before him some of the authors whose books were found on the library shelves. Among these persons was James Wechsler, Editor of the New York Post, who has long acknowledged that he was a Communist in his college days, but who is now a strong anti-Communist. He has also been an open critic of the operations and methods of this investigating Committee.. At his hearing, it developed that the Chairman did not know which of Wechsler's four books was, in fact, in the Overseas Library, and the questioning of him revolved largely about his unfavorable editorials. Following this hearing, a special eleven man committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors reviewed the transcript to determine whether or not the hearing amounted to a threat to the freedom of the press. They were divided on the question of whether "this single interchange constituted a clear and present danger to freedom of the press", but four members of the Committee released a separate statement to the effect that "freedom of the press in these United States. . could not long survive the repeated exercise of Congress of unlimited inquiry into the conduct of newspapers." The Chairman of the Investigating Committee immediately issued a denunciation of J. R. Wiggins of The Washington Post, who signed this separate report, and demanded that the Newspaper Editors investigate him.

Committee Abuses

It is obvious that the work of these Committees has overlapped. They have competed for sensational disclosures and newspaper headlines, and have used, at times, sensational methods in their hearings. This has precluded thorough investigation. For example, in a recent investigation of teachers in Philadelphia, two prospective witnesses, who stood on their rights as witnesses and refused to be subjected to any photographing, televising or broadcasting prior to the completion of their testimony, were, under these circumstances, not even asked to testify. Is the Chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee more interested in television possibilities than gathering facts?

Witnesses have been required to give "yes" and "no" answers, and often have not been permitted to explain these answers or give a complete picture of their activities. On occasion, as in the case of Agnes Meyer, accusation has preceded investigation, and the power of the committees seems to have been used to stifle criticism. In spite of concessions to the demands for procedural safeguards for individuals giving testimony, the fact remains that appearance before these committees can be disastrous even for one wrongly accused Congressional Committees derive the right to carry out investigations through the very nature of their legislative authority. Investigations, in the strictest sense are made to lay the groundwork for proposed legislation, or to review the operation of laws already existing. Competent observers, however, greatly question whether Congressional Committees are an appropriate place for the investigation of individual guilt. They are not courts, and have not adopted and it is doubtful that they could adopt the safeguards of court procedures. Witnesses are usually permitted to have counsel, but the counsel may not himself make statements or ask questions of the Committee or of other witnesses. The Committee itself is in the position of both prosecutor and judge. In most cases, the accuser is not identified, does not appear, and even when he does, the opportunity is not given for the satisfactory cross-examination that has proved over the years to be the best means of uncovering the truth. Inconclusive and unsupported evidence is often accepted as proof. Damaging allegations are stated by Committee counsel to be contained in sworn testimony. The witness is then asked whether these statements are true or false. If he invokes his constitutional rights not to testify against himself, an imputation of guilt is then inevitable. Therefore, persons summoned before these investigating Committees are pilloried before the public and subjected to extra-legal punishment.

The Fifth Amendment

Many persons that have been summoned to testify have refused to do so, basing their refusal on their rights under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution, which provides that "No person...shall be compelled in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself." Apparently some persons, misunderstanding the Amendment, have invoked it because they did not wish to testify about the activities of persons other than themselves, or because they sincerely believed that the Committee had no right to question them. Zechariah Chafee, Jr. and Arthur E. Sutherland, both of the Harvard Law School, have given the following advice to such persons:

> The underlying principle to remember in considering the subject is the duty of the citizen to cooperate with the government. He has no option to say, 'I do not approve of this grand jury or that congressional committee; I dislike its members and its objectives; therefore I will not tell what I know.' He is neither wise nor legally justified in attempting political protest by standing silent when obligated to speak...To this general duty of the citizen the privilege against self-incrimination is an extraordinary exception...
>
> Certainly the fact that disclosure of present or past association with the Communist party will cause trouble for the witness, with his church, his lodge, his union, his employer, or his university, does not excuse him from answering questions about it when subpoenaed before a competent body.

In other cases, lawyers may have advised clients who are ex-Communists to invoke their rights under the Amendment, because a series of prosecutions of Communist officials has created uncertainty as to whether or not membership itself, within the three year statutory period, will be regarded as a crime. Juries are forbidden to draw adverse conclusions from the refusal of a witness to testify, but this prohibition cannot be extended to the general public. No legal inference of guilt may be drawn from invoking the privilege without ipso facto destroying the privilege itself. Americans may well ponder what would be the effect on this historical safeguard of an implication of guilt by the community. This privilege grew out of centuries of torture and inquisition, during which people were compelled to confess to being witches or heretics, so that it was for a very good reason that it was included in the Bill of Rights.

Suggested Legislative Reforms

Some members of Congress have recognized the dangers inherent in some of the methods used by Congressional Committees. Three resolutions (S.Con.Res. 10, S.Con.Res. 11, and S.Res. 83) have been introduced by Senators Kefauver, Morse and Lehman for themselves and others, prescribing new procedural requirements for investigating hearings. In general, these call for prior notice to any person or organization about whom derogatory information is to be presented at a public hearing, and propose that witnesses be given the following rights which are not generally granted to them at the present time: (1) the right to be questioned by his own counsel in order to bring out all pertinent facts, (2) to present written questions to opposing witnesses, (3) to subpoena adverse witnesses, and (4) to be permitted to answer all charges. The bills further provide that all the evidence upon which a committee report or finding is based shall be made public at the same time as the finding.

No action has been taken on any of these bills, or on the House equivalent (H.Res. 29), introduced by Congressman Kenneth B. Keating. They have all been referred to the Senate Rules Committee, chaired by Senator Jenner, and the House Rules Committee, which is under the leadership of Congressman Leo Allen of Illinois.

Senator Richard B. Russell has recently proposed, in addition, that one joint committee to investigate subversive activities be substituted for the three separate committees now operating in that field. This suggestion has not yet been incorporated into a formal bill.

These reforms might ameliorate Congressional procedures considerably, but they will not put the question of political dissent in its proper perspective in the American democratic tradition. Where specific crimes have been committed, such crimes can be and should be punished in the courts. But differences of political ideology should be hammered out on the anvil of public debate and recourse to the ballot box. Thomas Jefferson, after two bitter wars, still said in his second inaugural address:

> And let us reflect that, having banished from our land that religious intolerance under which mankind so long bled and suffered, we have yet gained little if we countenance a political intolerance as despotic, as wicked, as capable of bitter and bloody persecutions . . . If there be any among us who wish to dissolve the Union or to change its republican form, let them stand undisturbed as monuments of the safety with which error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it.

We do not retain our civil liberties by giving them up, or denying them to people with whom we differ. We do retain and strengthen our liberties by practicing them vigorously on behalf of every individual, no matter how abhorrent his ideas may be to us. Where is the emphasis today on reason to combat errors of opinion, and the championing of political programs so forward looking that people are not led to embrace non-democratic ideologies?

THE EXECUTIVE LOYALTY-SECURITY PROGRAM

The Executive Branch of the Federal Government exercises its jurisdiction over subversion largely by virtue of the right to employment, and of the issuance of visas and passports. This right is not limited to employment in the government service itself, but extends to all workers in industry who are employed on government contracts, to scientists in the universities and research agencies who are dealing with government research projects, all persons who have access to the waterfront, exchange students and teachers under the Fulbright Act, delegates to international conferences, and also to applicants for passports and visas. Recently this jurisdiction has been extended to cover tenants of federal housing projects and persons in universities who conduct correspondence courses for members of the armed forces.

New Program Based on Wider Investigations of Individual Loyalty

Until May of this year, investigations of government employees were of two types. Under President Truman's loyalty order, all government employees were investigated in terms of personal allegiance to the United States. Under Public Law 733, however, persons holding particularly "sensitive" positions - i.e., those which afford an opportunity to do material harm to the government, either by sabotage, espionage, or general determination of policy - were investigated in addition, as to whether they were security risks. Additional tests for security which were applied included such things as behavior or associations that tend to show an individual is not reliable, disregard of security regulations, liability to coercion, and treatment for serious mental and neurological disorder. Thus a person could be adjudged personally loyal, and yet not a good "security risk".

President Eisenhower has abolished the divided check for loyalty and security, and has established a new order whereby all government employees must past both loyalty and security tests. Membership in any subversive organization, as a test of security, is no longer restricted to organizations listed by the Attorney General. That official, however, continues to issue such lists, and since July 1953 has added the names of 43 alleged new Communist organizations, to the existing list.

In the new program, an employee has fewer procedural protections than under the Loyalty Program. Those who are American citizens, and who have also passed the probationary period, and acquired status in the Civil Service, must be given a written statement of the charges against them, and may demand a hearing. They have no right of appeal to any outside body, however, such as the old Loyalty Review Board. All other employees, who now constitute a substantial proportion of the government service, must be given a written statement of reasons, if they are suspended. They may make a written answer, but will have no opportunity to plead their case in person. As in the past, an employee will seldom have the opportunity to face his accuser, and he may not even be informed of all the adverse information of which a final judgment will be based. There can be no doubt that it is easier to dismiss an employee under this program than it was under the Loyalty Program. It was believed, however, that a dismissal on security grounds would not harm the individual as much as one based on the issue of loyalty. Unfortunately, the available evidence does not support this position.

Little Detailed Information Available on 1,456 Severances

On October 23, the White House reported that 1,456 persons have been severed under the new order, so far during 1953. These figures have not been further broken down in any way, and there is no information as to the grounds of dismissal nor whether the persons involved had been subjected to the same charges in previous proceedings. We do know that in one case, a stenographer in the Department of Justice had twice faced charges because her father is a Communist, and had twice been cleared of any personal guilt. Apparently, she did not feel it worthwhile to go through this procedure for a third time, and resigned. It appears that few if any of the 1,456 were given hearings, and that none of them faced their accusers. Unfortunately, statements made by Attorney General Brownell and President Eisenhower have been open to the inference that all 1,456 were tainted in some way by Communism.

Some information is now available as to the kind of charges being made under the new order. Employees have been questioned concerning membership in the Federation of American Scientists, the American Veterans Committee (of which President Eisenhower is an honorary member) and the League for Industrial Democracy - organizations that have never been listed as subversive by either the Attorney General or the Un-American Activities Committee. In a number of cases, suspension or dismissal has been due not to any act of the employee himself, but because of the radical activities of a relative. One Fort Monmouth employee was accused of associating with a brother who "favored the 'leftist' policies of Max Lerner, who was affiliated with, or a member of, several organizations cited as Communist or Communist Fronts." In two cases, a whole continent lay between the Communist and non-Communist brothers. The latter were nevertheless treated as security risks.

The possible injustice of such cases has been dramatically illustrated by the case of a young Air Force reserve officer, Lieutenant Radulovich, whose dismissal as a security risk was recommended by a board of three colonels, because his father was said to read subversive newspapers, and his sister participated in Communist picketing and other activities. This case was brought before the public in a television broadcast, and it became obvious that the Lieutenant himself had no Communist leanings, that his father read a native language newspaper because he didn't know English, and that the officer had no sympathy with his sister's activities. President Eisenhower became interested in the case, and the Air Force Secretary reversed the Board's ruling. There is no way of knowing how many other cases might have had the same clearance, if it had been possible to explore them with equal thoroughness.

There can be no question that measures must be taken to protect the government against infiltration by spies, saboteurs and advocates of totalitarianism. Admittedly, discovery of such persons is no easy task. Ample protection would seem to be afforded if suspension is followed by careful investigation, in which every accused person is given full opportunity to refute adverse charges before he is dismissed. As it is, the actions of both Congressional Committees and the Executive Branch have created a greatly exaggerated idea of the extent of Communist infiltration.

STATE AND LOCAL LOYALTY PROGRAMS

Major activities of state legislatures and executive bodies have centered around educational issues. Thirty-three states have laws with regard to the loyalty of teachers and the exclusion of subversives from the public schools. Thirty states require special loyalty oaths of their teachers. In addition, individual Boards of Education in cities throughout the United States have loyalty programs. Private citizens have undertaken to censor the books in libraries or in use in the schools.

This kind of activity reached the reductio ad absurdum when the story of Robin Hood was labelled Communist because it told of someone who robbed the rich to help the poor. The present Sheriff of Nottingham solemnly denied the allegation. The whole situation appears less humorous when we discover that the same critic demanded that all mention of Quakers be removed from textbooks because they oppose war. There have been determined efforts to prevent any teaching about the United Nations or UNESCO, and in one case a school superintendant was required to delete from a ceremonial oath the promise that his pupils would be good world citizens. There has been a tendency to equate Communism with any unpopular doctrine, with the result that it has become fairly common practice to deny the use of buildings for public meetings to any person who may be regarded as "controversial". All of this has favored the growth of a new commercial enterprise - the preparation by private persons of what are, in effect, blacklists.

SOME PROBLEMS RAISED BY THESE PROGRAMS

All of these activities have caused a rising tide of fear and suspicion that has actually become a divisive force in the country. In addition, a number of specific evils have resulted. Individuals dismissed as security risks by the government, guilty and innocent alike, are often unable to find other work commensurate with their abilities. This is especially true in the case of scientists, engineers, and technicians, for in many cases, in private industry, their services would have to be used for work on government contracts. The government service is itself being seriously hurt. It is becoming increasingly difficult to find satisfactory recruits for the foreign service, and those who are in it are increasingly reluctant to make full and frank reports. A former officer of the World Health Organization has stated that, as a result of the result of the required security checks, no American health expert has been recruited for that organization since those checks began.

Seven months, on the average, has been required for clearance for the technical assistance programs abroad. When investigation involves such long delay, few persons can afford to wait for a government job, and the government loses the services of many highly qualified people. As fear and suspicion spread through the country, more and more people are unwilling to discuss controversial issues openly, and a survey of the colleges recently made by the New York Times shows that increasingly students are refraining from joining organizations or from participating in public activities in order to protect their future careers.

Many of our leading citizens have expressed concern at this situation. News is brought to us from England, from Canada, from the Continent, and from Asia, that our prestige is being diminished, and there are growing doubts that we can any longer offer the kind of spiritual leadership which the world expects of our country. Justice William O. Douglas spoke to this point on November 24, at a Tenth Anniversary Dinner of the Friends Committee on National Legislation in Philadelphia, when he said:

> A nation in this frame of mind, officials who are on a witch hunt, men, women and children who are suspicious of each other cannot be tolerant abroad. They will fear abroad what they fear and suspect at home. Those who are intolerant of minorities at home will not be tolerant of those who embrace unorthodox views abroad.
>
> We may win the war [the struggle against communism] even though we continue to practice and preach hate and suspicion at home. But if we continue those practices, we will never win the peace. For we cannot win the peace unless we maintain a position of moral authority in the world. To do this we must have done with the witch hunt and the merchants of hate.
>
> We will not lose the peace because the Communist opposition is strong and formidable. Communism is not strong either as a secular religious faith or as a program of political action. In no free election in any country has it ever won. But we will lose the peace if we . . . sacrifice our ideals of liberty for a miserable political advantage which a campaign of hate and suspicion temporarily gives.

SUGGESTIONS FOR INDIVIDUAL ACTION

Following are some examples of specific action which could be taken:

(1) Write to Senator Richard B. Russell supporting his proposal that one joint committee to investigate subversive activities be established to replace the three now functioning in that field.

(2) Write to Senator William Jenner, Chairman of the Senate Rules Committee (Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D.C.) asking that hearings be held on SCR 10, SCR 11, and S. Res. 83, proposing revisions in Committee procedures, and that these resolutions be favorably reported out to the Senate. Letters could also be written to Congressman Leo E. Allen, Chairman of the House Rules Committee, urging action on H. Res. 29.

(3) Write to any or all of the following Senators who are sponsors of the above-mentioned resolutions, expressing your support of their position:

Estes Kefauver (Tenn.)	Warren G. Magnuson (Wash.)	Matthew M. Neely (W.Va.)
Wayne Morse (Oregon)	John Pastore (Rhode Island)	James S. Murray (Montana)
Herbert H. Lehman (N.Y.)	Margaret Chase Smith (Maine)	Irving M. Ives (New York)
Lester C. Hunt (Wyoming)	Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. (Missouri)

FRIENDS COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL LEGISLATION,
104 C Street, Northeast
WASHINGTON 2, D. C.

Washington Newsletter

"POSTMASTER: IF UNDELIVERABLE FOR ANY REASON, NOTIFY SENDER, STATING REASON. ON FORM 3547, POSTAGE FOR WHICH IS GUARANTEED."

Sec. 34.66, P. L. & R.

(4) Write to your own Senators and Congressmen asking that they support these resolutions.

(5) Write to your local newspapers and to magazines, expressing your views in the whole area of civil liberties. Discuss these problems with your friends, and in your meeting, church, and civic organizations.

(6) There is no doubt that current fears have understandably been increased by recent disclosures about Communist penetration during the Truman Administration. Columnist Drew Pearson has suggested that unreasonable fears would be allayed if the President would appoint an impartial commission of distinguished jurists to review the evidence and report on this matter somewhat in the manner of the Canadian Royal Commission that investigated espionage in the Canadian government. If you approve of this suggestion, you might write to the President (Washington 25, D.C.) asking him to establish such a commission, thereby taking the whole issue out of partisan politics.

(7) If you are not already a member of the American Civil Liberties Union, write to Patrick Murphy Malin at 170 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, New York, concerning its program, both nationally and in your area. Ask how you can strengthen the work of this organization in the field of civil rights and civil liberties.

An articulate expression of public opinion is essential in a democracy. The letters you write to your Senators and Congressmen, to the President, and to the newspapers, radio, and television commentators, do matter. A few voices lifted in Washington will not be heard in the present atmosphere of fear and suspicion, unless they are supported throughout the country. YOUR VOICE IS VITAL!

RECOMMENDED REFERENCE MATERIAL

Books: Barth, Alan, The Loyalty of Free Men (published by the Viking Press; also available from Pocket Books, Inc., Cardinal Edition - 35¢) This is an excellent survey of the whole field of civil liberties by the staff writer of The Washington Post who specializes in the field.

Bontecou, Eleanor, The Federal Loyalty-Security Program (Cornell University Press, Ithaca, N.Y., 1953). Well-documented and careful account of the executive program.

Carr, The House Un-American Activities Committee, 1945-50 (Cornell University Press, Ithaca, N.Y., 1952).

Miller, Merle, The Judges and the Judged (Doubleday, Garden City, N.Y., 1950) Deals with private blacklisting.

Roy, Ralph R., Apostles of Discord (Beacon Press, Boston, 1953), Deals with Protestant fringe groups on both the Right and the Left.

Stewart, George, The Year of the Oath (Doubleday, Garden City, N.Y., 1950). Tells of the fight for academic freedom at the University of California.

Wechsler, James, The Age of Suspicion (Random House, New York, 1953)

Periodicals, study pamphlets, statements, etc.:

"We Hold These Truths" (A Handbook for the Study of Constitutional Rights and Liberties), Massachusetts Council for Constitutional Rights, 1953 - Room 210, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts (25¢)

"Do Congressional Investigations Abridge Academic Freedoms?" - study packet, Council for Social Action of the Congregational Christian Churches, November 1953 (289 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York - 50¢)

"The Freedom to Read", a statement prepared by the American Library Association (and the American Book Publisher's Council (2 West 46th Street, New York 36, N.Y.)

"The Highest Loyalty", statement made by the American Friends Service Committee, October 1953 (20 South Twelfth Street, Philadelphia 7, Pennsylvania).

"Freedom, Justice, Equality: Report on Civil Liberties, January 1951 - June 1953", American Civil Liberties Union (170 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N.Y. - 50¢)

The Nation, June 28, 1952 (special issue on civil liberties).

"A Letter to Presbyterians", statement unanimously adopted by the General Council of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., October 1953 (510 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia 7, Pennsylvania).

This Newsletter has been prepared in consultation with Miss Eleanor Bontecou, who is the author of The Federal Security-Loyalty Program, and was formerly with the Civil Rights Section of the Justice Department.

THE COURIER-JOURNAL & TIMES MAGAZINE
Louisville, Ky.
SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1967 21

Georgia's Apprehensive Liberals

Groups concerned with race relations, such as the Southern Regional Council, feel uneasy with Lester Maddox in the governor's chair

By F. W. WOOLSEY, Magazine Staff Writer

WHATEVER it was that put segregationist Lester Maddox in the governor's chair in Georgia—white backlash; fear of "Black Power" or a kind of late-blooming Populism—the subsequent change in political climate has brought some cold shivers to liberals in the Peach State.

There's an uneasy feeling that Governor Maddox is going to be unpredictable about a number of issues, including the future of Georgia-based organizations fostering interracial cooperation.

In liberal circles, one of the most respected of these is the Southern Regional Council (SRC), which for years has been publishing sober appraisals of the South's economic, moral, sociological and educational recognition of the Negro.

The SRC hopes that the governor doesn't do to its fact-finding office what he did to his fried-chicken restaurant: Get rid of it. Maddox closed his restaurant in Atlanta rather than serve Negro customers, as was required by the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

The day after the election last November, some wags in the SRC office were saying that maybe the staff ought to move to Birmingham, Ala., for a more favorable working climate.

In the new governor's simplistic philosophy, the Scriptures uphold segregation. "I believe it to be Christian," he once said.

From selling fried-chicken dinners Maddox went into the furniture business, and the right-wing Let Freedom Ring organization—which espouses the John Birch Society line—has been sending out its telephone messages from the Maddox store. In his inaugural address, the elevated tone of which sounded good even to liberal ears, Maddox disclaimed extremists. But the fact that he said on inauguration day he had no plans to divorce his business from those phone spiels cast doubt on whether the governor knows what extremism is.

To his own satisfaction, however, the governor has ascertained the forces behind the integration movement. It was some time ago that Maddox said he thought the big-money people — "Maybe the Carnegies and the Mellons and the Fords"—are behind the civil-rights movement in order to curry favor with African nations "where there would be almost a virgin market for heavy industry, for appliances for homes, for furnishings, for clothing. . . ."

The capitalists' instrument, he said, is "the Southern Regional Council. Various foundations have contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars to that particular organization, and in turn it is a kind of forefather over many other organizations—helps to finance various interracial movements—and Atlanta has turned into a headquarters for such organizations."

The part about the financing is fact. The interracial board of SRC couldn't have put it better than Maddox did. The council receives foundation funds and uses the money for information and research, supports state human-relations councils, and encourages registration by Negroes qualified to vote.

The council contends that it is a charitable organization. But last year the Georgia Department of Labor called it a propaganda outfit attempting to influence legislation. The state agency presented a bill for $17,993 it claimed SRC owed for unemployment-compensation assessments, penalties and interest. SRC had never joined the compensation system, and contended in court that it was exempt. A Superior Court found for SRC, but the Labor Department took the case to the State Supreme Court, where it awaits a review.

On the fifth floor of the old Journal building in the heart of downtown Atlanta, SRC's paid staff members go about their business with the optimism of people who know their outfit has been in deep trouble before and has come through with flying colors. There are SRC alumni who recall the era of vicious telephone calls to their homes, anonymous letters of scurrilous and even obscene content, and the ever-recurrent investigations by legislatures in the Deep South states where never-proved charges of Communist leanings were leveled at the then-young Southern Regional Council.

Associated Press Wirephoto

BEFORE TURNING POLITICIAN, Lester Maddox closed his restaurant rather than serve Negroes. Now that he is governor, liberals fear that he would like to close down organizations fostering racial cooperation.

Space in desirable office buildings in downtown Atlanta was denied the organization. (Today it is lodged in the midst of smart shops and restaurants; its neighbors across the street are The Atlanta Journal and The Constitution.) It made do in an old, out-of-the-way building owned by The Methodist Church. The volume of "hate" mail increased every time an individual on the SRC staff or board was quoted in newspapers.

Continued

Georgia's Liberals Continued

Mrs. M. E. Tilly, now 83 and active every day with SRC's "Fellowship of the Concerned," a church-related project, found a satisfactory means of retaliation against abusive, anonymous telephone callers. As a member of President Truman's Civil Rights Commission, she was a target. She had a recording of a tenor singing "The Lord's Prayer" on a player near the telephone. When callers became hateful, she flipped on the record player. "I don't know about them," she said recently, "but it sure helped me."

In a variety of ways—some too subtle for statistics and others as evident as the 11 Negroes who sit in the Georgia State Legislature—the South has changed very much since SRC was born.

It was 25 years ago that some Southern Negroes—mostly educators and ministers—broke the silence from below the Mason-Dixon Line with an appeal to whites of the South to join an interracial campagin against segregation. The appeal was heard and acted upon by a group of whites, many of them nationally known, who agreed that "understanding, cooperation and a mutual respect" were badly needed.

One of the outcomes of the so-called "Durham Conference Statement" by the Negroes and the answer to it from whites who gathered at Atlanta in April, 1943, was the creation of the Southern Regional Council, a source of information and statistics about the segregated South for a generation. It began operating under a charter from the State of Georgia in 1944. Dr. Rufus Clement, a native of Louisville and son of a bishop in the A.M.E. Zion Church, was one of the charter applicants. Another was Ralph McGill, the Atlanta newspaper man and columnist.

A concern for racial justice and democracy has always been present in the Southern tradition. The Council thinks it has been the embodiment of this element. In the words of one of its past leaders, "It can never exceed—though of course it can fall short of—its environment of men and ideals and intelligence."

Dr. Robert Coles of the psychiatric staff of Harvard University Health

A PIONEER was Will W. Alexander who started an interracial mission in the years after World War I.

Service, who spent two years on SRC studies of Southern schools and migrant farmers, believes "the Southerner exists psychologically . . . across the barriers of race and class." Negro or white, says Dr. Coles, the Southerner "is the one American . . . whose ancestors, generation after generation, lived at cross-purposes to every political principle of this nation."

The two races, he theorizes, share a sense of shame. In the white, it manifests itself in nostalgia or in angry self-pity. In the Negro, it has produced acquiescence or numb rage.

This grim generalization seems to downgrade an outgrowth of the sense of shame: A determination to bring about change. Every once in a while, the South was swept by a liberal wind; and in those brief bursts of benign climate, a few seeds of racial cooperation sprouted.

After World War I, a Methodist preacher named Will W. Alexander began an interracial mission. He went ahead despite the fact that public opinion as yet wasn't even mobilized against lynching. His mission turned into the Commission of Interracial Cooperation. Recently, a noted Negro educator recalled the gravity of that mission:

"Negro soldiers coming back to the South were lynched because they dared to wear the uniforn and the insignia of rank they had worn in France."

The speaker is the president of Atlanta University, Rufus Clement. Dr. Clement was dean of the old Louisville Municipal College for Negroes from 1931 to 1937. His father was Bishop George Clement of the A.M.E. Zion Church. Dr. Clement's picture of the Rev. Mr. Alexander is of "a liberal Southerner—outspoken and evangelistic. He and my father were contemporaries and served on the commission together."

In the 25 years of its existence, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation spent $2.5 million in foundation funds, mostly Rosenwald, Rockefeller and Carnegie. One of the most important adjuncts of the commission was the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching, which grew to 40,000 members. Except for this manifestation of outrage against terrorism, the commission and its affiliates never approached a mass movement. Many local units (they once numbered 604) of the commission met once and never again.

Gunnar Myrdal, in the United States preparing his landmark volume, "An American Dilemma," noted a decline in support for the commission in the late 1930s and criticism of it among young Negroes for its paternalism. "We never treated them (the Negroes it set out to help) as equals," said a white commission member.

Ironically, the Durham Manifesto that came out of the 1942 meeting of Negro ministers and educators seemed to accept the separate-but-equal concept. But Lillian Smith, white and from an old Georgia family, would have none of this philosophy. From the moment she became nationally famous for her novel "Strange Fruit," there was no mistaking her as anything but an implacable foe of segregation by law or by custom. When the Southern Regional Council was in the making, she refused a place on the board of directors in the belief that the new organization was not prepared to call segregation evil and to attack it directly.

SRC was criticized by others, too,

Continued

United Press International Photograph

ENCOURAGING NEGROES to register to vote is an example of the Southern Regional Council activities frowned on by segregationists.

for allegedly acquiescing to "gradualism." Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director from 1947 to 1957, once felt pressured enough to respond sharply: "We have never made it a point to be so far in advance of surrounding custom that our people lose effectiveness in pushing for a change."

By 1951, SRC was ready, as its then-president said, to make "the frontal attack, without evasion, without apology" on segregation and to take the stand that segregation must go. In the next two years, 1,600 members quit. By 1954, membership was under 1,000 and SRC was in terrible financial shape.

The cherished dream of Dr. Mitchell was that state human-relations councils would rise up in strength. Eventually, he predicted, the central SRC office could fold up.

A hefty grant from the Fund for the Republic (Ford Foundation money) materialized in 1954 and grants-in-aid were made to groups in various states. These groups never became strong enough to cut adrift, however, let alone dictate to the central office. The concept of strong state-level organization was crippled by deteriorating race relations in the late 1950s, especially in the hard-core segregationist states of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, South Carolina and Georgia.

By 1957, the Fund for the Republic money had run out. SRC was broke. Dr. Mitchell—who on an earlier occasion had come to the rescue of SRC by borrowing on his life insurance—wanted to retire to the academic life he had left years before.

The end of an era of pioneer ideal-

Continued

Georgia's Apprehensive Liberals

ism was at hand. Now a new school of young pragmatists took over, with a new grant from the Fund for the Republic to support the research, inquiry, public relations and administrative service which became the hallmark of SRC.

The earlier era to which Dr. Mitchell belonged had been one in which the liberal movement in the South coalesced around a few personalities, white men and women mostly with backgrounds in social service and with wide acquaintance on the fringes of the power structure.

Typical of this era was the way in which Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames, field secretary for the old Commission on Interracial Cooperation, stage-managed the events that led up to the formation of the Southern Regional Council. Mrs. Ames, called by a contemporary "a splendid tactician and a good organizer," wrote to a leading Negro educator suggesting the all-Negro meeting that later materialized at Durham, N.C. "The initiative should be taken by Southern Negroes. I can promise you cooperation from Southern white people."

She made good the promise. There were 292 signers of the statement issued by prominent white Southerners at Atlanta in April, 1943, agreeing with the prominent Negroes at the Durham Conference that "it is a wicked notion that the struggle by the Negro for citizenship is a struggle against the best interests of the nation. . . ."

Dr. Mitchell went into public service from the faculty of Columbia University. He was the son of a university president and grandson of a president of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville. Education was in his bones. He had been a professor of economics at Columbia; he believed that support for changes in the South would come from the grass roots. In this, he shared a concept of the great Southern sociologist, Howard Washington Odum of the University of North Carolina, who has been called "the intellectual midwife of the Southern Regional Council."

Odum wanted SRC to be "an immense catalyst furthering his dream of regional development." Leslie Dunbar, SRC executive director from 1961 to 1965, made this assessment of what Odum, a charter board member of SRC, gave to the organization:

"True to Odum's view that the racial relations of the South could not be changed and perfected by a frontal assault, but only by encountering and solving them in the context of the other political, social, educational, and economic problems of the region, the council set out in its early days with all these interests.

Staff Photograph

THE COUNCIL issues many publications, and the Georgia Department of Labor calls it a propaganda outfit.

Very soon, however, its program focused on race, and has stayed there. Odum's great strategy was artificial; race so undercuts and overhangs every Southern problem that none can be rationally treated without first wresting it from enslavement to a debilitating system of race relations."

In the 1940s, when the burgeoning membership of the SRC was called by one writer "a 3,000-member network for the prevention of race riots and lynchings," there were many persons on the roster who thought of race relations in terms of the absence of violence rather than of the presence of justice. In was inevitable they would quit one day. Dunbar's evaluation was: ". . . . The liberal moment (of the Atlanta Statement by whites in 1943) passed and prestigious names deserted the infant (SRC) they had helped birth. . . . Negroes turned to the more immediately productive leadership of the NAACP lawyers to advance their cause. . . ."

SRC was forced by circumstances to look inward, to become pragmatic and to embark on a highly centralized program of fact-finding and synthesizing. It went to work on the decision-makers, North and South: Big businessmen, top political leaders, editors, educators.

THE OLD "network" was gone. In its place was a board of lay members, about 100 of them, comprising a very large chunk of the progressive leadership of the South, and from SRC headquarters a growing array of publications.

Pat Watters, a former Atlanta newspaperman who is director of information for SRC, says that the publications fall somewhere between day-by-day reporting and the footnoted theses of scholarship.

Watters can check facts and interpretations in manuscripts he reads with board members all over the South, in many walks of life. He does, often.

Unless present plans change, the diversity of SRC endeavors will intensify, not diminish, with the years. The current executive director, slim, amiable, bespectacled young Paul Anthony, who has been on the scene since 1956, presides over a staff that grew by 60 per cent in a single year, 1965-66, and over a budget that tops $1 million. More than half that sum was used for grants to support the work of other groups and agencies.

PAUL ANTHONY, the present executive director, came on the staff in the late 1950s with a group of young pragmatists. George Mitchell, right, executive director from 1947 to 1957, typified the pioneer idealists.

The voter-education project, budgeted for $325,000, is a cooperative, nonpartisan effort. Grants to national and local organizations and even some individuals are contingent upon their actually being in the field, working to educate Negroes about registration and getting them actually signed up to vote.

Some of the organizations in the field are of the boldly militant stripe. However, SRC isn't a civil-rights body in the classical sense of the word. As a former executive director, Harold C. Fleming, now of the Potomac Institute in Washington, D.C., says: "The council has been a middle ground, and that has been important. The council has avoided being just one more 'polarized' civil-rights group."

He might have added that SRC doesn't fling money around indiscriminately. When it does make a grant, SRC's bookkeepers take careful account of where the money goes. So does the auditing firm which SRC keeps on a retainer basis. Undoubtedly this sense of financial responsibility has encouraged the foundations—Ford, Field, Taconic, Rockefeller Brothers Fund and others—to support SRC projects.

But Anthony worries lest his organization develop the image of a rich uncle to be tapped for occasional, sizable advances by its "family." Nor does he want SRC's good reputation for handling foundation money to turn it into simply the "banker" for civil-rights projects. "We should be doing pilot research," he says. "We're not a program agency; we ought to concentrate on showing what can be done—then let others use our ideas as springboard for their particular needs."

On SRC's staff are people with specialized backgrounds, and they are looking into the South's penal system and studying urban planning and urban renewal in Southern metropolitan centers. The judicial system has been under scrutiny. The voter-education project has been renewed to provide citizenship and leadership training. Ways and means of stimulating poor people—both urban and rural—to help themselves are being tried in actual situations. Support of the state human relations councils continues, although the hostility of racist groups in some states is still so strong that councils there have never been able to get off the defensive long enough to work creatively in race relations.

Paul Anthony sees this conspicuous alteration in the situation: There is resistance to Negro demands on the part of many "defiant and confused whites" who thought the Negro had achieved equal opportunity. Now many Negroes are questioning whether integration can be achieved within our democratic society.

In this atmosphere of—tension and distrust—epitomized by the presence of Lester Maddox in Georgia's governor's office—the council has its work cut out. "It isn't that our audience backslid," Anthony said a trifle ruefully. "It's rather that we overestimated their understanding." □

34 - Social Research

TABLES: RURAL-FARM LEVEL OF LIVING INDEXES FOR TWO SOUTHEASTERN STATES

Abbott L. Ferriss

Table I

Index of Self-Sufficing Resources: Mississippi Rural-Farm Population, 1940

Correlation of Items

	1	2	3	4	5
1
2	.4707
3	.3879	.3490
4	.3168	.0384	.4876
5	.4368	.2417	.5378	.4655
6	.2382	-.0569	.3276	.6729	.7131

1 - Number of cows and heifers over two years old per capita farm population.
2 - Number of hogs and pigs over four months old per capita farm population.
3 - Number of chickens over four months old per capita farm population.
4 - Value of vegetables (exclusive of irish and sweet potatoes) grown for home use (1939 dollars), per capita farm population.
5 - Percentage of farms reporting tree fruits, nuts and grapes (any trees, vines or production) to total farms.
6 - Per farm value of farm products used by farm households.

Formula for factor loadings:

$$SS = .5516\ z_1 + .3172\ z_2 + .6631\ z_3 + .7245\ z_4 + .8196\ z_5 + .7450\ z_6$$

Formula for computation:

$$SS = 1.986\ x_1 + 1.149\ x_2 + .5917\ x_3 + .3518\ x_4 + 3.817\ x_5 + .01968\ x_6$$

Table II

Index of Material Living: Mississippi Rural-Farm Population, 1940

Correlation of Items

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
1
2	.6066
3	.5720	.5803
4	-.4800	-.1187	-.2586
5	.6756	.5672	.6031	-.4551
6	.8016	.6985	.4830	-.3072	.4244
7	.1273	.1038	.2617	.0925	.2879	-.0369
8	.1703	.2887	.1467	-.1373	.0620	.2235	-.3196
9	.4552	.2665	.2668	-.3796	.4841	.3084	-.2257	.4286
10	.6325	.3418	.3496	-.3843	.7125	.4356	.4122	-.2237	.1521

1 - Ratio of farms reporting new autos and trucks (1936-40) to total farms.
2 - Percent of total rural-farm dwellings lighted by electricity.
3 - Percent of total farms reporting telephones.
4 - Median number of persons per room, rural farm population.
5 - Percent of rural farm homes with radio.
6 - Percent of rural farm dwelling units with running water in dwelling.
7 - Percent of rural farm houses reporting the need of major repairs.
8 - Median value of rural farm owner-occupied homes.
9 - Median monthly rental of rural farm tenant-occupied houses.
10 - Percent of rural farm owner-occupied houses.

Formula for factor loadings:

$$M = 1.112\ z_1 + .895\ z_2 + .844\ z_3 - .606\ z_4 + 1.014\ z_5 + .958\ z_6 + .212\ z_7 + .257\ z_8 + .605\ z_9 + .832\ z_{10}$$

Formula for computation:

$$M = .3069\ x_1 + .1196\ x_2 + .3625\ x_3 - 8.133\ x_4 + .1026\ x_5 + .2464\ x_6 + .0194\ x_7 + .0178\ x_8 + .7349\ x_9 + .0407\ x_{10}$$

Table III

Index of Agricultural Income and Resources: Mississippi Rural-Farm Population, 1940

Correlation of Items

	1	2	3
2	.7634
3	-.2704	-.4340
4	.7937	.7727	-.4619

1 - Average value of land and buildings per farm.
2 - Average value of implements and machinery per farm.
3 - Average value of livestock per farm: domestic animals, poultry, bees.
4 - Average value of all farm products sold and traded by farm households per farm.

Formula for factor loadings:

$$AIR = .8596\ z_1 + .8766\ z_2 - .4908\ z_3 + .8995\ z_4$$

Formula for computation:

$$AIR = .01558\ x_1 + .03435 x_2 - .00799\ x_3 + .05192\ x_4$$

Table IV

Composite Level of Living Index: Mississippi Rural-Farm Population, 1940

Correlation of Items

	1	2
2	.7217
3	-.4809	-.0388

1 - Index of Self-Sufficing Resources
2 - Index of Material Living
3 - Index of Agricultural Income and Resources

Formula for factor loadings:

$$CLL = .8933\ z_1 + .7745\ z_2 - .4207\ z_3$$

Formula for computation:

$$CLL = .04990\ x_1 + .04679\ x_2 - .02120\ x_3$$

Table V

Indices of Level of Living: Mississippi Rural-Farm Population, 1940

LEVEL OF LIVING INDEXES

County	I	II	III	IV	County	I	II	III	IV
Adams	24	9	15	23	Jones	36	50	21	47
Alcorn	43	43	14	48	Kemper	31	13	7	30
Amite	37	25	11	38	Lafayette	30	25	12	34
Atalla	40	23	10	38	Lamar	43	40	18	46
Benton	25	20	8	30	Lauderdale	28	43	20	40
Bolivar	10	18	71	9	Lawrence	27	21	14	30
Calhoun	53	38	14	51	Leake	37	23	15	36
Carroll	27	19	13	30	Lee	32	48	20	44
Chickasaw	23	21	10	29	Leflore	15	21	57	15
Choctaw	42	27	6	42	Lincoln	33	35	13	40
Claiborne	28	16	14	28	Lowndes	24	29	22	31
Clarke	34	32	12	39	Madison	15	12	23	18
Clay	45	26	8	43	Marion	37	29	17	38
Coahoma	2	22	100	0	Marshall	11	3	13	14
Copiah	24	32	15	34	Monroe	29	33	20	36
Covington	21	36	18	34	Montgomery	43	32	13	44
DeSoto	21	16	32	21	Neshoba	44	26	18	40
Forrest	67	64	22	68	Newton	48	25	17	42
Franklin	44	25	5	42	Noxubee	13	0	10	15
George	59	46	14	58	Oktibbeha	29	22	12	32
Greene	62	33	10	54	Panola	17	16	19	22
Grenada	43	16	13	36	Pearl River	58	66	40	61
Hancock	90	67	15	82	Perry	52	33	11	49
Harrison	52	89	44	68	Pike	29	42	17	40
Hinds	22	22	20	27	Pontotoc	40	35	13	44
Holmes	21	11	25	20	Prentiss	44	39	12	48
Humphreys	11	18	56	12	Quitman	16	23	61	16
Issaquena	9	17	79	6	Rankin	45	31	21	42
Itawamba	39	28	10	40	Scott	52	30	15	47
Jackson	100	100	28	100	Sharkey	13	30	75	15
Jasper	44	28	14	42	Simpson	39	27	16	39
Jefferson	23	9	5	25	Smith	50	31	17	46
Jeff Davis	22	32	20	32	Stone	74	61	13	72

Table V Continued
LEVEL OF LIVING INDEXES

County	I	II	III	IV	County	I	II	III	IV
Sunflower	16	24	58	17	Warren	54	33	18	48
Talahatchie	17	17	39	18	Washington	9	18	78	7
Tate	21	20	22	25	Wayne	53	19	8	44
Tippah	42	28	11	42	Webster	44	35	7	47
Tishomingo	43	31	11	44	Wilkinson	44	12	0	38
Tunica	0	10	71	0	Winston	38	20	10	36
Union	44	43	15	49	Yalobusha	34	26	10	37
Walthall	26	27	17	32	Yazoo	22	16	28	23

Table VI
Index of Self-Sufficing Resources: North Carolina Rural-Farm Population, 1940
Correlation of Items

	1	2	3	4	5
2	-.0045
3	.3187	.2828
4	.4473	.1000	.1281
5	.5151	-.1332	.0147	.5078
6	.5181	.0814	.0920	.8816	.5886

Formula for factor loadings:

$$SS = .6352\ z_1 + .0556\ z_2 + .1921\ z_3 + .8875\ z_4 + .6750\ z_5 + .9235\ z_6$$

Formula for computation:

$$SS = .050\ x_1 + .031\ x_2 + .012\ x_3 + .188\ x_4 + .046\ x_5 + .076\ x_6$$

Note: For identification of items, see Table I.

Table VII
Index of Material Living: North Carolina Rural-Farm Population, 1940
Correlation of Items

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
2	.4972
3	.4323	.5936
4	-.5349	-.3770	-.3803
5	.5335	.8120	.4309	-.5669
6	.3532	.5626	.5099	-.2354	.4802
7	.0717	.5041	.1627	-.0899	.4161	.4175
8	.6688	.8308	.5549	-.3766	.7446	.5980	.3744
9	.7513	.5760	.5306	-.3063	.4646	.2649	.1278	.7164
10	.5679	.6100	.3760	-.2150	.5971	.3666	.2990	.7507	.7322
11	-.0355	.2535	.2633	-.4081	.3174	.5010	.2691	.0952	-.2611	-.1588

For identification of items 1-6, see Table II.

7 - Percent of rural farm dwellings not needing major repairs.
8 - Percent of rural farm dwellings with mechanical refrigerator.
For identification of items 9-11, see Table II, items 8-10, respectively.

Formula for factor loadings:

$$ML = .7285\ z_1 + .8784\ z_2 + .6489\ z_3 - .5228\ z_4 + .8345\ z_5 + .6252\ z_6 + .4168\ z_7 + .9140\ z_8 + .7358\ z_9 + .7449\ z_{10} + .2212\ z_{11}$$

Formula for computation:

$$ML = .107\ x_1 + .065\ x_2 + .146\ x_3 - .049\ x_4 + .090\ x_5 + .098\ x_6 + .028\ x_7 + .138\ x_8 + .288\ x_9 + .821\ x_{10} + .013\ x_{11}$$

Table VIII
Index of Agricultural Income and Resources: North Carolina Rural-Farm Population 1940
Correlation of Items

	1	2	3
2	.7964
3	.6810	.6210
4	.5110	.3195	.6044

Formula for factor loadings:

$$AIR = .2807\ z_1 + .2397\ z_2 + .2355\ z_3 + .1516\ z_4$$

Formula for computation

$$AIR = .033\ x_1 + .026\ x_2 + .027\ x_3 + .006\ x_4$$

Note: For identification of items, see Table III

Table IX

Composite Level of Living Index: North Carolina Rural-Farm Population, 1940

Correlation of Items

	1	2
2	.257
3	-.508	.416

1 - Index of Self-Sufficing Resources
2 - Index of Material Living
3 - Index of Agricultural Income and Resources

Formula for factor loading:

$$CLL = -.6068\ z_1 + .2672\ z_2 + .7790\ z_3$$

Formula for computation:

$$CLL = -.03505\ x_1 + .01425\ x_2 + .04008\ x_3$$

Table X

Indices of Level of Living: North Carolina Rural-Farm Population, 1940

	LEVEL OF LIVING INDEXES
County	I	II	III	IV	County	I	II	III	IV
Alamance	56	71	53	53	Johnston	32	24	48	53
Alexander	45	27	20	32	Jones	23	7	44	52
Alleghany	75	31	34	26	Lee	38	32	37	46
Anson	28	10	37	46	Lenoir	25	35	57	64
Ashe	52	14	22	27	Lincoln	55	40	45	43
Avery	64	17	13	17	McDowell	61	27	18	23
Beaufort	26	19	54	58	Macon	69	9	10	11
Bertie	20	15	46	56	Madison	62	6	15	17
Bladen	25	12	27	42	Martin	25	18	69	67
Brunswick	35	7	20	33	Mecklenburg	36	63	67	69
Buncombe	63	57	24	31	Mitchell	69	24	12	15
Burke	52	35	21	31	Montgomery	33	16	27	39
Cabarrus	38	58	53	60	Moore	34	28	29	42
Caldwell	38	41	18	37	Nash	29	23	50	55
Camden	27	34	82	76	New Hanover	25	100	100	100
Carteret	28	31	38	51	Northampton	20	6	51	57
Caswell	30	26	33	46	Onslow	21	9	30	45
Catawba	61	53	39	40	Orange	79	40	45	32
Chatham	40	26	31	40	Pamlico	36	25	46	50
Cherokee	48	7	2	16	Pasquotank	31	32	97	82
Chowan	28	30	76	72	Pender	29	20	29	43
Clay	75	7	6	6	Perquimons	29	22	61	61
Cleveland	42	39	50	52	Person	34	18	37	45
Columbus	30	15	35	45	Pitt	13	30	65	73
Craven	27	24	43	53	Polk	54	26	19	27
Cumberland	24	17	40	51	Randolph	41	44	31	43
Currituck	30	34	55	60	Richmond	23	18	38	51
Dare	100	55	35	19	Robeson	19	13	46	56
Davidson	49	72	45	52	Rockingham	42	47	35	46
Davie	45	37	52	51	Rowan	54	70	61	59
Duplin	29	12	34	44	Rutherford	45	42	24	37
Durham	47	52	46	50	Sampson	28	17	36	47
Edgecombe	16	21	84	80	Scotland	0	7	45	63
Forsyth	57	75	59	57	Stanley	49	39	42	44
Franklin	34	18	40	46	Stokes	54	25	29	32
Gaston	54	50	52	50	Surry	50	28	30	35
Gates	34	23	45	50	Swain	77	0	0	0
Graham	63	2	0	7	Transylvania	50	38	19	31
Granville	41	19	43	45	Tyrrell	30	12	44	49
Greene	17	36	70	75	Union	39	30	39	46
Guilford	59	76	56	55	Vance	40	20	48	48
Halifax	24	3	64	62	Wake	42	41	55	55
Harnett	31	30	50	56	Warren	32	7	33	41
Haywood	65	30	33	30	Washington	30	17	50	54
Henderson	61	52	30	34	Watauga	52	26	24	30
Hertford	21	16	45	55	Wayne	25	27	60	64
Hoke	10	5	43	57	Wilkes	43	18	12	27
Hyde	36	9	39	43	Wilson	22	31	61	66
Iredell	46	41	48	50	Yadkin	44	34	42	46
Jackson	55	11	7	17	Yancey	65	9	9	12

Note: Each of the above series was coded to range from 0 to 100.

Table XI

Coefficients of Correlation and of Determination between Level of Living Indexes I, II, III, and IV, North Carolina and Mississippi Rural-Farm Population, 1940, and Other Specified Indexes

State and Index		Level of Living Indexes
		I	II	III	IV
Mississippi B.A.E. Rural Farm Index, 1940	r	.682	.828	-.131	.759
	r^2	.46	.69	.02	.58
North Carolina B.A.E. Rural Farm Index, 1940	r	-.101	.728	.644	.596
	r^2	.01	.53	.42	.36
N. C. Agri. Expr. Sta. Index, 1940	r	.666	.837	.089	-.086
	r^2	.44	.70	.01	.01

FARM LAND EDITION

GEORGIA FARMER'S Market Bulletin

TOM LINDER COMMISSIONER

VOLUME 31 WEDNESDAY, MARCH 24, 1948.

Mrs. M. E. Tilly
1013 Highland View, NE
Atlanta, Ga

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

INTERNATIONALISM VS. AMERICANISM

Continued

Editorial By TOM LINDER

Prior to, during and shortly after World War One, the farmers of this country experienced their most profitable years.

During the full term of President Teddy Roosevelt, Congress enacted the Sherman anti-Trust Laws, which were designed to break down trusts and combines in restraint of trade. These laws were intended to force competition in business and industry the same as in agriculture.

In 1908, William Howard Taft, was [illegible] with the endorsement

King" theory and the rulers of those nations through intermarriage of the ruling houses were all relatives and kinspeople.

The International Bankers of the world, together with the business and industrial heads of Europe, considered that form of government as being conservative and substantial. At that time they considered the United States as being a radical government which could not endure.

After the Armistice of November, 1918, the internationalists considered Bolshevist Russia as the danger spot where he lived until just prior to the beginning of the second World War.

The government in Germany was changed to that of a republic roughly resembling that of the United States and the military leader of World War One, Prince Paul Von Hindenburg, was made President of Germany.

On account of the destruction wrought on the economy and finance of Germany and the great drain on her manpower by World War One, together with reparations assessed against Germany by the Allies, Germany was never able to recuperate under a form of government to which it was not accustomed, and

INTERNATIONALISM VS. AMERICANISM

Editorial By TOM LINDER

Prior to, during and shortly after World War One, the farmers of this country experienced their most profitable years.

During the full term of President Teddy Roosevelt, Congress enacted the Sherman anti-Trust Laws, which were designed to break down trusts and combines in restraint of trade. These laws were intended to force competition in business and industry the same as in agriculture.

In 1908, William Howard Taft, was elected President with the endorsement and support of Teddy Roosevelt.

The prosecution by the Federal Government of some of the trusts under the Sherman Trust Laws resulted in a fine of 29 million dollars against the Standard Oil Company. Other prosecutions resulted in punishment to other giant combines.

Under the Sherman anti-Trust Laws the Standard Oil Company was broken down into a number of smaller corporations, such as Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, Standard Oil Company of Ohio and Standard Oil Company of Kentucky, etc.

What had been a nation-wide trust in oil was divided into a number of smaller businesses and other large corporate interests were also forced to divide into smaller groups, thereby creating competition in the different lines of business and industry.

The result of this break-down of giant trusts was to give the law of supply and demand and the law of competition a chance to operate. The result was that, during the years of the Taft Administration, industry, business and agriculture were more nearly equalized with each other than at any other time.

It was for this reason that the Congress in 1933 elected to take the four years of the Taft Administration as the base period from which to figure parity on agricultural products.

It is very important, therefore, for the farmers to understand the reason why these years were selected as the base period, and also why the parity has failed to work out in practice because of changing conditions from the base period down to the present.

For generations, prior to World War One, the major nations of Europe were set up under the old "divine right of King" theory and the rulers of those nations through intermarriage of the ruling houses were all relatives and kinspeople.

The International Bankers of the world, together with the business and industrial heads of Europe, considered that form of government as being conservative and substantial. At that time they considered the United States as being a radical government which could not endure.

After the Armistice of November, 1918, the internationalists considered Bolshevist Russia as the danger spot for the overthrow of constituted authority and business in Europe.

In 1917, the oppressed people of Russia, in the midst of World War One, had revolted from the rulership of their Royal House, which was known by the name of Romanov (Romanoff).

The Bolsheviks had murdered the members of the Royal House and had confiscated their estates.

During the decade following World War One, the International Bankers expected to see the restoration of the ruling houses of Europe. They expected to go back to the days of "the divine right of Kings".

During the decade from 1919 to 1929, the agriculture of the United States, as well as business and financial structure, were wrecked in order that the International Bankers could collect their loans from European countries in American dollars.

At the beginning of World War One, Germany was the greatest industrial and financial country in Europe and was further advanced in scientific research, although the independent spirit and unequaled initiative of Americans had caused the United States to outstrip all others in inventive genius and in self-reliance.

For many years, prior to and during World War One, the ruling House of Germany were the Hohenzollerns of which the ruler member was known as the "Kaiser". The last Kaiser, who ruled during World War One, was named Wilhelm Hohenzollern.

At the close of World War One, the United States, England and the other Allies, in order to insure that Germany would never regain her strength as a nation, exiled the Kaiser to Holland, where he lived until just prior to the beginning of the second World War.

The government in Germany was changed to that of a republic roughly resembling that of the United States and the military leader of World War One, Prince Paul Von Hindenburg, was made President of Germany.

On account of the destruction wrought on the economy and finance of Germany and the great drain on her manpower by World War One, together with reparations assessed against Germany by the Allies, Germany was never able to recuperate under a form of government to which it was not accustomed, and which was not suited to the conglomerate population of people who constituted the German states.

It followed, therefore, as a matter of course, that inflation ran rampant and that the German people who owned the land, houses and businesses in Germany fell easy prey to the intrigues of people who, through the centuries, have fattened on the financial distress of fallen nations.

We have seen in a former article how the Internationalists, through funds raised in the United States and other countries, flocked into Germany and took over the land, houses and other properties belonging to the German people.

Not only this, but these people of other races, with the protection of the occupation forces of the Allies, entrenched themselves in all the better jobs such as railway engineers, railway conductors, etc.

Therefore, a condition existed in Germany very much akin to conditions in the southern states during the Reconstruction Period following the War Between the States.

It was in this atmosphere and condition that these Internationalists came to accept the idea of forced impoverishment and subjugation of "the caucasian people of the world", beginning with those in Germany.

The need for preservation of the Germanic people against the hordes of mongrel people among whom they lived gave rise to Hitler who seized upon the opportunity in his ambition to become ruler first of Germany and then of the countries that surrounded Germany.

The flocking to Hitler of the German people was motivated very much in the

(Continued on Page Eight)

Georgia Farmers'

Market Bulletin

Tom Linder Commissioner

VOLUME 38 WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28, NUMBER 50

MISS. Anna Holden
1440 No. Emory Rd, NE
Atlanta, 6, Ga

THE WATCHMAN'S ALARM.
AMERICA WHERE ARE THY SONS!

Editorial By TOM LINDER

Thy sons are many. On the battle fields of the world. They march and fight. They lay down their lives. They suffer lifelong agonies. They raise up sons who in turn march behind thy banners. They man thy ships of war. They fly in the heavens above the earth. They go down under the sea. They give their all for thee, oh America.

In the field, in the forest, in the mine, thou hast other sons and daughters who labor from the breaking of the day until Abraham, grafted on from among the Gentiles by Jesus Christ and according to the Holy Word from Him through His chosen apostle Paul.

When the sons in high places of Israel forgot their God and took unto themselves strange wives and tore down the altars of the most high God, they were warned by the prophets of old of the anger of the Lord and of the terrible punishment He would bring upon them because of their unfaithfulness.

Likewise, thou, oh America, thy sons they have entered into unholy alliances with other nations which have long forgot the God of thy youth and whom, according to Holy Writ, will be cast into hell with all the wicked. Thy sons in high places, oh America, have entered into writings of agreement with the lands that lie beyond the Euphrates River, kings of the sunrise. With the peoples of the sons of Canaan whom thy God said should serve thee. With the old world lands of the Gentiles, of isles and coastlines of Europe, and in the uttermost parts of the earth.

MISS. ANNA HOLDEN
1440 No. EMORY Rd, NE
Atlanta, 6, Ga

THE WATCHMAN'S ALARM.

AMERICA WHERE ARE THY SONS!

Editorial By TOM LINDER

Thy sons are many. On the battle fields of the world. They march and fight. They lay down their lives. They suffer lifelong agonies. They raise up sons who in turn march behind thy banners. They man thy ships of war. They fly in the heavens above the earth. They go down under the sea. They give their all for thee, oh America.

In the field, in the forest, in the mine, thou hast other sons and daughters who labor from the breaking of the day until after the sun has gone down. They labor to produce food for their tables, clothes for their body. They labor without ceasing. They raise up other sons and daughters to serve thee.

America, where are thy sons in high places? Those whom God hath appointed to make just laws to see that justice is done. To lead thy sons in war against thine enemies. To guard thee against encroachments of all nations. To keep thee in the way that the Lord hath anointed for thee.

Thy sons in high places, oh America, are far from thee, whilst thine other sons and daughters hath sought to nourish thee and to protect thee. Thy sons in high places have opened thy gates and brought into thy bosom the infidel, the communist, and many peoples from races which abhor thee.

From the four corners of the earth they do not cease to bring in infidels, worshipers of gods other than thine own, and seek to utterly destroy thee by the unholy mixing of bloods contrary to the laws of God and in obedience to the teaching of the serpent of Eden, the anti-Christ who goeth up and down the earth seeking whom he may devour and whom he may turn from the true God.

Thy God, oh America, took thee in swaddling clothes from across the sea and carried thee to a land of milk and honey. Through the storms of ocean He preserved thee from death. Among the dangers of the wilderness He was with thee and kept thee because of His promise on Mt. Ararat that the sons of Japheth should dwell in the tents of Shem. Thou wast chosen from among all the daughters of the earth to be a bright and morning star. Among the Gentiles thou wast chosen to be a city of refuge for the holy seed of Abraham, grafted on from among the Gentiles by Jesus Christ and according to the Holy Word from Him through His chosen apostle Paul.

When the sons in high places of Israel forgot their God and took unto themselves strange wives and tore down the altars of the most high God, they were warned by the prophets of old of the anger of the Lord and of the terrible punishment He would bring upon them because of their unfaithfulness.

Likewise, thou, oh America, thy sons in high places and thy people have been warned by prophets and apostles of the destruction that will be visited upon thee, if thou forgettest the God of thy youth and goeth off after strange peoples.

Thy sons in high places, oh America, have not only done all these things, but they have entered into unholy alliances with other nations which have long forgot the God of thy youth and whom, according to Holy Writ, will be cast into hell with all the wicked. Thy sons in high places, oh America, have entered into writings of agreement with the lands that lie beyond the Euphrates River, kings of the sunrise. With the peoples of the sons of Canaan whom thy God said should serve thee. With the old world lands of the Gentiles, of isles and coastlines of Europe, and in the uttermost parts of the earth.

Even today, oh America, thy sons in high places, the judges of thy people under thy laws have declared that thine own constitution, the handiwork of thy first sons under the guiding inspiration of the God of thy youth is no longer the law

(Continued on page Four)

UNITED NATIONS

By Congressman Wint Smith

6th District, Kansas

Under the Charter of the United Nations, a supreme court consisting of Chinese, Russians, Arabs, Jews, Italians and French can make any law it chooses and ratify it. This all leads to a world government. The United Nations is a godless creation. It officially denies God and particularly denies Christ. No good American should ever think of surrendering in any manner the sovereignty of the United States.

A treaty proposed by the President can be ratified by two thirds of the Senate members present and voting.

In April of 1950, the District Court of Appeals in California in the case of Fujii vs. State, 217 Pac (2d) 481, has unanimously held the California law which prohibited persons who could not become citizens from owning land in California invalid, not because it violated the Constitution of the United States but because it violated the Charter of the United Nations.

The United States Supreme Court has virtually held in so many words in comparatively recent decisions that the treaty making power of the President and the Senate is unlimited.

It is, therefore, virtually certain that unless we withdraw from the United Nations or secure an amendment to its charter or amend Article Six of our own Federal Constitution, all segregation laws, all laws prohibiting intermarriage of races, all laws fixing national quotas for immigration, and all laws which in some ways affect different races, different religions, different sexes, and different language speaking peoples will fail. This is already the Supreme law of the land. The Charter of the United Nations was a treaty.

I am sure we all remember when President Truman seized the steel companies last year. The Constitution gave him no power to take private property—so said a majority of the Supreme Court. But remember that the three dissenting judges said that our ratification of the UN had given our President power to seize private property, in defiance of our Constitution. Had these three judges been able to persuade two more judges to their way of thinking—our Constitution would be dead and we would be completely at the mercy of the United Nations. Under the theory that the UN is dominantly foreign, could ship us anywhere and try us for treason.

BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS PERTAINING TO SEGREGATION INTRODUCED IN THE GEORGIA GENERAL ASSEMBLY
JANUARY 1955

S.B. No. 40, by Senator Overby of the 33rd District. Enacted into Law.

A BILL

To be entitled an Act to provide that no State or local funds shall be in any manner appropriated or expended for public school purposes except for schools in which the white and colored races are separately educated; to provide that no budget under Sections 32-619 and 32-620 of the Code of this State shall be approved which does not so provide; and to provide that no funds shall be expended for public schools within the district submitting such budget without approval of such budget; to provide punishment for violation of any of the provisions of this Act; to provide for recovery at law on behalf of the State for violation thereof; to provide that this Act shall apply to all public school systems in this State created at any time; to repeal conflicting laws; and for other purposes.

SECTION 1. BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF GEORGIA, and it is hereby enacted by authority of the same, that no State or local funds derived from taxation or otherwise, shall be appropriated, paid out, used, or in any wise expended, directly or indirectly, for the maintenance, upkeep, operation, or support of any public school district or system in this State which does not provide separate schools for white and colored children throughout the entire district or system and in which all the white and colored children attending public schools do not attend separate schools; nor shall any such money be appropriated, used, paid out, or in any wise expended, directly or indirectly, for the payment of any salary or compensation of any nature or character whatsoever to any teacher, instructor, employee or official of any public school district or system instructing mixed classes of white and colored children or in any wise concerned in the maintenance, upkeep, support or operation of any public school district or system which does not maintain and provide separate public schools for white and colored children throughout the entire district or system and in which all the white and colored children attending public schools are not educated in separate schools; provided, however, that the provisions of this Section shall not apply to the annual capital outlay funds allotted to the local school units as referred to in the General Appropriations Act approved February 20, 1953, or to any funds hereafter appropriated for capital outlay purposes, nor to funds for payment of principal or interest on any bonded indebtedness.

SECTION 2. BE IT FURTHER ENACTED BY THE AUTHORITY AFORESAID, that no budget filed or submitted under Sections 32-619 and 32-620 of the Code of this State shall be approved by the State Board of Education, the State Superintendent of Schools, or other official, which does not provide that all items of proposed expenditure set forth therein shall lapse and become void in the event separate schools for white and colored children should not be maintained and operated in the school district, system or unit submitting such budget and throughout the entire district or system and in the event all the white and colored children attending the public schools thereof do not attend separate schools; and no public school system, district or unit in this State or any officer or employee thereof shall make any expenditure of any public funds for the maintenance or operation of such district, system or unit or any school therein until the budget referred to in said sections of the Code shall have been approved by the State Board of Education or the State Superintendent of Schools as provided in said Code Section 32-620; provided, however, said district, system or unit and the officials thereof shall in all events make payment of sums due the State School Building Authority and payment of principal and interest on any bonded indebtedness, the provisions of this Section notwithstanding.

SECTION 3. BE IT FURTHER ENACTED BY THE AUTHORITY AFORESAID, that any official of this State, or of any county, city or school district, system or unit, or any other person who shall offend against any provision of this law, or aid or abet therein, or be in any wise therein concerned, shall be guilty of felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be confined in the penitentiary for a period of not less nor more than two years; and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to conduct the prosecution.

SECTION 4. BE IT FURTHER ENACTED BY THE AUTHORITY AFORESAID, that any official of this State, or of any county, city or school district, system or unit, who shall be in any wise concerned in paying out, using or in any wise expending any State or local funds contrary to the provisions of this law, shall be liable for the amount so paid out, used or in any wise expended, which shall be recovered against him in an action at law in the name of the State, and the sureties on any official bond of such officer shall be likewise jointly and severally liable in such action, and the recovery shall be paid into the State Treasury, it being the duty of the Attorney General to institute such action upon direction of the Governor.

SECTION 5. BE IT FURTHER ENACTED BY THE AUTHORITY AFORESAID, that the provisions of this Act shall apply to all public school systems in this State, including those maintained and operated by counties and cities, including independent local systems, and all public school systems whether created before or after the Constitution of 1877; and this Act shall apply to all counties and cities and school districts within this State and all the officials thereof.

SECTION 6. BE IT FURTHER ENACTED BY THE AUTHORITY AFORESAID, that all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith be, and the same are hereby repealed.

S.B. No.42, by Senator Overby of the 33rd District. Passed Senate, first reading in House only, not reported out of committee.

A BILL

To be entitled An Act providing for the assignment of pupils in the public schools of this State; providing for appeals from assignments made by the Local Superintendent and other Officials and the procedure on such appeals and the authority of the Local Superintendent, Local Board of Education, State Superintendent of Schools and State Board of Education in respect of such assignments and appeals; providing that the State Board of Education shall have authority to make assignments of pupils; to provide that the State Board of Education shall have authority to order educational grants and establishing in in the office of said Board a Grant Register and providing for the payment of educational grants to pupils entered on said Register; to provide for review of assignments and enrollments in the public schools and as to pupils found therein and authority of school officials on such review; to provide that this law shall apply to all public schools in this State whenever created; to repeal conflicting laws; and for other purposes.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF GEORGIA AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. Unless the context otherwise clearly requires, the following terms shall bear the following definitions:

(a) "School District" shall be synonymous with school system, and shall mean and include (1) A County school district or system as provided in the Constitution of 1945, Art. VIII, Sec. V. Par. 1, and the Code of Georgia 1933 as amended, Section 32-901; (2) All other public common school systems in this State not embraced within the foregoing definition, regardless of when or how created, or by what public body operated.

(b) "Local board of education" shall mean the board of education or other body or authority charged by law or ordinance with the control and management of such "school district," as hereinbefore defined.

(c) "Local Superintendent" shall mean the Superintendent or other officer in immediate charge of any school district, as hereinbefore defined.

(d) "Pupil" shall mean any person attending any school district or system as hereinbefore defined.

SECTION 2. Without in any wise impairing his existing authority in respect of assignment of pupils in the public schools, the Local Superintendent shall have authority to assign pupils in the several public schools within the school district in such manner as in his judgment, considering in that connection all information which shall be at his disposal, will best promote the interests of all pupils attending public schools therein, their health and morals, their mental, physical and cultural development, as well as the public health and morals, and every such assignment shall be made consistently with the maintenance of good order within the district and each of its several public schools and maximum attendance in such schools.

SECTION 3. Within 10 days following any assignment by the Local Superintendent, made under authority of this law or otherwise, an appeal may be entered thereon to the local Board of Education by the parent or guardian of the pupil dissatisfied with the assignment of such pupil, or by the parent or guardian of any pupil attending any public school within the school district, or by any citizen resident in the school district, such appeal to clearly set forth in writing the nature of the assignment complained of and the objections thereto, and in the determination of such appeal the local Board of Education shall have the authority conferred by this law upon the Local Superintendent.

SECTION 4. Within 10 days following the order of the local Board of Education on such appeal, an appeal may be entered thereon to the State Superintendent of Schools by any person authorized to enter an appeal to the local Board of Education, upon such person filing in the office of the State Superintendent of Schools a statement of appeal clearly setting forth in writing the order of the local Board of Education and his objections thereto accompanied by a transcript of the records before the local Superintendent and the local Board of Education certified as correct by such local Superintendent and local Board respectively; and in the determination of such appeal the State Superintendent of Schools shall have the authority conferred by this law upon the Local Superintendent.

SECTION 5. Within 10 days following the order of the State Superintendent of Schools on such appeal, an appeal may be made therein to the State Board of Education by any person authorized to enter an appeal to the local Board of Education, upon such person filing in the office of the State Board of Education a statement of appeal clearly setting forth in writing the order of the State Superintendent of Schools and his objections thereto accompanied by a transcript of the record before the State Superintendent of Schools certified by such Superintendent as correct, and the State Superintendent of Schools shall transmit to the State Board of Education a transcript of the records before the Local Superintendent and the Local Board of Education. In the determination of such appeal the State Board of Education shall have the authority conferred by this law upon the Local Superintendent, and said State Board of Education shall make a determination of the matter of said assignment which shall be final and conclusive and not subject to review or inquiry by any Court or tribunal in any manner whatsoever.

SECTION 6. In respect of any assignment made under any other law by the local Board of Education or other public school authority, an appeal may be taken to the State Superintendent of Schools and from his ruling to the State Board of Education in like manner as provided herein by any person authorized hereunder to appeal to the Local Board of Education from an assignment made by the Local Superintendent. The procedure herein provided shall constitute the exclusive method of appeal in respect of all assignments of pupils in the public schools, by whomsoever made and under authority of this law or otherwise, and Section 32-910 of the Code of this State as amended shall not apply thereto; but every assignment or placement of pupils in the public schools of this State shall be subject to appeal as provided herein.

SECTION 7. The State Board of Education shall have authority to make and promulgate rules and regulations governing the several appeals herein provided for and to amend the same from time to time, and shall have authority to extend the time for taking and perfecting any appeal and to permit any appeal to be entered and perfected after the time therefor has expired; and during the pendency of any of the several appeals herein provided for in respect of any assignment of any pupil, said State Board of Education shall have authority to make a temporary assignment of such pupil pending appeal, including the authority to make an assignment contrary to that appealed from, and such temporary assignment so made by the State Board of Education shall be in full force during the pendency of all appeals in respect of the assignment complained of and until final determination thereof, and shall not be subject to review or inquiry by any Court or tribunal in any manner whatsoever.

SECTION 8. It shall be the duty of every pupil as to whose assignment an appeal is entered, and the duty of the parents or guardian of such pupil, to personally appear on the hearing of all appeals in respect of such assignment, and to submit to examination and inquiry in the premises; and appearances by counsel shall not satisfy this requirement for personal appearance but no person shall be prevented from being represented by counsel employed by him on any such hearing.

SECTION 9. At the time of determination of any appeal which comes before it under the provisions of this law, or at any time thereafter, the State Board of Education shall have authority in its discretion to order an educational grant under authority of Article VIII, Section XIII, Par. 1 of the Constitution, for the benefit of the pupil in respect of whose assignment said appeal was entered, in lieu of attendance on the public schools, if said Board shall regard such action necessary for the better education of said pupil or necessary in the interest of public education in the school district or necessary for public health, morals and good order within said district.

SECTION 10. There is hereby established in the office of the State Board of Education a Grant Register upon which the State Board of Education shall enter the names of those pupils for whose benefit it shall order an educational grant as provided in Section 9 hereof. The grant from State funds shall be annually calculated by the State Board of Education and shall be in such amount as shall represent the State funds attributable to an individual pupil in the public school system which said person would be otherwise eligible to attend; the grant from local funds shall be annually calculated by the local Board of Education and shall be in such amount as shall represent the local funds so attributable. The local Board of Education shall furnish the State Board of Education with such local calculations, and the State Board of Education shall make orders for the payment of such grants to the parents or guardians of said pupils as designated therein, who shall expend the same only for the education of such pupils and under the supervision of said Board of Education and in accordance with such rules and regulations as it may prescribe.

SECTION 11. To more effectually accomplish the purposes set out in Section 2 hereof, the State Board of Education, at any time, under such rules and regulations as it may prescribe and amend from time to time, shall have authority to order review (1) of any assignment, enrollment or placement of a pupil in the public schools made under authority of this or any other law and as to which no appeal has been filed (2) in respect of the attendance thereon of any pupil attending or found in any public school; which review shall be first made by the local Superintendent and thereafter respectively by the local Board of Education and State Superintendent of Schools, final and conclusive determination of the review (not subject to review or inquiry by any court or tribunal in any manner whatsoever) to be thereafter made by the State Board of Education. Upon determination of the review by the State Board of Education an educational grant may be ordered as provided in Sections 9 and 10 hereof. Upon ordering review the State Board of Education shall make a temporary assignment of the pupil to some public school and said pupil shall attend such school until final determination of the review by the State Board of Education and such temporary assignment shall not be subject to review or inquiry by any court or tribunal in any manner whatsoever. At each hearing held on review the pupil and his parents or guardian shall personally appear and submit to examination and inquiry in like manner as provided in Section 8 hereof.

SECTION 12. This law shall be applicable to all school districts and all public common school systems in this State, including independent local systems, all public schools operated by counties or cities, and including all systems created before the adoption of the Constitution of 1877 or thereafter.

SECTION 13. All laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

S.B. No.41, by substitute, by Senator Overby of the 33rd District. Read second time January 19, 1955 and referred to Committee on State of Republic.

A BILL

To be entitled An Act to authorize the laying out of attendance districts in any public school district in this State and to provide as to the attendance of pupils on the school located in such attendance district; to provide for appeals in respect thereto; to provide for the authority of local Boards of Education and the State board of Education as to such matters; to provide that this Act shall apply to all school districts in this State created at any time; to repeal conflicting laws; and for other purposes.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Georgia, and it is hereby enacted by authority of the same, that the Local Board of Education of any school district in this State shall have authority to lay out and create within such school district such attendance districts (and to alter and amend the same at any time) as in the judgment of such local Board of Education will best promote public education within the school district and said Local Board of Education in laying out and creating such attendance districts (and in altering and amending the same) may consider roads, school bus routes, distance, school population, and every other matter which, in the judgment of said local board, will best promote public education within the school district, and said local Board of Education shall create and lay out said attendance districts in such manner as shall be consistent with the maintenance of good order within the school district in each of its several schools and maximum attendance thereon and shall place one school within each attendance district.

SECTION 2. Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that said Local Board of Education shall have authority to require the public school pupils within said school district to attend the school located in the attendance district in which such pupil resides, provided, however, this law shall not prevent the assignment of a pupil to another school within the school district or to another school in district pursuant to any law authorizing the assignment of public school pupils or authorizing contracts between districts.

SECTION 3. Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the parent or guardian of any pupil resident in the school district, or the parent or guardian of any pupil resident in the attendance district or required to attend the school within such attendance district, may at any time appeal to the State Board of Education from the order of the Local Board of Education creating and laying out such attendance district, or from any order requiring such pupil to attend the school within such attendance district, which appeal shall clearly set forth in writing the order or requirement complained of and the objections thereto, and said State Board of Education upon the determination of such appeal may in its discretion modify or revise the order creating or laying out such attendance district, or make such order as to school attendance of any pupil residing in said attendance district or required or permitted to attend the school therein, as shall in the judgment of said State Board of Education best promote public education in the several attendance districts of the school district and be consistent with the maintenance of good order within said school district and each of its several schools and maximum attendance thereon, which orders of said State Board of Education shall be final and conclusive in the premises and not subject to review or inquiry by any court or tribunal in any manner whatsoever. Pending any such appeal said State Board of Education shall have authority to give direction as to school attendance within said attendance district and school district respecting any pupil required or permitted to attend the school in said attendance district, and such pupil shall attend only the school directed by said board during the pendency of said appeal, which temporary direction of the State Board of Education shall not be subject to review or inquiry by any court or tribunal in any manner whatsoever.

SECTION 4. Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid: (1) "School District" as used in this law shall be synonymous with "school system," and shall mean and include (a) A County school district or system as provided in the Constitution of 1945, Art. VIII, Sec. V, Par. 1, and the Code of Georgia 1933 as amended, Section 32-901; (b) All other public common school systems in this State not embraced within the fore going definition, regardless of when or how created, or by what public body operated. (2) "Local Board of Education" as used in this law shall mean the Board of Education or other body or authority charged by law or ordinance with the control and management of such "School District" as hereinbefore defined.

SECTION 5. Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that this law shall apply to all school districts and all public common school systems in the State including independent local systems, all public schools operated by counties or cities, including all systems created before the adoption of the Constitution of 1877 as well as all systems created thereafter.

SECTION 6. Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith be, and the same are hereby repealed.

H.B. No.376, by Messrs Lavender of Elbert, Perkins of Carroll, and others. First reading, not reported out of committee.

AN ACT

To provide that any teacher in this State must take an oath that he or she shall not teach the classes with mixed races; to provide that no salary may be paid to any person who does not take said oath; to provide penalties for the violation of this section; to repeal conflicting laws; and for other purposes.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF GEORGIA:

SECTION 1. Any person employed by a common, independent or university school system within this State as a teacher or instructor shall subscribe to an oath that he or she will not teach any class of pupils in which the white and colored races are mixed. It shall be unlawful for any school system which is either directly or indirectly supported by public funds to pay any salary to any person who does not subscribe to the said oath.

SECTION 2. Any person or group of persons who violate the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished therefor.

SECTION 3. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with this Act are hereby repealed.

H.B. No.555, by Messrs. Perkins of Carrol, Kilgore of Gwinnett and many others. Two readings, not reported out of committee.

AN ACT

To prohibit the holding of athlethic events, dances, and other similar activities wherein persons of the Negro race and persons of the white race are permitted to participate together; to provide that persons holding such events, persons participating therein, and persons knowingly permitting such activities on their property or property under their control shall be guilty of a felony; to prescribe punishment therefor; to repeal conflicting laws; and for other purposes.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF GEORGIA:

SECTION 1. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to hold, produce, direct, sponsor, supervise, or otherwise cause to be conducted any athletic contest, game, program or event, open to the public, wherein Negroes or persons of African descent are permitted to play or participate therein with persons of the white race.

SECTION 2. It shall be unlawful for any person, white or Negro, to participate in any such event above described.

SECTION 3. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to hold, produce, direct, sponsor, supervise or otherwise cause to be conducted, any dance wherein Negroes or persons of African descent are permitted to mix, dance, or otherwise participate therein with persons of the white race.

SECTION 4. It shall be unlawful for any person, white or Negro, to dance, or otherwise participate in any such dance above described.

SECTION 5. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation owning, leasing, or having the supervision or control of any property or premises, to knowingly permit or suffer any of the activities defined by the above four sections to be held or conducted thereon.

SECTION 6. Any person violating any of the provisions of this Act shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction therefor, shall be punished by fine not to exceed $2,000.00, imprisonment in the penitentiary not to exceed eighteen months, or both.

SECTION 7. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with this Act are hereby repealed.

H.R. No. 31-84a, by Mr. Fowler of Douglas. Passed.

A RESOLUTION

Memorializing Congress to call a convention for the purpose of considering an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to the administration by the Several states of their respective school systems.

WHEREAS, recent decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States have tended to withdraw from the sovereign states the power to administer their respective school systems in a fashion never contemplated by the ratifiers of the Fourteenth Amendment: and

WHEREAS, this unconscionable usurpation of power, if not restricted, will ultimately result in the destruction of every vestige of state supported and regulated public education.

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring, that the General Assembly of Georgia respectfully petition the Congress of the United States to call a convention for the purpose of proposing the following Article as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States:

"ARTICLE --

"SECTION 1. Anything in this Constitution to the contrary notwithstanding, the several states shall have exclusive authority to regulate, administer and operate their respective educational systems as they may deem necesary and proper, and neither the Congress, the President, nor anything in this Constitution shall in anywise interfere therewith or otherwise affect same.

"SECTION 2. The Supreme Court, the several District Courts and Courts of Appeal, and any and all other federal judicial tribunals, quasi-judicial tribunals, and all administrative or executive agencies, shall have no jurisdiction to decide or consider, either originally, on appeal, or by other means of review, any matter drawing in question the administration by the several states of their respective educational systems."

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the Congress of the United States be, and it hereby is, requested to provide as the mode of ratification that said amendment shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of the Constitution of the United States, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a duly attested copy of this resolution be immediately transmitted to the Secretary of the Senate of the United States, the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States and to each member of the Congress from the State of Georgia.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a duly attested copy of this resolution be immediately transmitted to the governor of every state and the President of the State Senate of every state and the Speaker of the House of every state for the express purpose of encouraging these sovereign states to take similar action in their legislatures.

H.R. No. 23-54a, by Mr. Deen of Bacon. Passed.

A RESOLUTION

Memorializing Congress to call a convention for the considering of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to the operation of state schools.

WHEREAS, the National Government, through the use of various funds and agencies has greatly encroached, directly and indirectly, upon the operation of the State schools; and

WHEREAS, the operation of State schools is, and should remain, an exclusive State function; and

WHEREAS, the continued exercise of various means and methods by the National Government in controlling the operation of State schools tends to encroach upon an exclusive State right;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF GEORGIA, that the legislature of the State of Georgia respectfully petition the Congress of the United States to call a convention for the purpose of proposing the following Article as an Amendment to the Constitution of the United States:

"ARTICLE --

"SECTION 1. Notwithstanding any provision in this Constitution, nothing shall, in any way, take away from, or in any manner deprive, the right of the several States of the Union to operate their school systems, and to have exclusive and complete power to regulate and to determine the rules and regulations for the conduct and operation of State schools.

"SECTION 2. Nothing herein shall prohibit any state from accepting aid in any form from the National Government.

"SECTION 3. This amendment shall be effective upon ratification by three-fourths of the several States."

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the Congress of the United States be, and it hereby is, requested to provide as to the mode of ratification, that said amendment shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of the Constitution of the United States, when ratified by the legislation of three-fourths of the several States.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a duly attested copy of this resolution be immediately transmitted to the Secretary of the Senate of the United States, the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each member of the Congress from the State of Georgia.

rnf
3/22/55

GREENVILLE'S BIG IDEA GROWS

The BIG IDEA refers to the Self Survey of Conditions Affecting the Negro Population of the Greenville, South Carolina Area. The fact finding was conducted by more than 200 citizens of both Negro and white races during the summer and fall of 1949. Committees compiled reports and made recommendations.

The Community Council, working with citizen groups throughout, made these findings available to the public, thus encouraging the translation of the recommendations into action.

The Big Idea began to pay off in specific improvements even during the study, and many additional improvements have come about since. It is difficult to say how many of the results directly came from the study. Perhaps it would be better to say the study contributed to a "climate of opinion," which nourished the findings, stimulated thinking, physical improvements and long range planning. It is this "climate of opinion," undoubtedly, which has made many things possible, and which will continue to influence our people and bring about progressive changes in our community.

The study has been reproduced in two forms: "Everybody's Business," a mimeographed, detailed 85-page booklet, and "Greenville's Big Idea," a smaller, illustrated, printed summary of 32 pages.

"The Big Idea Grows" is an attempt to bring up to date the tangible results of Greenville's Self Survey, realized within four years of the completion and publicizing of the citizens' findings.

COMMUNITY COUNCIL
112 W. McBee Avenue
Greenville, South Carolina

THESE THINGS HAPPENED WHILE THE STUDY WAS BEING MADE:

1. General interest was taken in improving recreational opportunities. An option was taken on land for a State Park.

2. The Greenville American, Negro Newspaper, was published January 1950 to November 1951. It was then combined with the Atlanta World, giving subscribers a larger weekly paper, with sections devoted to local Negro and community news.

3. A maternal care project was begun by the Auxiliary to the County Medical Society.

4. Blinker lights were installed at Negro school crossings for safety.

5. Interest was shown in improving educational opportunities throughout the county.

6. Negro doctors began attending meetings of Greenville Medical Society.

7. A Negro chapter of the Red Cross Gray Ladies was formed, volunteers to serve in Negro wards of the Greenville General Hospital.

8. The YWCA Branch Program for Negroes began experimentally.

9. Better housing was proposed and slum clearance projects got underway.

10. A new elementary school was planned for the Nicholtown area.

11. There was increased awareness of the unhealthy conditions under which many Negro families have had to live.

12. The City Health Department condemned several slum houses.

13. Daily newspapers improved noticeably in handling news about Negroes: the word Negro is now properly capitalized; newsworthy pictures of Negroes are used.

14. City Council appointed a special committee to investigate employment of Negro policemen.

15. Intangible gains of the study:

    a. brought people together, not as people of two races, but as citizens with a common purpose;
    b. strengthened Recreation-Education Division of Community Council;
    c. promoted leadership and purpose in the Negro community itself;
    d. opened channels of communication between white and Negro citizens;
    c. gave citizens specific proposals for community social improvement.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SINCE STUDY WAS COMPLETED?

JULY 1953 - JULY 1954

(1) The Fourth Annual Human Growth and Development Institute was held in September of 1953 and for the first time was interracial.

(2) The Social Workers Luncheon Club, which meets monthly, is interracial.

(3) A Negro Farm Bureau was organized.

(4) New Maternity Shelter built. This institution was formerly for all white; will now accommodate Negro women in one ward. Negro babies have been served here for some time.

(5) Happy Hearts Negro Park received funds from County Legislative Delegation to help operate a similar program.

(6) Negroes continue to be represented on more and more community boards, commissions and committees.

COMPLETION OF SURVEY TO JULY 1953

Community Participation

(1) Two Negro YWCA members were elected to the YWCA Board for the first time.

(2) Community Council membership meetings are now open to all citizens of the community and a Negro is on the Council Board for the first time.

(3) The Annual meeting of Community Chest is open to all citizens. Three Negro citizens are now serving on the Community Chest Budget Committee.

(4) The number of places where interracial meetings are held has been increased. Prior to the study, Negro and white had met together in a few places, but only after the study were places opened broadly. Among the places where such meetings are held at present, are churches (Christ Episcopal, First Baptist, Fourth Presbyterian and others); schools, agencies (Salvation Army, YWCA, Phillis Wheatley, Community Council); public auditoriums (new County Court House, City Hall, County Office Building).

(5) A Negro Business and Professional Men's Club has been organized for the purpose of fostering civic and social betterment of community life.

(6) In a recent Polio drive to select the "most beautiful man," a Negro was given the greatest applause for being most popular among some thirty candidates for the "most beautiful man" contest. This recognition came from an audience made up of mostly white people.

Community Participation (continued)

(7) On July 18th, 1953 at the Parker High School Auditorium, before an all-white audience, a Negro girl won first place among 41 participants on the USA Talent Show contest conducted by a local radio station. The applause meter record determined the winner.

(8) The solicitation of Negroes in the Community Chest Campaign has been largely merged with solicitation of other business and professional divisions of the campaign. The term "Negro Division" has been done away with at the request of the Negroes.

Education

(1) The State General Assembly set up an educational Finance Commission to direct an extensive program to promote the improvement of schools and their physical facilities. Emphasis is being given to the providing of equal facilities for Negroes. Such conditions as double sessions are to be eliminated.

(2) The School District of Greenville County, Number 520 has been created replacing the former system of 82 separate school districts in the county.

(3) Bus transportation for Negro and white children is now on the same basis. For example, at the beginning of the 1951-52 school term, five buses were transporting county students to Sterling High School and one school bus was transporting students between Lowndes Hill Section and Nicholtown School, both for the first time.

(4) Free textbooks are now provided all school children in the county.

(5) There is improved instruction and supervision of education throughout the county.

(6) A new lunch room and rest room have been built in the Brutontown School and the West Greenville School in the Parker District.

(7) A new elementary school of 26 rooms has been completed in the Nicholtown area of Greenville.

(8) Up to January 1, 1953, $1,729,407.28 had been allocated to Greenville County for the purchase of sites and the construction of additions or new buildings for Negro schools of Greenville County. These funds have been made possible through the South Carolina Sales Tax. Some of the major projects, either underway or to be completed in the near future, are: a High School in the southern part of the County in the Fountain Inn Simpsonville Attendance Area; an Elementary School in the Ellen-Woodside Attendance Area, the St. Mark's Elementary School in the Taylors-Greer Area, and the Travelers Rest Elementary School. Eight additional rooms will also be added to the Gower School in Greenville.

Education (continued)

(9) A full physical education and health education program for the entire County is now being conducted for all Negroes with special emphasis being placed on the opportunities after school.

(10) Much interest has been shown in adult education work with the objective of increasing these opportunities whenever possible.

Health

(1) The Gower Street School P.T.A. and City Health Department jointly sponsored a clean-up campaign in that neighborhood.

(2) Greenville General Hospital Board made available staff privileges to doctors, based on medical qualifications and ethical standards.

(3) Two Institutes on Human Growth and Development were planned jointly, the courses being offered Negro and white simultaneously, but at different locations.

(4) Work progressed toward an enlarged General Hospital which will provide many additional facilities and services to Negroes.

(5) The application of physicians to the Greenville County Medical Society is acted upon according to qualifications and ethical standards, without regard to race or creed.

(6) The Human Growth and Development Institute for September 1953 will be non-segregated; previous Institutes have been on a segregated basis.

(7) The three local Negro dentists are helping provide dental care for children who are unable to pay.

(8) Greenville General Hospital has had 40 beds for Negroes; these will be increased, during the coming year, to approximately 70, including semi-private and private accommodations for the first time.

Housing

(1) The City Council took a strong stand relative to Negro housing to make possible a low income Federal Housing Project of 348 units called Field Crest Village. The Project was completed during spring of 1952.

(2) The Roosevelt Heights Housing Project of 300 units was completed during 1950.

(3) The local Housing Authority completed the Slum Clearance Survey which disclosed that of all slum dwellings needing replacement 85% are Negro and 15% white. An effort is being made to improve the slum areas either by a complete re-development or renovation of buildings so they will conform with the City Code, which is considered adequate.

Housing (continued)

(4) A local Negro citizen is developing a restricted Negro residential area which was very much needed.

Industry and Employment

(1) A local radio station was hired for commercial time for the first time in connection with the opening of a new Negro business.

(2) Another Negro cab company with six cabs and its own radio system is now serving the population.

(3) Greenville now has a Negro lawyer who came to the city late in 1951.

(4) A Negro has been employed as Field Representative by a national distributing company to cover several states, including South Carolina.

(5) Four Negroes have been regularly employed as announcers by a local radio station.

(6) A local white-owned business promoted their Negro delivery man to a skilled job in their plant.

(7) During the past four years three Negro postal employees were employed for the first time.

Law Enforcement

(1) Newspapers are favorable to the appointment of Negro policemen, but no action has been taken by the Police Commission.

(2) City Council passed an anti-mask bill.

(3) The Council of Church Women has secured considerable support in its request to establish two rehabilitation camps (one for Negroes, one for whites) for youthful and inexperienced prisoners who are sent to the county prison camps.

(4) The County Delegation appointed a Rehabilitation Board and will approve a sum of $5,000 as extra funds to be used in beginning the rehabilitation program.

(5) The County Delegation has a special Committee studying the entire penal system of the County. Much improvement in the handling of prisoners may come from this study.

(6) The City Civil Service Commission, the City Council, and other responsible groups have no objection to Negroes being appointed as policemen providing they meet the qualifications expected of others who pass examinations.

Recreation

(1) Four Recreational Training Institutes (Social Recreation, Conduct of Playgrounds, and Crafts) have been offered by the Community Council and City Park and Recreation Department. Joint planning for the concurrent institutes was established as a method of work.

(2) The Recreation-Education Division of the Community Council located a site for a Negro State Park in Greenville County; the County Legislative Delegation provided funds to purchase this 300 acre site; a five-year plan of development of the park is underway, with first year funds appropriated by the State Legislature. The park was named Pleasant Ridge State Park. The water dam has been completed and will provide a large area for swimming and boating. Picnic areas will be available, along with some shelters. A new house has been built for the superintendent, who is a Negro, formerly of Greenville. Although funds have not been provided by the Legislature for further development of the park during 1952-53, an effort is being made to secure funds to continue the development plan that has been started. The State Highway Department has promised to pave a road into the park from the main highway.

(3) A new Negro commercial theater was opened January 1951, showing a better class of pictures.

(4) A Negro USO for servicemen was opened in September of 1951. Plans for enlarging and improving the facilities were announced in January of this year.

(5) The first Negro Recreation Supervisor was appointed by the city, February 1, 1951.

(6) The City Parks and Recreation Department enlarged the playground staff. A new lighted softball field was opened, and plans made to develop recreation areas on land made available by two housing projects.

(7) YWCA Branch program began operation under a full time professional leader, paid from Community Chest funds. A building is rented for the Branch Headquarters.

(8) The Study of Phillis Wheatley was completed, as recommended in the Self Survey.

(9) The number of Negro Boy Scout troops increased to 30 from approximately five.

(10) Negroes are being admitted to several large community cultural and religious programs, for instance: Don Cossacks Chorus, Horace Heidt's Amateur Program, etc. Negro citizens are bringing Negro artists to the city - Hazel Scott in 1951, Marian Anderson in 1952 (a non-segregated audience with excellent attendance).

(11) Happy Hearts Park provides a small combination wading-swimming pool. Limited leadership is employed.

Recreation (continued)

(12) Negro P.T.A. groups were stimulated to sponsor Recreation programs in Freetown, Oscar Street, Brutontown.

(13) The Public Library Board purchased a building on East McBee Avenue and established a much improved Negro Branch Library.

(14) The first out-door swimming pool (20 x 40 feet) was built at the Phillis Wheatley Center and opened for use in June, 1953.

(15) The City Council purchased a 49 acre tract of land on which will be developed the first large City Negro Park. A large out-door swimming pool will be ready for use about September 1, 1953. Many other recreational opportunities will be available at this park. The house at the park is serving as an indoor recreation center.

(16) The City Recreation Department opened the Mayberry Park Community Center Building for use on May 23, 1953.

(17) The Greenville Kiwanis Club and the YWCA, in cooperation with the City Recreation Department, sponsored during August 1953 the first Negro Day Camp for girls.

(18) The County Legislative Delegation approved $500 for leadership at Happy Hearts Park for the summer of 1953.

Religious Resources

(1) Several churches have sponsored week-day activities with volunteer leadership.

(2) A Negro Council of Church Women has been formed.

(3) The Episcopal Church has increased activities at the St. Philips Negro Church.

(4) Presbyterian Churches of the city have joined together in buying land, raising money for the construction of a Negro Presbyterian Church in Nicholtown, and supplying a Negro Presbyterian minister during the past year. This will be continued for the present time through the joint support of all local Presbyterian Churches.

(5) White and Negro Baptist leaders are completing plans for establishing a school for the training of Negro ministers and church leaders in upper South Carolina. A group in the First Baptist Church is providing funds for the education of a Negro minister.

(6) Several Negro churches have improved their physical plants by making additions to their church and educational space.

Sanitation

(1) Two downtown businesses, one a department store, have provided rest rooms for Negroes.

Transportation

(1) White and Negro citizens appeared before City Council requesting city bus transportation for 600 local students attending Sterling High School.

(2) Southern Railway improved Negro rest room and drinking facilities.

(3) Extra buses are now being run during peak hours in Nicholtown and Fieldcrest Area.

Welfare

(1) The Mental Hygiene Clinic opened, serving white and Negroes.

(2) A State Industrial School for delinquent Negro girls was built near Columbia.

(3) A volunteer sponsored Day Nursery has been operating in the Fieldcrest Village housing project. This program was initiated by the Tenants Association members who live there.

(4) Several Negro citizens have been active in raising money for a Negro Day Nursery program. It is hoped that another Negro Day Nursery will be opened during the coming year.

(5) A full time day nursery is in operation at the Allen Temple Methodist Church.

Miscellaneous

(1) Modern problems and social studies classes in local white high schools have studied the contents of the study, emphasizing the process. They have heard speakers on phases of the findings and visited Negro groups and facilities for first hand information.

(2) Impetus was also given to people in other communities:

a. Through Southern Regional Council bulletin.
b. Through newspapers and magazine stories appearing in the New York Times, New York Herald Tribune, Christian Science Monitor, daily newspapers throughout the country, Community Chests and Councils of America magazine, National YWCA magazine and many others.
c. Through Conferences with leaders from other towns, held informally at:
   1. Blue Ridge Institute, Blue Ridge, N.C., 1950-53
   2. YWCA Regional Meeting, Atlanta, Ga., 1951

3. Piedmont Regional (South Carolina) Conference of Social Work, Clemson, S.C., 1950.
4. Southern Sociological Society, Atlanta, Georgia, 1950.
5. Southeastern Conference Community Chests and Councils, Edgewater Park, Miss., March 1951.
6. National Conference of Community Chests and Councils, Milwaukee, Wis., February 1952.
7. National Meeting of Community Welfare Council Leaders, Cleveland, Ohio, January 1953.

d. Through requests that have been received from leading libraries throughout the nation asking for copies of the study to be on file in the research departments. Several graduate students have written for more information on the study.

THE COMMUNITY COUNCIL

is interested in maintaining up to date records on all community wide improvements in the fields of health, recreation, education, and general welfare. If the list of improvements listed on the preceding pages is not complete please call the matter to the attention of the Community Council Office. You are also asked to help keep this list up to date in the future. The Council plans to issue annually a report similar to this one and will, therefore, need your help in keeping the list of improved services and opportunities current.

Telephone: 2-1589
112 W. McBee Avenue
P.O. Box 1085
Greenville, South Carolina

COMMUNITY COUNCIL OFFICERS 1953

President: Mrs. David Wilson

First V. President:	Marvin Cannon	Secretary:	Harold J. Weekley
Second V. President:	Dr. Aaron Rutledge	Treasurer:	J.B. Hodges

file under "good eggs"

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION
INSTITUTE OF RACE RELATIONS

AT FISK UNIVERSITY

LECTURERS, CONSULTANTS AND DISCUSSION LEADERS
1944-1946

ABRAHAM, WILLARD (Captain)
Executive Officer
Analysis and Planning Branch, Information and Education Division, ASF, War Department

ALEXANDER, WILL W.
Formerly Director, Farm Security Administration; Director of the Southern Regional Council; Vice President, Julius Rosenwald Fund

ALLPORT, GORDON W.
Chairman, Department of Psychology, Harvard University; Editor, Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology; Author: Personality, a Psychological Interpretation; The Psychology of Radio.

ALPENFELS, ETHEL
Specialist in Anthropology, Bureau for Intercultural Education

ANDES, HOWARD
Manager USES Offices, Nashville, Tennessee

BACOTE, CLARENCE
Professor of History, Atlanta University, Atlanta, Georgia

BEARD, BELLE BOONE
Chairman, Department of Sociology, Sweet Briar College

BELL, WILLIAM Y.
Southern Regional Director, National Urban League; Executive Board, Atlanta Social Planning Council

BICKNELL, MARGUERITE E.
Instructor of Sociology, LeMoyne College

BLACKBURN, CLEO W.
Superintendent, Flanner House, Indianapolis, Indiana.

BLACKWELL, GORDON W.
Director, Institute for Research in Social Sciences, The University of North Carolina.

BLANTON, SMILEY (M. D.)
Director of Consultation Clinic, Marble Collegiate Church, New York; Associate Professor of Clinical Psychology, Vanderbilt University.

BLOCKER, HENRY S.
Assistant State Veteran's Representative, Region VII.

BOND, HORACE MANN
President, Lincoln University, Pa. Author: The Education of the Negro in the American Social Order.

BONTEMPS, ARNA
Librarian, Fisk University. Author: Drums at Dusk; They Seek a City; Golden Slippers; Black Thunder; Sad Faced Boy.

BOYD, WILLIAM
Professor of Political Science and Head of Social Science Department, The Fort Valley State College, Fort Valley, Georgia.

BROOKS, GEORGE W.
Director, Department of Research and Education, International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphate and Paper Mill Workers, A. F. L.

BROWN, INA C.
Visiting Professor of Anthropology, Scarritt College for Christian Workers, Nashville, Tennessee. Author: National Survey of the Higher Education of Negroes.

BROWN, STERLING A.
Professor of English, Howard University, Author: Southern Road, The Negro Caravan, The Negro in American Fiction, Negro Poetry and Drama.

BROWNLEE, FRED L.
General Secretary, American Missionary Association, Division of the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches.

CARNEY, MABEL
Professor of Education Emeritus, Teachers College, Columbia University.

COLLIER, TARLETON
Editorial Writer, The Courier-Journal, Louisville, Kentucky

CULLEN, COUNTEE*
Poet and Teacher, New York City.

DAVAGE, M. S.
Secretary, Methodist Board of Education, Nashville, Tennessee

DAVENPORT, ROY K.
Assistant to Chief Psychologist, The Adjutant General's Office, War Department.

DAVIS, ALLISON
Assistant Professor of Education, The University of Chicago. Author: Deep South, Children of Bondage.

DAVIS, ANNIE LEE
Consultant on Social Services, Social Service Division, Children's Bureau, United States Department of Labor.

DENT, ALBERT
President, Dillard University, New Orleans, Louisiana.

DOMBROSKI, JAMES
Executive Secretary, Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

DUBOIS, RACHEL DAVIS
Director, Intercultural Education Workshop, New York. Author: Get Together Americans, Build Together Americans.

DUNCAN, J. LAWRENCE
Chief of Minority Services, War Manpower Commission, Cleveland, Ohio

EBY, KERMIT
Director, Department of Education and Research, CIO.

EDMAN, MARION
School Consultant, Bureau for Intercultural Education.

ELEAZER, R. B.
Secretary, Local Church Division, Methodist Board of Education, Nashville, Tennessee.

EMBREE, EDWIN R.
President, Julius Rosenwald Fund; Chairman, Mayor's Committee on Race Relations, Chicago; Author: Brown Americans, 13 Against the Odds.

EVANS, JAMES C.
Assistant Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, War Department.

FARIS, ELLSWORTH
Professor, Emeritus of Sociology
University of Chicago

FAULKNER, WILLIAM J.
Dean of the Chapel, Fisk University

FOLTZ, FREDERICK S. (Colonel)
Chief, Classification and Replacement Branch, Adjutant General's Office, War Department.

FOREMAN, CLARK
President, Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

FOSTER, LEMUEL
Formerly: Race Relations Analyst, Headquarters Army Service Forces, Washington, D. C. Now: Personnel Executive, Macy's Inc. New York.

GALLAGHER, BUELL G.
Professor of Christian Ethics, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, California.

GRANGER, LESTER B.
Executive Secretary, National Urban League.

HALL, WILEY
Executive Secretary, Atlanta Urban League.

* deceased

HANN, LOUIS W.
Assistant to the Director of Industrial Relations, Pollack Manufacturing Company, Arlington, New Jersey.

HARWELL, HOLBERT (Captain)
State Selective Service, Nashville, Tennessee

HAYAKAWA, SAMUEL I.
Associate Professor of English, Illinois Institute of Technology, Chicago; Newspaper Columnist. Author: Language in Action.

HENEGAN, HERBERT L.
U. S. Farm Administration, Department of Agriculture.

HERZBURG, FRED, LT. COL.
Director of Instruction at the Army Information School, Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania.

HERZOG, ELIABETH
Bureau of the Budget, Executive Office of the President

HICKS, J. J.
Manager, Civil Service Commission, Nashville, Tennessee.

HOOK, THOMAS D.
Vice President, Black Box Photo and Collotype Company, Inc., Chicago, Illinois.

HOPE, JOHN (II)
Specialist on Industrial Relations, Social Science Institute, Fisk University

HORNE, FRANK
Racial Relations Adviser to the Commissioner, National Housing Agency, Federal Public Housing Authority, Washington, D. C.

HOUSTON, CHARLES
Attorney; Vice President, American Council on Race Relations; Legal Counsel NAACP.

HUBBARD, DEHART
Racial Relations Adviser, National Housing Agency, Federal Public Housing Authority, Cleveland.

HUBERT, GILES A.
Professor of Economics, Fisk University.

ISSERMAN, F. M.
Rabbi, Temple Israel St. Louis, Missouri; Chairman, Commission on Social Justice, Central Conference of American Rabbis.

JESSEN, PAUL
Assistant Director, War Manpower Commission, Nashville, Tennessee. State Director, USES of Tennessee.

JOHNSON, CHARLES S.
Director of Social Science Institute, Fisk University.
President, Fisk University.

JOHNSON, GUY B.
Executive Director, The Southern Regional Council.

JONES, RICHARD L. (Major)
Educational and Vocational Guidance Officer, Separation Center, Fort Sheridan, Illinois.

KAPLAN, HIRSCH
Executive Secretary, YMHA, Nashville, Tennessee.

KIDO, SABURO
President, Japanese American Citizens League

KINCHELOE, SAMUEL C.
Professor and Director of Research in the Sociology of Religion, The Chicago Thoelogical Seminary.

KLINEBERG, OTTO
Assistant Professor of Psychology, Columbia University.

LANE, FRAYSER T.
Civic Director, Chicago Urban League; Contributor to various periodicals on social and civic problems of Negroes.

LAWRENCE, CHARLES R., Jr.
Staff Member, Race Relations Department, American Missionary Association; Research Staff, A Monthly Summary of Events and Trends in Race Relations, Instructor in Sociology, Fisk University.

LEWIS, VENITA
Consultant in Social Services, Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor, Washington, D. C.

LIVERIGHT, A. A.
Executive Director, American Council on Race Relations.

LOESCHER, FRANK S.
Secretary, Placement Service, American Friends Service Committee, Philadelphia.

LONG, HERMAN
Field Supervisor, "Common Ground" Staff and Study of Restrictive Covenants, Race Relations Division, American Missionary Association (Fisk University).

LOOBY, Z. ALEXANDER
Attorney National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

MADDOX, JAMES G.
Special Assistant to the Chief, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

MAREMONT, ARNOLD
Executive Vice President, Maremont Automotive Products, Chicago.

MARK, JULIUS
Rabbi, Vine Street Temple, Nashville, Tennessee.

MASON, LUCY RANDOLPH
Southern Public Relations Representative, CIO, Atlanta, Georgia.

MAY, MORTIMER
May Hosiery Mills, Nashville, Tennessee

McCALLISTER, FRANK
Executive Assistant to Board Members, Advisory Council, CIO War Labor Board, Atlanta, Georgia. Director, Georgia Workers Education Service, Atlanta, Georgia.

McGRAW, BOOKER T.
Housing Analyst, National Housing Agency, Washington, D. C.

McLEAN, HELEN V.
Psychiatrist, Chicago, Illinois; Institute for Psychoanalysis; Contributor to periodicals on psychiatric subjects.

MILLER, ALEXANDER F.
Director Southeastern Region, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, Atlanta, Georgia

MILNER, FRED C., Colonel
Personnel Research and Procedures Branch, Adjutant General's Office, War Department.

MITCHELL, GEORGE S.
Regional Director, CIO Political Action Committee, Director of Vetertans Services, Southern Regional Council

MONTAGU-ASHLEY, M. F.
Formerly Research Associate, British Museum of Natural History; Anthropologist, Division of Child Research, New York University, now Associate Professor of Anatomy, Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital, and Lecturer at Harvard University; Author: Man's Most Dangerous Myth: The Fallacy of Race.

MOON, HENRY LEE
Adviser on Minority Relations, Political Action Committee, CIO.

MOORE, RUTH
American Red Cross, Nashville, Tennessee.

MORGAN, E. C.
Veterans' Administration, Nashville, Tennessee.

MORTON, RUTH
Director of Schools, American Missionary Association.

MOSS, R. MAURICE
Executive Secretary, Urban League of Pittsburgh.

NORTH, STANLEY U.
Congregational-Christian Church, Nashville, Tennessee.

PARKER, EVERETT
Radio Division, Congregational-Christian Churches.

PERRY, JENNINGS
Formerly: Editor, Nashville, Tennessean, Nashville, Tennessee; Chairman, National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax. Now: Columnist PM, New York City.

POPE, LISTON
Professor of Social Ethics, Divinity School, Yale University.

PRATTIS, P. L.
Executive Editor, The Pittsburgh Courier.

RAPER, ARTHUR F.
Social Science Analyst, Division of Farm Population and Rural Welfare, US Department of Agriculture; Author: Tenants of the Almighty, Prefaces to Peasantry.

REDFIELD, ROBERT
Dean of Social Sciences Division; Professor of Anthropology, University of Chicago.

REID, IRA DE A.
Chairman, Department of Sociology, Atlanta University; Associate Director, Southern Regional Council; Author: In a Minor Key, Sharecroppers All, The Urban Negro in the United States. At present: Visiting Professor, New York University and Haverford College.

REUTER, E. B.*
Formerly Head, Department of Sociology, University of Iowa; Visiting Professor of Sociology, Fisk University.

RILEY, REV. RALPH W.
President ,American Baptist Theological Seminary, Nashville, Tennessee.

ROBESON, WARREN B.
Field Supervisor, United States Employment Service Administrative Office, Region VII.

ROBINSON, CORRINNE
National Housing Agency, Federal Public Housing Authority, Washington, D. C.

SANDERSON, ROSS
Director of Field Research, The Board of Home Missions, Congregational and Christian Churches.

SHELL, WILLIAM
Placement Specialist, Southern Regional Office, USES War Manpower Commission.

SMITH, MYRA A.
Executive, Department of Data and Trends, National Board, Y. W. C. A.

SMITH, T. LYNN
Department of Sociology, Louisiana State University

SMITH, T. V.
Professor of Philosophy, The University of Chicago; Editor: International Journal of Ethics.

STARKOFF, BERNARD J.
Rabbi, Vine Street Temple, Nashville, Tennessee.

STEWART, WOODROW B.
Civil Service Commission, Nashville, Tennessee.

STUNTZ, HUGH
President, Scarritt College, Nashville, Tennessee

SWIFT, ARTHUR
Professor of Social Christianity, Union Theological Seminary, New York.

TABA, HILDA
Professor of Education, The University of Chicago; Director, Intergroup Education in Cooperating Schools, American Council on Education.

TAYLOR, ROBERT R.
Chairman, Chicago Housing Authority; Member Mayor's Committee on Race Relation, Chicago.

THOMPSON, CHARLES H.
Dean, Graduate School, Howard University; Editor, Journal of Negro Education.

* deceased

THOMPSON, EDGAR T.
Professor of Sociology, Duke University, Durham, North Carolina; Editor, Race and Culture Contacts.

TILLEY, M. W., MRS.
Secretary, Christian Social Relations, Southeast Jurisdiction, Methodist Church.

TOWNSEND, WILLARD S.
Member Executive Committee CIO; International President, United Transport Service Employees of America.

TRUDEAU, ARTHUR G., Brigadier General
War Department. General Staff, Personnel Division G-1.

WALE, FRED G.
Director for Rural Education, Julius Rosenwald Fund.

WEAVER, GALEN R.
Specialist in Race Relations Programs within the Congregational and Christian Churches; Formerly Pastor, Church of the Crossroads, Honolulu, Hawaii; Director, Committee on Church and Race of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches.

WEAVER, GEORGE L. P.
Director, National CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination.

WEAVER, ROBERT C.
Director, Community Services, American Council on Race Relations, Chicago; Formerly Chief, Minority Services Division, War Manpower Commission; Mayor's Committee on Race Relations, Chicago; United Nations Committee on Trusteeships; Contributor to periodicals on problems of Negro employment, housing, etc.

WEISIGER, KENDALL
Formerly Education Director, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company; Now: Treasurer, Oglethorpe University, Atlanta.

WILLIAMS, ERIC
Howard University, formerly with the International Carribean Commission; Author: The Negro in the Carribean, Capitalism and Slavery.

WILLIAMS, PAUL D.
Formerly Executive Secretary, Catholic Committee of the South; Now: President, Southern Regional Council.

WILLIAMS, PEYTON R.
Rector, Christ Church, Episcopal, Nashville, Tennessee.

WILSON, BENJAMIN F.
Director, Minorities Division, War Manpower Commission, Washington, D. C.

WIRTH, LOUIS
Professor of Sociology, The University of Chicago; Executive President, American Council on Race Relations; Associate Editor, American Journal of Sociology: Author of many books and articles on sociology and social research.

WOODWARD, EMILY
Director, Division of Forums, University System of Georgia.

WORK, JOHN W.
Professor of Music Theory, Fisk University.

WRIGHT, THOMAS H.
Executive Director, Mayor's Commission on Human Relations, Chicago.

YOUNG, LOUISE
Associate Secretary, United Council of Church Women; Professor of Sociology, Scarrit College, Nashville, Tennessee.

Program

OF THE

Ninth Annual Meeting

OF THE

Southern Sociological Society

▲

ATLANTA, GEORGIA

MAY 17-18, 1946

Officers of the Society for 1945-46

President

CHARLES S. JOHNSON, Fisk University

First Vice-President

BELLE BOONE BEARD
Sweet Briar College

Second Vice-President

WILLIAM B. JONES, JR.
University of Tennessee

Secretary-Treasurer

COYLE E. MOORE, Florida State College for Women

Representative to the Executive Committee
American Sociological Society

HOWARD W. BEERS, University of Kentucky

Elected Members of the Executive Committee

FRANK D. ALEXANDER, Bureau of Agricultural Economics
H. C. BREARLEY, Peabody College
GUY B. JOHNSON, Southern Regional Council
WILLIAM L. LEAP, American Red Cross
MILDRED R. MELL, Agnes Scott College
IRA DE A. REID, Atlanta University

Past Presidents

E. T. KRUEGER, Vanderbilt University
WILSON GEE, University of Virginia
RUPERT B. VANCE, University of North Carolina
E. W. GREGORY, JR., University of Alabama
WILLIAM E. COLE, University of Tennessee
FRED C. FREY, Louisiana State University
B. O. WILLIAMS, University of Georgia
KATHARINE JOCHER, University of North Carolina
HOWARD W. BEERS, University of Kentucky

STANDING COMMITTEES

Membership

MILDRED MELL, Agnes Scott College, Chairman
HARRY W. ROBERTS, Virginia State College
RALPH N. DAVIS, Tuskegee Institute
ALLEN C. EDWARDS, Winthrop College
GRACE TOWNS HAMILTON, Atlanta Urban League
JAMES E. FLEMMING, University of Georgia
E. H. LOTT, Louisiana State University
LYDA GORDON SHIVERS, University of North Carolina
ROBERT I. KUTAK, University of Louisville
DOROTHY DICKINS, State College, Mississippi
C. L. FOLSE, Virginia Polytechnic Institute
OLIVE M. STONE, Georgia State Woman's College

Resolutions

EDGAR T. THOMPSON, Duke University, Chairman
RAYMOND F. BELLAMY, Florida State College for Women
MORTON B. KING, University of Mississippi
ROSAMONDE WIMBERLY, Converse College

Research

GORDON W. BLACKWELL, University of North Carolina, Chairman
R. O. JOHNSON, Morris Brown College
DOROTHY JONES, Winthrop College
ROY E. HYDE, Louisiana State University
HENRY L. ANDREWS, University of Alabama

▲

SPECIAL COMMITTEES

The Teaching of Sociology

WAYLAND J. HAYES, Vanderbilt University, Chairman
BELLE BOONE BEARD, Sweet Briar College
JOHN E. IVEY, JR., University of North Carolina
ROBERT I. KUTAK, University of Louisville
LEE M. BROOKS, University of North Carolina
WILLIAM B. JONES, University of Tennessee

Local Arrangements

MILDRED R. MELL, Agnes Scott College, Chairman
FRANK D. ALEXANDER, United States Department of Agriculture
WALTER R. CHIVERS, Morehouse College
L. L. CLEGG, Emory University
JOHN GRIFFIN, Emory University
GUY B. JOHNSON, Southern Regional Council
IRA DE A. REID, Atlanta University
COMER WOODWARD, Emory University

▲

REGISTRATION

No registration fee is required of members or guests. Members and guests are requested to register at the Registration Desk as soon as possible after arrival. It is important that registration with hotel designation be completed in order to facilitate prompt delivery of telegrams, etc. The registration and information desk will be maintained throughout the meeting, except at night, and will be located near the entrance to the Ball Room.

ATLANTA HOTELS

Hotel reservations should be made by mail as early as possible, specifying rate desired. There are always competing conventions in large cities. Rates quoted below under "twin" are for two persons.

HEADQUARTERS — ATLANTA BILTMORE HOTEL

817 Peachtree Street

Rooms, All With Baths

Single	$4.50 to $5.50
Twin	6.00 to 7.50

This hotel is located away from, but convenient to, the business center. There are numerous hotels in Atlanta, but with present crowded conditions there may not be space other than that which has been reserved at the Biltmore for the Society meeting.

VISITS TO PLACES OF INTEREST

There are many places of interest in Atlanta and vicinity. Any member or guest wishing to visit these places is requested to make inquiry at the registration desk. The Committee on Local Arrangements will be glad to make provision for such visits as far as possible.

THE PUBLIC

All meetings, except business sessions, are open to the public. Business meetings and the evening program will be held in the Ball Room; sectional meetings will be held in the rooms designated on the program.

Southern Sociological Society

NINTH ANNUAL MEETING

ATLANTA, GEORGIA

MAY 17-18, 1946

THURSDAY, MAY 16

7:30 P.M. Meeting of the Executive Committee. Room 2

▲

Program

FRIDAY, MAY 17

8:00- 9:00 A.M. Registration of Members and Guests of the Society.

9:00-10:00 A.M. Business Meeting. Ball Room.

10:00-12:00 A.M.

I. IMPERSONAL FACTORS IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE SOUTH, Howard W. Beers, University of Kentucky, presiding.

1. A Sociological Interpretation of Social Change in the South. Rudolf Heberle, Louisiana State University. (20 minutes)

   Discussion:

   Morton B. King, University of Mississippi. (5 minutes)

2. Factors Influencing Industrial Development in the South. Lorin A. Thompson, University of Virginia. (20 minutes)

   Discussion:

   Howard Harlan, University of Alabama. (5 minutes)

3. The Role of Agricultural Technology in Southern Social Change. Arthur Raper, Bureau of Agricultural Economics. (20 minutes)

   Discussion:

   Irving A. Spaulding, Clemson College. (5 minutes)

   General Discussion: (45 minutes)

II. SOCIOLOGICAL ASPECTS OF HOUSING. Room 10. W. B. Jones, University of Tennessee, presiding.

Rural Housing Needs in the South, Rupert B. Vance, University of North Carolina. (20 minutes)

Housing, the South's Number One Economic Opportunity. C. F. Palmer, Public Housing Authority. (20 minutes)

How Housing Needs May Be Met. Martin Handrick, Regional Economist, Federal Public Housing Authority. (20 minutes)

General Discussion. (60 minutes)

12:00- 1:30 P.M. Luncheon Time. No Program.

1:30- 3:30 P.M. PANEL—TEACHING OF SOCIOLOGY. Wayland J. Hayes, Vanderbilt University, presiding.

1. What modifications do you think should be made in the statement concerning the objectives and place of sociology in education? William E. Cole, University of Tennessee.
2. What further study and adjustment of sociological curricula seems justified? Ira De A. Reid, Atlanta University.
3. In what ways can the materials and methods of sociological instruction be improved? Morton King, University of Mississippi.
4. What further testing of sociological instruction needs to be developed? Harlan W. Gilmore, Tulane University.

(This panel discussion is based upon the report of the Commission on the Teaching of Sociology, appearing in the October issue of Social Forces. Members are requested to refresh themselves on this report for the general discussion.)

3:30- 5:00 P.M. REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESEARCH. Gordon W. Blackwell, University of North Carolina.

Discussion.

5:00- 8:00 P.M. Dinner Time. No Program.

7:00 P.M. Meeting of the Executive Committee. Room 2.
Meeting of the Nominating Committee. Room 6.

8:00 P.M. Evening Session. Ball Room. Charles S. Johnson, President, Southern Sociological Society, presiding.

The Carrying Capacity of Sociology. Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina.

The Shape of Things to Come. William F. Ogburn, University of Chicago.

SATURDAY, MAY 18

8:00- 9:00 A.M. Business Meeting. Ball Room.

9:00-12:00 A.M. SOUTHERN ATTITUDES AND ASPIRATIONS. Rupert B. Vance, University of North Carolina, presiding.

1. The Tradition of Exploitation in the South. Edgar T. Thompson, Duke University. (25 minutes)

   Discussion:

   Allen Edwards, Winthrop College. (10 minutes)

2. Culture vs. Civilization, or the Secularization of the South. Lewis C. Copeland, Tennessee Valley Authority. (20 minutes)

   Discussion:

   A. D. Beittel, President, Talladega College. (5 minutes)

3. How Can Progress in Race Relations Be Measured? Jitsuichi Masuoka, Fisk University. (20 minutes)

   Discussion:

   Ernest E. Neal, North Carolina College for Negroes. (5 minutes)

1:30- 2:30 P.M. Meeting of the Executive Committee for 1946-47. Room 2.

THIRD ANNUAL

INSTITUTE OF RACE RELATIONS

American Missionary Association

July 1-20, 1946

WHO'S WHO

Membership

1. Barber, Mrs. William M. -- 2515 N. Oakley Street, Saginaw, Michigan. Nurse. Michigan Practical Nursing Association; Staff Assistant, American Red Cross; Executive Member, Council of Church Clerics; Vice-President, Saginaw Branch NAACP; Executive Member, State NAACP Board; Y.W.C.A.

2. Bittinger, Rev. Foster M. -- Oak View, Westernport, Maryland. Minister. Church of the Brethren; Rotary International; Chairman, Tri-Town Y.M.C.A. and Recreational Committee; Chairman, Race Relations Committee (Southeastern Region) Church of the Brethren; Co-Director, Inter-Race Church Camp.

3. Blacklidge, Rev. John H. -- 307 Warren Street, Brooklyn, New York. Minister.

4. Blackmon, Rev. Whalon H. -- Alcorn A. and M. College, Alcorn, Mississippi; Annual Conference, Methodist Church; Interracial Fellowship for College of Mississippi; NAACP. Chaplin, Instructor.

5. Broadbrook, Miss Gracia E. -- 222 Aldine Street, Rochester, New York. Student.

6. Brewster, Rev. Charles T. -- 710 Poyntz, Manhattan, Kansas. Minister. Kiwanis Club; Advisory Board of Manhattan Negro Civic Club; President of Board of Directors of Manhattan's Consumer Cooperative Association.

7. Brown, Mrs. Louise D. -- 10630 Tacoma Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. Teacher. Junior Board of Phyllis Wheatley Association; NAACP.

8. Brown, Mrs. Florence Beatty. -- 615 School Street, Jefferson City, Missouri. Teacher.

9. Caspary, Miss Ruth L. -- 2026 E. 107th Street, Cleveland, Ohio. Public Education Secretary, Urban League; Progressive Citizens Committee; The Ansel Road Temple.

10. Caution, Tollie L. -- 281 4th Avenue, New York City. Secretary, Negro Work Division, Protestant Episcopal Church.

11. Chen, Miss Shan-Tsiang, Greenwich House, 27 Barrow Street, New York City. Graduate student, New York University.

12. Claxton, Paul M. -- Box 778, Pine Bluff, Arkansas. Owner and Manager, Beauty Shop; Methodist Church; Lions Club; Chamber of Commerce; Junior Chamber of Commerce.

13. Comer, Miss Katherine B. -- Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

14. Crank, Mrs. Suejette T. -- 5606 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. Program Service Guild of Woodlawn A.M.E. Church; NAACP; Director for Business and Professional Women, Y.W.C.A.; Women's Division of Urban League; Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority; Adult Education Council of Chicago.

15. Davis, Mrs. Annie Lee -- Children's Bureau, United States Department of Labor, Washington, D. C. Consultant in Social Services for Children in Minority Groups.

16. Davis, Mrs. Dowdall H., Jr. -- 2711 E. 23rd Street, Kansas City, Missouri. Public Relations Secretary, Urban League of Kansas City. Committee of Management, Paseo Branch Y.W.C.A.; Public Affairs Council, City Y.W.C.A.; Radio Committee, Kansas City Branch NAACP; Alpha Kapa Alpha Sorority.

17. Doty, Mrs. Elizabeth L. -- 118 Irwin Avenue, Ben Avon, Pittsburgh 2, Pennsylvania. Director of Women's Department, Central Branch Y.W.C.A.; Workers Section of Group Work Division of Social Agencies; Member, Intercultural Committee of Social Agencies; Member, Committee on Japanese-American Problems in Pittsburgh; United Presbyterian Church; NAACP.

18. Enwright, Rev. John T. -- 1912 N. Miro Street, New Orleans, Louisiana. Minister. Congregational-Christian Churches of America.

19. Fine, Miss Huldah -- 2970 Blain Avenue, Detroit 6, Michigan. Teacher.

20. Forrester, Mrs. Marion L. -- 246 W. 150th Street, New York City. Executive Secretary, Englewood Urban League, Englewood, New Jersey; Catholic Church; League of Women Voters; Bergen County Maternal Health; Bergen County Council of Social Agencies; Greater New York Interracial Fellowship.

21. Gartrell, Miss Carrie. Atlanta, Georgia. Student.

22. Gayles, Miss Anne R. -- P. O. Box 175, Marshallville, Georgia. Teacher and Graduate Student. Delta Sigma Theta Sorority.

23. Givin, Miss Grace -- 706 W. 8th Street, Emporia Kansas. Teacher, Iberia Junior College, Iberia, Missouri. A.A.U.W.; NAACP.

24. Greene, Percy -- Jackson Advocate, 125½ N. Farish Street, Jackson, Mississippi. Editor and Publisher. Mason; Elk; Knight of Pythias; Southern Conference for Human Welfare; NAACP; A.M.E. Church.

25. Guest, Miss Muriel -- 109 Lenore Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. Graduate Student. United Church of Canada; Canadian Student Christian Movement; Christian Work-Camp Fellowship; Prospective American Friends Service Committee Work Camp Member, Indianapolis.

26. Guinn, Miss Dorothy C. -- 2018 Cantre Avenue, Apt. 3, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Social Worker. Executive Director, Centre Avenue Branch Y.W.C.A.; Chairman, Professional Standards, National Employed Officers of Y.W.C.A.; Registered Social Worker; Member, Executive and Program Committees Group Division Federation of Social Agencies; Member, Advisory Committee, Community Council Center; Member, Advisory Committee - Group Work, School of Applied Sciences, University of Pittsburgh; Member Radcliffe Club; Educational Chairman, Woman's Auxiliary of Church of Holy Cross (Episcopal).

27. Haertel, Miss Gertrude E. -- 2620 N. 70th Street, Milwaukee 13, Wisconsin. Teacher. Christian Science Church; Member, National, State and Local Education Associations.

28. Hamilton, Rev. Sylvester B. -- 725 W. Madison Street, Bastrop, Louisiana. Minister. Baptist Church; Chairman, Ministers' Fellowship; Fieldman Fraternal Council of Negro Churches; Southern Regional Council.

29. Hansen, Miss Alvida L. -- 1615 W. Washington Street, Phoenix, Arizona.

30. Harper, Rev. T. E. -- 6422 3rd Court, North, Birmingham, Alabama. President Daniel Payne College. A.M.E. Church; Civic League.

31. Harris, Mrs. Hattie Mae -- 2014 Ivy Street, Chattanooga, Tennessee. Teacher. A.M.E. Church; Community Club; Federated Clubs.

32. Helper, Miss Rose -- Ontario, Canada. Research Fellow, Social Science Institute, Fisk University. School Teacher's Federation.

33. Henegan, L. Herbert -- United States Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C. Farm Security Administration Administrative Assistant. NAACP; Capitol Press Club; Omega Psi Phi Fraternity.

34. Herndon, Miss Ann -- Irvington, Kentucky. Student.

35. Hill, Dr. P. W. -- P. O. Box 547, Clarksdale, Mississippi. Surgeon Dentist. Baptist; Coahoma County Negro Association; Executive Board Member, National Dental Association and Mississippi Dental Society; Alcorn A. and M. College Alumni Association.

36. Hope, Mrs. John (II) -- 1608 Phillips Street, Nashville, Tennessee. Graduate Student in Sociology.

37. Hoskinson, Rev. Charles C. -- 848 Lake Street, Oak Park, Illinois. Minister, First Congregational Church.

38. Hoskinson, Mrs. Charles C.

39. Johnson, Cyrus M. -- Route 5, Goldsboro, North Carolina. Director, Program for North Carolina Commission for Interracial Cooperation.

40. Johnson, Miss Juanita L. -- 1516 N. E. Church Street, Portland 14, Oregon. Secretary, Information and Public Relations Division, Farm Security Administration, U.S.D.A. Portland Branch NAACP (Executive Board and Editor of Monthly Bulletin); Vice-President, Cosmopolitan Club (Interracial Group), Portland Consumer Cooperative; Race Relations Commission of Public Relations Committee, Y.W.C.A.; Race Relations Commission of Portland Council of Churches.

41. King, Miss Margaret -- 311 Fourth Street, Rankin, Pennsylvania. Student, University of Pittsburgh. Catholic Church; Member Pre-Social Work Club, Pittsburgh; Member, Brashear Settlement Organization.

42. Larkins, John R. -- 133 E. Kurgett Street, Raleigh, North Carolina. Social Worker. North Carolina Conference of Social Service; Consultant on Negro Work, North Carolina State Board of Public Welfare; Southern Regional Council; Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

43. Light, Rev. Shelby J. -- 1619 N. Second Avenue, Canton, Illinois. Minister, Congregational Church.

44. McVoy, Lawrence W. M. (II) -- The Call, 2811½ Dowling Street, Houston, Texas. Newspaper Correspondent.

45. Meijer, Mrs. Elizabeth T. -- 1635 W. North Avenue, Baltimore 17, Maryland. Afro-American Writer and Volunteer Worker for Urban League. Society of Friends; Urban League; NAACP; Interracial Fellowship; NCPAC.

46. Milton, Miss Eleanor M. -- 410 Merritt Avenue, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia. Student.

47. Minar, Miss Louise -- 629 Fulton Street, Wausau, Wisconsin. Teacher. Y.W.C.A.; National Education Association; Wisconsin Education Association; Wisconsin Council for the Social Studies; Pi Delta Epsilon.

48. Molyneaux, Lambert -- Charlottesville, Virginia. Professor of Sociology, University of Virginia; Visiting Professor of Sociology, Vanderbilt University.

49. Murdock, Miss Amanda -- 317 W. Pecan Street, Carbondale, Illinois. Teacher. Methodist; Race Relations, Southern Illinois Normal University; City Council Concert Music Association.

50. Payne, Mrs. Helena M. -- 1405 N. 25th Street, Richmond Virginia. Unit Manager, Stanley Home Products, Westfield, Massachusetts. Baptist; Interracial Committee, Y.W.C.A.; P.T.A., NAACP; Ideal Benefit Society; Citizens Committee

51. Pulliam, Miss Theresa -- 942 N. Bellevue, Memphis, Tennessee. Student.

52. Pursband, Mrs. M. Elizabeth -- 728 S. Burdick, Kalamazoo, Michigan. Teacher.

53. Quinn, G. V. -- Lincoln High School, 11th and Broadway, East St. Louis, Illinois. Principal. Member of Board I, Selective Service and Re-employment Counselor and Advisor for Veterans; Interracial Commission; Boy Scouts of America.

54. Ratliffe, Mrs. W. H. -- Sherard, Mississippi. Housewife. President, South East Jurisdiction Woman's Society of Christian Service; Women's Federated Club; State Board, Congress of Parents and Teachers, DAR.

55. Refsland, Mrs. Martha B. -- Houston, Minnesota. Supervisor Indian Education, Department of Interior - Indian Affairs. NAACP; Urban League, A.C.L.U.; B.P.W.C.; Southern Regional Council; East and West Association.

56. Reitzes, Dietrich C. -- 5731½ Kenwood Avenue, Chicago 37, Illinois. Graduate Student in Sociology, University of Chicago. American Veterans Committee; American Sociological Society.

57. Roberts, Miss Laura -- 1721 Tyler, Amarillo, Texas. Methodist; Delta Kappa Gamma. Teacher.

58. Roberts, Miss Nina -- International House, 500 Riverside Drive, New York City. Prospective Associate Secretary, United Council of Church Women.

59. Rowse, Rev. Ralph H. -- 564 W. 160th Street, New York City. Minister. Executive Secretary, Interracial Fellowship of Greater New York.

60. Salert, Irving -- Jewish Labor Committee, 175 E. Broadway, New York City. National Field Director, Jewish Labor Committee.

61. Schulte, Miss Eileen -- 201 12th Avenue, S. E., Minneapolis 14, Minnesota. Teaching Assistant, General College, University of Minnesota.

62. Shackelford, Miss Jane D. -- 1324½ Liberty Avenue, Terre Haute, Indiana. Teacher. Author: The Child's Story of the Negro and My Happy Days. Methodist Church; Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority; Girl Scout Leader's Association; Kappa Delta Pi Honorary Society; Literary Club; NAACP; A.S.N.L.H.

63. Shisler, Miss Dorothy K. -- Talladega College, Talladega, Alabama. Secretary to the President. Philadelphia Anthropology Society; American Anthropology Society; American Linguistic Society; NAACP; Y.M.C.A.

64. Smith, Miss Myra A. -- 600 Lexington Avenue, New York City. Executive, Data and Trends and Program Subject Departments, National Board, Y.W.C.A.; Member, Southern Regional Council; Alternate Executive Committee, Federal Council of Churches.

65. Sprague, Miss Ruth L. -- 25 College Place, Oberlin, Ohio. Director of Religious Education, First Congregational Church. League of Women Voters.

66. Stern, Miss Celia M. -- 2244 Gladstone, Detroit 6, Michigan. Directing Teacher in Primary Education. NAACP; American Federation of Teachers; Y.W.C.A.

67. Sweet, James F. -- Providence Rhode Island.

68. Thomas, George L. -- Portland Council of Churches, 308 Y.M.C.A. Building, Portland 12, Oregon. Director of Race Relations, American Missionary Association, through Portland Council of Churches. Congregational Church; NAACP; Urban League; International House Board of Portland; Portland Housing and Planning Association; Civic Action, Inc.; Police Athletic League.

69. Van Vliet, Miss Florence L. -- 773 N. Prospect Avenue, #614, Milwaukee 2, Wisconsin. Teacher - English; Department Chairman. Episcopal Church.

70. Williams, John D. -- 170 Hubbard Street, Glastonbury, Connecticut.

71. Willis, Miss Josie E. -- 111 Elm Street, Hornell, New York. Teacher. State Secretary, World Wide Guild of Northern Baptist Convention; Fellowship Church of All Peoples, San Francisco, California; Co-Chairman, Woman's Forum, Hornell; Vice-President, Hornell Teachers Association.

72. Wittman, Miss Gerda P. -- 807 E. Juneau Avenue, Milwaukee 2, Wisconsin. Teacher.

File with Good eggs or "good people"

VETERANS EDUCATION COUNCIL
NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION
JANUARY 14-17, 1947
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

ROSTER

Abbott, Robert N.
168 Clinton Avenue S.
Rochester, N. Y.
Director of Monroe County Vet. Inf. Bureau
Veterans Information Bureau

Adams, F. J.
Austin, Texas Univ. Texas
Austin Texas
Proff. Ed. of Psychology
University

Anderson, Myrtle A.
Crile V. A. Hospital
Cleveland 9, Ohio
Chief. Ed. Retraining
Veterans Adm.

Bagby, R. O.
Box 2129
Roanoke, Virginia
Dir. of Adult Ed.
Roanoke City Public School

Benne, Kenneth D.
T. C. Columbia Univ.
New York 27, New York
Assoc. Prof. of Educ.
T. C. Columbia Univ.

Berry, Wayne
411 W. Michigan Avenue
Lansing 15, Michigan
Chief. Tr. Section Office of Vet. Affairs

Blanchard, Carl
411 W. Michigan Avenue
Lansing 15, Michigan
Chief Spec. Projects Section
Office of Veterans Affairs

Bonds, A. B.
President's Com of Higher Educ.
Washington 25, D. C.
Asst. Exc. Secretary
Commission of Higher Education

Bourgeois, Lionel J.
701 Carundelet Street
New Orleans, Louisiana
Superintendent
Orleans Parish School Board

Chase, Fred C.
1224 N. Chestnut
Lansing 6, Michigan
Tr. Officer Office of Vetr. Affs.
State of Mich. Office Vet. Affs.

* Out of Order

Coffelder, John
1608 Ruth Avenue
Cincinnati, 6, Ohio
Dir. of Voc. Training
Cin. Public Schools

Combes, Abbott L.
3521 Thirty Street
Washington 8, D. C.
Dir. Edu. & Training Service
Office of Voc. Edu. Reb. Vet. Administration

Cooper, Harry
John Marshall High School
Minneapolis Minn.
Principal
Board of Education

Crehan, Mark J.
41 Cumberland Street
Hartford 6, Connecticut
Dir. Vet. High School
City of Hartford (Bd of Educ.)

Cummiskey, E. A.
301 South Wing
Ann Arbor, Michigan
Attorney for University
University of Michigan

Ehmig, N. A.
220 W. Earle Street
Greenville South Carolina
Dir. Vet Training
Greenville, S. C. City Schools

Dingillian, David H.
Los. Angeles City College
Los Angeles, 27 Cal.
Dir. of Guidance Center
Los. Angeles Bd. of Education

Douglas, V. J.
501 S. 20th Street
Birmingham, Alabama
Dir. of Voc. Educ.
Birmingham Public Schools

DuBois, Col. B. G.
224 N. Main Street
South Bend, Indiana
Dir. of Veterans Service Comm.
Veterans Service Commission

Duncan, H. L.
State Dept. of Educ.
Charleston, West Virginia
Dir. Vet Educ. & Training
State Dept. Education

VETERANS EDUCATION COUNCIL
NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION
JANUARY 14-17, 1947
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

ROSTER

Engel, Herbert M.
922 State Office Building
Albany, New York
Program Evaluator
N. Y. Dept. of Labor

Stephen Epler
VanPort Extension Center
Portland 17, Oregon
Directors of VanPort extension service.
Oregon State System of Higher Edu.

Fred K. Eshleman
Dearborn Bd. of Education
Dearborn, Michigan
Director of Adult Education
Dearborn Board of Education

F. K. Ferguson
4819 Magoun Avenue
East Chicago, Indiana Apprentice Supervision
East Chicago Public Schools Ind.

C. F. Fitz
303 Burrows Building
Penna State College State College Pa.
Arer Coordinator Education
Penna State College

Fornwalt, Roy G.
Dept. of Public Instruction
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania
Chief Training Facilities for Vets.
Pa. State Dept. of Public Instruc.

Foster, D. Ernest
Columbia High School
Columbia, S. Carolina
Sup. of Vocational Training of Vet.
City Schools

Carl Gardner
81 Washington Avenue
Morristown, New Jersey
Mgr. Armed Forces Dept. Internation Corsp. School
International Corsp. School

Thos. P. Garrity
467 W. Hancock
Detroit 1, Michigan
Supervisor of Vocational Education
Detroit Board of Education

Joe N. Gerber
Natchitoches Louisiana
Natchitoches Louisiana
Dir. of Student Personal & Vet. Coord.
Northwestern State College

George L. Glasheen
RN&A Dept. of Labor
Washington D. C.
Ass't. Adm.
RN&A

Goodier, Floyd T.
Illinois State Norman Unv.
Normal, Illinois
Dir. of Vet. Service
Illinois State Unv.

Max Goodson
106 Morningside Dr.
New York City 27, New York
Prin. Horance Mann Lincoln School
Teachers College Columbia Unv.

Woelper, G. Gordon
6211 Pinehurst Rd.
Baltimore, Md.
Principal, Veterans Institute
Baltimore Public Schools

Clarence Greiber
316 State Office Building
Madison Wisconsin
State Dir. Voc. & Adult Ed.
State Bd.

Gregory, John C.
American Legion Hdqs.
Rockford, Illinois
Walter C. Craig Post
American Legion

E. E. Hall
Station A
Hattiesburg Mississippi
Dir. of Field Services
Mississippi Southern College

Hallahan, Richard J.
Bd. of Ed. 40 Steuben Street
Albany, New York
Con. of Bur of Adult Edu.
Bd. of State Dept. of Education

VETERANS EDUCATION COUNCIL
NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION
JANUARY 14-17, 1947
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

ROSTER

Hamil, Louise K.
22 Macy Place
Mobile, Alabama
Asst. Principal Murphy High School
Murphy High School

R. R. Hamilton
University of Wyoming
Cheyenne, Wyoming
Dean of Law

H. M. Hamlin
103 Gregory Hall
Urbana Ill.
Prof. of Agr. Education
Univ. of Illinois

Major Bruce B. Hammond
Hdqts. Marine Corp.
Washington D. C.
Officer in Charge Rehabilitation
Marine Corp.

W. B. Hawley
600 Bauch Bldg.
Lansing Michigan
Chief Veterans Voc. Training Div.
State Board Voc. Education

Hickey, Edward F.
80 Center Street
New York, New York
Asst. Industrial Dept. of Labor
Department of Labor

Hill, Stewart V.
258 Genesee Street
Utica, New York
O J T Evaluator
New York Dept. of Labor

Hilton, E. P.
Frankford, Kentucky
State Dept. of Education, Kentucky
State Sup. of Agricultural Edu.
Public Schools

Holden, John B.
Hamilton High School
Hamilton, Ohio
Dir. of Adult Edu.
Public Schools

R. R. Hamilton
College of Law, Unv. of Wyoming
Laramie, Wyoming
Dean, College of Law
University of Wyoming

Houchens, John M.
University of Louisville,
Louisville 8, Kentucky
Veterans Co-ordinator
University of Louisville

J. F. Ingram
Depart. of Education
Montgomery Alabama
Supv. of Veterans Ed.
Department of Education

Kenneth Little
University of Wisconsin
Madison, Wisconsin
Director, Student Personnel
Services and Register

J. W. Litherland
Dept. Public Instruction
Lincoln, Nebraska
Supervisor of Secondary Ed.
Dept. Public Instruction

Johnston, J. Russell
52 Starling Street
Columbus, Ohio
Asst. Chief Training Facility Div.
Veterans Administration

Kendrick, William H.
444 Madison Avenue Room 307
New York, New York
Vet. Programs Mgr. Nat. Ass. of Mfgs.
National Association of Mfgs.

Knight, Henry
1108 Quarrier Street
Charleston, West Virginia
Director Vocational Education
Kanawha County Schools

Rev. J. Lane
Univ. Notre Dame
Notre Dame, Indiana
Dir. of Veterans Affairs
University of Notre Dame

Lewis, C. B.
640 Madison-Box 23 Lindsay
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma
Section Chief, Related Training Division
State Accrediting Agency

VETERANS EDUCATION COUNCIL
NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION
JANUARY 14-17, 1947
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

ROSTER

Loggins, W. F.
17 Westfielf Street
Greenville, South Carolina
Supt. of Schools
Greenville Public Schools

Marshall, Donald
701 Carondelet Street
New Orleans 13, Louisiana
Assistant Superintendent
Orleans Parish School Board

McGray, Joseph J.
270 Broadway
New York City, New York
State Supervisor
Div. of Vet. Affairs, State of New York

Mitchell, George S.
906 Lullwater Rd.
Atlanta, Georgia
Dir. of Vet. Services
Southern Regional Council

Montgomery, John
1 N. Commerce Street
Mobile, Alabama
Dir. of Vet Guidance Center
Mobile Public Schools

Moore, J. G.
Tech. High School
Lansing, Michigan
Dir. Lansing Veterans Inst.
Lansing Bd. of Education

Morse, Leonard G.
36 Governor Place
Columbus, Ohio
Tr. & Ed. Supr. Agr.
Veterans Administration

Nelson, Lloyd L.
606 Sturgis Avenue
Sturgis, Michigan
Coordinator
Office of Veterans Affairs

Mosier, Earl
Dept. of Public Instruction
Lansing, Michigan
Higher Education
Public Instruction

Munson, C. H.
1608 K St. N. W.
Washington D. C.
Chief-Vocational Tr. & Ed.
American Legion

Nichols, Ward M.
750 Eddy St.
San Francisco 9, California
Coordinator of Veterans Affairs
San Francisco Board of Education

O'Brien, Natalie
Kirkman Voc. School
Chatanooga, Tennessee
Tester
Kirkman Voc. School

Owens, Robert H.
Cleveland, Ohio Board of Ed.
Cleveland, Ohio
Sup. of Vet. Edu. Div.
Cleveland Public Schools

Paulson, H. E.
Port Huron, High School
Port Huron, Michigan
Dir. of Vet Inst.
City Huron Public Schools

Pennebaker, Kenneth C.
1200 Cadillac Sq. Bldg.
Detroit, Michigan
Dir. of Wayne County Council of Vet Affairs
Wayne County Council of Vet.

Ponitz, Henry J.
Dept. of Public Instructions
Lansing, Michigan
Supv. of Extended Ed.
Dept. of Public Schools

Porter, George D.
711 Fourth Street
Oregon City, Oregon
Director of Adult Education
School Dist. 24, Salem Oregon

Posma, John W.
Senior High School
Battle Creek, Michigan
Veterans Counselor
Senior High School

Phillips, Wendell S.
Univ. of Ga.
Athens, Georgia
Director of Counseling

Proctor, James O.
3 East 25th Street
Baltimore 18, Maryland
Supr. of Voc Education for Adults
Dept. Education (Baltimore)

VETERANS EDUCATION COUNCIL
NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION
JANUARY 14-17, 1947
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

ROSTER

Reckling, Ralph
426 No. Gilmor Street
Baltimore 23, Maryland
Principal of Vet Institute
Douglas H. S. Branch
City Board of Education

Lloyd W. Reese
285 E. Torrence Road
Columbus, Ohio
Chief Ed. & Tr. Branch Office 6
Veterans Adm.

Ricart, J. Edward
R. F. D. No.4
Greenhill Road Pittsburgh, Pa.
Asst. Dean of Men-Counselor to Vets.
University of Pittsburgh

Ridley, C. A.
Dearborn Bd. of Education
Dearborn Michigan
Veterans Counselor
Dearborn Bd. of Education

Robinson, G. G.
Tech. High School
Lansing, Michigan
Dir. of On the Job Training
Lansing Public Schools

Robinson, R. F.
431 North Meridian
Indianapolis, Indiana
Education Dir. State Dept. Vet. Affairs

Rock, Walter J.
1300 City Hall
St. Paul Minn.
Supv. Veterans Ed. of St. Paul Dept. Ed.
St. Paul Dept. Education

Rogers, Harris
P. O. Box 870
Columbus, Georgia
Director Veterans Training
Columbus, Georgia Public Schools

Schaublin, Robert H.
Dearborn Vet. Hospital
Dearborn, Michigan
Dir. of Education Retraining
Dearborn Vet. Hospital

*Gerber, Joe N.
Northwestern State College
Natchitoches, Louisiana
Dir. of Student Personnel & Vet Coor.
Northwestern State Col. of La.

Schiffley, W. A.
Room 308 Wade Hampton Office Bldg.
Cola, South Carolina
Director Veterans Education
State Dept. of Education

Schneider, Kurt A.
1000 East Marshall Street
Richmond 19, Virginia
Dir. of Voc. & Adult Educ.
Richmond Public Schools

Schuler, Edgar A.
135 Gunson Street
East Lansing, Michigan
Associate Prof. of Sociology & Arith.
Michigan State College

Scott, Ira D.
V. A. Constitution Avenue & 20 Street N. W.
Washington D. C.
Director of Advisement & Guid. Service
V. A.

Shibler, H. L.
12541 Second Blvd.
Highland Park 3, Michigan
Sup. of Schools
Public Schools

Smith, Gerald W.
1136 22nd Street
Moline, Ill.
Dean. Univ. Ill. Ext. Center

Smith, F. O.
University of Tennessee
Knoxville, Tennessee
Dean of Univ.

Snow, Herbert
3833 Lovers Lane
Kalamazoo, Michigan
Coordinator
Kalamazoo Public Schools

Snyder, Harry A.
Board of Education
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania
Director Veterans Education
Pittsburgh Bd. of Education

*Toepelman, W. C.
Univ. of Colo.
Boulder, Colorado
Dir., Div. of Veteran's Affairs
University of Colorado

VETERANS EDUCATION COUNCIL
NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION
JANUARY 14-17, 1947
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

ROSTER

Spangler, Mace
400 N. Walnut
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma
Coordinator Vet-on-the job-training
City Public Schools

Sprague, Ver Lynn
52 S. Starling Street
Columbus, Ohio
Executive Office, Medical Rehabilation
Bn. # 6 Veterans Adm.

Stien, Gordon R.
State Teachers College
Eau Claire, Wisconsin
Dir. of Counselor Service
Teachers College

Triplett, Ishmael
1328 Fontaine Road
Lemington, Kentucky
Director Textbooks
Kentucky State Dept. of Educ.

Vander Beke, George E.
615 No. Eleventh Street
Milwaukee 3, Wisc.
Coordinator for Veterans Affairs
Marquette University

Vanderlip, Robert G.
Veterans High School Center
Washington, D. C.
Dir. of Veterans High School Center
Washington Public Schools

Van Ness, George H.
188 East McMillan
Cincinnati, Ohio
Director Veterans Education
Cincinnati Public Schools

Venabee, Clay E.
P. O. Box 1801
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma
Educational Counselor
Veterans Center

Waldrop, R. S.
Rackham Bldg.
Detroit, Michigan
Dir. Veterans Service Bureau
University of Michigan

Wass, L. E.
1001 Harrison Street
Davenport Iowa
Dir. Industrial & Adult Ed.
Iowa State Adult Education

Wellington, A. M.
315 N. Ardmore Street
Columbus, Ohio
Ass't. Chief. Advisment & Guidance
Veterans Adm.

Whitehouse, Victor
Ohio University
Athens, Ohio
Coordinator of Vet Affairs
Ohio lUniversity

Wilson, Roy K.
1201 16th St. N.W.
Washington D. C.
Ass't Dir. Press & Radio Relations
N/E. A.

Wright, Harry L.
63 Auburn Avenue
Atlanta Georgia
Field Rep.
Southern Regional Council Inc.

Wygal, Fred O.
State Dept. Educ.
Richmond, Virginia
Dir. Guid. & Adult Educ.

Wythes, William H.
Room 605 Trenton Trust Bldg.
Trenton, New Jersey
Ass't in Adult Education
State Dept. of Education

Yourman, Julius
270 Broadway
New York City, New York
Dir. of Research and Counciling
N. Y. Div. of Vet. Affairs

good Eggo

WHO'S WHO

AMA Institute of Race Relations

(Supplementary List)

Allen, Mrs. Elizabeth — Baltimore, Md.
Social Worker, Department of Public Welfare; Baltimore Urban League

*Barnes, Mrs. Ella Boyd — Nashville
Teacher (on leave); Member, U. S. Civilian Defense; Home Service Chairman, City Council PTA; Secretary of Religious Education, St. Paul AME Church; Secretary of Nutrition Mass-feeding, Bethlehem Center

Beittel, Dr. A. D. — Talladega, Ala.
President, Talladega College; Congregational Church; Southern Sociological Society

Davis, Dr. W. S. — Nashville
President, A. & I. State College; Regional Chairman, Veterans Project, Conference of Presidents of Negro Land Grant Colleges

Drake, Dr. J. F. — Normal, Ala.
President, State A. & M. Institute; Regional Chairman, Veterans Project, Conference of Presidents of Negro Land Grant Colleges

Eleazer, Mr. R. B. — Nashville
Secretary, Local Church Division, Methodist Board of Education; Formerly, Educational Director, Southern Interracial Commission

Freeman, Mr. Andrew G. — Dayton, Ohio
Employee Counselor, AAF War Department; NAACP; Masonic Lodge; Ohio Psychological Association

Hall, Mr. Wiley A. — Richmond, Va.
Executive Secretary, Richmond Urban League; American Association of Social Workers; National Conference of Social Work

Hamilton, Mrs. Grace Towns — Atlanta, Ga.
Executive Secretary, Atlanta Urban League

Harper, Mr. William V. — Nashville
Department of Education

Haygood, Mrs. Vandi V. — Chicago, Ill.
Acting Director for Fellowships, Julius Rosenwald Fund

---

*Inadvertently left off First Week's list.

Hernandez, Dr. Raphael — Nashville
Meharry Medical College

James, Mrs. Bernice Davis — Galveston, Tex.
Teacher, English, High School; Girl Reserve Adviser; YWCA; Reedy Chapel AME Church; Social Clubs, AKA Sorority

Lanier, Mrs. E. E. — Nashville

League, Chief Petty Officer Richard — Nashville

Lemon, Rev. J. H. — Milledgeville, Ga.
Minister, Wesley Chapel AME Church; NAACP; Religious Educational Council

Martin, Mrs. H. L. — Nashville
Secretary, South Nashville District of the Women's Missionary Society, AME Church; President, PTA; WCTU; Bethel AME Church; Committee of Public Affairs, YWCA

McFall, Mrs. John A. — Nashville

McFall, Dr. John A. — Nashville
Retired Pharmacist

Mundy, Mrs. A. V. — Tuskegee, Ala.
Editor, Pulling Together Magazine; Catholic Church

Niermeyer, Miss Ethel — Memphis, Tenn.
General Secretary, YWCA

Patterson, Mrs. Eva L. — Jackson, Miss.
Teacher, Social Science, Magnolia High School, Vicksburg, Miss.; Camile Arts Club of Women's Federation

*Phillips, Mrs. H. L. — Houston, Tex.
Presbyterian Church, Heights Woman's Club; Houston YWCA, Board of Directors and Chairman of Council on Public Affairs; City Federation Women's Clubs

Pipes, President W. H. — Alcorn, Miss.
Alcorn A. & M. College; Regional Chairman, Veterans Project, Conference of Presidents of Negro Land Grant Colleges

Rollins, Mrs. Charlemae — Chicago, Ill.
Children's Librarian, George C. Hall Branch Library; NAACP; YWCA; Chicago Civil Liberties Committee; Urban League; Chicago Public Library Union; SCMWA; ALA; ILA; Chicago Library Club; People's Co-op; Children's Reading Round Table Chicago Staff Association

---

* Inadvertently left off First Week's list.

Shell, Mr. William H. — Atlanta, Ga.
Placement Specialist, War Manpower Commission, Region VII

Spencer, Mr. Chauncey E. — Dayton, Ohio
Employee Counselor, AAF War Department; Masonic Lodge; NAACP

Terrell, Mrs. Mary Church — Washington, D. C.
First President, National Association of Colored Women; connected with other organizations

Supplementary List of

LECTURERS, CONSULTANTS AND DISCUSSION LEADERS

Capt. Willard Abraham
Executive Officer, Analysis and Planning Branch, Information and Education Division, ASF, Washington, D. C.

William Y. Bell
Southern Regional Director, National Urban League; Executive Board, Atlanta Social Planning Council.

William M. Boyd
Professor of Political Science and Head of Social Science Department, Fort Valley State College, Fort Valley, Georgia.

Colonel Frederick S. Foltz
Chief, Classification and Replacement Branch, Adjutant General's Office, War Department, Washington, D. C.

Major Richard L. Jones
Educational and Vocational Guidance Officer, Separation Center, Fort Sheridan, Illinois.

M. E. Tilly
Commission on Minority Groups, Southern Regional Council; Secretary, Christian Social Relation, S. E. Jurisdiction, The Methodist Church, Woman's Society Christian Service.

YOUTH

IN A MINOR KEY

COMMISSION ON INTERRACIAL COOPERATION, INC.
710 STANDARD BLDG.
ATLANTA, GA.

NEGRO YOUTH IN STORY AND FACT

IN A MINOR KEY

Negro Youth in Story and Fact

BY IRA DeA. REID

Prepared for

The American Youth Commission

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION

Washington, D. C. . . . 1940

AUTHOR: IRA DEA. REID
FORMER SRC ASST. DIR.

Progress Memorandum

Pac Northern

INTEGRATION

NORTH and SOUTH

by David Loth and Harold Fleming

FOREWORD BY MORRIS L. ERNST

Southern Section, Researched and written by SRC.

A MEMO ON SCHOOL INTEGRATION

Steps in Implementing the Supreme Court's Decision

School Bell

Prepared for the

NATIONAL CIVIL LIBERTIES CLEARING HOUSE

by a Panel on School Integration:--

Irene Osborne, American Friends Service Committee, Chairman

Philip Lerman, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith

Margaret Garrity, Catholic Conference on Industrial Problems

Olya Margolin, National Council of Jewish Women

Mary Alice Baldinger, National Civil Liberties Clearing House, Secretary

A MEMO ON SCHOOL INTEGRATION

"Today, education is perhaps the most important function of state and local governments. Compulsory school attendance laws and the great expenditures for education both demonstrate our recognition of the importance of education to our democratic society. It is required in the performance of our most basic public responsibilities, even service in the armed forces. It is the very foundation of good citizenship.

". . . We conclude that in the field of public education the doctrine of 'separate but equal' has no place. Separate educational facilities are inherently unequal."

-- From the Supreme Court's Decision of May 17, 1954.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Citizens in many communities throughout the United States have, for a long time, worked to eliminate segregation in education. The unanimous decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, declaring segregation in the public schools unconstitutional, leaves no choice to the law-abiding citizen, but to accept the challenge of achieving an orderly transition from a segregated to an integrated school system. School integration is now the law of the land, and local and state school authorities have the responsibility for carrying out the law. But no law, no matter how right and just, can be fully realized without the widest possible public understanding and acceptance. The ultimate solution lies in the hearts and minds of the people of the community. For those who are willing to assume their share of the necessary task of developing among their fellow citizens a clearer understanding of the issues involved, these suggestions are offered.

WHAT WE KNOW ABOUT SCHOOL DESEGREGATION

Fortunately, there has been extensive experience in desegregation of schools -- enough to point the way, to indicate some do's and don'ts. In recent years, there have been desegregation programs in school systems throughout the border states and into the South. Since the Supreme Court decision, integration has been undertaken in the major cities of Washington, Baltimore, Wilmington and St. Louis, as well as in smaller communities and rural areas of Delaware, Missouri, West Virginia, and Arkansas. These instances can be added to the earlier experience in Arizona, New Mexico, Kansas, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Delaware and New Jersey. In addition, there has been extensive experience in higher education and in private schools.

This experience tells a story of success. Over and over, the job has been done, and well done, providing a constructive experience for the community. Despite initial fears, the difficulties which would be expected with any major change, and opposition from significant portions of the community, integration has been achieved in such a way as to improve the educational system.

Indeed, delay is more to be feared than action. Before the fact, the community will react with some fear of the unknown. The community often tends to divide over issues which are not the real issues, while anxieties grow in the waiting period. Time will frequently be used to mobilize opposition.

School authorities will do well to take leadership in building a constructive program of desegregation. The stable elements in the community will welcome such leadership and will give it whole-hearted support.

Establishing Policy

It is most important to establish a clear and concise policy, one which will be understandable to everyone. The policy should affirm the principle of non-discrimination in the conduct of school affairs. However it may be worded, the basic plan should specify that both pupil assignment and personnel handling should be carried out without regard to race. A statement of conviction is a sound idea. As an example of what one community has done, the policy statement of the District of Columbia Board of Education, adopted May 24, 1954, is here cited:

> In the light of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Bolling v. Sharpe, the Board of Education of the District of Columbia, believing it to be in the best interest of all citizens of the community of Washington, and necessary to the effective administration of an integrated system within the public schools, hereby adopts the following declaration of policy:
>
> 1. Appointments, transfers, preferments, promotions, ratings, or any other matters respecting the officers and employees of the Board shall be predicated solely upon merit and not upon race or color.
>
> 2. No pupil of the public schools shall be favored or discriminated against in any matter or in any manner respecting his or her relationship to the schools of the District of Columbia by reason of race or color.
>
> 3. Attendance of pupils residing within school boundaries, hereafter to be established, shall not be permitted at schools located beyond such boundaries, except for the most necessitous reasons or for the public convenience, and in no event for reasons related to the racial character of the school within the boundaries in which the pupil resides.
>
> 4. The Board believes that no record should be kept or maintained in respect to any pupil not enrolled in a public school on or prior to June 17, 1954, or in respect to any officer or employee not employed within the system on or prior to that date in which information is solicited or recorded relating to the color or race of any such person.
>
> 5. That the maximum efficient use shall be made of all physical facilities without regard to race or color.
>
> In support of the foregoing principles, which are believed to be cardinal, the Board will not hesitate to use its full powers. It is pledged to a complete and wholehearted pursuit of these objectives.
>
> We affirm our intention to secure the right of every child, within his own capacity, to the full, equal and impartial use of all school facilities, and the right of all qualified teachers to teach where needed within the school system. And finally, we ask the aid, cooperation and goodwill of all citizens and the help of the Almighty in holding to our stated purposes.

Pupil Assignment

In order to make desegregated pupil assignments, the city can be re-zoned on a geographic basis without reference to the race of the child. The new zones should be drawn in such a way as to make maximum use of facilities. Efficiency and economy will be the natural results. If racial prejudice or antagonism to integration are allowed to dictate school assignment, policy becomes difficult or impossible to enforce, placing school officials in an untenable position. For these reasons, a liberal transfer policy is unwise.

When boundary lines are drawn on a geographic basis, results will vary in different communities, depending on the pattern of housing. Where there is considerable residential segregation, it may be inevitable that some schools of only one race remain. On the other hand, the practice of gerrymandering may be used as a device to avoid integration. Citizens should be aware of this as a threat to a positive program.

Details will need specific planning in each community. In some cases there are inadequate school buildings which should be abandoned and pupils reassigned elsewhere. Where two schools are close together, they may be combined as one school, with lower grades in one building and upper grades in the other. Often there are special institutions which can be merged at once (e.g. teacherscollege, technical school, or facilities for the handicapped).

There are, of course, some school systems which do not use a plan of enforced districting, or which have secondary schools specialized on a curricular basis. Whatever system is used, the rules should apply without regard to race.

Staff Integration

Integration of teachers should take place along with integration of pupils. Teachers should be hired and promoted on the basis of merit, and placed according to the needs of the system, irrespective of the race of the teacher or the student. There are numerous instances of interracial staffs around the country, and many where the staffs were integrated along with pupil integration. Personnel-wise, it is the soundest policy, since it insures the best qualified person for each job. With the nation-wide shortage of teachers severe as it is, the South cannot adequately staff its schools without the services of Negro teachers. Staff integration is therefore indicated both for the needs of the schools and out of fairness to Negro teachers.

Meeting Opposition

One of the questions most often asked is how to handle cases of outright resistance, such as the student strikes which occurred in a few cities. The best answer is provided by the experience of cities which have met the problem. It is notable that in Baltimore and Washington, the strikes were short-lived and met with no success. In those cities, school officials, police and press took a firm stand against the demonstrations, reaffirming policy and opposing the tactics of the strikes. Social action, religious, and welfare groups organized quickly to defend the integration policy. This is in contrast to the story in Milford, Delaware, where the state authorities hesitated and backed down, and no community organizations came to the rescue. The result was a long period of trouble. The lesson is clear that success depends on a firm and positive stand.

Public Relations

School authorities should give special attention to public relations at the time of desegregation. To do a good reporting job, press representatives need ample factual material as well as some interpretation of what the schools are trying to do.

A school administrator who does a careful and honest job of working with the press will find that it pays dividends in terms of public understanding and good will.

The school program should likewise be interpreted to city officials, police, and leading community agencies. Conferences with the chief of police are particularly advised, so that the police will be fully aware of a responsibility to act impartially and in the interest of law and order at all times.

CITIZENS CAN HELP

Part of the American belief is the right of every child to an education, an education which will meet his needs as a person and which will be available to him regardless of his financial resources. Out of this belief grew our public and private school systems. Our money has built and maintained our schools. Our money and time must still be given if we wish to continue a solid program of education. The schools are ours, and the responsibility of keeping the schools is ours.

Today more than ever before it behooves us to make known our interest to our local and state officials so they can discharge honorably the responsibilities with which we, the citizens, have entrusted to them. They cannot know our desires unless we tell them what we want.

We must have now a positive program of study and action to safeguard our schools and to insure an orderly transition period from segregation to de-segregation - a transition period which will be a pleasant experience for our children and not one which will be harmful to them.

This is not the goal of just one or two or a few of us. This is the goal of almost everyone in every community. It needs serious consideration. Talk to your friends, your neighbors. Their interest in preserving the schools is the same as yours. See to it that your voices are heard. You make up the bulk of your community. Now your voice must be heard if your community and your schools are to serve their true purpose.

To be heard you must talk together, meet together, learn together how your schools and community are managed. You will want to become better acquainted with your community and the people who make up your community: work with the organized segments of your hometown. Learn with the churches, the synagogues, the schools, the civic clubs, the community centers, the professional associations and fraternal organizations what your major school problems are.

Study the strengths and weaknesses of your school system. Discover how the system is organized and financed. What is the employment status, the tenure and the qualifications of Negro and white teachers? What is the proportion of Negro and white teachers? Of Negro and white students? What are your school boundary lines and how are they determined? Are the citizens kept informed of the planning of the school board? Are Negro and white teachers meeting separately or together to work out their problems?

Learn the practice and policy of other state and city organizations, e.g. libraries, hospitals, employment offices, colleges and universities. What is the official attitude and practice of church groups, civic associations and other institutions in your community in regard to desegregation?

After you have acquired the factual information which bears on a program of desegregation, talk with your responsible officials so that together you can arrange an orderly desegregation of the schools. Be prepared to make some recommendations about how the process should be carried out. Urge other outstanding citizens in your area to do likewise. Encourage the organizations already established to do the same. Work with the press, so they can help to build an informed citizenry. Encourage widening segments of the community to give serious thought to the subject.

AND IN CONCLUSION

What, then, do we know about the job ahead of us? What guideposts are available to give the citizen a sense of sureness about what he is doing? By way of summary, we offer here a few of the conclusions which emerge from the record of experience.

1. Experience in desegregation of schools has been extensive in recent years, demonstrating that the job can be successfully accomplished, contributing to better schools and more democratic communities.

2. Desegregation should begin with official adoption and announcement of a policy of non-discrimination, affecting both pupil assignment and personnel action.

3. Opposition can be effectively met by a firm and positive stand. Constructive elements of the community can and should be organized in support of a forthright policy.

4. Desegregation is a responsibility not only of school officials, but of all citizens who have an interest in a good school program.

5. Citizens can help by taking the lead in study and planning, by making their views known to the public and to the responsible officials.

6. In every community, there are resources that can be tapped for help in doing the job, resources in terms of people, organizations, and specialized services.

7. Problems do not solve themselves. People solve problems. In the words of Arnold Toynbee, "We cannot just fold our hands and let history rip." The problems we are facing are, in fact, human problems which human beings can and will solve.

Those who believe in the American concept that all men are created equal and therefore entitled to equal protection of the laws should now assume their citizenship responsibilities by actively participating in the implementation of the Supreme Court Decision -- the law of the land. The economic, political and social wellbeing of our nation and its communities depends on an intelligent and informed citizenry. An adequate education for all children is, therefore, essential. Those who have faith in our Nation and its people welcome the opportunity to take a step forward in democratic living.

* * * * * * * * * * * *

* * * * SOME SELECTED GROUPS WORKING IN THE FIELDS OF INTEGROUP EDUCATION * * * *

(Write national office for address of local affiliate and for resource material and audio-visual aids.)

Adult Education Association
Malcolm S. Knowles,
Administrative Coordinator
743 North Wabash Avenue
Chicago 11, Illinois

American Camping Association, Inc.
Mr. Chancey Paxson, Chairman,
Intercultural Committee
American Camping Assn., Penns Park
Bucks County, Pennsylvania

American Federation of Labor
Boris Shishkin
901 Massachusetts Ave., N. W.
Washington 1, D. C.

American Friends Service Committee
Richard K. Bennett, Secretary,
Community Relations Program
20 South 12th Street
Philadelphia 7, Pennsylvania

American Jewish Committee
Mrs. Dorothy M. Nathan
386 Fourth Avenue
New York 16, New York

American Jewish Congress
David W. Petegorsky,
Executive Director
15 East 84th Street
New York 28, New York

American Nurses' Association
Miss Grace E. Marr,
Assistant Executive Secretary
2 Park Avenue
New York 16, New York

Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith
Oscar Cohen, Director,
Program Division, A.D. L.
212 Fifth Avenue
New York 10, New York

Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, Inc.
Albert N. D. Brooks,
Secretary-Treasurer
1538 9th St., N. W.
Washington, D. C.

Boy Scouts of America
J. A. Brunton, Jr., Director,
Division of Relationships
National Council, B.S.A.
New Brunswick, New Jersey

Catholic Committee of the South
Very Rev. Maurice Shean,
c/o The Oratory
Rock Hill, South Carolina

Catholic Interracial Councils
George K. Hunton, Exec. Secretary
20 Vesey Street
New York 7, New York

Congress of Industrial Organizations
(Civil Rights Committee)
George L-P. Weaver, Director
718 Jackson Place, N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

Girl Scouts of the United States of America
Mrs. Besse Kranz, Advisor on Inter-group
Relations, Community Relations Division
155 East 44th Street
New York 17, New York

National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
Henry Lee Moon, Dir. of Public Relations
20 West 40th Street
New York 18, New York

National Association of Intergroup
Relations Officials
John Field, Executive Secretary
565 North Erie Street
Toledo 2, Ohio

National Catholic Welfare Conference
Rt. Rev. Msgr. Frederick G. Hochwalt
Department of Education

Miss Margaret Garrity
Office of Race Relations
1312 Massachusetts Ave., N. W.
Washington 5, D. C.

National Community Relations Adv. Council
Isaiah M. Minkoff, Executive Director
9 East 38th Street
New York 16, New York

PLEASE NOTE

We regret that by error the name of an important agency working in the field of intergroup education was deleted from the list of organizations given here. Please add --

National Conference of Christians and Jews,
Dr. Herbert L. Seamans, Director,
Commission on Educational Organizations,
381 Fourth Ave.,
New York 16, N.Y.

National Council of Catholic Women,
Miss Irma Piepho
1312 Massachusetts Ave., N. W.
Washington 5, D. C.

National Council of Churches
(Dept. of Racial & Cultural Relations)
Dr. J. Oscar Lee, Executive Director
297 Fourth Avenue
New York 10, New York

National Council of Jewish Women
Mrs. Elsie Elfenbein, Exec. Dir.
1 West 47th Street
New York 36, New York

National Council of Negro Women
Mrs. Wm. Thomas Mason,
National President
1318 Vermont Ave., N. W.
Washington 5, D. C.

National Council of Y.M.C.A.'s
Leo B. Marsh
291 Broadway
New York 7, New York

National Education Association
William G. Carr, Exec. Secretary
1201 16th Street, N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

National Jewish Welfare Board
S. D. Gershovitz, Exec. Vice President
145 East 32nd Street
New York 16, New York

National Social Welfare Assembly
Robert E. Bondy, Director
345 East 46th Street
New York 17, New York

National Urban League
Lester B. Granger, Exec. Director
1133 Broadway
New York 10, New York

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Dr. George S. Mitchell,
Executive Director
63 Auburn Ave., N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Y. W. C. A.
Publication Services
600 Lexington Avenue
New York 22, New York

* * * \

5. JOURNAL OF NEGRO EDUCATION, Summer, 1954, Vol. XXIII. Fourteen articles on history of integration and current problems.

6. McCULLOCH, MARGARET C., "Integration: Promise--Process--Problems," Nashville, Tenn.; (Fisk University, Race Relations Dept., American Missionary Assn., 1952, pp. vi-77) Deals with integration in the various fields where segregation now exists. Contains basic statements which apply specifically to educational integration.

7. "Questions & Answers: The Schools and the Courts." Atlanta, Ga. (Southern Regional Council, 1953, p. 16) Explains how question of integration was brought to the fore by appeals to the courts; summarizes principal arguments advanced for and against segregation and points out the changes that are likely to take place in the schools depending on what the Court decides.

8. "Segregation and the Schools," New York, (Public Affairs Pamphlet No. 209, 1954, 30 pp.) Summarizes the Ashmore report, "The Negro and The Schools." Will be particularly useful for brief orientation to facts in the situation.

9. WILLIAMS, ROBIN AND MARGARET W. RYAN, "Schools in Transition," (University of North Carolina Press, November 20, 1954)

10. "Southern School News," issued periodically by the Southern Educational Reporting Service, 1109--19th St., South, Acklen Station, Nashville, Tenn. Set up especially to report factually and objectively on integration education. Free copies on request.

11. GRAMBS, JEAN D., "Education in a Transition Community," (National Conference of Christians and Jews, 1954, 124 pp.) A compendium designed to assist community organizations and leaders in preparing for school integration.

12. "Resource Units on Intergroup Relations - Desegregation in the Public Schools." (Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, 1954, 4 pp.) A resource unit for teachers and community leaders, listing material and education ideas to assist in preparing the school and community for integration.

* * * \

FILE
COPY

Revolutionary Plans to Improve Negroes' Lot Laid Before Willis

By PAUL HUGHES, Courier-Journal Staff Writer

BOLDLY asserting that any progress Kentucky makes "is dependent not only on an intelligent use of its natural resources but, primarily, on the quality of its human resources and full employment of the skills of every citizen," the Kentucky Commission on Negro Affairs has called for basic and positive application of "United we stand, divided we fall."

In a surprisingly exhaustive report—considering the formidable questions involved and the exasperating dearth of time—the commission has laid before Governor Willis, who asked for a survey and conclusions, the most far-reaching, most revolutionary and yet most obvious recommendations for improvement of race relations that ever have come out of the South.

Legislation Proposed

Legislation was asked to :

1. Abolish the Jim Crow Law.
2. Permit attendance of Negroes at professional schools and in postgraduate courses.
3. Require nondiscrimination in State Government contracts and other public projects.
4. Seek federal aid to raise the level of educational opportunities.
5. End immediately all differentials in teacher salaries due to race.
6. Provide funds for expansion of West Kentucky Vocational School and Lincoln Institute as more adequate boarding high school service for rural youth.
7. Make available funds to provide educational opportunities at Kentucky State College equal to those at University of Kentucky in areas of instruction in which adequate enrollment may be expected.
8. Designate Kentucky State College as recipient of funds for agricultural education and experimentation received by the State from federal sources.
9. Allocate $25,000 a year to Red Cross Hospital, Louisville, to bring about establishment of a training school for nurses and for care of out-of-county indigent Negro cases.

New Infirmaries Urged

10. Establish infirmaries at each State educational institution, with facilities for an out-patient clinic and in-patient treatment, for training of licensed midwives and as centers for services for Negroes in rural areas.
11. Provide public school instruction for dependent and delinquent Negro children with standards comparable with other tax-supported schools.
12. Make the Kentucky Commission on Negro Affairs permanent by appropriation of not less than $7,500 a year for research and continuing study of facts relative to the needs of the Negro in Kentucky.

Others among the recommendations include:

A. Creation of a special commission of members of the General Assembly to develop antidiscrimination legislation for enactment by the forthcoming Legislature.

B. That to stimulate improvement of conditions affecting Negro schools of the county, an independent school district be accredited as a system of schools rather than as a separate school.

C. That the position of assistant supervisor of Negro education, employing a Negro educator, be made permanent.

D. That a Negro be appointed to the State Board of Education to interpret special problems of Negro education.

E. That adequate funds be provided for West Kentucky Vocational Training School, and that a strong program of vocational training be developed for it and Lincoln Institute.

F. That the out-of-state scholarship plan be eliminated as soon as equality of educational opportunity exists, but that during the period remaining of its operation, a maximum of $350 per person per year be granted, instead of the present $175.

G. That any Negro qualified to pursue a course of instruction of graduate grade or on the professional level may do so at any educational institution in this state if such course is not available at the Kentucky State College.

H. That there be developed a co-ordinated program of education for Lincoln Institute, West Kentucky Vocational Training School, Kentucky State College and possibly Louisville Municipal College.

I. More technical training in schools for adults and within industries to develop skills of Negro workers.

J. Labor union officers should share with management the responsibility for obtaining white workers' approval of employment of Negroes, and impart democratic standards and practices to the rank and file of the membership generally.

K. Employers should be urged to give to Negroes opportunities from which custom has barred them; that is, in sales personnel, on telephone switchboards, as operators of streetcars and busses, etc.

L. Include small farmers, tenant croppers and household workers of both races in provisions of the Social Security System.

M. Develop a system of written leases to include reimbursement for unexpended improvements on land and dwellings and acknowledgment of certain improved practices to stand in lieu of rent.

N. Develop rural housing improvement programs and community recreational activities for both races.

O. Urge acceptance of Negro farmers as members of farm organizations and cooperatives.

P. Broaden work among Negroes under Smith-Hughes vocational funds administered by the State Department of Education, including 4-H Club work.

Q. Establish a household workers' training institution which would become a center of education, information and interpretation of proper standards, for both employers and workers; certificates should guarantee competence and dependability of household workers and give it the dignity it deserves.

R. Include courses in business practices in Negro schools, and adult instruction in centers where Negro population justifies it.

S. Set up an educational program to combat lack of information regarding health laws.

Negroes In Health Work

T. So that the State may attract more Negro doctors, provide for professional postgraduate and in-service training in all tax-supported institutions for physicians, dentists and nurses in the state.

U. Consider employment of Negro physicians, nurses, social workers, inspectors and appropriate Negro personnel by county boards of health where the Negro population justifies it.

V. Negro professional workers should be employed in official or voluntary agencies where such employment would contribute materially to solution of health problems vitally affecting the Negro.

W. Appoint Negroes to the governing boards of tuberculosis sanatoria.

X. Establish a home for dependent Negro children separate from delinquents, with the intstitution being adjacent to and sharing in use of psychiatrists and other personnel employed at Kentucky Home School at Lyndon.

Y. Trained Negro personnel should be employed in the welfare agencies throughout the state.

Z. A training program for Negro inmates should be set up in all State penal institutions.

AA. Make a study of the legal aspects of restricted covenants in titles to real estate to determine what form of legislation may be necessary to eliminate such practice in Kentucky.

First Big State Survey

Although studies of race relations in the East and North have pioneered the effort and thought in this field, and Fiske University at Nashville and Tuskeegee Institute, Alabama, have added some fact-finding and recommendations in the same direction, this is the first and most long-ranged survey undertaken officially by any state in the South, and no doubt will stand as a beacon light for a long time.

The commission, wisely moving cautiously but not timidly, cites that "the interdependence of peoples and government is practical democracy," and that "the state's government is dependent upon a responsible citizenship, and every citizen is dependent on a responsible government for 'liberty and the pursuit of happiness'."

The corollary follows that "public taxation is justified to the end that it enables each individual citizen to become an asset to life in our democracy," and "therefore, equal opportunities for every citizen in every section of the state and of every race and creed is an essential public policy." The report adds:

"These self-evident truths and our democratic ideals admit the inclusion of all citizens in the services provided by the state. Therefore, equal opportunities are essential for Negro citizens in order that they may make the full contribution to the progress of Kentucky.

"Kentucky's motto must be applied more honestly to race relations in our state and in America to make our democracy real and to keep it from taking the road to revolution that so many other democracies have taken. It is essential to world peace that all races of men must learn to get along together. America has a great opportunity to demonstrate this for other nations. Kentucky can lead the way in the South.

Negro Population Dropping

"Fifty years from now there will be no Negroes in Kentucky, if the present rate of decline in the population ratio continues. Kentucky, once a slave state, in 1890 had a Negro population which was 50 per cent greater than that of Missouri, Illinois and Ohio combined. The number in any one of these states now far exceeds that of Kentucky. It has decreased from 14.4 per cent of the state total in 1890 to 7.5 per cent as shown by the 1940 U. S. census.

"Despite the fact that Kentucky is an agricultural state with 44 per cent of her population residing on farms, Kentucky's Negroes are city and town dwellers. Over half are in urban centers, a fourth in nonfarm communities and less than one-fifth live on farms.

"The sparsely settled and scattered Negro population in Kentucky and the traditional pattern of segregation for Negroes in schools and other public services has impoverished the services of the state to all its people. The second-rate services which are provided Negroes, and in many instances the absence of any services at all, have impoverished the capacity of Negroes to serve the state.

"The migration of Negro people from rural to urban centers in the 'pursuit of happiness' and well-being they do not find in their present day rural life is at the root of all the problems of the Negro people. It is expensive and impractical to provide separate health, educational, welfare institutions, and other public services for the scattered few who remain on the farm."

Who's on commission, and how it works

THE Kentucky Commission on Negro Affairs, made up of an equal number of appointees from each race, was created 14 months ago by an executive order of Governor Willis and told to "obtain and study all the facts and conditions relating to the economic, educational, housing, health and other needs for the betterment of Negro citizens of Kentucky." The commissioners undertook the study on their own time and without any remuneration, not even for their expenses for travel and clerical work.

Serving as chairman was J. M. Tydings, business manager of Lincoln Institute, in Shelby County, and co-chairman was W. H. Perry, Jr., principal of Louisville's Madison Street Junior High School and secretary of the Kentucky Negro Education Association. Others were President William H. Vaughan, Morehead State Teachers College; Walter K. Belknap, Louisville, a Lincoln Institute trustee; Dr. Maurice Rabb, Shelbyville, secretary of the Blue Grass State Medical Association; Mrs. Christine Bradley South, Frankfort; J. J. Kavanagh, Louisville attorney; the Rev. W. H. Ballew, pastor of the Mt. Lebanon Baptist Church, Louisville, and moderator of the Kentucky Association of Negro Baptists; Mrs. L. B. Fouse, Lexington, an officer of the Kentucky Federation of Negro Women; Tarleton Collier, a Courier-Journal editorial writer; Charles W. Anderson, Jr., Louisville attorney and only Negro member of the Kentucky Legislature, and Robert E. Black, Negro, executive secretary of the Louisville Urban League.

The dozen commission members distributed themselves among committees on education, economics, housing, social welfare, health and civil affairs, and then called in as advisory committee members a score or more of the state's leading citizens representing business, professions, labor and civic organizations in general. Group sessions were held here and at Frankfort until two months ago, when work was begun on the final report, handed to Governor Willis on November 1.

Chairman J. M. Tydings

Walter K. Belknap

Charles W. Anderson, Jr.

J. J. Kavanagh

Here are four of the busy citizens who gave their time to the survey supported schools.

12. Make the Kentucky Commission on Negro Affairs permanent by appropriation of not less than $7,500 a year for research and continuing study of facts relative to the needs of the Negro in Kentucky.

Others among the recommendations include:

A. Creation of a special commission of members of the General Assembly to develop antidiscrimination legislation for enactment by the forthcoming Legislature.

B. That to stimulate improvement of conditions affecting Negro schools of the maximum of $350 per person per year be granted, instead of the present $175.

G. That any Negro qualified to pursue a course of instruction of graduate grade or on the professional level may do so at any educational institution in this state if such course is not available at the Kentucky State College.

H. That there be developed a co-ordinated program of education for Lincoln Institute, West Kentucky Vocational Training School, Kentucky State College and possibly Louisville Municipal College.

I. More technical training in schools for provements on land and dwellings and acknowledgment of certain improved practices to stand in lieu of rent.

N. Develop rural housing improvement programs and community recreational activities for both races.

O. Urge acceptance of Negro farmers as members of farm organizations and cooperatives.

P. Broaden work among Negroes under Smith-Hughes vocational funds administered by the State Department of Education, including 4-H Club work.

Q. Establish a household workers' training state in the South, and no doubt will stand as a beacon light for a long time.

The commission, wisely moving cautiously but not timidly, cites that "the interdependence of peoples and government is practical democracy," and that "the state's government is dependent upon a responsible citizenship, and every citizen is dependent on a responsible government for 'liberty and the pursuit of happiness'."

The corollary follows that "public taxation is justified to the end that it enables each individual citizen to become an asset to life in our democracy," and "therefore, equal opportunities for every citizen in every have taken. It is essential to world peace that all races of men must learn to get along together. America has a great opportunity to demonstrate this for other nations. Kentucky can lead the way in the South.

Negro Population Dropping

"Fifty years from now there will be no Negroes in Kentucky, if the present rate of decline in the population ratio continues. Kentucky, once a slave state, in 1890 had a Negro population which was 50 per cent greater than that of Missouri, Illinois and Ohio combined. The number in the services of the state to all its people. The second-rate services which are provided Negroes, and in many instances the absence of any services at all, have impoverished the capacity of Negroes to serve the state.

"The migration of Negro people from rural to urban centers in the 'pursuit of happiness' and well-being they do not find in their present day rural life is at the root of all the problems of the Negro people. It is expensive and impractical to provide separate health, educational, welfare institutions, and other public services for the scattered few who remain on the farm."

The Negro's civil status in Kentucky still is low and puzzling

"IN THE domain of civil affairs, the condition of the Negro in Kentucky is advanced as to several particulars beyond that of his brother in most states of the deeper South which possess somewhat similar historical traditions," said the commission, adding:

"Formal political equality, without restrictions at the ballot box, has been attained; and so also has eligibility to hold public office, although this perhaps is too infrequently realized.

"However, in this border state where divergent attitudes mingle and clash, often without losing their identity, there are odd degrees of tolerance and right. Obvious discriminations and segregations occur, some of which are illogical in the extreme, almost to the point of travesty. For example, a visitor might be moved to the point of ironic comment at sight of railway passengers being segregated by color as soon as a southbound train crosses the Ohio River, although they may have traveled together casually, in comfort and in peace for hundreds of miles southward—the same persons, the same necessities, yet all at once subjected to arbitrary distinctions and 'verbotens.'

"Many of these discriminations and segregations are the results of attitudes and customs rather than of legal omission or commission; others are the result of exploitations due to economic conditions, and bear as heavily upon those of lower income status among the white race as well as the Negro.

Three State Laws Cited

"For example, established practice in most centers of the state demands bail bonds for petty crimes that too often impose hardships and unjust detentions; too often the poor white as well as the poor Negro becomes the defenseless victim of arbitrary handling by officers of the law.

"Three State laws, now for some time in operation, are suggested as likely models for Kentucky legislation. One is the New York (Ives-Quinn) law, the most comprehensive of the three, which provides for a commission empowered to issue anti-discrimination orders enforceable in court. The New Jersey (Hill) law, vests powers of investigation, hearing and enforceable orders in an assistant commissioner of education. The Indiana law empowers the commissioner of labor to receive and investigate reports of discrimination, publish findings, give technical assistance to employers, labor unions and private and public agencies and make recommendations to interested parties."

The Commission recommended to the Governor that he ask the Legislature to repeal the Day Law, in so far as it relates to postgraduate education, by nullifying any discrimination against any person because of color, race or creed in the professional and graduate schools of the various institutions within the state. "We feel that it is undemocratic as well as being an unjustifiable hardship that Negro students are compelled to pursue graduate and professional courses of study outside of the state, while in the payment of taxes they support the very institutions to which they are denied admission, because of color," the commission argued.

Industrial Problems

"The major test of the Negro's acceptance as a worker, on terms of equal opportunity, lies in the field of industrial employment. The test will be applied in the fateful next year or two of readjustment when employment will be stabilized, when seniority benefits will be invoked and competition for jobs will stiffen, and when trades unionism will be measured as never before for its substance as a constructive, protective, democratic force.

"The economic problem of the Negro in Kentucky has two main parts: The handicap of his relative lack of skills, which makes him the 'expendable' of the labor force, the first to go when unemployment impends; and the barriers to employment, training, promotion and opportunity that are too often interposed because of his race.

"Of 482,811 placements by the United States Employment Service in Kentucky in the period 1941 through 1944, approximately 15 per cent, or 75,114, were those of nonwhite workers. However, the Negroes placed on skilled jobs were only about 1 2/3 per cent of the total placed in this classification, and 90 per cent of the Negroes were placed in unskilled (47,209) or service (21,661) jobs. Of 407,697 white workers placed, nearly 25 per cent went into skilled jobs.

'The Vicious Circle'

"This is evidence of a lamentable lack of skills, of classification of many experienced Negroes as unskilled, because the greatest demand for workers was in the division of common labor. The Negro generally was barred from vocational training courses for war workers because of the vicious circle—few good jobs, with prospect of upgrading, because no training; no training, because no prospect of good jobs and the temporary great need of common labor.

"In plants where collective bargaining applies, union officials should share with management the responsibility for obtaining the white workers' approval of the employment of Negroes; and beyond that, approval of the commonsense, economy and constructive value of non-segregation within the plants. Negroes, like other workers, become more efficient through working with experienced workers.

"We urge upon employers generally the consideration of giving opportunity to Negroes in fields from which custom has barred them; i.e., in sales personnel, in such operations as those of telephone switchboards and streetcars and busses. There is a convincing argument, it seems to us, in the greater community stability and common economic benefit that come from full employment.

"A study of the departments and divisions operated by the State of Kentucky reveals interesting figures. Fifty-one offices have thus far been studied with a total of 6,503 employees. Of this number 412, or 6.3 per cent, are Negroes. This is lower than the Negro population percentage in Kentucky of 7.5, and a further study will show that almost all of these employees are porters, maids, attendants or in other unskilled types of work. Out of 1,091 administrative positions, Negroes hold 29 or 2.6 per cent.

"This committee feels very definitely that the State and city administrations should take the lead in nondiscriminatory employment practices. In State employment that is not under civil service, Negro citizens should be employed in at least the proportion of population percentage in all skills and in administrative positions.

The Household Servant

The field of employment that in the past has received the least attention but which probably deserves the most—all circumstances taken into consideration—is that of the household servant. It touches nearest "home" because it involves the closest relationship of peoples—in the home itself. And it touches women, chiefly; it offers the least hope of security, generally speaking, and it is the most trying on the dignity of the worker.

In this area the commission made notable suggestions, without the adoption of which the field may continue to offer little reward, little privilege, little recognition. Here are excerpts from the report on this section:

"One person out of every 25 employed in Kentucky (one out of 18 in Louisville) is in this classification. And of the total of

Nobody Answers

37,841 in Kentucky (1940 Census), 22,134, or 58.5 per cent are Negroes, and of these more than 80 per cent are women. There are more women workers in household employment in Kentucky than in any other single occupation, including teachers or clerical and office workers. This is a fact which has a great influence on the quality of family life.

And yet this field is marked by the least security of tenure, the greatest lack of standards as to hours and conditions of work, the smallest prospect of independence after long years of labor, the least dignity and the most exploitation. The principal if not the only incentive to enter this field is elemental need; not, as in the case of most callings, the hope of advancement, occasional leisure and more than a bare living wage.

"Definite vocational training, leading to certificates at the completion of a course—certificates which would bear the guarantee of competence and dependability—seems to this committee to be a fundamental necessity.

"Hygiene, personal attractiveness and ethics would go along with technical instruction; and at least a minimum of scholastic education would be required, and imparted if not already possessed. The aim, in short, would be the development of proficiency, without which any occupation is bound to remain underprivileged, unrecognized and unrewarded."

Most Negro citizens fare very badly in health, in housing and in welfare

IN THE matter of health, the commission pointed to the fact that the national defense program had highlighted the need for increased health facilities in every community, but that much remains to be done for the Negro population in this regard. It said:

"Due to the recently enacted law regarding blood tests for marriage licenses, the serological division of the State Department of Health laboratory expanded to take care of approximately 400,000 persons a year as against a little over 100,000 annually prior to July 1, 1939.

"This facility greatly enhanced the detection of venereal disease in the low-income group, to which the Negro belongs, which had not had means at their disposal for such examinations.

"Statistics for the period 1941-43, reveal that the annual Negro death rate from syphilis is 44.2 per 1,000 Negro population, ranking seventh in cause from all deaths. The white death rate for the same period averaged 7.5 persons per 1,000 white population.

"Since investigation bears out that a large proportion of venereal infections occur among people who are not economically able to bear the cost of medical treatment, the establishment of a treatment center with adequate personnel and equipment in all counties would be most advisable. Rapid treatment centers should also be available to low income groups since the absence of the individual from employment causes increased strain on the income of the family.

"There are no available statistics on the number of hospital beds for Negroes in the state as a whole. In Louisville and Jefferson County, according to Dr. Carl M. Gambill of the State Health Department, there are 301 or 17.4 per cent of the total beds available to Negroes. This is approximately 5.9 beds per 1,000 Negro population.

New Jobs—New Hopes

A comparative death rate of white and Negro population in Kentucky for 1941-43 for selected cases of death, shows that the annual death rate of Negroes from tuberculosis alone is 128.6 per 1,000, as compared to 59 per 1,000 for whites.

"During the war period the necessity of producing needed war material caused the employment of thousands of Negroes who had never been engaged in the type of work they were doing before. The President's Fair Employment Practice Committee caused many of them to be trained and hired in skilled jobs never before attempted. These opportunities have caused new hopes and ambitions in a group, who for the first time, have tasted just the first fruits of a little economic freedom and security. With the curtailment of the F.E.P.C. program, Kentucky may again find many of her citizens on relief rolls unless it institutes measures to insure Negroes an equitable share of the jobs available in her industries.

"The unskilled laborer and the domestic worker constitute the two largest groups of Negro workers in the State. The Social Security Act does not include these in its program. There will be no unemployment compensation for them.

"Although the exact figures are unavailable at this time, we think the percentage of Negroes requesting assistance was much larger proportionately than that of whites because the lack of educational opportunities and employment are patterns affecting Negroes as a whole in Kentucky.

"The segregrated pattern relegates the Negro to inadequately equipped and operated schools where his chances of acquired skills with which he may make a decent wage are nullified. Because the majority of Negroes are untrained for those jobs which offer more pay their chances for making decent living wages are lessened.

Discrimination By Unions

"The discrimination practiced by many unions also mitigates against the employment of Negroes, in plants which have closed shops. This limits the Negroes' earning power. Seniority rights is another problem in his retention of jobs acquired during the war emergency. Being the last persons hired they, naturally, are the first laid off. All of these circumstances enter into the general welfare of the Negro in Kentucky.

"It should be revealing to have reports from other thickly Negro populated sections of the state. The earning capacity or average yearly income of the Negro is $187, compared to the yearly income of $327 for the white citizen in Kentucky. This points to low educational standards, with their concomitant low earning capacity.

"The housing conditions of Negroes in Kentucky are deplorable. The war period has served to aggravate this condition. The Negro suffers handicaps not common to the majority group. Being low wage earners, they fall more in the class of tenants than any other group. Being predominantly renters they fall heir to property that has been vacated by former occupants who were able to secure better houses.

Where Criminals Breed

"Living in houses already in great need of repair, their condition is made worse by the lack of attention by landlords to these rundown conditions. The landlords charge excessive rents, but do not invest any of the income from the rents to property upkeep. This vicious practice blights the communities with slum areas, most of which are populated by Negroes.

"Nothing breeds criminals more than the squalid and unwholesome conditions in which pauperized people are forced to live. The human being has to have an incentive to be good. Unfortunately, this is a matter of cultivation. It is a result of environment influences. Because of the discrimination practiced on the Negro group by law enforcement officers, the statistics for crime and misdemeanors show an overwhelming percentage of arrests and convictions. The Louisville Welfare Report indicates that over 29 per cent of the daily inmate population of the workhouse were Negroes over a three-year period, although the Negro constituted only 13 per cent of the total population."

Educational facilities available for Kentucky Negroes are described as being 'scandalously poor'

WITH regard to education, the commission cited the segregation system, which "contributes much to Kentucky's low rank educationally." The report pointed out that "a survey of Negro schools in Kentucky reveals that educational facilities for Negroes, particularly in the rural areas, is scandalously poor. There is a great need for new school buildings and equipment, for higher standards of Negro teachers, and an educational program adaptable to present day economic and social changes.

"Almost one-fourth of the Negroes now in Kentucky live in Louisville and Jefferson County. Over two-thirds of the colored population lives in 27 counties. The land area of these counties is but one-fourth of the area of the state. For the one-third scattered thinly over the rest of the state, there are critical problems concerning adequate facilities for school and other social services.

"In 1944-45 there were 25,932 Negro children enrolled in the elementary schools of Kentucky. Ten counties enrolled 47 per cent of the Negro elementary school pupils of the state. In twenty counties there were 62.5 per cent of the Negro elementary school pupils in the state. Thirty per cent of the Negro elementary school pupils were in three counties—Jefferson, Christian and Fayette. Twelve counties of the state reported that there were no Negro elementary school pupils enrolled.

"Ten thousand Negro children of school age failed to enroll in any of the public schools of the state during 1942-43. Four thousand Negro pupils dropped out of school before the close of the term and did not return to or enter another school during the year. Only 60 per cent of the Negro children in the first grade and 76 per cent in the second grade completed the year's work. In 1942-43, 36 out of every 100 Negro children who had entered the first grade seven years before were graduated into the eighth grade, while at the same time 33 out of every 100 white children who entered the first grade seven years before were graduated into the eighth grade.

"It is surprising that so many Negro pupils are enrolled in high schools. It shows an eagerness on their part to get an education. It presents a challenge to the people of Kentucky to help them get the most out of their high school experience. In most of the counties that do not have any high schools for Negroes, the local boards of education are attempting to furnish Negroes the adequate educational opportunity by transporting them to high schools in adjoining counties, or by sending them to the boarding high school service provided by the State through a contractual agreement with Lincoln Institute. A long range program should seek to establish several boarding or consolidated high schools in centers as near the homes of pupils as is practicable.

"Kentucky State College, Frankfort, the only State institution on the college level for Negroes, is doing a good job with limited facilities and finances. However, it has barely met the minimum requirements for accreditation by the Southern Association. Its highest enrollment (in 1939) was 682 students, and its lowest (1944) was 310 students.

"It is believed that were Kentucky State College for Negroes inspected at this time, it would lose its rating.

"Whether any graduate work should be offered at Kentucky State College is a question to be faced at some future time. Its consideration is not timely until present undergraduate courses are greatly strengthened and expanded.

"Besides our recommendations of strengthening the departments of the Kentucky State College, granting more funds through legislative and administrative designation for this purpose, centering an enlarged extension service at the Negro college, establishing an experimental sub-station and other facilities for organized research at the latter and permitting advanced qualified Negro farmers or graduate students access to facilities of the main experiment station and university instruction, the committee feels there is need for broadening work among Negroes under the Smith-Hughes vocational funds, administered by the State Board of Education."

The committee's report pointed to these facts:

1. Only 10 Negro high schools have departments of agriculture financed by federal funds.

2. Home economics departments, thus subsidized, exist in only 31 Negro high schools, with 34 teachers.

3. Eighteen Negro high schools, with 27 teachers, have home economics departments which lack this subsidy.

4. Only 24 Negro high schools have trades departments which enjoy this subsidy.

Strengthening the land-grant college—that is, Kentucky State College—in these respects would provide a natural center for annual gatherings of Negro 4-H Club members (incidentally stimulating growth of membership!) and for Negro farmers and farm homemakers generally. No such center now exists.

Let's Pull Together, Kentuckians!

A DIGEST OF THE REPORT OF THE KENTUCKY COMMISSION ON NEGRO AFFAIRS

Printed for Distribution
by
The Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Atlanta, Georgia
for it's affiliate
The Kentucky Interracial Council
Lincoln Ridge, Kentucky
1946
By Permission
of
The Kentucky Commission
on
Negro Affairs

LET'S PULL TOGETHER, KENTUCKIANS

Any progress which the State of Kentucky shall make is dependent, not only on an intelligent use of its natural resources but primarily upon the quality of its human resources, and the full employment of the skills of every citizen.

The interdependence of peoples and government is practical democracy. The state's government is dependent upon a responsible citizenry, and every citizen is dependent upon a responsible government for "liberty and pursuit of happiness."

Public taxation for public services is justified to the end that it enables each individual citizen to become an asset to life in our democracy. Therefore, equal opportunities for every citizen in every section of the State, and of every race and creed, is an essential public policy.

These self-evident truths and our democratic ideals admit the inclusion of ALL citizens in the services provided by the state. Therefore, equal opportunities are essential for Negro citizens in order that they may make their full contribution to the progress of Kentucky.

Almost a quarter of a million Negroes live in Kentucky. Despite the fact that Kentucky is an agricultural state with 44% of her population residing on farms, Kentucky's Negroes are city and town dwellers. Over half are in urban centers, a fourth in non-farm communities, and less than one-fifth live on farms.

The sparsely settled and scattered Negro population in Kentucky and the traditional pattern of segregation for Negroes in schools and other public services has impoverished the services of the State to ALL its people. The second rate services which are provided Negroes, and in many instances the absence of any services at all, have impoverished the capability of Negroes to serve the State. The high cost of segregation of Negro services is therefore a two-fold economic burden to the State.

The slave status of the Negro on the farm changed only on the surface. The freedom of the Negro people is circumscribed by the vicious circle which discourages farm ownership and farm management opportunities for lack of adequate training in the science of agriculture.

The migration of Negro people from rural to urban centers in the "pursuit of happiness" and well-being they do not find in their present day rural life is at the root of all the problems of the Negro people. It is expensive and impractical to provide separate health, educational, welfare institutions, and other public services for the scattered few who remain on the farm.

Obviously, the need is for a more attractive and advantageous farm life for Negroes, as well as programs of aid for their adjustment and integration into city life. The removal of segregated barriers to the full enjoyment of the privileges and responsibilities of the democratic way of life is the greatest need of Negro people of Kentucky.

The Kentucky Commission on Negro Affairs was created by an executive order of Governor Simeon Willis on September 21, 1944. It was instructed "to obtain and to study all the facts and conditions relating to the economic, educational, housing, health, and other needs for the betterment of Negro citizens of Kentucky." Both races are equally represented in the appointed membership of the Commission.

Here, in condensed form, is what the Commission found and what it recommends to be done about it.

CITIZENSHIP

These more than 200,000 Negro citizens of Kentucky were among the first colored people in the South to obtain political freedom; but, as citizens, they are hampered from achieving the full development of their abilities and from contributing these abilities in their full potential to the welfare of the State.

Because of this, the Commission recommends:

1. That the State Government require non-discrimination in state contracts and other public projects, with stipulation in bids also that Negro workers should constitute a proportion of skilled artisans on these projects.

2. The creation of a special commission, composed of members of the General Assembly, to develop anti-discrimination legislation.

3. The enactment of appropriate legislation to repeal and abolish Kentucky's present "Jim Crow" laws on railroads operating in Kentucky.

4. The modification or repeal of the Day Law insofar as it relates to post-graduate education and in the professional schools by nullifying discriminatory practices which now deny Negroes educational opportunities which are provided within the State for other students.

EDUCATION

Kentucky maintains by law an expensive separate school system for Negroes, but because the Negro population outside of the cities is sparsely scattered, only 16 of the State's 41 counties can ever hope to have a first-rate (Class A) high school for Negroes. The typical elementary school for Negro pupils is poorly constructed, inadequately equipped, and understaffed. The State supervisor of Negro education has said that many of the State's Negro high schools are "characterized by inadequacy of equipment, absence of supplies, want of curriculum.

The Commission recommends:

1. That aid for education be sought from the Federal Government in order to raise the level of educational opportunities within the State; that the administration of such funds provide its fair apportionment to racial minorities, and that Negro personnel be employed in the distribution of such funds.

2. That, in order to stimulate improvement of conditions affecting Negro schools, all the schools of the county and independent school district be accredited as a system of schools rather than as separate schools.

3. That all differentials in teachers' salaries, due to race, or to subterfuges therefor, be eliminated immediately.

4. That the position of Assistant Supervisor of Negro Education, employing a Negro educator, be made permanent.

5. That adequate funds be provided for the expansion of West Kentucky Vocational School and Lincoln Institute as a more adequate boarding high school service for rural youth residing in 58 counties where no high schools are available to Negroes. That there be developed in each of these centers strong courses in agriculture and vocations.

6. That adequate funds for the physical development and equipment of West Kentucky Vocational Training School be provided, and that a strong program of vocational training be developed in it for the Western section of the State and at Lincoln Institute for the Eastern end of the State.

7. That there be appointed a Negro as member of the State Board of Education to interpret to that Board the special problems of Negro education.

8. That there be made available the funds necessary to provide educational opportunities equal to those provided at the University of Kentucky, at Kentucky State College, for Negro students in every area of instruction in which adequate enrollment can be expected or may occur.

9. That the out-of-state scholarship plan be eliminated as soon as equality of educational opportunity exists within the State, but that during the remaining period of its operation, a maximum of $350 per person per year, rather than the present $175, be granted.

10. That any Negro qualified to pursue a course of instruction of graduate grade or on the professional level, which course is not available at the Kentucky State College, may pursue such course of instruction at any educational institution in this State at which the course is offered. In such cases the provisions of K.R.S. 158.020 shall not apply.

11. That there be developed a coordinated program of education for Lincoln Institute, West Kentucky Vocational Training School, Kentucky State College, and possibly Louisville Municipal College.

EMPLOYMENT

The Negro in Kentucky, as in the rest of the South, is still the marginal worker. His average annual buying income in Kentucky in 1940 was $187, as compared with $361 for white workers. The Negro lacks many industrial skills and is generally denied the vocational training that could provide these. He is discriminated against in employment in public and private commerce and industry in the State. Negroes make up more than half of all workers in household employment in Kentucky, but there is no training provided for this kind of work.

The Commission recommends:

1. More technical training in schools for adults and within industries to develop skills of Negro workers.

2. Labor union officers should share with management the responsibility for obtaining white workers' approval for the employment of Negroes, and impart democratic standards and practices to the rank and file of their membership generally.

3. Employers are urged to give opportunities to Negroes from which custom has barred them: i.e., in sales personnel, on telephone switchboards, operators of street cars and buses, etc.

4. Inclusion of small farmers, tenant croppers and household workers of both races in provisions of the Social Security System.

5. Development of a system of written leases which include reimbursement for unexpended improvements of land and dwellings and acknowledgment of certain practices to stand in lieu of rent.

6. Rural housing improvement programs and community recreational activities for both races.

7. Acceptance of Negro farmers as members of farm organizations and cooperatives.

8. Legislative action necessary to designate Kentucky State College for Negroes as recipient of funds for agricultural education and experimentation received by the State from Federal sources, and provide such additional state funds as are necessary to support (1) a more adequate extension service and (2) an experimental sub-station and other facilities for organized research.

9. Broadening work among Negroes under Smith-Hughes vocational funds administered by the State Department of Education, including 4-H Club work.

10. A Household Workers' training institution which would become a center of education, information, and interpretation of proper standards to both employers and workers. Certificates of completion of courses from responsible institutions should guarantee competence and dependability of household workers and give such employment the dignity it deserves.

11. The inclusion of courses in business practices in Negro schools and adult instruction in centers where the Negro population justifies such preparation under the supervision of the State Department of Vocational Education.

HEALTH

The good health of our citizens is an asset to the welfare of the State. The Negro death rate during 1941-1943 was almost twice the death rate for white citizens. Tuberculosis, pneumonia, influenza rates among Negroes are more than twice as high as among whites. The infant mortality rate for Negroes (73.9) is much higher than the rate for white infants (48.8 per 1,000 live births); about three times as many Negro mothers die in childbirth as do white mothers. The death rate from syphilis is reported by the State Department of health to be 489 per cent higher for Negroes (44.2) than among whites (7.5).

The Commission recommends:

1. An education program to combat the lack of information regarding health laws, and that provisions be made for courses in health education in the State supported schools, to be taught by qualified personnel and that adequate provision be made for the development of a physical fitness program in these institutions.

2. In order that the State may attract more Negro doctors, provisions should be made for professional post-graduate and in-service training in all tax-supported institutions for physicians, dentists, and nurses within the State.

3. Favorable consideration for the employment of Negro physicians, nurses, social workers, inspectors and other appropriate Negro personnel by county boards of health where Negro population justifies such employment.

4. That Negroes be appointed to the governing boards of the tuberculosis sanatoria.

5. Negro professional workers be employed in official or voluntary agencies where such employment would contribute materially in the solution of health problems vitally affecting the Negro race.

6. A subsidy of $25,000 per year for the Red Cross Hospital, Louisville, Kentucky, in order that immediate provision may be made for establishing a training school for nurses, and for the care of out-of-county indigent Negro patients.

HOUSING AND WELFARE

Housing facilities for Negroes, both urban and rural, are very inadequate. In 1940, more than one-third of all Negro-occupied homes in Kentucky and approximately one-fourth of all white-occupied homes were in need of major repairs. Better housing is badly needed. There is also a great need to expand social services to the economically insecure people of the State, many of whom are Negroes. And the statistics of arrests for crimes and misdemeanors show an overwhelming proportion of Negroes. Louisville, for example, reports that Negroes form 29% of the daily inmate population of the workhouse, although they make up only 13% of the population.

The Commission recommends:

1. A home for dependent Negro children separate from delinquent children that they may escape the stigma attached to their being together, said State institution being adjacent to and sharing in the use of psychiatrists and other personnel employed at Kentucky Home School, Lyndon, Kentucky.

2. Public schools at the expense of the State or County should be provided for dependent and delinquent Negro children with standards comparable to other tax supported schools.

3. Trained Negro personnel should be employed in the Welfare agencies throughout the State.

4. A training program for Negro inmates should be instituted in all the State penal institutions.

5. That a study of the legal aspects of restricted covenants in titles to real estate be made to determine what form of legislation may be necessary to eliminate such practice in Kentucky.

THE CHALLENGE

The spirit of Kentucky's motto: "United we stand and divided we fall", must be more honestly applied to race relations in our state and in America to make our democracy real and keep it from taking the road to revolution that so many other democracies have taken. It is essential to world peace that all races of men must learn to get along together. America has a great opportunity to demonstrate this for other nations. Kentucky can lead the way in the South.

Changing laws, applying efficiency and idealism is not enough. A lasting social and economic peace can only be built on moral foundations of honesty and unselfishness — where men of all races learn to work together through a common obedience to God and have a vision for their part in making their nation great.

This statement was drafted by Harold C. Fleming, then SRC Director in consultation with Clarence Jordan and others at Koinonia Farms and with Emory F. Via who had served as liason between the Farms and a group of Atlanta based agencies.

STATEMENT BY KOINONIA FARM

April 15, 1957

For Immediate Use

In Presentments published in the Americus Times-Recorder of April 5, 1957 the Grand Jury of Sumter County has gone to great lengths to discredit the honesty, sincerity, and religious beliefs of the community at Koinonia Farm. We take this means of presenting an answer to the people of Americus and Sumter County. It is a shocking thing that the Grand Jury, the official body responsible for just inquiry on behalf of the citizens of this county, should conduct so apparently biased and unfair an investigation as this one. It should be clear to anyone, however uninitiated, who reads these Presentments that the Grand Jury showed no concern whatever for a fair and balanced presentation of the facts. On the contrary it collected and interpreted to the discredit of Koinonia every possible piece of information that could be twisted to that purpose. And by deliberate selection it omitted all of those readily ascertainable facts which reflect to the credit of Koinonia.

We are forced to conclude that these misrepresentations are largely the result of bias and pre-judgments. In evidence of this we cite the fact that Solicitor General Charles Burgamy, who was responsible for assembling the facts and presenting them to the Grand Jury, on August 3, 1956, was quoted at length by the Albany Journal in a front-page article headed, "Solicitor Asks Revival of K.K.K. at States' Rights Meet Here." We quote from this newspaper account:

"The Dougherty County Chapter of the States' Rights Council met at 8:00 o'clock Tuesday night in the Dougherty County court house to hear Solicitor General Charles Burgamy of Americus, Georgia, tell the gathering of approximately 200 persons that he favored a return to the Ku Klux Klan... Mr. Burgamy talked for approximately one hour, strongly attacking integration and race mixing. At the conclusion of his remarks, Mr. Burgamy said 'Maybe that's what we need now is for the right kind of a Klan to start up again and use a buggy whip on some of these race mixers. I believe that would stop them.'"

In this same story, Mr. Burgamy is quoted as commenting on the bombing of the roadside market at Koinonia Farm, which had occurred eleven days before his speech. The Albany Journal states: "Mr. Burgamy also intimated that it was possible for the participants in the Farm's cooperative and racially mixed agricultural program to have planted the bomb as a means of gaining sympathy and public attention." This shows that, long before most of the violence had occurred, Mr. Burgamy was putting forward the charge that people at Koinonia themselves were responsible for the violence directed against their persons and their property. If this were an honest conviction and not simply a pre-judgment, could Mr. Burgamy have failed over the course of many months and many acts of violence to have gathered proof of guilt by members of the Farm? Instead of this, many months later Mr. Burgamy has used the prestige of the Grand Jury to distort the facts to fit his preconceived theory.

We think it should also be noted that the Clerk of the Grand Jury, Tommy Hooks III, had previously publicly stated his animosity and bias against Koinonia Farm. In an article in Newsweek magazine of February 25, 1957, Mr. Hooks is quoted as follows: "I had $25,000 to $30,000 worth of their insurance....I cut them off because I didn't like to do business with people like them." This not only shows bias, but misrepresents facts. Actually, Mr. Hooks cancelled insurance with Koinonia Farm totalling only $1,300.

It is astounding that, in the findings of what was supposed to be an objective investigation, no mention whatever is made of the wide-spread economic boycott practiced against Koinonia Farm. Whatever the feelings of the Grand Jury about this boycott, it is an important part of the picture and should have been a matter of information and, we think, concern to the citizens of Sumter County.

The following is a point by point answer to the allegations made against Koinonia Farm in the Grand Jury's Presentments.

1. The most serious and most unfair accusation contained in the Presentments is that members of Koinonia Farm themselves have been responsible for the violence. This is absolutely untrue and cruelly unjust. Law enforcement officers have had full access to the grounds of Koinonia Farm at all times and the Farm is open to any kind of investigation that they may wish to make. Surely no reasonable person could believe that these acts of violence, involving a number of weapons of different types, could have been perpetrated by persons at Koinonia Farm without evidence to that effect being discovered by law enforcement officers who, by their own testimony, claim to have suspected that the violence was self inflicted. The Grand Jury itself declares that "from the standpoint of legal evidence" it "cannot state what person or persons committed the violence." But instead of resting on this factual and objective statement, it then proceeds to present a great mass of contrived and inconclusive detail designed to convict Koinonia of the violence in the court of public opinion. This we feel to be a serious and dangerous breach of trust by this important official body.

As to the specific incidents discussed:

a. Evidence that the flood lights were in fact shot out does not have to rest on the testimony of Koinonia members alone. Although the lights were replaced immediately after they were shot out in order not to leave the area in darkness, the marks of the buck shot may still be clearly seen in the reflectors of the flood lights.

b. The Presentments state that the evidence makes it impossible for John Eustice to have been fired upon in the manner indicated in his testimony. One of the main reasons given is that the damage to the flashlight he was holding could not have been caused by a shotgun blast without striking him as well. Neither John Eustice nor any other resident of Koinonia Farm testified to the Grand Jury or said at any other time that this was the result of a shotgun blast. On the contrary, all indications are that the shots in question were fired by pistol or rifle. The Grand Jury nowhere explains why it concluded that a shotgun must have been involved, but it proceeds to build up a mass of contradictions based on this conclusion. The fact that bullets struck the flashlight from different angles is also alleged to present "impossible" contradictions in John Eustice's testimony. While we are not ballistics experts, we offer the commonsense explanation that John Eustice would most likely have moved in the course of the shooting and that the position of the flashlight in his hand would logically have changed.

It is said that no broken glass was found at the scene of this shooting. We cannot explain, of course, what was found or not found by law enforcement officers investigating the scene at the time. However, even after the Grand Jury Presentments were published, a member of Koinonia Farm searched the area and found a portion of the broken automobile mirror.

It is further said that examination of the flashlight showed evidence of powder burns, which would have been impossible at the distance at which the shots were fired according to John Eustice's testimony. It is impossible for us to answer this allegation. All of the evidence was turned over to a representative of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. We were disturbed to learn that immediately after returning from his investigations at Koinonia, and before the flashlight was submitted to the State laboratory, this G.B.I. agent expressed himself to Lee Griggs, reporter for Time, as convinced the whole incident was staged by Koinonia persons and falsified by them. The agent said it was his idea that Koinonia people knew the reporter was coming, and wanted to create some news for him. This we felt to be a grave pre-judgment of the situation by an official charged with objective investigation. An account of this exchange was given to us in writing by the newspaper reporter involved and is on file at Koinonia Farm.

c. Significance is attached to the fact that members of Koinonia used the word "dynamite" in referring to the explosion which damaged the roadside market. No such significance is warranted. We refer to the market as having been dynamited only because that is the explosive most commonly available and most commonly used to cause an explosion. We did not and do not have any knowledge based on evidence of the type of explosive used.

d. The statement is made, seemingly with some adverse implication, that many residents who sleep at Koinonia Farm were not awakened during "any" of the acts of violence, "although living on said premises and in some instances in the same house." Unfortunately, violence has been frequent at Koinonia Farm in recent months, and there has been no practice of having the night watchman awaken everybody in the community when it occurs. Some of the acts of violence have taken place at great distance from the residences - in the case of the roadside market, approximately five miles. Moreover, like most farmers, Koinonians sleep soundly and, in winter, windows are usually closed. On some occasions, the entire community has been awakened, as on the night when ten or twelve blasts of shotgun fire were directed at the community. There has been no instance when a house was fired upon without its occupants all being awakened. We cannot account for any testimony on which the Grand Jury could have based its statement to the contrary, since Clarence Jordan was the only occupant of such a house to appear before the Grand Jury, and he and everybody else in the house was awake immediately after it was fired upon.

2. It is stated that Koinonia Farm has gained an economic advantage from the violence directed against it. This allegation is completely unfounded. In the interest of truth, we are perfectly willing to have a professionally qualified certified public accountant examine the books of Koinonia Farm and make public an audit thereof. It is true that after the bombing of the roadside market on July 23, 1956, many sympathetic friends did send in gifts to restore the damage, and in order to keep accurate records of these gifts, a column with that heading was established in the books of Koinonia Farm. Prior to that time, Koinonia had been practically self-sustaining and had not looked to gifts as a means of support. We are grateful to the many kind people in Sumter County, throughout the state, and elsewhere who have wished to assist Koinonia Farm in this time of great difficulty. The Presentments refer to total gifts and donations of over $27,500. Actually only about $20,000 of this amount was contributed by persons outside the community, the remainder representing amounts turned over to the common funds of the Farm by new members when they joined the community. There is nothing insidious about the fact that the very real violence against Koinonia should have prompted persons of good will to offer such assistance to the Farm. Nor is the amount given a large one when one considers that $13,000 worth of property damage, the productive energies of members dissipated in meeting legal harassment, boycotts, the moving of two families outside the area because of danger to their lives, and the disruptions caused by the violence, have greatly reduced farm income. Also, all members and residents of Koinonia must be fed, clothed, and sheltered out of the proceeds of the Farm. The overhead expenditure, including the basic living needs of residents, is approximately $3,000 per month alone. In addition, several notes have become due and payable because of our inability to maintain insurance. These heavy expenditures readily explain why, in spite of seemingly large receipts from gifts, our bank balance was only $1,600 at the end of February.

The Presentments attempt to show that the bombing of the roadside market led to great profits. It is not true that, after the violence began, the market began to have monthly sales of $7,000. The gross sales - not net profit - reached this figure in only one month, December, 1956, when orders in connection with Christmas produced these gross sales. In January, 1957, our gross sales were only $1,730.21. To suggest, as the Grand Jury does, that the market was earning twelve times as much as before the violence is a serious distortion. For example, in October, 1955, our gross sales were $1,297.12, whereas in October, 1956, in the midst of the violence, our gross sales were only $477.06. In the nine months of operation since the violence began (July, 1956 through March, 1957) our gross sales have actually averaged $1,800.62 per month, which clearly refutes the Grand Jury's charge that we averaged $7,000 per month. The operation was suspended entirely on April 10, since it could not usefully be carried on longer following the total destruction of the market. Even if the Grand Jury's account were accepted, who could believe that Koinonia itself would destroy a property that was yielding so much revenue?

The question of insurance claims on the roadside market destroyed by explosives is also completely misrepresented. After the damage, estimated at $3,000, caused by the initial bombing in July, 1956, an insurance recovery of slightly over $1,000 was received. After this, the insurance was cancelled. Later, after the market was repaired, more insurance was obtained. Then, after the market was totally destroyed, in January, 1957, a claim was filed, but the insurance company denied that it was liable for vandalism and has made no settlement. On total losses of approximately $13,000 from the bombing and destruction of the roadside market and other farm property, we have recovered slightly over $1,000 in insurance.

3. It is stated that Koinonia Farm discriminates against Negro residents for the gain of a few. As we have already pointed out, it is completely and legally impossible for any individual to profit personally from the proceeds of Koinonia Farm. The fact that race is not a consideration in the treatment of any person at Koinonia Farm is evident for all to see. There are three stages of membership - novices, provisional members, and full members. It is true that no Negroes have become full members. In recent years, only three Negroes have applied for even this first stage of membership, and this was granted. As yet no Negro has applied for full membership and none has been denied, or would be denied because of race.

It is utterly false that members of any one of the three stages, Negro or white, are excluded from full participation in the business affairs of the corporation. Novices, provisional members, and full members all may attend business meetings and all have an equal voice in decisions affecting business matters. Only in spiritual matters do full members alone make decisions.

4. It is stated again and again that Koinonia Farm is a profit-making venture. This is utterly untrue and completely ignores the testimony given by members of Koinonia Farm in explanation of the financial nature of the Farm. Koinonia Farm is a non-profit corporation, based on religious principles, so recognized in its charter, and so recognized by the Federal Government. The Farm has an official letter of tax exemption from the United States Treasury Department. As in the case of any non-profit corporation, no profit accrues to the benefit of any member of individual. Members receive no wages, salary, dividends, bonuses, or other compensation. Living expenses and personal needs of members and visitors to the Farm are met by the corporation. The same conditions apply to all persons at Koinonia Farm, member and non-member, white and Negro, male and female, young and old, alike. The Grand Jury cites the fact that it had before it a Negro from Koinonia who received no salary or wages. This is true, just as it is also true that Clarence Jordan and the other white members of Koinonia receive no salary or wages.

Even though the Grand Jury had before it the books of Koinonia Farm, it made the utterly false statement that Koinonia "has a net worth of $150,000 and has made a profit of over $150,000" during its fourteen years of operation. Grand Jurors circulated among themselves and examined a record of Koinonia's liabilities, or debts, which totaled $59,577.70 as of January 1, 1957. Yet their Presentments make no mention whatsoever of this figure, and do not take it into consideration in speaking of our net worth.

It is true that the total value of Koinonia in land, buildings, machinery, livestock, growing crops, furniture, tools, and other property has been estimated at $150,000. But it seems more than just an oversight that the Grand Jury failed to subtract the indebtedness of almost $60,000 from this amount. Nor did it point out that of the remaining $90,000, more than half is due to the inflation of values over the past fourteen years, and that the other half came largely from gifts of friends who helped launch Koinonia Farm and from members who have joined and put their assets into the common treasury.

Much is made of the fact that no members of Koinonia Farm have paid personal income taxes, federal or state. The truth is that like many other citizens, they do not have an income large enough to be subject to tax. Clarence Jordan, who is mentioned by name, has filed returns every year, despite the fact that the size of his income did not call for any tax to be paid. It is unreasonable to suppose that the Internal Revenue Service of the Federal Government would ignore willful disregard of the income tax laws of this country. We further state that Koinonia Farm paid all state and county taxes on its property claiming no homestead or other exemption.

In its vigorous attempt to prove that Koinonia has profited by the violence against it, the Presentments refer repeatedly to "profits," contributions, and income. No mention at all is made of the very heavy disbursements made during the same period for operating expenses of the Farm, the daily needs of the members of the community, and the onerous expenses caused by legal harassment, economic boycott, and the violence itself. All of this information, duly shown on the records of Koinonia Farm, was before the Grand Jury.

5. Statements are made in the Presentments to the effect that Koinonia Farm has misrepresented the facts to the press and in its newsletters in order to gain sympathy and support. The only untrue statement made by Koinonians that we are aware of - and that one was made unknowingly and inadvertently - is that the sheriff did not come out to investigate the burning of the house at Koinonia Farm. We did not see the sheriff at that time and thus had no knowledge of his visit or visits. After we learned from his statement that he had visited the scene, we apologized to him for our unwitting error.

The allegation that Koinonia initiated newspaperpublicity at the time of the first instance of violence in July, 1956, is completely false. This act of violence was publicized by the Americus Times-Recorder without any origination or prompting from Koinonia Farm. Later, as other acts of violence occurred, the Associated Press and other wire services and news publications began to call the Farm, and a number of reporters came to the Farm in connection with stories that they were preparing. We have been requested by news services to notify them when violence occurs, and we have complied with this request. However, it is our policy and practice to notify the press only after the sheriff has been notified. We deny utterly and completely the Grand Jury's suggestion that residents of Koinonia Farm have made a practice of calling the press before notifying the sheriff.

After the violence began, Koinonia Farm instituted its newsletter in order to keep close friends and relatives, who were naturally concerned, informed of developments. The mailing list was approximately 300 at the beginning. Since that time we have added to the list those people who have written letters expressing sympathy and concern, who have ordered our produce, who have contributed to the needs of the Farm, or who have requested that they be added to the mailing list. The list compiled in this way now stands at approximately 2,500.

The untrue statements which the Grand Jury alleges were made in the newsletter and to the press are not specified, so that we are unable to give a specific answer to this allegation. We can only say that we think we have done an honest and factual job of presenting information. All of our newsletters are on file and we will be glad to have anybody view them and judge for themselves whether or not we have been truthful and accurate.

6. The Grand Jury's Presentments state that Clarence Jordan and other members of Koinonia Farm made false statements under oath before the Grand Jury. This we did not do. If we had done so, we would be guilty of perjury, and it would be clearly within the Grand Jury's power to indict us for this offense. Again, the Grand Jury seems to prefer to indict and try the members of Koinonia Farm in a court of public opinion, rather than through due process of law.

7. The Grand Jury attempts to imply that there is some connection between Koinonia Farm and the Communist Party. To do this they once again resort to mis-representation and distortion of the facts and of the nature of Koinonia Farm. Koinonia's sustained witness over 14 years to non-violence is in direct conflict with the Communist philosophy of violence. The Grand Jury itself affirms this fact by stating that members of Koinonia have suffered imprisonment rather than take up arms against their fellow men. Testimony of members of Koinonia is grossly distorted. The position of Koinonia regarding visitors to the farm described to the Grand Jury was clearly expressed in a letter to Attorney General Eugene Cook, as follows: "We are a Christian Community and as such welcome all comers with friendliness and open mindedness. To our knowledge no member of the Communist party has ever visited Koinonia Farm. However, we receive a constant stream of guests and we make no investigation into their political affiliation either before they come or after. Should a Communist Party member visit us here he would be welcomed in Christian concern, just as would a member of the Methodist Church, the Republican party, the Americus Chamber of Commerce or the White Citizens Council. But such welcome would not signify any affiliation with or ideological agreement with any of these, just as our recent receiving of the Ku Klux Klan did not signify agreement or affiliation with them. In fact we are diametrically opposed in viewpoint and purpose."

The Presentments say that the Southern Conference Educational Fund is the successor to an organization "established to be communistic" and that it is significant that the name of Clarence L. Jordan appears upon the list of the Board of Directors of that organization. The facts are that shortly before the Grand Jury investigation, Clarence Jordan was notified that he had been elected to the Board of Directors of the SCEF. At that time, he had not yet responded to this election to board membership, and subsequently he has notified the SCEF that he cannot accept this responsibility at the present time because of Koinonia's need to devote all of its energies to the spiritual struggle now facing it.

We wish to make it clear that we have no reason to believe that the SCEF is a Communist organization, and we note that the Grand Jury presents no specific evidence to support such a conclusion.

Only the names of a few of the directors of the SCEF were read to Clarence Jordan at the Grand Jury, and he testified, truthfully, that he was not personally acquainted with them. He had not attended any board meeting or any other function of the organization. He had read its publications on occasion and knew several of its directors (not mentioned by the Grand Jury) as well respected individuals. Due to the prominence of Clarence Jordan's name in recent developments, it is certainly understandable that he might be known to others whom he himself does not know.

It is true that Koinonia's summer children's camp, after it was barred in Sumter County, was transferred to the grounds of the Highlander Folk School. However, the camp remained under the complete direction and supervision of Koinonia Farm. There is no evidence to our knowledge that Myles Horton "has for long years been known to be a member of the Communist Party." And, again, the Grand Jury has produced no evidence to support such a charge, in spite of the fact that it has been vigorously denied by Myles Horton in a statement published in the Americus Times-Recorder.

In any case, these charges are completely irrelevant, since the camp was simply held on the grounds of Highlander Folk School and no part in its conduct or direction was played by the personnel of Highlander.

We think it is noteworthy that the Grand Jury itself feels constrained to point out that it has been expertly advised that its charges would be "insufficient to convict of Communism in a court of law." It then invites the public, nevertheless, to accept the wholly false conclusion that "there exists extremely close kinship between the Communist Party and Koinonia Farm, Inc."

8. Finally, we are disturbed that the Grand Jury sees fit to sit in judgment on the sincerity of the Christian convictions of members of Koinonia Farm and others. This seems to us to be a dangerous abuse of authority by a secular agency of the state. Do the people of Americus and Sumter County wish to grant to the Grand Jury the power to pass on the Christian sincerity of other citizens? Like all human beings, we are subject to frailty, but we are earnestly striving to follow the teachings of Jesus as we understand them.

Another evidence of the Grand Jury's attempt to interfere with the free expression of Christian conviction is its censure of the Americus and Sumter County Ministerial Association for its resolution deploring violence. Apart from the propriety of this criticism, we cannot see how any reasonable person could object to either the spirit or the content of the resolution, the full text of which is as follows:

"We deplore and condemn the use of violence in any form against property and/or persons because of their personal beliefs which do not endanger the rights of others. As Christians and citizens we hold the right to disagree with others concerning their beliefs without forcing their agreement or yielding ours.

"We further condemn lawlessness in any form and call upon every citizen and the forces of law to do all things necessary to protect the rights, properties, and lives of others in our community, state, and nation.

"In these difficult days in which many nations and people look to these United States for moral as well as political leadership, it behooves each citizen - and especially each Christian - to assert positive efforts to strengthen the cause of civic righteousness."

We admit that we are conscientiously opposed to all forms of violence, including war. We feel that war and violence are opposed to Jesus' gospel of love and forgiveness. We believe that our greatest contribution to the welfare of the nation is to walk as closely as possible in the way of Jesus.

We wish to express our gratitude to the people of Americus and Sumter County for their friendly and courteous personal relationships with us. It has been an extremely difficult and trying time for everyone, and we feel that on the whole the people have been unusually calm. Some have expressed sincere regret that pressures upon them have forced them to participate unwillingly in the boycott. We also wish to commend the Americus and Sumter County Ministerial Association for its courageous support of law and decency, an action which has been looked upon with great favor by many other religious bodies and groups throughout the state and nation.

We also note that even though the editorial policy of the Americus Times-Recorder has been opposed to Koinonia Farm, this newspaper has maintained the highest traditions of American journalism in its fair and objective reporting of incidents relating to Koinonia.

We express our sympathetic understanding of the difficult position of the sheriff and other law enforcement officers. Under such circumstances, few people would covet their jobs.

Finally, we wish to reaffirm our faith in God and in the essential goodness of every human being which He has created. We are convinced that as His spirit broods over us we shall be less inclined toward strife and more inclined toward peace. It is our belief that the solution to the problems of the South - and the nation - does not lie in violence, force and coercion. It lies in the redemptive love of God as revealed in Jesus Christ.

The Grand Jury has called attention only to the few incidents of violence about which they could raise some question reflecting upon Koinonia. We would like to present a complete list of the acts of violence committed against Koinonia and to call attention to the fact that the Grand Jury has failed to report to the public the great number of acts in which it was clear that Koinonia had no part. The violence in chronological order is as follows:

In June, 1956, a heavy caliber pistol, estimated from the slug to be a .44, was fired into the roadside market.

July 23, an explosion, described in the Americus Times-Recorder as dynamite, wrecked the roadside market. Damage was estimated at $3,000.

November 27, a newly acquired refrigerator-meat case was destroyed by buck shot.

December 26, the mechanism of a recently purchased electric fuel pump was destroyed by heavy caliber bullets.

January 1, 1957, the sign at the entrance of Koinonia Farm was hit by gun fire.

January 14, an explosion and resulting fire completely destroyed the roadside market and all of its equipment. Damage was estimated at $7,000.

January 18, a dwelling house on the far side of the farm, not being used, was burned to the ground. The same night an attempt was made to burn the barn of a sympathetic neighbor.

January 29, a speeding car raked the residence nearest the highway with automatic gun fire, complete with tracer bullets, narrowly missing Ross Anderson and an overnight visitor from Michigan. One slug entered the top of a car, just over the head of Harry Atkinson.

February 1, ten to twelve shotgun blasts were fired from two cars into the cluster of residences, sprinkling with shots children playing on the volley ball court. One shot, presumed by the sheriff to be .22 rifle bullet, entered a window and narrowly missed eleven year old Ora Ruth Browne.

February 9, a cross was burned before the home of Top Wilson, who rented his house from Koinonia and worked for wages.

February 14, a cross was burned before the home of the parents of a resident of Koinonia, and another before the home of a neighbor who made frequent, friendly visits to Koinonia.

February 15, two floodlights placed along our property facing the highway, were shot out with buck shot.

March 5, John Eustice, who was investigating a prowling car in the vicinity of our fences which had been repeatedly cut, was fired upon. The flashlight he held in his hand was hit and two shots passed through the side view mirror of the car beside which he was standing.

March 20, buckshot was fired into the Top Wilson home.

March 22, high powered rifle shots, presumed by the sheriff to be a 32-20, were fired into the residential cluster, one shot passing through three rooms of the Jordan home and narrowly missing Eleanor Jordan.

March 26, as Koinonia watchman John Gabor drove along the highway investigating a car which had stopped beside our hog fence, two shots were fired from behind him, both missing, by occupants of the car.

April 9, several shots were fired from an automobile on the highway, several hundred yards from the residences.

Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

First Newspaper West of the Alleghenies
Gazette Established 1786. Post Established 1842. Combined 1927
PAUL BLOCK, PUBLISHER, 1927-1941

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18, 1959

Northerner Backs Segregation

A Southerner's Words Supply Rebuttal

By John Lofton
Post-Gazette Staff Writer

IN TODAY'S issue of the Post-Gazette there is an advertisment consisting of a letter to President Eisenhower criticizing the Supreme Court's historic school desegregation decision. Carleton Putnam, the writer of the letter, is presented by the ad's sponsors as "a member of a famous New England family, a native of New York City, a graduate of Princeton and Columbia." These credentials are obviously intended to convey the impression that Mr. Putnam's segregationist views carry the weight of high, nonpartisan authority.

* * *

BY WAY of demonstrating that Mr. Putnam's preachments are something less than Olympian, we would like to quote in answer to them the comments of an observer who is much closer to the subject and who, we think, has credentials which make him a far more creditable authority. He is James McBride Dabbs, a member of a family that has lived in the South for 150 years, a native of South Carolina, owner and operator of a plantation employing Negroes, a graduate of the Uninversity of South Carolina and of Clark University, author of the recent book, The Southern Heritage (Knopf), from which we quote. Excerpts from Putnam and Dabbs follow:

Mr. Putnam: "It is my personal conviction that the local [Southern] customs in this case were 'hardened by time' for a very good reason, and that while they may not . . . have been decreed in heaven, they come closer to it than the current view of the Supreme Court."

Mr. Dabbs: "There's no doubt they [Negroes] are more poorly equipped than the whites. But, now, having made this probably correct observation, we conclude that nature, or God, made them so. This is a most happy conclusion. For it's perfectly clear that the inferior position of the Negro in the South is due either to God or to us; and as it's doubtful democratic and Christian doctrine for us to admit the responsibility, we are happy to pass it on to God."

Mr. Putnam: "Five minutes before the court's desegregation decision, the Constitution meant one thing; five minutes later it meant something else. Only one thing intervened, namely, an expression of the personal views of the members of the court."

Mr. Dabbs: "The Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments have been a part of the Constitution for that length of time [90 years] and, however adopted, are built into the conscience of the nation. True, the judges are just getting around to pinpointing their meaning, but the meaning has been there for any man to read, and as time has turned the pages the meaning has become increasingly clear."

Mr. Putnam: "In the matter of schools, rights to equal education are inseparably bound up with rights to freedom of association and, in the South at least, may require that both be considered simultaneously. (In using the word 'association' here, I mean the right to associate with whom you please.)"

* * *

MR. DABBS: "The Court didn't order anybody to 'integrate' anything; it merely said we should stop separating school children on the basis of race. . . . It's we who have substituted 'mixing' for 'stop separating.' . . . Negroes merely want the rights and privileges of American citizens. But desiring an equal chance with us at success isn't the same as wanting to sit with us in school and church."

Mr. Putnam: "Any man with two eyes in his head can observe a Negro settlement in the Congo, can study the pure-blooded African in his native habitat as he exists when left on his own resources, can compare this settlement with London or Paris, and can draw his own conclusions regarding relative levels of character and intelligence—or that combination of character and intelligence which is civilization."

Mr. Dabbs: ". . . with top-flight Negroes in practically every field, it seems rather late to raise the old question of the implied inferiority of the Negro because of the lack of a modern civilization in Africa. Yet the question is raised and should be answered briefly. First, though Africa has never had an industrial civilization—a Western creation of yesterday—the native Africans of the slaving period, especially those who were brought to America, were not savages but pre-literate folk with a complex agricultural, social, and legal society, with skilled workers in iron and other metals, and with great artists, especially in sculpture and wood-carving. Indeed, the invention of iron-smelting may have been brought to Europe from Africa."

Mr. Putnam: "I would emphatically support improvement of education in Negro schools, if and where it is inferior. Equality of opportunity and equality before the law, when not strained to cover other situations, are acceptable ideals because they provide the chance to earn and to progress . . ."

Mr. Dabbs: "We overlooked the 'equal' that Plessy v. Ferguson said they [Negroes] should have, and thus caused them and the courts to ponder its absence until now the "separate' has been outlawed. . . . They now have the right to desegregated schools, just like other people, and let the law forget race."

* * *

MR. PUTNAM: ". . . for 94 years . . . the North has been trying to force the black man down the white Southerner's throat, and it is a miracle that relations between the races in the South have progressed as well as they have."

Mr. Dabbs: "Whatever our dreamed-of Southern society, of slavery or segregation, might have become if left alone, it was not, it could not be, left alone in the dynamic world in which it was established. It would have been changed whether anyone, inside or outside, ever thought about changing it; it would have been changed by general forces moving in the world."

So speaks James McBride Dabbs. For a full, eloquent and knowledgeable answer to Carleton Putnam, readers should give The Southern Heritage a complete reading.

McComb, Mississippi September 1952

CURRENT EMPLOYMENT The number of persons actively seeking work through this office at the end of August showed a sharp drop from July, with the lowest number since April 1952. This is due largely to re-hiring by two plants, which have been operating on a curtailed program for some 60 to 90 days. A large number of those workers who were laid off in late June and July have returned to work, and active applications are expected to drop to a still lower level by October. Students re-entering school will account for some decrease in this item.

CLAIMS DECREASING Initial claims showed a similar drop during the month, with continued claims showing some decrease, although not as high percentagewise as initial claims. Further declines are expected during September.

JOB OPENINGS Current job openings are high, with good demand for most types of workers. Expansion in one plant is necessitating considerable activity in supplying needed workers, including sewing-machine operators, and other classifications. Several openings for sales personnel are noted, and a demand for clerical workers is evident. These can be filled from local supply.

Housing, schools, and other facilities are entirely adequate. Housing is available, with rooms from $20.00, apartments from $30.00 and houses from $40.00.

Mississippi State Employment Service
210 Third Street Telephone 1761

Maps

MAJOR PUBLIC SERVICES RENDERED BY THE EMPLOYMENT OFFICES

1. INDUSTRIAL PLACEMENT SERVICE
   - A. EMPLOYMENT COUNSELING AND SELECTIVE PLACEMENT
   - B. SELECTIVE PLACEMENT FOR THE PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED
2. AGRICULTURAL PLACEMENT SERVICE
3. INFORMATION AND ASSISTANCE WITH CONTRIBUTION + STATUS MATTERS
4. EMPLOYMENT INSURANCE SERVICE (CLAIMS)
5. LABOR MARKET INFORMATION
6. VARIOUS INDUSTRIAL SERVICES
   - A. OCCUPATIONAL INFORMATION
   - B. PRE-EMPLOYMENT TESTING
   - C. ASSISTANCE IN REDUCING LABOR TURNOVER
   - D. PLANT STUDIES
7. SCHEDULED ITINERANT SERVICE
8. COMMUNITY PARTICIPATION AND COOPERATION

MISSISSIPPI EMPLOYMENT SECURITY COMMISSION

- ◉ STATE OFFICE
- ○ LOCAL OFFICE

ARROWS INDICATE LOCAL EMPLOYMENT SERVICE AREAS

Meridian, Mississippi September 1952

CURRENT LABOR MARKET OUTLOOK Total nonagricultural employment in the area was increased by the creation of approximately 193 new jobs in August 1952. This increase was in manufacturing, construction (building and highway) and wholesale and retail trade. The textile industry reports an increase in production and in orders. Wholesale and retail firms report a slight increase in sales in August compared with July.

EMPLOYMENT OUTLOOK Reporting establishments indicate no significant over-all change in employment within the next thirty days.

UNEMPLOYMENT TRENDS A comparison of the months of June, July and August of 1952, with the same period of 1951, shows a 7-percent decrease in new applications; a decrease of 28.6 percent in orders received; a decrease of 21 percent in referrals; a decrease of 29 percent in placements; and a decrease of 1.4 percent in average monthly employment. Five hundred and fifty new applications for work were taken in August. Three hundred and seventy-four new claims were filed during the same period. These figures show a marked decrease from the July level (24-percent decrease in applications and 49-percent decrease in initial claims). Weekly compensable (payable)claims totaled 2339, reflecting a 35.7-percent decrease from the July figures.

JOB OPPORTUNITIES Except for highly skilled technical workers and some types of clerical workers, the available supply is considered ample for local demands. Job openings received from employers (412), referrals (485) and placements (401), are substantially higher than the same activities in July. Placements in August were made in the following major industry groups: (1) wholesale and retail trade, (2) manufacturing and (3) construction. Twenty-eight handicapped workers (including thirteen veterans) were placed.

If-You-Have-A-Job-To-Fill
Call Mississippi State Employment Service
Telephone 3-1407
1017 - 24th Ave., Meridian, Mississippi

Mississippi State Employment Service

Natchez, Mississippi September 1952

LABOR SUPPLY DWINDLES

The decrease in available labor, which usually occurs during the middle of the summer, has been somewhat slower during this year. In fact, there has been a considerable surplus of labor until the last three or four weeks. This surplus has now decreased considerably, and no large amount of labor exists throughout the area, compared with previous months.

COTTON PICKING NEARING PEAK

It is estimated that the cotton crop throughout the area and in the adjacent area of Louisiana is now approximately 75 percent open, and picking is in full swing. Because of the hot, dry weather, which has existed throughout the summer, cotton has matured and opened a little faster than usual. If the usual pattern is followed, approximately 250 to 300 pickers will be leaving the Natchez area daily to assist with the picking of the Louisiana crop. These workers will commute, and will actually never leave the area. The cotton crop is slightly short of the 1951 crop; and, with favorable weather, picking should be practically completed in the immediate vicinity of Natchez by October 1, 1952.

JOB APPLICANTS DROP SHARPLY

Compared with July of this year, there was a decrease of 17.7 percent in the number of applicants contacting the Mississippi State Employment Service within the last thirty days; and there were 14.6 percent fewer contacts during August 1952, than there were during the same month one year ago. As a result of the decrease in contacts at this office, new applications fell off 38 percent within the last thirty days, and 33 percent compared with the corresponding month one year ago. Furthermore, there were 12.7 percent fewer active applications on file at the end of August than there were July 31 of this year. On the other hand, there were 8.2 percent more active applications on file August 31, 1952, than there were August 31, 1951. Nonagricultural placements increased by 9.7 percent for August over July of this year, but decreased by 19.2 percent compared with August 1951.

DECLINE IN CLAIMSTAKING

August was one of the few months this year that has shown a decline in claims for unemployment compensation. Initial claims filed during August showed a decrease of 29.2 percent from the previous month, and a decrease of 14.9 percent compared with August 1951. Compensable claims also dropped by 10.6 percent during the last thirty-day period, but there were 23.6 percent more compensable claims filed during August this year than for the same period one year ago. Logging and lumbering activities have about gotten back to normal for this season of the year; and that fact, as well as increased hiring on several construction projects, has helped to reduce the claimload.

Mississippi State Employment Service

336 Main Street Telephones 9064-9065

New Albany, Mississippi September 1952

SEASONAL DECREASE IN NUMBER OF JOB APPLICANTS EXPERIENCED

During the past month, the number of job applicants, residing in the tri-county area served by the New Albany local office, decreased approximately 9 percent. There were on file in the local office 293 applications as of August 31, as compared with 328 on July 31, 1952. Current applications for work on file practically coincide with the number on file on the same date last year--293 as compared with 290. It is also to be pointed out that additional decreases in the number of job applicants have occurred since the first of this month. These decreases are seasonal in nature because of the beginning of the cotton harvest. Many farm workers have returned to the farm after seeking industrial employment during the past two months. Too, many off-the-farm workers are presently employed in cotton picking. The seasonal demand for cotton pickers has created a local shortage of service workers.

CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE DECREASE

During the past month, there was an over-all decrease of nearly sixteen percent in the total number of claims filed for unemployment insurance. Continued claims decreased from 537 filed in July to 479 filed in August, or nearly 11 percent; while, for the same period, initial claims (indicating new unemployment) decreased from 106 to 63, or nearly 41 percent.

JOB APPLICANTS JOB PROSPECTS

Nearly 33 percent of the current job applicants are women and about 24 percent are veterans. Numerous job openings presently exist for service workers—waitresses, maids, cooks, dish washers, and porters. Other openings are listed for stenographers, general office clerks, salesmen, and unskilled workers.

NEW TESTING SERVICES NOW AVAILABLE

The local office is now equipped to administer a General Aptitude Test Battery. This series of tests is designed to assist applicants in selecting suitable vocational goals, or vocational changes through the measurement of ten basic aptitudes. A proficiency test for stenographers and typists is also available. It is believed that these tests will be of much value to both employers and applicants.

LOCAL OFFICE ACTIVITIES

Following is a summary of selected local office activities for certain months:

Activities	August 1951	July 1952	August 1952
Visits to local office	1202	1231	1058
New applications for work	116	129	64
Active applications on file	290	328	293
Local job placements (nonagricultural)	126	97	112
Total UI claims filed	468	643	542

Mississippi State Employment Service
Rainey Hotel Building Telephone 4031

Newton, Mississippi September 1952

IMPROVED EMPLOYMENT SITUATION Less than six percent of the persons contacting the Newton employment office during the month of August 1952, filed initial claims for unemployment compensation. Initial claims were forty percent lower, and continued claims were ten percent lower in August 1952, than in July 1952. This decrease in unemployment is explained partially by seasonal increases in employment in cotton compresses and oil mills, and related seasonal industries and partially by some increased hiring in lumber and wood products and poultry-processing plants.

A NEW SERVICE TO EMPLOYERS The Newton employment office will soon have facilities available to test high school graduates, and other inexperienced applicants who are entering the labor market for the first time. These tests will determine what specific aptitudes these job seekers possess. For example, one test has been designed to reveal the applicant's aptness to be a successful salesperson. If you are interested in having your applicants for work tested, please contact this office for further details.

THE HANDICAPPED WORKER IS "READY, WILLING AND ABLE" This slogan, "ready, willing and able," will be the theme of the eighth consecutive year's drive to promote the employment opportunities of the handicapped worker. Did you know that in the year 1951 alone, more than 100 million man-hours were added to the Nation's productive effort by men and women who overcame helplessness? Eight thousand disabled workers who were rehabilitated were able to leave relief rolls. Within four years, these men and women will pay back in taxes all the 21 million of the Federal money spent for the entire Vocational Rehabilitation program in 1951. Remember, on the job the correctly placed worker has no job handicap. Won't you give the handicapped worker a chance when your next job opening occurs?

Mississippi State Employment Service

Church Street Telephone 4

Oxford, Mississippi September 1952

CURRENT EMPLOYMENT Taking a decided spurt as the cotton crop opened rapidly, over-all employment in this area was near maximum as the middle of September neared. In addition to the demand for farm labor, a number of construction projects, remodeling and rebuilding projects caused a heavy demand for construction labor of all skill levels.

As of September 11, there was demand for unskilled and semi-skilled construction labor, and for other types of common labor, that could not be filled.

AGRICULTURAL LABOR A heavier demand than has been met this early in several years has grown out of sudden maturity of the cotton crop. Although there has been little day-hauling of labor out of this area, the local planters are still several hundred short of the cotton pickers they could use. Picking prices are fairly stable at around $2.50, with transportation provided.

Although the situation is urgent at this time (a heavy rain would cause considerable lowering of grade), indications are that the crop in this area will be picked out far ahead of the usual schedule, and a potential supply of labor for other areas then will become available. To date, ginnings are about 230 percent ahead of ginnings to date last year, with the cotton averaging better grade than had been expected earlier. There is considerable strict middling cotton, with lint up to 1 1/16 inch, and most of the crop, thus far, ginned as good as middling with 1-inch staple.

RETAIL TRADE Retail trade took a late summer slump during the last few weeks, accompanied by continued decreases in prices of livestock and other factors making for continued curtailed trade. Some improvement is expected by retail houses generally as soon as more of the year's cotton money becomes available.

Because of the excessively dry growing season, however, many tenant and sharecrop farmers will do little better than break even on the season's operation; this doubtless will adversely affect retail buying during the winter period.

FUTURE EMPLOYMENT PROSPECTS Employment will remain high, it now appears, until winter weather shuts down construction projects. Even then, there are several projects underway, or on paper, which will provide work whenever weather conditions permit. There will be more than usual out-migration of farm workers on a day-haul basis to the Delta, it appears-- if the demand for cotton pickers holds up in the Delta through October, by which time most of the local crop will be harvested.

Mississippi State Employment Service
1221 Jackson Avenue Telephone 80

Pascagoula, Mississippi September 1952

CURRENT EMPLOYMENT Nonagricultural employment in the Pascagoula area is still on the rise. The shipbuilding industry is continuing its stepped-up hiring practices, with approximately 90 percent of those hired in August being in skilled and semi-skilled occupations. Employment also picked up in the building-construction industry, as many new housing units were begun last month, and also some commercial buildings were underway. The fishing industry and the paper-pulp industry remained relatively stable during the month.

EMPLOYMENT OUTLOOK A local garment plant expects to re-employ all its workers who were laid-off and to hire a good many additional workers. Employment in the shipbuilding industry should continue high for another two months and then level off. After October, the fishing season will be over, and this will throw many people in this area in the ranks of the unemployed.

JOB OPPORTUNITIES An acute shortage of production welders and pipe welders still exists. There are also openings for loftsmen, inside machinists, and pipefitters in the shipbuilding industry. Other openings are for an automobile mechanic, maids, and waitresses.

A survey is still underway to determine the number of women in this area with experience in welding or tacking. Any woman with this experience should contact the Pascagoula office of the Mississippi State Employment Service, 216 Krebs Avenue, Pascagoula, Mississippi.

CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION Initial claims for unemployment insurance in this area (Jackson and George Counties) were 208, as compared to 184 for July or an increase of 13 percent. This increase was caused primarily by the two-week shut-down of the local woolen mill.

LOCAL HOUSING FACILITIES The housing situation in this area still poses as one of the biggest obstacles to overcome before peak employment can be reached. Ground-breaking ceremonies for the new 122-unit Woodlawn Housing Project took place on August 11, 1952, and the first units are scheduled for occupancy, weather permitting, in about 8 weeks. This should be of some relief to the very bad housing situation that now exists.

Mississippi State Employment Service

216 Krebs Avenue Telephones 726-727

Vol. 4, No. 9 Tupelo, Mississippi September 1952

EMPLOYMENT TRENDS In keeping with the seasonal pattern, unemployment is again on a downward trend; and in many classifications, the demand for labor far outstrips supply. Low unemployment and high employment can be attributed to the harvest needing more labor than usual, and nonagricultural employment increasing at the same time. The garment industry in this area is enjoying one of its fullest years, and, in some instances, over-time schedules have been set up. Construction of new homes has also made a sizable contribution, which, combined with the normal growth of other industries, accounts for the high level of employment in the area at the present time. These conditions can be expected to continue until bad weather affects the agricultural and construction activities, or the agricultural harvest has been completed.

OUTLOOK Expansion of present facilities in the garment industry should afford employment to a good many additional applicants, and retail trade will need additional help for the next three or four months. These factors, combined with the gradual growth observed in some of the younger industries, should help the economic conditions within the area, and thus offer additional employment to the people.

LABOR SUPPLY There are approximately eleven percent fewer applicants, currently seeking work through this office than there was a month ago and twenty-six percent fewer than a year ago. Available applicants, at the present time, do not represent the classifications that most of the demands are in. There is a shortage of cotton pickers and this situation will probably get worse before it gets better. Domestic servants have gone to the cotton field, and thus created a severe shortage of domestic help. This office has been unable to fill the orders of nonagricultural employers who needed strong-bodied common laborers; there is also a shortage of some skilled craftsmen and efficient office help. Another contributing factor to the labor shortage, at the present time, is the number of people who have moved to other areas to work. It is believed that this shortage will be of short duration, and there will again be an adequate, if not surplus, supply within ninety days.

Mississippi State Employment Service
309 Troy Street Telephones 1127-1128

Vicksburg, Mississippi September 1952

CURRENT EMPLOYMENT

There was an increase in both agricultural and nonagricultural employment in the Vicksburg labor-market area during August. Employment in contract construction declined slightly, because of the continued shortages of steel and other essential materials, but there were substantial gains in lumber and related industries, and in the manufacturing of chemicals and allied products. Employment in governmental establishments increased as units engaged in river-bank protection work started their seasonal activities. There was no change in employment in wholesale and retail trade, utilities and communications.

Agricultural employment increased as cotton harvesting got underway in the area during the latter part of the month.

EMPLOYMENT OUTLOOK

Employment in contract construction, in the field of both industrial and private buildings, is expected to increase within the next reporting period. Construction is slated to begin on the Westinghouse Plant as soon as sufficient steel is available, and a new 50-unit housing project is scheduled for the Vicksburg area. Agricultural activity will continue to increase during the next thirty days.

UNEMPLOYMENT

A mass lay-off of workers at a box-manufacturing plant in the area resulted in an increase in the number of initial claims filed for unemployment compensation benefits. The majority of these claimants, however, were recalled to work before signing for more than one compensable week. Both initial and compensable claims were slightly higher than the number filed during August 1951.

LOCAL OFFICE ACTIVITIES

Reception contacts at the Vicksburg local office and at itinerant points totaled 3,595 during August, a slight increase over the preceding month. For the same month one year ago, a total of 3,228 contacts was recorded.

There were 687 persons referred for interviews with prospective employers during August, and a total of 560 of these was placed in nonagricultural employment during the month.

AVAILABLE APPLICANTS

Only 706 applications remained in the active file at the close of the month. Of this number, 235 were women, and 135 were veterans. Experienced workers are available in the following classifications: arc welders, carpenters, painters and truck drivers. There is a temporary shortage of service and domestic workers, because of the large numbers of these who engage in cotton harvesting. There is also a definite shortage of mechanical and electrical engineers in the area.

Mississippi State Employment Service

707 Crawford Street Telephones 1560-61

West Point, Mississippi September 1952

INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYMENT GRADUALLY INCREASING Industrial employment remained at a high level throughout August. Slight increases were registered in the apparel and related-products industry, the food products industry, and the lumber and wood-products industry. Numerous construction projects are underway, but a shortage of structural steel has slowed down some jobs. Cotton gins and compresses are now in full operation.

Employment in retail trade and service establishments remained near the July level; however, sales are up considerably over the comparable period of last year.

AGRICULTURAL ACTIVITY It is estimated that about 75 percent of the cotton is now open, with about 30 percent harvested. A better turnout is being experienced than was forecast last month. Several trucks are hauling pickers from West Point and other large towns in the area, and pickers are receiving from $2 to $3 per hundred pounds. A shortage of domestic workers in West Point has resulted. Weather conditions have been most favorable for the harvest, so far.

UNEMPLOYMENT Ninety-eight new applications for work were taken by the local employment office in August. At the end of the month, there were a total of 448 persons, of which 258 are female and 41 were veterans, with applications in the active file. The majority of these persons are unskilled, however, a few skilled workers are still available. Employers in need of workers are invited to place orders with us, and let us send you a qualified worker.

Less than half as many claims were filed for unemployment insurance in August as in July.

NEPH WEEK October 5-11, 1952, will be observed as National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week. Surveys show that handicapped workers are more productive at given jobs than nonhandicapped workers. Won't you give a disabled veteran or a physically handicapped worker an opportunity to prove he is worthy of employment? Call or visit your local employment office for information.

Mississippi State Employment Service

37 West Main Street Telephone 748

Yazoo City, Mississippi September 1952

COMPARATIVE ACTIVITY For the quarter June, July and August 1952, placements increased approximately 7 percent over the same period in 1951. Initial claims increased 100 percent, and compensable claims increased approximately 40 percent.

EMPLOYMENT OUTLOOK Sawmills have resumed full-scale operations, and will gradually hire replacements for full-scale operations. Drilling activities are utilizing such unskilled labor as may be available. Cotton picking is scraping the bottom of the barrel for all local office area pickers, as well as available supply from supply office areas. Cotton picking is 100 percent ready for harvesting and will require only one picking. Farmers are reporting their cotton in excellent condition for picking, and pickers should be able to realize better than average wages under existing conditions.

There is no new construction in the area at this time. The Catholic School and the Negro Housing Project are nearing completion, and only finished workmen and their helpers will be required to finish up these two jobs.

NOTE The staff wishes to express its appreciation to local employers for their cooperation in placing orders with the office in sufficient time for the selection of applicants best suited for the job.

Mississippi State Employment Service

211 South Main Street Telephone 541

The Southern Frontier

We dedicate ourselves to the task of doing the most and the best that can be done here and now.

VOL. V JUNE, 1944 NUMBER 6

The Political Scene: Confusion and Crisis

Confusion in South Carolina

The political pot began to boil in earnest in South Carolina in February when Representative John L. Long of Union County offered a resolution calling on "damned Northern agitators" to leave the South alone. Long said that he was willing to shed his blood for white supremacy in the South. His resolution was passed by the South Carolina House of Representatives.

Supreme Court Decision

When the Supreme Court decision in the Texas primary case was announced in April, there were vigorous expressions of disapproval from Democratic leaders in South Carolina. At the state Democratic convention in May, the keynote speaker said: "Fellow Democrats of South Carolina, no decision of the United States Supreme Court in the last fifty years has brought so much doubt, confusion, and humiliation to the white people of South Carolina as has this decision. . . . I should like to see this convention protest against the attempt of the national party to give the colored race the right to participate in our primaries. . . ."

State Democratic Convention

The convention forthwith adopted a resolution declaring "That this party shall continue, as it is now, a party of and for white Democrats only, and that no Negro shall be admitted to membership in our party." Expressing fear that the national Democratic convention will be inclined to go on record as favoring (1) abolition of the poll-tax requirement for voting, (2) federal interference with segregation laws and customs, (3) federal control of education to permit racially mixed public schools, (4) federal anti-lynching legislation, and (5) a Negro nominee "for the Vice-Presidency and even the Presidency," the convention instructed its delegates to "oppose fully to the last minute any attempt or effort on the part of the national Democratic convention to favor any one of those things mentioned before as objectionable to the white Democrats of South Carolina." The delegates to the national convention were uninstructed.

As a hint of further action if the national convention does not go to their liking, the South Carolina Democrats also resolved to meet again on the second Wednesday following the adjournment of the national con-

(Continued on Page 4)

Revolt in Texas

In Texas the revolt of the anti-Roosevelt Democrats has reached serious proportions. Perhaps the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Texas white primary case, Smith vs. Allwright, was too bitter a pill for the party leaders there.

Convention and Counter Convention

The anti-Roosevelt forces in Texas got busy long before the state Democratic convention met. Without much hullabaloo, they captured a large number of local conventions, and when the state convention was held last month they had a substantial majority of the delegates.

The pro-Roosevelt forces, finding themselves outvoted on crucial points, broke away to hold a convention of their own. They elected a slate of delegates and instructed them to vote for Roosevelt at the Chicago convention. Later they appealed to the State Democratic Executive Committee to certify a slate of pro-Roosevelt presidential electors for printing on the July primary ballot. Failing there, they took the matter to the Texas Supreme Court, but got nowhere.

Uninstructed Electors

The regular convention voted to send uninstructed delegates to the national convention, and, just to show that it meant business, voted to instruct its presidential electors to support the Democratic nominee in the electoral college only if the national Democratic convention makes certain concessions. Specifically, these Texas Democrats want the convention to restore the two-thirds rule, to take a stand for states' rights and against federal "interference" in Southern affairs.

The full import of this maneuver remains to be seen. It may be that even if the national convention turns a deaf ear to the Texas demands the Texas Democrats will fall into line for the sake of party and national unity. However, if there is a close election in November, and if Texas carries through on its threat not to support the party nominee in the electoral college, the election of the President might be thrown into the House of Representatives, and the result would almost certainly be a bitter national controversy.

A Georgia White Woman's Plea

(Mrs. Dorothy Q. Rainey is a member of the Georgia State Democratic Executive Committee. She sent the following letter to the chairman of the Committee two days before the meeting of the Committee in Atlanta on June 22. The letter was published in the Atlanta JOURNAL of June 20, 1944.)

I am sincerely disturbed by the published reports that a subcommittee of the Georgia Democratic Executive Committee has recommended the barring of all Negroes from the coming primary. I feel that this action is not merely contrary to the recent overwhelming decision of the Supreme Court and therefore of the fundamental law of our country but also contrary to the sound policy which we shall follow without legal compulsion.

I know of no white Southerners of intelligence and high character who do not wish to encourage our Negro fellow Southerners to lives of thrift, responsibility, and integrity—that is, to lives of good citizenship. To say to a Negro that no matter what his competence and no matter what his personal worth, he is not to be permitted to have a part in the processes of citizenship seems to me a cruel and shameful thing. For my part I am not willing to insult him in this fashion and to challenge his resentment against the white people.

I am aware that the course of action suggested by the committee is dictated not by fear of a certain group of our white Southerners. For these white Southerners, whose thinking is stepped in poverty, in ignorance and in prejudice, I feel a deep concern and pity. I am not, however, willing to accept their dictates in deciding whether I myself shall live up to the finest tradition of the South and of my country and to the universal teachings of Jesus.

As far back as 1880, Governor Alfred H. Colquitt listed among the most valuable results of his administration "kindly relations between the white and colored races due to a liberal spirit in the encouragement of popular education and equal justice in the protection of all races in every right of citizenship to the fullest extent of executive authority." He argued eloquently for "full and impartial justice."

Should the State Democratic Executive Committee decide to follow the course of "wisdom, justice, and moderation" with

(Continued on Page 4)

THE SOUTHERN FRONTIER

Published by
SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
710 Standard Building
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

Howard W. Odum ..... President
P. B. Young ..... Vice-President
Homer P. Rainey ..... Vice-President
Carter Wesley ..... Vice-President
Charles S. Johnson ..... Chmn. of Executive Com.
Guy B. Johnson ..... Executive Director
Ira DeA. Reid ..... Associate Executive Director
Margaret L. Fisher ..... Public Relations Director
Emily H. Clay ..... Secretary-Treasurer

Subscription rate . . . . . 25c a year

ATLANTA, GEORGIA, JUNE, 1944

To attain through research and action programs the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region.

Editorial

This is a critical year in American politics, and it is being made doubly critical by the threatened revolt of the "regular" Democrats in several states of the South. The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Texas primary case has apparently brought to a head the festering anti-Roosevelt, anti-New-Deal and anti-fourth-term sentiment in the deep South and has precipitated a Democratic revolt in South Carolina, Texas, and Mississippi.

The most spectacular phase of this rebellion is the Texas Democratic convention's threat that the Democratic Presidential electors may refuse to support the party nominee in the electoral college unless the national Democratic convention yields to certain demands of Southern Democrats. In other words, the revolters are going to the Chicago convention in July prepared to do some fancy political horse-trading—or perhaps black-mailing would be a more accurate term. They want the two-thirds rule restored, they want a declaration for more states' rights, they want assurance that Uncle Sam will not interfere with their handling of the race problem, and they want a Southerner—or anybody but Wallace—for Vice-President.

Now it remains to be seen whether these rebellious Democrats mean business or whether they are merely making a dramatic gesture of defiance before yielding to the inevitable. Our guess is that they mean business, and that this thing has possibilities of producing a bitter and devastating national controversy.

The next scene in this little drama will take place at the Democratic convention in Chicago. It is barely possible, of course, that the regular Texas delegation may not be seated. The credentials committee could say, "Since your state convention has already declared that its electors are not obligated to support the party nominee in the electoral college, you don't belong here." If the delegation is seated, it will have won the first round, and the fight will go on from there. If the pro-Roosevelt delegation elected by the rump convention in Texas is seated, then the Democratic party in Texas is split wide open; if indeed it is not already split. Unless the "regulars" called a new convention to iron the matter out, the pro-Roosevelt forces would have to organize a party, conform to the election laws, and put forth a slate of electors pledged to support the party nominee in the electoral college. In fact, they may have to do this anyway in order to make sure that a vote for Roosevelt is really a vote for Roosevelt.

But assuming that the "regular" delegation is seated at the national convention, then what? The nomination of Roosevelt can be taken for granted. The Texans and their allies might be willing to settle for the Vice-Presidency, but Wallace has been growing in political stature and popularity, and he is not going to be easily beaten out of the nomination for the Vice-Presidency. It is highly doubtful whether the two-thirds rule can be restored, and it is almost certain that the platform will not contain such pronouncements on states' rights and race relations as will ease the pains of the revolting Southerners. In other words, the rebel Democrats may go home with little to show for their efforts.

Will the revolters then, in revenge, carry through on their threat to desert the party nominee in the electoral college? Assuming that the unpledged Texas Democratic electors win in the November election and go to the electoral college with the avowed intention of voting for any candidate they please, what then? Obviously, if there is a landslide vote for either the Democratic or the Republican candidates, the Texas electoral vote will not matter one way or the other. But if there is a slim Democratic majority, then the 23 electoral votes of Texas or the 40 votes of Texas, Mississippi, and South Carolina can throw the choice of the electoral college to the Republican candidate or they can block the electoral college and throw the election into the House of Representatives. There each state would have one vote, a vote determined by the majority of its representatives. New York, for example, has 22 Democrats, 22 Republicans, and one American Labor Partyite in the House, and so, if New York's vote were decisive, the honor of electing a President would fall upon Vito Marcantonio, only representative of the American Labor Party. Likewise, if the electoral college cannot agree on a Vice-President, the election of that official would go to the Senate. Thus we might have a Democratic President and Republican Vice-President, or vice versa. Whatever happens, the ensuing confusion and bitterness would make the Jackson-Adams affair of 1824 and the Hayes-Tilden dispute of 1876 look like child's play.

What an intelligent way to be spending our energies when we need to put the last ounce of our strength and unity into winning the war as soon as possible! And what a way to thwart the will of American voters!

If progressive Southerners can find any consolation at all in this sorry beat-Roosevelt-at-any-price conspiracy, it is this: the revolting Democrats may unwittingly do the best job of splitting the Solid South and making way for popular government that has ever been done. In a party split, such as seems to be inevitable in Texas, the Negro voter is sure to play a stronger role than usual in the general election, and that is certainly not what the rebel wing had in mind.

Yes, one wonders whether the revolting Democrats know their American history and whether they have asked themselves what might happen in addition to what they hope will happen. The electoral college system was devised largely to keep the South, with its large non-voting slave population, from being overshadowed by the North, and it has continued to give the South an unearned advantage in national Democratic affairs. The surest result of such a debacle as we have suggested above is a great popular demand for an amendment to the Constitution providing for the direct election of the President and Vice-President by popular vote. Such an amendment might have a fair chance of passing. If it were adopted, there is only one way in which the South could retain anything like a fair share of power in national politics, and that is to get out the vote regardless of race, creed, or color!

A Challenge to the Democratic Party

(The Atlanta Daily World, June 21, 1944)

. . . The issue whether Negroes shall or shall not vote in the Democratic Primaries is clearly known. It is an issue between a slave's existence and that of a free individual. It is, as Vice-President Wallace pointed out about the present war, a struggle between a free and a slave world.

There is nothing to fear about the Negro vote in Georgia, because there is nothing to fear about peace-loving Negroes of the state. The Negro vote, like Negro citizens, will and must be used to further the righteous ends and ambitions of the whole people of Georgia. There is ample provision in the state constitution respecting the qualifications of electors sufficient to prevent control of the Democratic Primary by an ignorant or venal voter, whether white or black.

Finally, let it be said, the thousands of intelligent Negro Democrats over the State who plan voting on July Fourth will break no tradition in the South. Though new in this State, Negroes have voted and continue to vote, both in Tennessee and in North Carolina. And they vote as Democrats. To rule affirmatively, the State Executive Committee will vote to uphold the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution, our highest authority. . . .

We sincerely hope the Democratic Committee, as the controlling political party of the State, will live up to its duty and grant this simple request for elemental justice to Negro Democrats.

What the People Say: Letters To the Papers

Negro Democrats

(The Charleston News-Courier, May 21, 1944)

Editor: The News and Courier is insistently trying to raise a hullabaloo of dissension in Democratic ranks by appealing to racial prejudices. The News and Courier had better find some sensible, valid reason for excluding Negroes from the Democratic party—certainly a better reason than their advocacy of a fourth term for Roosevelt. The Negroes have a right to vote, and their exclusion from the Democratic primaries will certainly not exclude them from voting in the presidential election.

Yes, the writer is a true New Dealer, but not as the New Deal is appraised by The News and Courier. The writer is not ashamed to say that he is a friend of the Negro; he does not believe in spectacular appeals to race prejudice.

ROBERT S. BAILEY

St. George, S. C.

Negro Votes

(The Atlanta Constitution, June 22, 1944)

Editor: Many people seem to like the idea of Negroes voting. I for one most assuredly do not. I realize the fact that some Negroes are across the seas fighting, and working in defense jobs. But I know many white boys at the age of 17 who are also fighting. They are not given the privilege of voting.

While some Negroes are in the fight there are still many more who are walking the streets in zoot suits. Why can't they be put to work or sent across?

WESLEY G. BAILEY, II

Atlanta, Georgia.

Would Revive Talmadge

(The Atlanta Journal, June 22, 1944)

Editor: I think that we have had enough New Yorkers in the White House. It is now time for us Southerners to elect someone from our own section to the presidency.

Presidential candidates from the North and West may claim to be friends of the South, but after they take office, whether they be Republican or Democrat, they treat us like undesirable stepchildren. They all maintain freight rates that are unfair to the South; and they continually try to enact federal legislation to abolish the poll tax, a tax that helps to maintain our schools and roads. At the present time the New Yorkers in the White House are attempting to perpetrate their greatest crime. They are trying to destroy one of the South's greatest institutions, the white primary.

I think that the white supremacy South should make every effort to elect a real Southerner to the White House, so as to bring about the proper development of this section.

I suggest that the South endorse its greatest citizen for the presidency, Eugene Talmadge.

J. B. STONER

Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Strangely Ironic

(The Atlanta Journal, June 11, 1944)

Editor: Is it not strangly ironic that the front page of Wednesday's Journal, filled with news of the invasion of Europe by which we hope democracy will be preserved, should carry one discordant item indicating how little we value democracy at home: "State Group Bans Negroes in Primary?"

Obviously there is no democracy when a group of citizens are banned from participating in the only election which has any meaning on the basis of that theory of the "master race" which we so despise in the Nazis yet cherish in ourselves.

Why should we not join Virginia, North Carolina and other Southern states in following the democratic practice of allowing all Democrats to vote in the primaries regardless of race?

I speak as a Southern white woman who cherishes all that is fine and noble in Southern tradition and must therefore cry out against the base hypocrisy of paying tribute to democracy with the lips while destroying it in action.

ALMA METCALFE

Decatur, Georgia.

Asks for Tolerance

(The Atlanta Journal, June 18, 1944)

Editor: After reading Alma Metcalfe's letter I was elated to learn that real Americans in spirit and deed still exist in Georgia despite the cloud of intolerance that has gathered over our heads. I have read many letters like Alma Metcalfe's in your column and I read them with a pride that contrasted greatly with the disgust I felt whenever I read the inane and unjust alibis of the bigots. I believe if a census was taken among Georgians that Americans would far outnumber the prejudiced groups here. Why can't this be done so that the people who believe in justice can see to it that our colored citizens can vote in the primary? That is the only democratic solution. The voice of real America should not be silenced in these crucial times by the puny intolerance of some Georgians. Another white citizen.

MRS. ROSE WATTS

Atlanta, Georgia.

Don't Thwart Democracy

(The Atlanta Journal, June 19, 1944)

Editor: I, too, want to join Mrs. Rose Watts in adding my voice in appreciation of the letter recently appearing in The Journal under the name of Alma Metcalfe, protesting the recent decision to bar Negroes of Georgia from participating in the state primary. As Mrs. Metcalfe pointed out, it was indeed ironical that this decision appeared in our papers on the very day of the great Allied invasion of France.

We are sending our boys, Negro and white, into those battles to preserve the democracy that we love so much. I have a boy in this struggle, too, and I can fully appreciate the great sacrifices these boys and their families are making. All over the world the downtrodden peoples of the earth are crying out for their rights as free men and we in this great nation of ours have a destiny to perform in showing to the world the true spirit of democracy, free from discrimination because of race, color, or creed.

Can we afford to ask Negro boys to lay their lives on the altar of democracy and then deny to their people the right as citizens to participate in the primary? Can we expect good citizenship to emerge from such discrimination? And isn't the aim of democracy to set a pattern that is conducive to good citizenship?

The divine idea of freedom and justice is permeating human consciousness today as never before. Let it not be said of the citizens of Georgia that they were guilty of any move to thwart it.

This too comes from a Southern-born white woman.

MRS. A. G. SPIVEY

Atlanta, Georgia.

Time Will Heal

(The Atlanta Journal, June 22, 1944)

Editor: In answer to the timely article entitled "Don't Thwart Democracy," by a Mrs. A. G. Spivey, who ends her article as "A Southern Born White Woman."

Your letter, Mrs. Spivey, was greeted with heart-felt interest. I can assure you that your name can be placed on the roll of the true democracy. Many Negroes, if they were able to read The Journal, would, without a doubt, smile deep down in their hearts, and therefore issue forth a prayer to Almighty God, asking that his wonderful blessings be bestowed upon you, yours and thousands in America like you.

I am a so-called Yankee Negro; but I am also an American, true throughout my entire body. I live and breathe true democracy for every American, regardless of race, creed or color. Whether I am north or south of the Mason and Dixon line, I am an American. Naturally I have encountered many obstacles on the broad highway of life, but time, and time alone, will heal all racial, social and educational indifferences.

CORPORAL HENRY R. ROGERS

Lawson General Hospital

Atlanta, Ga.

The Atlanta Police Department's Crime Bureau's report for the month of May states that 12 rape cases were reported. Eight of these complaints were judged unfounded or baseless. Of the remaining four cases, police reported that two were cleared up and two remained unsolved.

Standing Committees of the Southern Regional Council

Four of the five standing committees authorized by the Board of Directors at its meeting on April 28 have been appointed. The personnel of the Committee on Public Relations is not yet complete. The other committee appointments are as follows:

Committee on Membership: Mrs. M. E. Tilly, Benjamin E. Mays, Mrs. Grace T. Hamilton, Frank McCallister, R. L. Foreman, Jr., Atlanta, Georgia; Louis E. Burnham, Birmingham, Alabama; King Vivion, Nashville, Tennessee.

Committee on Finance: W. W. Alexander, Chapel Hill, North Carolina; Wilson M. Brown, Richmond, Virginia; Charles S. Johnson, Nashville, Tennessee; Walter J. Matherly, Gainesville, Florida; L. D. Milton, Atlanta, Georgia.

Committee on Publications: Gordon B. Hancock, Richmond, Virginia; William E. Cole, Knoxville, Tennessee; Virginius Dabney, Richmond, Virginia; A. W. Dent, New Orleans, Louisiana; Mildred Mell, Decatur, Georgia.

Committee on Fellows: Horace M. Bond, Fort Valley, Georgia; Clark Foreman, Black Mountain, North Carolina; George S. Mitchell, Atlanta, Georgia; Thomas S. Staples, Conway, Arkansas; Forrester B. Washington, Atlanta, Georgia; James T. Taylor, Durham, North Carolina.

According to the Dallas Morning News, the Chairman of the Democratic County Committee of Navarro County, Texas, has instructed his precinct chairmen to allow Negroes qualified as voters to participate in party primaries, under terms of the recent United States Supreme Court decision.

Confusion in South Carolina

(Continued from Page 1)

vention in order "to especially consider the platform of the National Democratic Party as adopted at the approaching convention."

A New Party

Meantime, Negro Democrats in South Carolina, seeing that there was no hope of participating in the regular party councils, organized the Progressive Democratic Party, open to all voters regardless of race. Late in May they held a convention and elected delegates to the national Democratic convention. These delegates will contest the seating of the "regular" delegates. The convention adopted a platform pledging the Progressive Democrats to work "for the elevation of all our citizens, whatever their color or race, from the depths of political and economic despair. . . . ," and promised to offer a full slate of candidates in the November general elections.

Senator Maybank has termed the leaders of this party "agitators and trouble-makers" and has said that he is certain that the party delegates will not be seated by the Democratic convention in Chicago in July.

Voices of the South

(New York Post, May 10, 1944)

The Texas politicians, and their brethren in other Southern States, are taking it hard. Listening to them one might get the impression that the whole South feels as they do. But it doesn't at all.

From Atlanta in the deep South comes the voice of the Southern Regional Council, made up chiefly of people the politicians would be happy to have to dinner, telling them to keep calm; the Constitution of the United States won't ruin the South.

And telling them, too: "We cannot honestly wage a war for freedom and democracy in foreign lands when we deny to our own Negro citizens the rights and privileges which are justly theirs."

That is the voice of the modern South and it will prevail.

The chairman of the Democratic State Committee in Arkansas stated recently, "Election judges should allow Negroes to vote in the Democratic primary elections this summer, provided that they possess a poll tax receipt and otherwise appear qualified."

North Carolina has become the first Southern State to eliminate the differences in salaries of Negro and white school teachers. A plan was adopted several years ago to equalize the teachers salaries over a period of years, but recently the State Board of Education voted to remove the differential with surplus funds expected to be on hand during the 1944-45 school term. No legal suits have ever been brought in North Carolina to achieve equalization.

A Georgia White Woman's Plea

(Continued from Page 1)

regard to Negro voting, it will find ample support in the counsel of the bravest and best of Georgians and Southerners.

It is now clear that if America remains a democracy, operating under laws of fair play and equal opportunity, the Negro who is qualified to vote is going to be given the vote. Is it not just as clear that white Southerners who have regarded themselves as true friends of the Negro will make an intolerable blunder if, by denying him association with themselves in the Democratic Party, they drive him into the camp of their enemies? Our record as individuals and as a group is now being made not just in the eyes of the Negro, but in the eyes of the world and in the eyes of history.

Since almost certainly I am not going to be able to attend the meeting on Thursday, I ask that you read this letter to the committee as my plea to them to take action that will make allies and not enemies of the responsible people of both races in the South. We have enough problems to solve without fighting each other.

MRS. DOROTHY Q. RAINEY
Atlanta, Georgia.

Plea of the Atlanta Negro Citizens Committee

(On June 22 the Negro Citizens Committee sent the following letter to the Georgia State Democratic Executive Committee which was in session that day.)

The State Democratic Executixe Committee
Atlanta, Georgia
Dear Sirs:

Because the Negroes of Georgia are not only concerned with the full possession of their constitutionally guaranteed right as citizens of this free Republic, but also because they are zealous of the highest welfare and good name of their state, they, through this committee, urgently request your body to reconsider the recent decision of your sub-committee that, wholly on the basis of race, Negroes will not be permitted to vote in Georgia primaries. We do not need to remind you that this attitude is in direct conflict with the principles upon which our beloved country was founded. . .

We remind you of what every true American knows, that no free country, or part of it can long exist half free and half slave. It is difficult for us to believe that the dominant political party in the sovereign State of Georgia will insist upon continuing a policy which will virtually reduce to political serfdom almost a third of its population. A segment of the population, moreover, that for over a century has given lavishly of blood, sweat and tears, for its posterity and its good name. The argument that the admission of Negroes to the unrestricted use of the ballot, would be a threat to the orderly administration of Government in the State of Georgia is fallacious—a product of prejudice and unfounded fear. America joins hands with liberty-loving men the world around, in a global struggle to free man everywhere from tyranny and oppression. Can it consistently spend, without stint, both gold and human lives in extending the boon of freedom to other peoples, while it denies it to her own citizens? If it is safety for our cherished institutions which has been the motivating force in your action, may we remind you that it is far safer in a democracy for the humblest man to have a ballot in his hand than a wrong in his heart. . . .

We hope that you will see fit generously to grant the opportunity to participate in the process of government of our state to those qualified Negro citizens whose choice is the Democratic party. We respectfully urge you, therefore, in regular session assembled to reconsider the decision of your sub-committee with the hope that barriers set up against Negroes, wholly on the basis of race, in the Democratic Primaries will be discontinued. We do this in the interest of interracial good will, the highest Americanism, and the welfare of our great state.

Very truly yours,
C. L. HARPER, Chairman
Negro Citizens Committee

Dr. Willis J. King, President of Gammon Theological Seminary and Member of the Southern Regional Council, has been named a bishop of the Methodist Church to serve in Liberia.

Mat Resis. Group - Hate Literature

FRONTIER

Advancing Democratic Nationalism

Published by the INSTITUTE FOR BIOPOLITICS
P.O. Box 1785, Chicago 90, Ill.

A research and policy formulation group of the DEMOCRATIC NATIONALIST PARTY

SURVIVAL ISSUE

FOLK - IDEA - NATION

THE UNITED STATES TODAY

150,000,000	Whitefolk
19,000,000	Negroes
8,000,000	Jews
3,000,000	Unclassified non-Whites
180,000,000

If our buildings, our highways, and our railroads should be wrecked, we could rebuild them. If our cities should be destroyed, out of the very ruins we could erect newer and greater ones. Even if our armed might should be crushed, we could rear sons who would redeem our power. But if the blood of our Whitefolk should become corrupted and mingled with the blood of non-Whites, then the present greatness of our Nation would be gone forever. The maintenance of our American civilization would be as impossible for a non-White America as would the redemption and restoration of the Whiteman's blood which has been mixed with that of the non-White.

FREEDOM FROM COMMUNISM

JV 3-30-81

OUR AMERICAN DESTINY

It is our American Destiny to bring about the unity of the Whiteman's World. The life-or-death threat of aroused non-whites affords the challenge which will close the ranks of the Whiteman's World.

In the days ahead, of heavy threats demanding heroic replies, our Whitefolk brothers and sisters of distant lands will look to us for leadership. The Whiteman of Australia must know that we are with him. The Whiteman of South Africa must know that his destiny is a part of our destiny.

Geography and space must be pushed aside and the Whiteman must be viewed as a living and breathing biological organism, ever-expanding by procreation.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONALISM

Out of the chaos and crisis of modern society emerges a dynamic, revolutionary idea with a positive approach towards the creation of a new national order. Against the subversive doctrines of the Left, we offer DEMOCRATIC NATIONALISM, with its unique, yet fundamental outlook on contemporary national and world affairs.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONALISM is an integral philosophy which embraces and revolutionizes in folk terms every aspect of American life. Its idea is a basic design for the organic preservation and the moral and material elevation of the Whitefolk of North America.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONALISM challenges our Whitefolk to fulfill a mission, to march forward in the opening of new frontiers. It encourages our Folk to work for a national moral reawakening in order to build a Whitefolk Community, bound together by a deep spiritual consciousness of a common past and a determination to share a common future.

The INSTITUTE FOR BIOPOLITICS is the practical instrument for the realization of the DEMOCRATIC NATIONALIST philosophy. The INSTITUTE FOR BIOPOLITICS does not propose to leave the vital interests of our Whitefolk to the whim of chance and the will of subversive elements in our midst. It proposes rather to mobilize our Folk in Revolutionary Unity for total biopolitical struggle.

FREEDOM FROM LIBERALISM

Delineation of the Nation

1. We demand the union of all Whitemen of the North American continent into a common Folk Community.
2. Only members of our Whitefolk may be citizens of the Nation.
3. No Communist or Liberal may be a citizen of the Nation, because of advocacy of the mongrelization of our Whitefolk.
4. No Humanist or Pacifist may be a citizen of the Nation, because of disloyalty to the Nation.

Folk Policy

5. The Government shall promote Whitefolk integrity through the complete and officially enforced segregation of all non-Whites in the Nation.
6. We demand that all intermarriage between citizens of the Nation and non-Whites in the Nation be outlawed.
7. We demand the creation of a National Repatriation Commission to bring about the emigration and resettlement of non-assimilable Whites and non-Whites through financial and economic assistance.
8. Immigration shall be restricted to select Whitefolk from lands of ethnic consanguinity.

Civil Rights Policy

9. All citizens of the Nation shall share equal duties and enjoy equal rights and privileges.
10. The right to vote on the Government and legislation of the Nation shall be the privilege of citizens of the Nation only.
11. Only citizens of the Nation may be candidates for public office, and be employed in departments and agencies of the national and local governments.
12. Only citizens of the Nation may engage in jurisprudence, and be eligible for court and jury duty.
13. Only citizens of the Nation may bear arms and serve as members of the armed forces of the Nation.
14. All persons engaged in activities of entertainment and educational and cultural expression must be citizens of the Nation.

Economic Policy

15. The workers, farmers, industrial and agricultural technicians, engineers, managers, and businessmen, as citizens of the Nation, shall work together as a team and be represented by their own members in the Government — they will subordinate their individual and group interests to the greater interests of their Whitefolk as a whole.
16. The Government shall secure private enterprise by guaranteeing equality of economic opportunity for all citizens of the Nation.
17. We demand a fair price for both producer and consumer, and the safeguarding of both against speculation and profiteering.
18. As science increases the power to produce, we demand that the purchasing power of the consumer be raised proportionately.
19. The Government shall alone exercise its constitutional right to issue debt- and interest-free currency, based on the national production of goods and renderance of services.

Social Policy

20. The Government shall secure the unending improvement of the health and living conditions of the citizens of the Nation.
21. We demand the total elimination of flood and dust-bowl conditions under a long-range program to conserve, utilize, and develop the water, soil, forest, mineral, and nuclear resources of our North American continent.
22. We demand the development of proper recreational facilities for the Whiteyouth of the Nation, beginning with the establishment of youth centers in every community.
23. We demand the complete reorganization of our educational system, so that every individual citizen of the Nation is afforded full opportunity for self-expression, self-realization, and thorough integration into the life of his Folk Community.

Foreign Policy

24. We demand that the sovereign interests of our Nation be secured by firm and sound bilateral diplomacy.
25. A strong and effective system of national defense shall be created to meet any international eventuality.
26. We demand the formal incorporation of Canada, Greenland, and the adjacent North Polar Regions into our Nation.

Political Policy

27. We demand a reorganization of all governmental departments to eliminate duplication, waste, and corruption, and to insure efficiency, economy, and sound administration.
28. We demand the elimination of all ideology and influences from every phase of our political and cultural life which tend to cause the degeneration of our Folk Community and the disintegration of our Nation.
29. To realize all the foregoing essentials, we demand the creation of a strong Government, armed by our Folk with the power to act in effecting its united will.

FREEDOM FROM PACIFISM

LUNCH-COUNTER DESEGREGATION IN CORPUS CHRISTI, GALVESTON, AND SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

by Kenneth Morland

Chairman of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology
Randolph-Macon Woman's College

SRC-15
May 10, 1960

Introduction

San Antonio was the first city in the South to receive publicity for the desegregation of its lunch counters on March 16, 1960, and announcements of Galveston's desegregation on April 5 followed. However, Corpus Christi had made some steps toward desegregation as early as 1950, and the Woolworth counter was desegregated in November, 1958. All of the remaining downtown Corpus Christi lunch counters were desegregated without any publicity on March 28, 1960.

The way in which desegregation came about in each of these cities was different. In Corpus Christi the early desegregations were the result of requests by Negroes for equal service and the granting of those requests by individual managers. The recent desegregation resulted from the objection of an NAACP leader to the refusal of Kress's to serve a Negro, and from the consequent agreement by the managers of four large downtown stores, after several conferences with the Negroes, to desegregate. In San Antonio religious leaders took the initiative in helping store managers and protesting Negroes to work out a solution. Only in Galveston were there overt demonstrations in the form of sit-ins, and a mediating group composed of prominent white businessmen and lawyers, as well as religious leaders, brought about an agreement between managers and Negroes.

Since the story of lunch-counter desegregation in each town is different, it is necessary to trace the development in each separately. Then, generalizations from these three case studies will be derived. But one result can be reported at this point: desegregation of lunch counters is working well in each city, and there is general community acceptance of the change.

Corpus Christi

Corpus Christi is a fast-growing city on the Gulf of Mexico in south Texas. In each ten-year period since 1920, the population has about doubled, and informed persons estimate that there are now about 175,000 residents, made up of 7% Negro, 33% Latin-American, and 60% Anglo. As a rapidly growing city, it has a comparatively large number of young people, a factor cited by some community leaders as a reason for the ready acceptance of change in lunch counter service. Public schools, including Del Mar Junior College, were integrated in 1955, and public recreational facilities, including golf and swimming, were integrated a year later. The local NAACP took the lead in asking for desegregation, but there was little opposition and even some encouragement by white civic leaders.

Steps in the Desegregation

The first lunch-counter desegregation came in 1950 in the H. E. Butt grocery stores, the largest of which have lunch counters. When a Negro customer was refused service, he asked to speak to the store manager, who referred him to the general manager, who suggested that he talk to the owner, Mr. Butt. The Negro was told by the owner that he could be served, and an order was issued to the store managers that all customers, including Negroes, were to be served at the counters in the same way. However, it was not until 1952, according to one report, that all store managers fully complied.

The next step in lunch-counter desegregation took place in the fall of 1958. Negro and white classmates from an integrated school stopped in Woolworth's, sat at the lunch counter, and requested service. When the Negro children were refused, the whites walked out with them. Later an adult Negro member of the NAACP called on the manager of the store to inquire of his policy toward serving Negroes. The manager replied that he was willing to have Negroes served seated at his counter, and since that time Negroes have eaten there without restriction. However, apparently not all Negroes knew about this privilege, for weeks later some were still standing to eat or were taking food out. A Negro dentist and former state NAACP president told the writer that he asked the Negroes who were standing why they did not sit down. When they reported that they did not know they were permitted to, the dentist went to see the manager who assured the Negroes that they could sit if they wished.

In a lengthy interview with the manager, the writer was told that managers of Woolworth stores were allowed to run their stores as they see fit. The manager said that he felt it silly and unfair to allow Negroes to purchase in other parts of the store and to treat them unequally at the lunch counter. So without consulting the managers of other stores or anyone else, he allowed Negro customers to be served. He was sure that desegregation was coming sooner or later and that his action helped Corpus Christi avoid the difficulties that have developed in other Southern cities. While he had received some "kicks" from other merchants and from a few white customers, he told them that he had to run his store according to his best judgment. He noticed no loss of business from whites or Latin-Americans because of the integration.

The final phase in the desegregation of lunch counters began March 15, 1960. The manager of Kress's had been allowing a Negro employee to eat at one end of his lunch counter, but when this employee invited a Negro friend to eat with him, the friend was refused service. The Negroes reported this to an NAACP leader who then telephoned the manager and arranged a time when they could discuss the matter. In the meantime the Kress manager called together the managers of other stores in which there were sizable lunch counters: Walgreen's, Grant's, and Lichtenstein's (a fashionable department store with a tea room on the fourth floor). After several conferences among the managers and talks with the NAACP leader, the managers agreed on March 25 to desegregate their lunch counters. They requested that no formal publicity be given to this decision but rather that Negroes be informed by way of the "grapevine." Several Negro ministers announced the decision in their churches, and word was passed from Negro to Negro.

Results

None of the managers reported any real difficulty with the desegregation. Negro customers have not been numerous, and have been generally polite. In casual conversation with several lunch-counter waitresses, white patrons, and taxi drivers, the writer found ready acceptance of desegregation. But it was evident that not all prominent white citizens of the city knew about the desegregation. For example, when asked by the writer, the pastor of one of the leading Protestant churches replied that he did not know whether any of the lunch counters were desegregated. This is clear evidence that the matter has been kept quiet.

Factors Contributing to Desegregation

The following factors appear to be important in the success of lunch-counter desegregation in Corpus Christi:

(1) The general attitude of the community has been permissive toward integration. While there has been no overt drive toward desegregation by white community leaders, only gentle prodding by the NAACP was required to induce the whites to grant equal treatment.

(2) White opposition, in the form of a White Citizen's Council, has been weak and led by low-status persons. When the Council objected during the Christmas season of 1956 to having one of the wise men in a public representation of the manger scene depicted as black, the objection was ridiculed by churchmen and civic leaders. When the Council demanded that the newly-built public swimming pool be restricted to white use, the Park and Recreation Board, after hearing the NAACP argue for its use by all, decided in favor of non-segregation.

(3) The fact that about one-third of the population is Latin-American made the integration of counters more readily accepted. Apparently most Latin-Americans do not have the prejudice against the Negro felt by many Anglos. And the Latin-American is more likely to have contact with the Negro, in residential areas and at lunch counters. In casual conversation with about ten or twelve Latin-Americans, the writer found no hint of non-acceptance of desegregation but rather a pride in its accomplishment. Also, since Latin-Americans have been integrated into most aspects of community life in Corpus Christi, the integration of Negroes was easier for the whites to take.

(4) Negro leadership has been effective. While not aggressively and overtly pushing for equality, it has, nevertheless, accomplished a great deal. The Negro dentist mentioned earlier has, for example, by working quietly and persistently, won the respect and confidence of white leaders. If desegregation is to be brought about in other areas of community life--restaurants, hotels, movies, the University of Corpus Christi (Southern Baptist)--it will require the same caliber of Negro leadership and initiative.

SAN ANTONIO

San Antonio is a city of half a million people, with a racial composition estimated by informed persons to be 9% Negro, 42% Latin-American, and 49% Anglo. An important part of the economy of the city is its military installations: Fort Sam Houston, headquarters for the Fourth Army; and the Air Force bases at Brooks, Kelly, Lackland, Medina, and Randolph fields. These installations are integrated, and San Antonio lunch counters have for some time served uniformed Negro soldiers and airmen, especially when accompanied by white military personnel. Public golf courses were desegregated in June, 1954, and all other public recreational facilities, including swimming pools, in March, 1956. Desegregation of public schools began in 1955 and by 1960 all grades were desegregated. The six colleges in the area, both municipal and private, have Anglo, Latin-American, and Negro students.

Steps in the Desegregation

When the sit-in demonstrations spread over the South during February, 1960, three independent developments began in San Antonio. (1) The executive director of the Council of Churches (an organization of 150 Protestant churches of all prominent denominations except the Southern Baptists) started talking with religious and civic leaders to see if any action could be taken to avoid overt demonstrations in the city. Public officials, including the mayor, felt that it would be best if they did not participate directly, and they urged that representatives of the various faiths take the lead. The executive director of the Council of Churches then brought together white representatives of the Catholic, Jewish, and Protestant churches, along with the executive director of the Community Welfare Council. They began to meet toward the end of February to discuss the problem. (2) The managers of downtown San Antonio stores with lunch counters met and agreed informally on a policy of not serving Negroes if they demanded service. (3) The NAACP opened discussions on what course of action it might take to bring about lunch-counter desegregation. On March 7, 1960, a 17-year-old college freshman, president of the San Antonio Youth Group of the NAACP, began sending letters to downtown stores requesting equal service for Negroes. On March 13, at a mass rally of 1,500 Negroes, the NAACP decided to mail a formal "ultimatum" to downtown stores requesting desegregation of lunch counters by Thursday, March 21.

This action brought the three separate movements together. The religious leaders, chaired by the head of the Council of Churches, arranged a meeting with the store managers for Tuesday, March 19, promising that any decision about lunch counters would be that of the merchants themselves and that no publicity would be given to the meeting. This proved to be an all-day session, and ended with an agreement among almost all of the managers that they would desegregate their lunch counters the next day, March 20. A turning point in the meeting came when the manager of a national chain store urged that the counters be desegregated. He declared that to solve a moral problem was, at the same time, to solve a business one, for, he said, strife disrupts business and creates ill will. He pointed out that business had fallen off from 45 to 60% in some of the stores in his chain where demonstrations had occurred. He further pointed out that it was silly for whites to complain of lunch-counter desegregation as too personal when in his store they tried on hats and girdles that Negroes had tried on before them.

The store managers secured three commitments from the mediating committee in regard to the proposed desegregation. The first was that responsible Negro leaders be informed about the new policy and requested to move slowly in taking advantage of the desegregation. The second was that the Negroes agree to take no action for 30 days against any store that was not ready to desegregate on March 20. The third was that the mediating committee do everything possible to convince white church members that desegregation was in the best interests of the entire community. (See letter attached--Attachment A.) The mediating committee immediately began carrying out these requests. The chairman called together four leading Negro citizens, all of whom were associated with the NAACP, to explain the new policy and to ask for suggestions toward implementation. These said that they would be glad to pass on to the Negro community the requests of the store managers that Negroes move slowly at first. At a mass meeting of the NAACP on Thursday, March 21, Negroes hailed the agreement and were urged by their leaders to be especially courteous and neat when they ate at the lunch counters.

Results

Managers of the stores reported no difficulty and no loss in sales following the desegregation. They received a few telephone calls complaining of the action, and a few persons closed their accounts. But they also received words of commendation from many white persons, and some Negro customers expressed their appreciation.

On the first day, reporters and cameramen were on hand. Cameras were hurriedly set up when two Negro men entered the Kress cafeteria. But the white patrons showed far more interest in the newsmen than in the two Negroes, and when one white woman asked about the excitement and was informed that there were Negroes in the cafeteria line, she remarked that she thought they had always been served in that cafeteria. Newspaper accounts of the first few days of desegregation reported that few Negroes sat at the lunch counters. The following two incidents, reported by members of the mediating committee, illustrate the attitude of some Negroes toward their use of the facilities. A Negro shoeshiner was asked if he had eaten at one of the desegregated counters yet. The reply was that he would eat there only when he could be properly dressed, not when he was in his work clothes with shoe polish on his hands. Five Negro youngsters standing outside Woolworth's debated whether they would really be served if they sat down. A member of the mediating committee who happened to be standing near assured them that they would. He suggested, however, that all five not sit together. Two of the youths then went in together, were served, and when they left the store the other three went in.

The Future

An interracial commission has been set up, with the executive director of the Community Welfare Council as its chairman. Its purpose is to consider quietly other types of desegregation. Managers of hotels, motels, and restaurants will be invited in to discuss with the committee the possibility of desegregating their facilities. Still one difficulty remains,however, in the completion of the desegregation of eating facilities in those stores where Negroes are invited to shop but are not allowed to sit to eat. Joske's, the only large, downtown store that asked for more time to consider desegregation, did announce the desegregation of its basement cafeteria facility at the end of the thirty-day period. However, the store refused to desegregate the more fashionable eating places on its first and second floors, arguing that its basement facility was more comparable to the lunch counters and cafeterias in the desegregated variety and drug stores. The Negroes are not happy about this arrangement and have talked in terms of sit-ins and boycotts at Joske's. However, the white members of the interracial committee are urging the Negroes not to resort to overt demonstrations for fear they might undo much of what has been accomplished. Apparently a great deal of pressure is being brought to bear on the moderate Negro members of the committee by the more aggressive Negroes. At the time of this writing it is not clear how this issue will be resolved.* But there is no question about the ultimate goal of the Negro

* Subsequently, picketing in Joske's was begun, and one fight has occurred. It is reported that the demonstration does not have the undivided support of the Negro community. At any rate, the demonstration is not regarded as a reversal of the progress made; in fact, several places not a party to the first agreement have since quietly desegregated.

leaders; it is to make San Antonio a completely "open" city.

Factors Contributing to Desegregation

The following factors were pointed out by San Antonians as being of importance in bringing about lunch-counter desegregation:

(1) The presence and success of integration in the large military bases, and in the public recreational facilities and schools, helped to show the city that desegregation could "work."

(2) The large Latin-American population, about 42% of the total, feels less prejudice toward the Negro than does the white. As one of the Negro leaders said to the writer, "You know, the Latin-Americans accept us more readily than do you whites." Furthermore, some of the Latin-Americans have dark skins, and whites have grown accustomed to seeing them eating at the counters. Politically, the Negroes hold the balance of power between the other two races, and some persons interviewed suggested that this was a factor in bringing about desegregation.

(3) Channels of communication between Negroes and whites have been developed through interracial membership of such civic committees as those for housing, libraries, and city planning. Through the past several years, the members of these committees have learned to understand and respect one another. It was from the membership of these committees that the Negro representatives were chosen to explain to other Negroes the proposed change of policy agreed to by the merchants.

(4) The vigorous leadership offered by white ministers helped in reassuring the managers and in explaining their point of view to the Negroes. For a number of years, forthright condemnation of enforced racial segregation had been made from Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish pulpits, thus defining segregation as a moral issue. It is difficult to see how the problem could have been worked out without the effective direction given by the mediating committee of ministers.

(5) The pressure of the NAACP precipitated the meeting which led to the desegregation agreement. Such pressure helped to crystallize the fear that had been felt because of the sit-ins and other demonstrations over the South. However, whites and Negroes interpreted the effect of the NAACP "ultimatum" differently. Some of the white persons involved claimed that it almost wrecked negotiations with the managers, while the Negro leaders were sure that desegregation would not have been agreed to by the managers unless they had been under such pressure.

(6) Favorable press coverage helped to show this conflict as a human rights struggle, and the press did not treat the situation in such a way as to arouse racial antagonisms. The meeting of the religious and business leaders was given no publicity so that those present would feel free to speak their minds.

GALVESTON

Galveston is located in southeastern Texas on the eastern end of an island thirty miles long and three miles wide in the Gulf of Mexico. Many of its inhabitants think of it as "different" from the rest of Texas because it is separated from the mainland. Its population in 1960 is estimated by the Chamber of Commerce to be 70,000, with a racial composition 33% Negro, 15% Latin-American, and 52% Anglo. One of its largest "industries" is the University of Texas Medical School, which is integrated. Public buses are desegregated, and, while most Negroes live separately from the Latin-Americans and Anglos, there is no rigid residential segregation. Some Negro families are scattered among non-Negro families. The public schools are segregated, although the school board had planned to begin integration at the first grade level in September, 1957. The plans were halted by a Texas law, which went into effect on August 22, 1957, requiring a local referendum before desegregation of schools. To integrate by order of a school board would result in a loss of all state funds for education and fines up to $1,000 for violators. Although the Galveston school board attorney believed the law unconstitutional, he suggested that the city not try to contest it by having state funds cut off.

Steps in Desegregation

On Friday, March 11, 1960, around noon, a group of 25 Negro students from Central High School began sit-in demonstrations at Woolworth's. The students had a holiday because of a teachers' convention. Their resolve to claim equal service had grown, according to the youngster who organized the demonstration, out of discussions in their American history class. They carried copies of the United States Constitution and chanted, "We'll take a seat and sit for a week." When the manager of the store turned off the lights and cooking burners and announced the counter closed, the students went to the counters at Walgreen's, which were promptly closed, and from there to McCrory's, and then to Kress's. The sit-ins continued on Saturday, and most of the next week after school hours. Police kept close watch over what was a fairly tense and threatening situation. The managers of the stores consulted informally among themselves and agreed to ignore the Negroes rather than close the counters.

During one of the demonstrations in his store, the Woolworth manager asked the students who their spokesman was, and a 16-year-old junior came forward. He assured the manager that the sit-ins were entirely the idea of the students and that no organization or adults were behind them. The manager then requested that the leader secure the help of responsible Negro adults who might talk the situation over with the managers of the stores. The Negro youth went to the wealthiest and most influential Negro in Galveston, a real estate dealer, who suggested that a white lawyer, who had chaired the school board committee recommending desegregation of public schools, be asked to explain to the managers what the Negroes wanted. The high school boy then called on the lawyer who, rather than talking with the managers by himself, decided to set up a mediating committee of influential whites.

This white mediating committee proved to be of crucial importance in working out a solution. It was composed of eleven persons: three lawyers; the owner of a radio and television station; a clothing merchant; the wife of a cotton broker; the owner of a furniture store; and four ministers, representing the Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish faiths. This committee met without publicity and agreed on two basic principles: (1) they would attempt to provide needed leadership in order to keep irresponsible forces from moving into the situation; and (2) no publicity would be given their attempt to mediate the conflict. The committee then asked the managers of the stores involved to meet with them.

After a lengthy conference, almost all of the managers agreed to desegregate their counters, provided certain conditions could be met: (1) responsible adult Negro leadership would have to be organized to communicate the new policy to the Negro community; (2) some assurance would be given that no further demonstrations would be held for at least a month, giving those stores that could not decide on desegregation immediately time enough to consider it; (3) a promise that Negro high school students would wait two weeks before using the counters, and that Negro adults would not overflow the counters; (4) extra police help would be available as the counters opened; (5) the ministers on the mediating committee would make a public statement supporting desegregation. A detailed statement of these conditions was later written and put into the hands of each manager, mediating committee member, and Negro committee member. (A copy of this statement is attached--Attachment B.)

The mediating committee then called the high school youth and the real estate dealer, requesting that a responsible Negro committee be set up. This was done within four hours and was composed of Negro businessmen, school teachers, labor leaders, doctors, dentists, and representatives from the Negro students. The white mediating committee met with the Negroes and conveyed the willingness of the managers to desegregate if they could be assured the conditions would be met. The Negroes readily agreed and promised to try to their utmost to persuade the entire Negro community to comply.

When the mediating committee relayed the Negro promise of cooperation to the managers, the final agreement to open the counters on Tuesday, April 5, was made. On the prior Sunday, Negro ministers urged their congregations to move slowly in their use of the counters, and on Monday, April 4, the full statement of agreement was announced over the public address system to the Negro students at Central High. Then, on April 5, the Galveston Tribune carried the headline, "City Lunch Counters Integrated," giving the city the first official news of the decision. Contained in the newspaper account was the following statement, agreed upon by the mediating committee and the managers:

After conferences held between Galveston store managers and Galveston leaders of all religious faiths, and civic and business leaders of the community, the managers of practically all the Galveston stores having lunch counters have decided that it is in the best interest of the entire community to open their lunch counters to all of their patrons. This decision has already been put into effect.

Religious leaders of Galveston have joined in commending all persons and interests involved for the example they have set by solving their mutual problem quietly and moderately in the spirit of good citizenship. The store proprietors in turn have expressed their appreciation to those who provided the mediation that led to this amicable solution.

The next day the following statement appeared in the Galveston News, written by Mr. T. D. Armstrong, Negro real estate dealer and adult leader of the Negro group:

The Negro citizens of Galveston are thankful that this community problem has been solved in a quiet and moderate spirit of good citizenship, functioning on the community level as suggested by President Eisenhower.

We are especially grateful to the mediation which led to the solution being provided by white civic and religious leaders on their own initiative. We intend to see that our conduct in using this new privilege will prove us worthy of our responsibility as good citizens in a city of good will.

Results

Both the Negro adults and students complied fully with the conditions set down by the merchants. Few Negroes sat at the counters during the opening days of desegregation, and when they did, not more than two of them sat together. The Negro high school students scrupulously avoided the counters during the first two weeks, and they did not demonstrate against stores that did not desegregate. Some of the store managers received complaints from white customers because of the desegregation, and four accounts were closed in one drug store and two in another. However, in one case, the husband phoned in the closing of the account and the wife came to the store the next day and reopened, apologizing for the hasty decision of her husband. None of the merchants felt that they had lost trade during the first weeks of desegregation. At one drug store, which has 40 lunch-counter seats, the manager compared the total sales for April 1-19, 1959 with those for the same period in 1960. He found that his lunch-counter sales were about the same, while the sales in the rest of his store were several hundred dollars higher in 1960.

Most of the people with whom the writer talked at lunch counters, in taxi cabs, on buses, and on the street, accepted the desegregation readily. Typical of remarks of approval were: "If Negroes purchase in one part of the store, it is only fair that they should be able to purchase in all parts." "I'd rather sit by a clean colored person than next to an unbathed white." "It wasn't right for the Negro to have no decent places to eat downtown." "God made us all, and it isn't right for some to try to act like they're better than others." "We have a good spirit in this town." Other statements of reluctant approval were: "It had to come, and there wasn't much we could do about it--but I hope we don't get to intermarriage." "The Negroes just wanted to prove they could do it." "Now that they can eat at the counters, they don't bother to do so." "They don't bother me, for I never sit near them." None of those talked to casually knew very much of how the desegregation was brought about. They remarked that they knew some influential committee was at work on the problem, but they did not know who composed the committee or how things were working out. One who disapproved said that the whites must have given in to the Negroes, and he did not know where it would all end. The head of the chamber of commerce received a long distance call or two from out-of-town persons who said they would not vacation in Galveston again. He also received a call from Governor Collins of Florida who wanted to find out how Galveston managed to desegregate its facilities so quietly and successfully.

The ministers of all faiths and races have set up an informal group which a steering committee can call together at any time. There is no question but what there will be efforts by Negroes to desegregate other facilities. Negro leaders feel now that there are channels through which they may make appeals, rather than having to resort to overt demonstrations.

Factors Contributing to Desegregation

(1) As was true of the other two cities, background factors were important to the success of the desegregation. The school board was ready to begin a program of school integration, with apparently no strong objection from the community. The presence of the integrated University of Texas Medical School and of integrated Latin-Americans provided a favorable atmosphere for the desegregation.

(2) Influential white leadership arose and took charge of the situation. These were persons of good will who worked quietly and with genuine modesty to effect a solution. Because of their positions in the community, they could speak with assurance to both the merchants and the Negroes and thus were excellent mediators. Furthermore, they gave vigorous and unequivocal support to the decision once it was made. Special credit for the success of the mediating committee goes to the lawyer who called the group together and to the minister who chaired the sessions.

(3) The store managers acted in a restrained manner. They did not order the demonstrating Negroes out of the store or have them arrested, and they were willing, furthermore, to learn their point of view. One manager took the lead in asking the Negro students to arrange to have adult Negroes represent them. Another manager, born and reared in East Texas, stated at a crucial point in the meeting of managers and mediating committee that he would be willing to desegregate his lunch counters if the others would. His decision helped to sway his fellow managers, for he had lived in Galveston longer than any, and they felt he knew the local situation well. His statement is credited by mediating committee members as turning the tide. Of course, the managers feared that continued demonstrations would disrupt trade, and they wanted to avoid them. But they also spoke of wanting to be fair to their Negro customers. The managers had foresight enough to allow time before the decision to desegregate went into effect to talk to their employees. Some waitresses objected, but the managers were able to reason with them. No employee resigned when the new policy was announced.

(4) Negro leadership was highly effective in making sure the terms of the agreement were carried out. Church services, lodge meetings, school sessions, and informal gatherings were used to urge Negroes to be careful in taking advantage of lunch-counter desegregation. All of the white persons involved in the negotiations stated emphatically that the responsible, circumspect behavior of the Negroes was a big factor in the success of desegregation.

(5) The clear support of the white ministers on the mediation committee stressed the religious and moral aspect of the issue. The cooperation among the three faiths was itself evidence of good will and a reflection of unity.

(6) Favorable reports on the results of the desegregation of lunch counters in San Antonio reassured the merchants. By chance, the regional director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith had just arrived in Galveston after spending several days in San Antonio. He was consulted by the committee and was able to point out that things were working well in that city and that none of the stores with desegregated counters had encountered difficulty.

(7) Publicity was kept to a minimum. During the time of the mediation, few persons in the community knew what was going on. Those present in the meetings felt free to speak frankly without fear of being quoted. None of those in leadership positions attempted to gain anything personally from the situation. They repeatedly stressed to all concerned that it was a community problem that required a community solution.

(8) Prompt police action prevented any possible disorder. The police did not allow any crowds to gather in the stores nor on the sidewalks.

GENERAL SUMMARY

(1) It can be seen that each of the three cities followed a different pattern in desegregating lunch counters, and it would seem likely that each community of the South, depending on its size, racial composition, and traditions, may proceed somewhat differently. In other words, no single approach can be used. However, of the three cases studied, Galveston, with 33% Negro, is the most like other Southern cities.

(2) When the chips were down, influential white citizens in each city took a firm stand for desegregation. In Galveston, this was done through direct participation in the mediation by lawyers, ministers, and businessmen. In San Antonio, only the religious leaders involved themselves directly, but they had the tacit support of other influential persons. In Corpus Christi, the managers themselves agreed to desegregation without a mediating group, but they felt sure that white community leaders supported them. It is to be noted that public officials stayed out of the negotiations. When approached by other white leaders, the officials felt that mediation should be established on a less formal basis.

(3) Religious leaders were important to the success of desegregation in Galveston and San Antonio. In both instances the managers asked for and received public support from these leaders, and their support gave strong reassurance to the managers.

(4) Those managers who took the lead in deciding for desegregation put the decision on a moral basis, in line with American values. In each of the three cities, one of the managers, at a crucial point in the negotiations, stated the solution in terms of democratic ideals and expressed his willingness to desegregate. Of course, the economic factor was also involved in the decisions, for the managers reasoned that the alternative to desegregation would be worse for their business than desegregation. Examples of what had happened to businesses in other cities helped to convince them that they should desegregate.

(5) Negroes in each of the cities revealed a willingness, even an eagerness, to comply with the terms requested by the managers. In Galveston, the high school students who started the sit-ins gladly waited two weeks to show good faith, and in San Antonio and Galveston the Negroes readily agreed to a moratorium on acting against those lunch counters that did not feel that they could desegregate at the time of the decision. And, for the most part, Negro patrons of the lunch counters have been almost overly careful to avoid offending whites. In all three cities the Negroes acted with a strong sense of responsibility in making sure the desegregation was successful.

(6) In each case publicity was kept to a minimum. Everything said during the meetings was held in confidence, no member of the press was present, and reports to the press were cleared with the group. Even after the decision to desegregate was put into effect, the leaders were careful to limit the type of publicity permitted. In both Galveston and San Antonio, reporters and photographers from nationally circulated magazines wanted stories and pictures of the individuals involved in the mediation. But the leaders pleaded with the representatives from the magazines not to give the decision this sort of publicity, for they believed it could do a great deal of harm to focus the glare of publicity on something that was working well. They stressed to the reporters that this was a cooperative, community decision, rather than the work of individuals. The magazines complied. For example, in the April 18, 1960, edition of Life, the only publicity given to the Galveston desegregation was a picture of four religious leaders, representing both races and the three faiths, with a "Welcome to Galveston" sign in the background. Those depicted are referred to as "catalysts in the quiet negotiations."

(7) It was freely admitted by the white leaders that without some direct pressure by Negroes, desegregation would have been highly unlikely. The Negroes were even surer of this. The type of pressure varied from requests over the telephone, to mass rallies demanding action, to actual sit-in demonstrations. No steps toward desegregation were taken until Negroes in each of the cities asked for it. In Galveston, one of the managers said that if he and the other managers had attempted desegregation on their own, without the crisis caused by the sit-ins, the white community would have been up in arms. But once the sit-ins started, desegregation became a defensible solution.

(8) The success of the desegregation, in terms of the smoothness and calmness with which it was generally accepted, surprised most of those involved. The managers said that they had expected far more trouble, and far more resentment by white patrons. However, as one manager expressed it, "Most of our fears were creations of our own minds." Regardless of how whites felt about lunch-counter desegregation before such desegregation took place, many of them expressed pride in the accomplishment, once it was done.

SPECIAL REPORT

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL
63 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Date of request: 3-18-69

Call-No.

INTERLIBRARY LOAN
WESTERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
MACOMB, ILLINOIS 61455

A REQUEST

For use of L. R. Murphy Status Fac. Dept. History

Author (or periodical title, vol. and year)
Morland, John Kenneth

Title (with author & pages for periodical articles) (Incl. edition, place & date) ☐ This edition only
Lunch-counter desegregation in Corpus Christi, Galveston, and San Antonio, Texas (Atlanta, Georgia Southern Retional Council) May, 1960

Verified in (or source of reference) n.v.

If non-circulating, please supply ☐ Microfilm ☐ Hard copy if cost does not exceed $

Interlibrary Loan
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street N.W.
Atlanta 3
Georgia

Note: The receiving library assumes responsibility for notification of non-receipt.

AUTHORIZED BY: JANICE THOMPSON (FULL NAME)
Title Interlibrary Loans

INTERLIBRARY LOAN REQUEST

According to the A.L.A. Interlibrary Loan Code

REPORTS: Checked by

SENT BY: ☐ Library rate ☐

Charges $ Insured for $

Date sent

DUE

RESTRICTIONS: ☐ For use in library only

☐ Copying not permitted ☐

NOT SENT BECAUSE: ☐ In use

☐ Non circulating ☐ Not owned

Estimated Cost of: Microfilm

Hard copy

BORROWING LIBRARY RECORD:

Date received

Date returned

By ☐ Library rate ☐

Postage enclosed $ Insured for $

RENEWALS: (Request and report on sheet C)

Requested on

Renewed to (or period of renewal)

sent 3-26-69
copy in research
B.J. found

Office Memorandum

Western Illinois University

TO: Southern Regional Council

FROM: R. Dilley, Interlibrary Loan Librarian

SUBJECT: Attached Interlibrary Loan

DATE: June 6, 1972

I have searched every conceivable location here, but have failed to find this pamphlet. The interlibrary loan records do not go back to this date so I know of no way to trace the material, or even to check to see if it was returned.

Dr. Murphy is no longer here, so I cannot check with him.

Rick Dilley

McCarthyism under the Magnolias

by WILMA DYKEMAN & JAMES STOKELY

"AT A TIME when the South might well use a renewed vision of Robert E. Lee's virtue or Andy Jackson's vigor," a young Southern liberal said recently, "it seems a shame that we should choose to start reviving the spirit of Joe McCarthy."

An embattled social scientist in Atlanta summed up the situation during a conversation: "One trouble outsiders have in understanding our present difficulties is the culture-lag in the South. McCarthy never caught on down here back in his heyday, but as the last-ditch fight for segregation grows more desperate, all his ugly techniques are revived. At the end of the decade we're in the throes of an experience the rest of the country put behind it in the early Fifties."

One recent example came, perhaps with some appropriateness, in the legislative halls of the nation's capital. When Representative Dale Alford, newly elected Congressman from Arkansas, presented his maiden speech in the House in February, the proposed subject of his discourse was only slightly less sensational than the whirlwind eight-day paste-in campaign which had won him victory over veteran Representative Brooks Hays in last November's election.

Voicing alarm "at the complacency of some officials toward the menace of the Communist conspiracy . . . to make this great nation of ours part of a one-world government, operated from Moscow," Representative Alford then announced he would reveal the close alliance between Communism and "racial agitation" in the South.

The speech was founded largely on intricate webs of association and denunciations of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the bi-racial Southern Regional Council, "renegade journalist" Harry Ashmore, "the Warren-Myrdal Supreme Court," and several less prominent individuals and groups. Its "revelations" were often without relevance.

Perhaps the whole performance of equating a controversial issue with Communism and then identifying as fellow travelers those people interested in confronting the issue seems anachronistic to Americans outside the South, where McCarthyism is only a bitter memory. But to many people in the South it is a significant thermometer reflecting the epidemic already in their midst, and a barometer suggesting the proportions of attacks yet to come.

As McCarthyism moves South under the magnolias, most of those against whom the search for subversives appears to be directed are not political Communists as much as racial non-conformists, people who seek a reasonable way of abiding by the Supreme Court ruling on desegregation of the public schools, while those who would subvert the law by defiance and maneuver designate themeselves the super-patriots and inquisitors. By their words the investigators are seeking out Southerners "soft on Communism;" by their acts they are singling out Southerners "soft on segregation."

Of course, the very fact that they feel this necessary indicates the absence of a monolithic South, and reveals that there are many Southerners who abhor the present dilemma and are willing to work for a solution. But the nature of this crisis, with its pull from the past and its emotional undertow, makes it especially susceptible to McCarthyism. In a time of tremendous change at the regional level (involving integration), and deep apprehension at the national level (involving Communism), where these regional racial tensions coincide with our national survival fears, there is created a no-man's land of uncertainty and suspicion. In such an atmosphere, threats and innuendo serve well to intimidate and immobilize creative thought and action on controversial problems.

In October, 1954, Circuit Court Judge Tom P. Brady of Mississippi made an address to the Indianola Citizens' Council. The judge gave a lengthy historical picture of the rise of the vertebrates, the various migrations, nations, and wars of mankind, and such "facts" of eugenics and biology as that "the Negro's brain pan seals and hardens quicker than the white man's." Seeking to explain how the Supreme Court had overlooked all this history and biology in its recent decisions, he cited the influence of the NAACP and the 87 "Communist-front organizations" behind it.

A year later the attempt to identify black leadership and the red cause received added impetus from Attorney General Eugene Cook of Georgia. In a talk entitled "The Ugly Truth about the NAACP," which was given saturation distribution as a printed pamphlet throughout the South, Cook sought to prove that through affiliations of some of its officers with other organizations, some of which were listed in the files of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and because the Communist Party had an identical stated aim of "full racial equality," the NAACP had "allowed itself to become part and parcel of the Communist conspiracy to overthrow the democratic governments of this nation and its sovereign states."

He closed with a warning which was both the most explicit and implicit of any as to what "do-gooder" community leaders might expect if they continued to participate in interracial groups. "Investigations currently are being made . . . the results of which will greatly embarrass those good citizens who unwittingly have become involved in their activities. I urge all such persons to take immediate steps to disassociate themselves from these groups . . . before they, their friends, and their congregations are exposed to the anguish and embarrassment which exposure of these groups will necessarily mean."

WILMA DYKEMAN and JAMES STOKELY, native Southerners, are a husband-and-wife writing team whose recent book on the South, "Neither Black Nor White," won the 1958 Hillman Award and has now been issued in a paperback edition.

Such speeches, widely disseminated throughout the South by the segregationist Citizens' Councils, were only the prelude. In March, 1957, a special Louisiana state legislative committee (sometimes called the "watchdog" committee on segregation) held a three-day hearing in Baton Rouge to find "the causes of racial unrest in the South." As the testimony unfolded, however, it seemed that these causes had already been determined. The committee, headed by state Senator William Rainach, did not appear to seek from its six "cooperative" witnesses information as much as confirmation.

The Rainach Committee hearing marked the first appearance on the Southern scene of some of the old pros of the investigative road shows, refurbished now to play the Southern circuit. Manning Johnson, a Negro from New York and self-confessed former Communist, was the star. In 1954 Johnson was the principal denouncer in the loyalty investigation of United Nations Undersecretary Ralph J. Bunche. His accusations were discredited. He himself testified before the Subversive Activities Control Board that he believed "some things are more important than the truth," and in 1956 the Board expunged from the record of certain of its hearings what it called "tainted" testimony given by Harvey Matusow, the late Paul Crouch, and Manning Johnson.

Yet Johnson, who was reported to have earned up to $9,096 over a two-year period as a professional former Communist witness, appeared in Louisiana to castigate Judge William Hastie, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt ("somebody should muzzle her and put her in a cage"), Martin Luther King, Jr. ("I think Reverend King could stand a thorough investigation"), the respected Southern Regional Council, and the Mississippi Council on Human Relations.

It was in testimony concerning these two organizations that Johnson's and the committee's irresponsibility became most evident. Having falsely asserted that the Southern Regional Council was founded by a Communist, Johnson compounded falsehood with guilt-by-association and reached from Louisiana over into Mississippi to discuss the Mississippi Council on Human Relations. He had no startling "revelations" about this state group but did take time to read into the record the names and addresses of the officers of the biracial organization.

The reason for publicizing these names and addresses was not made clear, but results came promptly. One board member named, along with the Catholic Bishop of Mississippi and other eminent clergymen, was the wife of a well-known Greenwood, Mississippi, cotton dealer. Six days after Johnson's testimony the dining room of their home was ripped by a bullet blast. A reporter later concluded, "It was not intended to kill but just to frighten."

These public proceedings did not nail down any specific Communist individual or group against which Louisiana and the federal government could move to lessen racial difficulties in the South. Assessments of guilt were conveniently general, emphasizing "racial nationalism," NAACP "dictation" to the Supreme Court and the President, and destruction of individual liberty by the "Communist timetable of world conquest."

Several subsequent investigations have arrived at similar conclusions. Hard on the heels of the disastrous developments in Little Rock, in October, 1957, the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, headed by Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi, moved into Memphis to study "Communism in the Mid-South." At the end of the two-day hearing, with 14 witnesses, seven had invoked the Fifth Amendment and one, a Little Rock housewife who had made news earlier that autumn by comforting one of the Negro girls in the school crisis, had been accused of affiliation with the Communist Party in 1945. The statement of conclusions, however, was still general: "Communist activity in the Mid-South is highly conspiratorial, deeply cloaked in secrecy." Without specific elaboration these deductions left room for intimidation, without risk of libel, when they asserted that the targets of the Red network were churches, parent-teacher associations, colleges, high schools, and labor organizations.

Three months later, in February, 1958, an investigation of racial agitation in Florida was undertaken by a joint legislative committee in Tallahassee. Senator C. E. Johnson, sponsor of segregation bills at two previous legislative sessions, was chairman. The star witness on this occasion was J. B. Matthews.

Billed as a one-time investigator for the late Senator McCarthy's Committee, it was not pointed out that Matthews had lasted as staff director for McCarthy less than a month. Although he asserted flatly that "Communists or Communist influence were directly involved in every major race incident of the past four years since the Supreme Court 'legislated' on the subject of integration," reports were forced to state that Matthews' further testimony was "general in nature."

The Tampa Tribune suggested that the committee's sessions had been "largely devoted to old charges and an intense study of the obvious." It stated that the committee's treatment of the treasurer of the Tallahassee Council on Human Relations "was repugnant to the American concept of fair play," and voiced the hope that in the future the committee might "have evidence which is current, and which is related to Communism."

The Human Relations Council treasurer to whom the paper referred was a respected furniture dealer, James Shaw. The episode involving him highlighted the most unsavory feature of such investigations and one frequently forgotten by many citizens. Equated in the public mind with a trial, these hearings are not bound by the rules of actual courts of law, and their arbitrary development of one point of view may make a mockery of justice.

Shaw was subpoenaed to present the financial records of the Tallahassee Human Relations Council to the committee. When he did so, he was refused the right to make a statement, although one member of the committee wished to hear him. Shaw later told the press: "I wanted to say that I presented the records under protest because I feel that being subpoenaed to bring them here created implications and insinuations about me and my organization. They could have called any officer of the organization and we would have been glad to turn over the records to them. Anyone could have attended any one of our meetings and realized there was nothing to investigate."

His summary of the council's aims and methods must seem modest enough to anyone removed from the total resistance atmosphere of much of the South today: "This organization is not secret. Most of our meetings have been held at the courthouse. One of the purposes of it is to create a line of communication between Negroes and whites. We have not done very much but we have tried to ease the tensions that have been created by statewide political campaigns."

The increasing all-out effort to discredit just these individuals and groups working to "create a line of communication" and "ease the tensions" became even more evident during a recent investigation conducted in Arkansas. Attorney General Bruce Bennett, who examined witnesses for the state committee, said the hearing would serve "as an educational program more than anything else," and added, "most of our case will be tried at the bar of public opinion." He indicated that those called to testify would be friendly to the committee's purpose, which indeed proved to be true.

Manning Johnson and J. B. Matthews were the principals among these witnesses. Johnson repeated his summary of Communist history and strategy and restated his antagonism to the NAACP which he had voiced at the Rainach Committee hearing in Louisiana. Matthews went even farther than he had during his appearance before the Florida committee. He named as Communists four former residents of Arkansas, two of whom had left the state years before, two of whom had been in Little Rock until recently. The rest of his testimony was largely an effort to link together those groups interested in integration and smear them and their members with one sweeping assertion of witting or unwitting aid to Communism.

This was the same Matthews who wrote back in 1953: "The largest single group supporting the Communist apparatus in the United States today is composed of Protestant clergymen." Virginia's Senator Harry F. Byrd promptly declared that Matthews "should give names and facts to sustain his charge or stand convicted as a cheap demagogue willing to blacken the character of his fellow Americans for his own notoriety and personal gain." Following a statement by President Eisenhower, Matthews resigned as staff director of the McCarthy Committee. It is not a history designed to inspire confidence in later accusations of Communist infiltration. Nevertheless, the committee proceeded with its televised probe featuring the testimony of these two men.

Since the hearings in Arkansas in December and Representative Alford's February speech to the House, Attorney General Bennett has branched out in his activities. In March he helped instigate and guide a legislative probe in the adjoining state of Tennesseee.

This exploration concerned the Highlander Folk School, founded and directed by Myles Horton, a native Tennessean. This school has been controversial since its establishment in 1934 by the very nature of its interests: labor organization and, more recently, racial integration. Endorsed by such national figures as Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Reinhold Niebuhr, Monsignor John O'Grady, Harry Golden, and former TVA Chairman Gordon Clapp, the school had come under close federal scrutiny when its tax-exempt status was restored over a year ago. But federal clearance did not satisfy Arkansas' Bennett, who flew to Nashville to testify that in his opinion the school is subversive. "Run 'em out! Run 'em out!" he advised the committee members, referring to leaders of the school.

Many Tennesseans resented his advice, recalling a thought-control bill he had introduced in his own state's legislature, making it unlawful "to encourage nonconformance with the established traditions, customs, and usage of the state."

The Chattanooga Times commented: "We are neither patrons nor partisans of Highlander Folk School . . . . But unpopularity is not a sufficient reason for official harassment or intimidation. When one man's right to argue an unpopular course is assailed, another's right to advocate the opposite is threatened." Fourteen University of the South professors, who live only five miles from Highlander, in nearby Sewanee, came out in a public statement supporting the school and its "democratic ideals." The Nashville Tennessean battled against what it called a "witch hunt," warning that Tennessee did not need or deserve "the distinction of reviving McCarthyism."

Interspersed with the activities of these various official committees have been numerous other investigations, legislative proposals, printed and verbal attacks designed to obscure the black and white problem with the red menace. The NAACP has been under constant fire but other groups gaining increased attention include labor organizations, teachers, the clergy, and interracial councils. (It may be significant for the future that Manning Johnson, one of the favorite "friendly witnesses" of these hearings, wrote an article denouncing the NAACP in a recent issue of the violently anti-Semitic Common Sense.)

"The NAACP? Oh, you mean the National Association for the Advancement of the Communist Party." At filling stations and small-town stores in many parts of the South there is ready evidence of the easy acceptance of a scapegoat.

Yet J. Edgar Hoover, in his recent Masters of Deceit, a source widely quoted throughout the South on other aspects of Communism, and even praised by Representative Alford in that very speech he made to show red influences in the NAACP, came to the conclusion that NAACP leaders have consistently thwarted the Communist Party's "vigorous efforts" at infiltration. In 1953 Hoover stated: "The American Negro is not hoodwinked by these false messiahs."

Early in 1957 a bill was introduced in the Tennessee legislature providing that a teacher may be fired "if while within the buildings, he shall make pronouncements or engage in or promote discussions for the purpose of influencing students or other persons with reference to the problem of the integration of the races." This particular measure to gag the teachers died, but the spirit behind it did not.

Last year, when 63 Louisiana State University professors signed a Louisiana Civil Liberties Union petition opposing segregation bills which would permit closing of public schools, a legislative inquiry of the professors was launched. Members of the House were reported to feel that "Communism and integration walk hand in hand," and anyone, particularly university faculty members, who opposes legislation aimed at keeping Louisiana schools racially pure "must have subversive tendencies."

In December, 1958, University of Arkansas President J. T. Caldwell felt it necessary to "repudiate unequivocally the imputation that the University of Arkansas has been penetrated by Communists and express the fullest confidence in the members of our faculty." And when the Arkansas Education Association, a statewide organization of white teachers and school administrators, stated as policy a few months ago, "We can never compromise our conviction that the public school system is not expendable," the 21-member Legislative Council was so outraged that it suggested the Education Association members were innocent victims of subversive influence—and ordered an investigation by the Committee on Subversion in Education.

The National Council of Churches has borne much of the brunt of the smear attack on churchmen. One South Carolina editor has said the NCC "will shower respect on anarchists, Communists, and atheists but deny respect to Southerners whose only crime is that they believe in traditional American states rights."

One of the most consistently attacked organizations in the South recently has been the dignified and reasonable Southern Regional Council. This is understandable because it works by, with, and for Southerners of both races in a discussion and research effort to undergird integration with solid fact and lasting effectiveness. Its voice is calm, its work is constructive, and its effect is cumulative. Unfortunately, much of its energy lately has been diverted in stamping out the leaf fires sparked by irresponsible incendiarists.

The SRC, under its knowledgeable young director, Harold Fleming, is filling a unique need in the region. Pitted against it is the testimony of —again—the ex-Communist, Manning Johnson, whose appearances before the Louisiana Rainach Committee provided the source for the subsequent attacks against SRC. A month after this hearing, in April, 1957, The Firing Line, published by the American Legion's National Americanism Commission, reported that Johnson's testimony "reflected the Council was formed by James E. Jackson, a Southern organizer of the Communist Party." The source of Johnson's information, in turn, was a boast in The Daily Worker on the many accomplishments of the said Jackson. But even the Worker's fantasy had not reached as far as Johnson's, for it claimed only that Jackson had "participated in the formation and building of the Southern Regional Council."

It is, of course, a matter of public record that the Southern Regional Council was founded in 1944; its distinguished incorporators were Bishop Arthur J. Moore of the Methodist Church, Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University, the late Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University, and the late Dr. Howard W. Odum, professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina.

The SRC was the successor to the Commission on Interracial Cooperation which had been founded in 1919 by leading churchmen. Even so conservative and segregationist a newspaper as the Richmond Times-Dispatch felt moved in August of last year to clarify the issues in relation to the SRC: "As to the allegation of the Communist Daily Worker that James E. Jackson, chief of the Southern branch of the U.S. Communist Party, was a 'co-founder of the Southern Regional Council,' there is nothing to support this . . . he was not at any time an officer, director, or member of that agency. The Daily Worker's statement that he was a 'founder' is as unreliable and inaccurate as nearly everything else in that Communist sheet."

In May, 1957, The Firing Line made another allegation which was to be widely circulated in segregation circles and at last repeated by Representative Alford in his recent speech. "Records of the American Legion reveal a definite trend of interrelationship between the SRC and the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, a defunct Communist front organization."

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare is no longer in existence, but it once included in its "interrelationships" many prominent Southerners besides some who were later to be in the SRC. In 1938, at the Southern Conference meeting in Birmingham, Alabama, among those who were part of the proceedings were Governor-elect Burnett Maybank of South Carolina, Alabama's Senator John H. Bankhead, Bishop Robert Lucey of Texas, Governor Bibb Graves of Alabama, and others of equal prominence and reputation. In 1945 the Conference staged a dinner in Washington, D. C., honoring Justice Hugo Black. The toastmaster on this occasion was then Senator, later Vice-President Alben W. Barkley. At the speaker's table was the Honorable James F. Byrnes. Among the sponsors of the dinner were Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, Secretary of Defense James Forrestal, and President Harry S. Truman. Surely guilt by association cannot include all these men.

SRC Director Fleming said not long ago: "The tragedy is that these self-appointed experts on 'subversion' show no understanding whatever of the real Communist movements. It thrives on white supremacy and noisy defiance of desegregation rulings. The Communists wouldn't trade one Governor Faubus for 10,000 new recruits to the Party. By contrast, there are no more effective anti-Communists than those Southerners who are working for orderly compliance with the law of the land. Ironically, these are the very people whom the segregationist vigilantes falsely label 'reds' and 'subversives.' "

Eleven prominent Southern church officials said in a statement in early April: "The time has come for the public to be made aware of the resurgence of McCarthyism in the South. If there is in fact a Communist threat, then Dr. Alford and others like him have a responsibility to report their knowledge to the FBI; if not, they have a duty to check their facts. Otherwise, they themselves are doing the real service to Communism, which battens on confusion, false charges, and the blind defense of racial injustices in our country."

Where inequities exist in our country, it is, indeed, not the Communist Manifesto but the American Constitution that fosters unrest and makes citizens work for change. The McCarthy cry of "Communist" in a time of transition is appealing for two reasons: it is simple and it is emotional. It reduces a complex situation, with many ramifications and subtleties and need for sober logic, to one single outside cause, and stirs a rope-and-fagot reflex.

Most citizens, along with the U.S. Senate, finally came to their senses about the sickness of McCarthyism. Slowly, as Southerners themselves work to replace emotional resistance and bigotry with reason and respect for the law of the land, McCarthyism can be uprooted under the magnolias.

Reprinted from

The PROGRESSIVE

July 1959

For additional copies write to

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia

Single copy, 5¢

Quantity prices on request

Ga. Politics

Vol. 3, No. 3

HEADLINES and PICTURES

September, 1946

A MONTHLY NEGRO NEWS MAGAZINE

THE MERRY-GO-ROUND

ON THE EVE OF VIOLENCE

By EARL BROWN

The colored people of Georgia have a new kind of religion—voting. This is the only word that can describe their fervid interest in the state primary last July. Three months before, fewer than 15,000 Negroes were registered in the entire state, but a week before election day more than 200,000 of them had registered and were ready to vote. After the registration officials (Talmadge henchmen) had used every trick known to man to purge a great majority of the Negroes from the voters' lists and after many of them had been threatened with death and other dire consequences if they voted, more than 100,000 of them enthusiastically cast their ballots on vote day.

Voters Line Up in Atlanta According To Color

One hundred thousand are a huge number of votes in Georgia. In fact, they were about one-third of the total vote cast in any election in the state until the last one and one-seventh of the total vote cast in it. The abolition of the white primary and the state poll tax and the lowering of the voting age to 18 caused the vote in Georgia to more than double. Paradoxically, Georgia now has the most liberal suffrage laws of any state in the union.

All of the colored voters plumped against Governor-elect Eugene (Red Gallus) Talmadge. If they hadn't, he would have won by a landslide of popular votes instead of losing by 9,000. Only the undemocratic, machine-rigged unit vote system saved him from defeat by a solid batch of Negro votes.

The political upsurge of Negro citizens in Georgia did not just happen. With boundless enthusiasm but with an equal amount of sagacity they planned their first participation in the erstwhile Georgia white primary with as much intelligence as any big city boss ever plotted an election. Indeed, people nowhere ever mapped their political action more successfully or demonstrated more determination and courage to vote than the colored citizens of Georgia in the recent primary. Moreover, it takes courage for any Negro to vote in that state.

The most laudable thing about the Negroes voting in Georgia, was the fact that the masses of them were as anxious and resolved to vote as their leaders were to have them to. A few weeks before the election 300 colored farmers, field hands and other workers were summoned to appear before the board of registry at the courthouse in a backwoods Georgia county to state why their names should not be removed from the voters' list. All 300 of them showed up at the courthouse together as soon as it was opened on the day set for the "purge." Befuddled, the board decided to hear only 12 cases and to order the others to return the next day. In case they did not return, the board had planned to strike their names from the list "without benefit of trial". Next day, however, the other 288 were waiting at the courthouse when the board members arrived. They were heard; and only a few of them were "purged."

Negro leaders in Atlanta, and elsewhere in the state organized what amounted to an underground, state-wide movement to get the colored people to register and vote. They kept their activities as quiet as possible in order to keep reprisals against them at a minimum and not to injure the chances of the candidates they were supporting. They formed the Atlanta Democratic Club in that city, and they organized the Georgia Association of Democratic Clubs throughout the state. They put up their own money, searched the census tracts in Atlanta, and other cities to find out where Negroes lived, then sent workers to call on them to register and vote. They held classes in schools and churches to instruct citizens how to vote. Six hundred of the 4,000 pupils at Booker T. Washington High School in Atlanta, registered and voted. College professors from Atlanta University and other schools worked side by side with day laborers in a common campaign to get every Negro voter to the polls. They had one desire: to vote to unshackle themselves and their race politically.

Mrs. Grace T. Hamilton, sapient executive secretary of the Atlanta Urban League and a leader of the Negro political movement in Gergia, told how the colored people of that state felt about the election in a few words: "This is our greatest fight for freedom in the South since the War of the Rebellion," she said. Every one I talked to in Georgia, agreed with her.

A week before the election 50 delegates of the Association of Democratic Clubs—all leaders in their villages, towns, and cities—met in Atlanta, to compare notes about what was happening to Negroes in their communities. With complete knowledge of the situation back home and with grim determination, the delegates poured out their tales about how bigoted, unscrupulous state and county officials were "purging" the name of Negroes from the voters' lists. In every instance, however, the delegates explained what they and others had done to prevent the officials from disfranchising the colored voters. In some they were unsuccessful, but in others they were successful.

They also related how white lawyers in a few Northern counties in the state volunteered their services free of charge to defend Negroes summoned before registry boards to state why their names should not be dropped from the lists. In Macon, the board itself resigned in protest against Negroes being "purged," stating that it felt it was unfair to challenge only Negroes and drop their names. The "purge" was stopped and the board went back to work.

Talmadge may have been defeated if James V. Carmichael, his chief opponent, had been a stronger candidate and a better campaigner. Nobody was for him, but many were against Talmadge. In fact, the C.I.O. actually endorsed former Governor E. D. Rivers for the nomination, and switched to Carmichael later in the campaign. George Googe, Southern director of the A.F. of L., told me a day before the election that he favored Rivers over Carmichael.

The groups which supported Carmichael because they were against Talmadge were the Negroes, the C.I.O.-P.A.C., the A.F. of L., the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, Governor Ellis Arnall and his followers, and those comparatively rare Georgians who were against racial bigotry and anti-unionism and who had the courage to fight them. All these groups were loosely connected and functioned against Talmadge though they were not for one another. Their campaign amounted to only a whispering one, since they feared that if they came out publicly for Carmichael they would only give Talmadge more political ammunition with which to fight Carmichael. It is still thought to be political suicide in Georgia, for any candidate to accept the support of Negroes and labor.

Nevertheless, some candidates for state and national offices did seek their support. Former Governor Rivers attended a political meeting in the Negro section of Atlanta, and openly asked Negroes for their support. His financial backers were reported to have spent Planning Strategy To Get Out The Negro Vote.

Georgia's Two Leading Candidates For Governor Offer . . .

. . . An Interesting Contrast — But Rabble Rousing Won

Class At Atlanta University Hear Professor Discuss Campaign.

Huge Crowd Comes Out To Meeting of Democratic Club In Atlanta.

Negroes In Atlanta Crowd Around To Read Throwaways On Voting.

thousands of dollars among Negroes for their votes. Candidates for Congress and the State Legislature appeared at Negro rallies and met with Negro leaders in off the record sessions to explain their racial opinions. It is quite common for white candidates for political office to appear at Negro rallies and otherwise meet with Negroes in the North, but in Georgia this is super-revolutionary.

Talmadge won because of the tremendous amount of hate he stirred up against Negroes in his campaign speeches and because he again enjoyed the financial and other support of big business in the state. It would be difficult to determine which of these factors was more important in his election, but in all probability it was the latter. It was indeed frightening to hear Talmadge, who has no superior as a manufacturer and purveyor of race hate, inveigh against the Negro. He employed anti-Negro bilge as the theme of every one of his speeches, inciting the illiterate, oppressed, poor whites against colored people by telling them, among other things, that if he were not elected Negroes would take over the state, mistreat white women and do many other things sane people know that they would not do.

Talmadge probably would not have been elected if he had not had the support of big business. Among the businesses in the state which again plumped for him financially and otherwise were the Georgia Power company, subsidiary of Commonwealth and Southern utilities company; the Bank of Georgia; the railroads; the Coca Cola company; the textile companies; oil companies; big planters—practically all of the big industrial, financial, and agricultural interests backed him. Of course, many of the big business concerns in Georgia, such as the Georgia Power company, are owned by Wall Street corporations.

It is important to know this in order to understand politics in any Southern state. For big business in Georgia and the rest of the South will move heaven and earth—even back a man like Talmadge—to maintain racial discrimination and segregation and their monopoly over the economic life of that section. The denial of the suffrage privilege to Negroes in the South is among the foremost things the owners and operators of industry conspire to do in order to help them keep their strangle hold on it. Demagogues like Talmadge, Bilbo, and Rankin do the dirty, race-baiting work for the industrialists, trading the socio-economic lifeblood of their section for political office and whatever pap they can chisel from it.

Talmadge has stated that he will abolish the primary election in Georgia, in order to prevent Negroes from voting. This he may well do, but any cessation of Negro voting in the state will be only temporary. In fact, he may not be able to disfranchise the Negroes at all. He knows this. Most people in the state know it. For the Negroes' determination to vote and otherwise participate in Georgia politics is too forceful a thing for any man to abolish. Furthermore, white candidates have already evinced a strong desire to win the support of the Negro voters, and now that they know the value of these votes to them they will not willingly see them slip out of their hands. These office-seekers know that all ballots are the same once they are in the box.

Talmadge himself is reported to have accepted a campaign contribution of $1,000 from James Holley, former president of Georgia State College for Negroes and a staunch Talmadge backer. Having been president of the college during Talmadge's former term as Governor, Mr. Holley is said to have strong desires to regain the position. At any rate Talmadge has spoken highly of Mr. Holley, who, he says, is a good "nigger". It is believed, meantime, that if Talmadge thought that he had to win the Negro vote to be elected to office, he would accept it enthusiastically. In fact, it was stated during the primary campaign that he actually sought the support of Negro voters in some sections of the state.

SUIT CHALLENGES TALMADGE NOMINATION

A suit filed in Federal Court in Brunswick, Georgia last month charges that the county unit primary election system in that state is in conflict with the 14th Amendment. The suit was filed on behalf of Mrs. Robert Lee Turman, prominent in the Atlanta League of Women Voters and Cullen B. Gosnell, head of the political science department at Emory University by Charles S. Reid, former Chief Justice of the Georgia Supreme Court, and John L. Tye, Jr. an Atlanta attorney.

A companion suit was filed on behalf of Earl P. Cook, student at Georgia Tech, charging that the 5th Congress District Race was unconstitutional. In it Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin received the popular majority but her opponent, Judge James C. Davis, carried the county units. Mrs. Mankin challenged the result and both candidates will appear on the general election ballot in November. Mr. Cook's suit was filed by Alex W. Smith, of Atlanta, former president of the State Bar Association.

RACIAL VIOLENCE AFTER WORLD WARS I AND II

Most Negroes and friends of the Negro mindful of the upsurge of racial hate and violence which followed the end of World War I were fearful of the post-war period to follow World War II. In the year from the signing of the Armistice in November, 1918 to November, 1919, race riots were reported in 26 cities and the Klan, reorganized in 1915, began to swell its numbers. In the two year period from 1919-1921 there were 212 lynchings.

In the year that has passed since V-J Day the country has witnessed race riots at Columbia, Tennessee, and Athens, Alabama; Five lynchings in Georgia, and two in Mississippi. The moribund Klan has been revived and is reaching out into most of the states of the Union from its Atlanta, Ga. headquarters. News of its incorporation in Alabama appeared recently.

More than ever before, however, the Klan is meeting with resistance from the powers of Government. New York and California have outlawed the hooded order and New Jersey and Kentucky are following suit. On a national scale the Aftermath Of Hate Campaign

Relatives look sorrowfully at the body of Willa Mae Dorsey, one of the four victims of the mob slaying near Monroe, Georgia.

Civil Rights Section of the Department of Justice aided by the F.B.I. is investigating the Klan in seven states: New York, Michigan, Tennessee, Florida, California, Mississippi and Georgia. In addition the Georgia Klan is being sued for $257,763 in back taxes by the Collector of Internal Revenue. Prominent individuals have spoken against the Klan including Drew Pearson who traveled to Georgia to denounce intolerance from the lawn of Georgia's State Capitol.

In many ways present racial stresses have their counterparts in those of the years following the First World War. Commenting in 1938 on the years of World War I, in his book, "The Black Man In White America", Dr. John G. Van Deusen wrote: "The excitement of the war years produced a crop of race riots which, in number and atrocity, were beyond precedent in the United States." With this background of violence and bitterness returning soldiers found the South primed to protect "white supremacy". Early in 1919 Ex-Senator Vardaman of Mississippi called Negro soldiers 'French-woman-ruined' and stating that "the mob is the only protection of the white man's home' called on 'the bravest of the brave' in his state to organize 'since there is no doubt that hell will be to pay in this country in the near future.'

These threats and warnings have their counterparts today in the mouthings of white supremacists, Eugene Talmadge, Senator Bilbo and Klan Kleagle, Dr. Samuel Green.

Their Only Crime Was An Accident of Birth

L. to R.: Roger Malcolm, Dorothy Malcolm and George Dorsey, three victims of the Monroe mob.

"Georgia's Situation Far From Hopeless'—Clement

Editor's Note: The following statement by Dr. Rufus Clement, president of Atlanta University, and responsible spokesman of Georgia indicates what many Negroes are thinking after the recent outbreaks of violence there.

In spite of the horrible crime committed in Walton County, the situation in Georgia is far from hopeless. There are more liberal white people in the state than were before. They are outspoken. They are strong advocates of equal justice for all men. They are willing to stand up and be counted and their influence will be felt. The decent citizens of this state, Negro and white will work together for the establishment of full democracy. We are determined that liberty and justice shall prevail.

Rufus E. Clement.

Dr. Rufus Clement

KLAN'S HEAD TALKS TO WRITER

The Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, Dr. Samuel Green of Atlanta Ga., took time out from his duties as obstetrician to talk to Harry T. Brundidge and is quoted at length in an article, "The Klan Rides Again", by Mr. Brundidge in Cosmopolitan Magazine. After stating that white, Protestant supremacy was threatened the Grand Dragon continued.

"The whole country has been flooded with Jewish refugees, and the Catholic Church membership grows by leaps and bounds, even in the South where fathers rather see their daughters dead than married to a papist. Protestants are beginning to understand the real significance of the naming of all those new Cardinals—it's a step! And the 'uppity niggahs'! Since the war they're even trying to abolish Jim Crow laws, with their talk of equal rights. Already the poll tax has been abolished in Georgia, and in other Southern states. Northern agitators are threatening Southern economic conditions. But I'll tell you this —no CIO or AFL carpetbagging organizers, or any other damned Yankees are going to come into the South and tell Southerners how to run either their businesses or their niggahs, nor shout that the niggah is equal to the white. The white man was born supreme. No provision of the Constitution, no Supreme Court decisions, no Act of Congress, no state law is going to make the niggah the equal of the white, or permit him to vote in white elections—poll tax or no poll tax. We won't tolerate any alliance between niggahs, Jews, Catholics and labor organizers either. We didn't want to be reconstructed, and we don't want to be organized! The Klan rides again and the bars are down—all the way down!"

Mr. Brundidge quotes from the minutes of some of the Atlanta Klan meetings and includes one excerpt from 'Approved Activities' in which a policeman is praised for slaying a Negro, the thirteenth he has killed in line of duty.

The Klan records also reveal, according to Mr. Brundidge, that "many chiefs of police, chiefs of fire departments, mayors, city councilmen, county and city judges, throughout the South and the Midwest, have petitioned the Klan for charters and organizers." Mr. Brundidge states that he saw in a Klan office "a two-foot-high pile of petitions, requesting organizers and charters, not only from communities in every state in the South, but Missouri, Kansas, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Oklahoma, Wyoming, Idaho, Texas, New Mexico, New York, Oregon, Connecticut, Rhode Island and even Alaska."

Mr. Brundidge concludes the article with suggestions as to how the Klan can be fought. In addition to prosecuting the hooded order for back taxes which is being done in Georgia he states that under Section Fifty-One, Title Eighteen Chapter Three of the United State Code more effective action could be taken against the Klan. This section reads: "If two or more persons conspire to injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege . . . secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States or because of his having exercised the same, or if two or more persons go in disguise on the highway, or on the premises, of another with intent to prevent or hinder his free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege so secured . . . they shall be fined not more than $5,000 and imprisoned not more than ten years, and shall, moreover, be thereafter ineligible to any office, or place of honor, profit, or trust created by the Constitution or laws of the United States."

A MONTH'S RECORD OF RACE HATE

Four lynchings near Monroe, Georgia.

Lynching of Macio Snipes near Eatonton, Georgia. Snipes was the only Negro who voted in his district in the recent election.

Race riot in Athens, Alabama, resulting in the wounding of over fifty Negroes.

Lynching of two Negroes in Mississippi.

Admission by Bilbo over the radio that he is a Klan member; that he intimidated Negroes in his recent campaign.

Lynching of John C. Jones in Minden, Louisiana.

Negroes

Cavalcade

OF THE American Negro

★

DIAMOND JUBILEE
EXPOSITION AUTHORITY

★

ILLINOIS WRITERS' PROJECT

1940

Negroes

NEGRO WORKERS

AND THE

NATIONAL DEFENSE PROGRAM

FEDERAL SECURITY AGENCY
SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD
BUREAU OF EMPLOYMENT SECURITY
DIVISION OF RESEARCH AND STATISTICS

Washington, D.C.

September 16, 1941

NEGRO WORKERS AND THE NATIONAL DEFENSE PROGRAM

Summary

In spite of the increasing difficulty of finding experienced skilled and semiskilled workers, many employers continue to refuse to hire available Negroes for production work. Specific instances that have already come to the attention of the employment service indicate that the failure to use available skilled and semiskilled Negroes has accentuated the shortage of experienced workers in certain occupations and slowed up production.

Failure to use locally available Negroes has not only delayed production in certain instances, but it is compelling employers to recruit labor from distant areas, with two serious consequences: it is intensifying existing housing shortages, and it is increasing the amount of labor turnover. Moreover, the failure to use Negro labor exaggerates the shortage of labor and results in competition for white labor and, what is perhaps more important, results in the under-employment of vocational training facilities in some communities where there is a shortage of white applicants for training.

As the defense program moves from its present preliminary phase to full production, enormous demands are going to be made on the unemployed reserve. The very sharp reduction during the past year in the number of unemployed job seekers gives some indication of the effects of the armament program in its early stages, before the full effects have been felt.1/ During 1941 and 1942 the volume of unemployment will be still further reduced. It may be conservatively estimated that from 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 additional workers will be needed by the end of 1942 as the result of the defense program, and the general increase in business activity. Although current estimates place the number of unemployed at between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000, these totals include some workers, possibly a great many, who are seasonally employed, temporarily laid off, physically handicapped, superannuated, unemployable, unsuitable for the type of employment offered, or unwilling to move to the area in which they are needed. It is already possible to say that in certain urban-industrial areas where defense production is concentrated there will be a shortage of able-bodied white male labor before the end of this year, and in some of these areas there may even be a general shortage of labor.

1/ The data below gives the various estimates of the change which has occurred in the number of unemployed from June 1940 to June 1941.

Index	June 1940	June 1941	Decrease	Percent Change
American Federation of Labor	9,273,000	5,333,000	3,940,000	-42.5
Congress of Industrial Organizations	10,173,000	6,305,000	3,868,000	-38.0
Works Progress Administration	8,600,000	5,900,000	2,700,000	-31.4

Negroes constitute a far more important proportion of the unemployed labor reserve than is commonly recognized; this is true both in the South, where they form from one-third to one-half of the unemployed labor reserve, and in many northern urban-industrial areas, where they form from one-fourth to one-third of the most employable reserve. Consequently, the failure to use Negro labor presents an important problem in certain areas, and the continued refusal to hire or train them for defense production is likely to generate increasingly serious labor market problems. When to the discrimination against Negroes are added restrictions against other groups, for example, persons of German or Italian descent, naturalized citizens, persons of certain religious denominations, Mexicans, Orientals, aliens, and older workers, the combined effect of the restrictions substantially reduces the available labor supply which can be drawn on by industry.

The experience of 1917-18 shows that prejudice against the employment of Negroes tends to be relaxed in the face of a general shortage of white male labor. If employers hire Negroes as the defense program develops, instead of waiting until a general shortage compels them to use Negro labor, it will do much to facilitate the orderly and efficient mobilization of the labor force, to speed production, and to minimize the undesirable and costly effects of discrimination.

Responsibility for the failure to use Negro labor in defense or other industries cannot be laid exclusively on employers. The traditional prejudice of white workers, both organized and unorganized who are not accustomed to working with Negroes, frequently influences employer policy. There are innumerable instances, however, in which the opposition of white workers to the employment of Negroes has been overcome when employers have consciously sought to enlist the cooperation of the white workers in an intelligent and enlightened way.

Importance of Negro Workers in the Unemployed Labor Reserve

It is the official labor market policy of the government for the present emergency to use the local labor reserve insofar as possible to meet the local demand before widening the areas of recruitment beyond the commuting area to the State, the region or the Nation. The underlying reason for the emphasis on this order of recruitment is the desire to minimize some of the serious difficulties which developed during 1917-18 when the failure to follow a systematic plan of recruitment resulted in unnecessary competition for labor, unnecessary migration, labor turnover, and housing shortages, which seriously disrupted the Nation's labor market and interfered with production. It was hoped that in the present emergency employers would adhere to this order of recruitment and that the employment service with its facilities for orderly control and direction would be used to effect a more intelligent and rational mobilization of the labor force.

The success of such a policy depends on the willingness of employers to make full use of the available labor supply in each community, which in certain areas would mean extensive use of Negro labor. The importance of Negroes in the total labor force is sometimes overlooked, and their disproportionate importance among the unemployed, largely due to the displacement of Negroes by white workers during the depression years, has made them a factor of the first magnitude in the labor reserve in many areas. Furthermore, the residual unemployed labor reserve rapidly becomes even more heavily weighted with Negro workers as a result of preferential hiring of white workers during a period of reemployment, partly on racial grounds and partly because white workers, by and large, are more likely to have acquired training and experience in the skilled and semiskilled occupations that are in demand. This is true not only in the South but in the industrial areas of the North as well.

Table I shows the relative importance of Negro gainful workers in 1930, 1/ in the major occupational groups for the Nation as a whole, but these figures do not fully reveal the vastly greater significance of Negroes in the total labor force and in the unemployed labor reserve of many of the major urban-industrial areas. (Table II)

Table I

Number and Proportion of all Gainful Workers who were Negro by General Division of Occupations: 1930

General Division of Occupations	Total	Negro		Approximate Ratio of Negroes to Total
		Number	Percent of total
All Occupations	48,830,000	5,503,000	11.3	1 in 9
Agriculture	10,472,000	1,980,000	19.0	1 in 5
Forestry and Fishing	250,000	32,000	12.7	1 in 8
Extraction of Minerals	984,000	75,000	7.6	1 in 13
Manufacturing and Mechanical Industries	14,111,000	1,025,000	7.3	1 in 14
Transportation and Communication	3,843,000	398,000	10.3	1 in 10
Trade	6,081,000	184,000	3.0	1 in 33
Public Service (not elsewhere classified)	856,000	50,000	5.9	1 in 17
Professional Service	3,254,000	136,000	4.2	1 in 24
Domestic and Personal Service	4,952,000	1,576,000	31.8	1 in 3
Clerical Occupations	4,025,000	41,000	1.0	1 in 100

Source: Fifteenth Census of the United States, 1930, Vol. V. Table 2, p. 74.

1/ Occupational data for 1940 are not yet available. It is unlikely that the 1940 data will be materially different.

Table II

Gainful workers 1/ in 1930 who were Negro, and available job seekers registered with public employment offices April 26, 1941, who were nonwhite, 2/ for the United States, and selected States and cities

State and City	Gainful workers: 1930			Job seekers: April 26, 1941
	Total	Negro		Total	Nonwhite
		Number	Percent of total		Number	Percent of total
United States	48,830,000	5,503,000	11.3	4,059,403	500,910	12.3
Alabama	1,026,295	432,349	42.1	101,169	28,604	28.3
Birmingham	113,245	48,999	43.3	17,739	7,126	40.2
Delaware	98,104	15,887	16.2	9,066	3,034	33.5
Wilmington	47,270	6,856	14.5	5,161	1,781	34.5
Illinois	3,184,684	171,073	5.4	260,121	41,749	16.0
Chicago	1,558,858	129,467	8.3	159,631	34,159	21.4
Indiana	1,251,065	53,332	4.3	145,467	12,652	8.7
Gary	42,513	7,740	18.2	7,274	2,326	32.0
Indianapolis	164,433	22,057	13.4	30,540	6,097	20.0
Kentucky	907,095	106,572	11.7	66,219	6,968	10.5
Louisville	138,303	27,086	19.6	10,021	2,571	25.6
Maryland	672,879	136,014	20.2	29,521	8,302	28.1
Baltimore	362,072	78,886	21.8	15,203	5,213	34.3
Michigan	1,927,347	82,249	4.3	170,075	18,533	10.9
Detroit	689,489	60,297	8.7	75,779	14,447	19.1
Missouri	1,457,968	114,825	7.9	131,355	17,797	13.5
Kansas City	194,739	22,848	11.7	22,857	3,265	14.3
St. Louis	386,083	50,546	13.1	45,086	11,016	24.4
New Jersey	1,712,106	107,114	6.3	109,384	14,864	13.6
Camden	50,132	5,351	10.7	7,163	1,268	17.7
Jersey City	139,919	6,315	4.5	9,346	686	7.3
Newark	199,068	20,467	10.3	16,745	3,670	21.9
New York	5,523,337	239,305	4.3	535,582	42,402	7.9
Buffalo	239,210	6,714	2.8	24,144	1,033	4.2
New York City	3,187,459	193,773	6.1	378,529	39,891	10.5
Ohio	2,615,764	145,379	5.6	233,678	36,938	15.8
Akron	106,400	5,029	4.7	11,672	1,459	12.5
Cincinnati	203,003	24,498	12.1	36,647	9,293	25.4
Cleveland	394,842	36,170	9.2	45,129	10,681	23.7
Columbus	129,251	16,611	12.8	18,941	3,748	19.8
Toledo	127,274	6,716	5.3	18,016	2,414	13.4
Youngstown	64,056	5,856	9.1	8,515	2,104	24.7
Pennsylvania	3,722,103	214,319	5.8	292,896	29,371	10.0
Philadelphia	889,850	118,890	13.4	48,873	14,585	29.8
Pittsburgh	278,591	26,121	9.4	27,060	4,962	18.3
Texas	2,206,767	389,755	17.7	158,692	26,203	16.5
Dallas	122,857	23,252	18.9	19,068	2,788	14.6
Fort Worth	71,826	12,442	17.3	15,163	2,763	18.2
Houston	137,398	35,938	26.2	17,534	3,621	20.6
San Antonio	97,738	10,259	10.5	11,116	789	7.1
Virginia	880,211	258,066	29.3	44,898	16,173	36.0
Norfolk	60,306	23,220	38.5	3,427	2,026	59.1

1/ The data for gainful workers are not strictly comparable with those for job seekers, because of the eleven-year interval and because the geographical area is not always identical. The shift of Negroes from the South to the North, particularly to certain industrial urban areas, was in some cases very marked. Bearing these qualifications in mind, it is possible to make a limited comparison of the two sets of data.

2/ The color classification of job seekers in April 1941 is on the basis of "white" and "nonwhite." Nearly all workers classified under "nonwhite" were Negroes. Available job seekers as of April 26, 1941 refers to those who have registered with the employment offices between March 1 and April 26, and who were without a job and regarded as employable. About 400,000 additional registrants were regarded as not available because they were employed or were unemployable.

Source: Fifteenth Census of the United States, 1930, Vol. V; April 1941 Inventory of Registrants at Public Employment Offices.

Job Opportunities for Negroes in the Defense Program

The experience of Negroes during the rapid expansion of job opportunities, which began in the spring of 1940, can be described in the following terms:

1. In Construction.--Throughout the country there was a heavy demand for unskilled labor needed for the construction of airports, military cantonments, barracks, arsenals, manufacturing plants, etc. Negro unskilled labor shared substantially in these employment opportunities and benefited by the wage rates paid on these projects, which were generally higher than wages usually earned in unskilled work.

The extraordinary demand for skilled construction workers, particularly carpenters (one of the building trades in which Negroes have established a substantial foothold) resulted in many job opportunities, particularly for union members. There is evidence, however, that in some localities, in spite of the acute shortage of carpenters, Negroes were not employed. 1/ In skilled building trades occupations other than carpenters and cement finishers, and to some extent, bricklayers and masons, there is no evidence that discriminatory practices were being noticeably relaxed.

2. In Manufacturing Industries which have Customarily Employed Negroes.--In certain manufacturing industries notably iron and steel, industrial chemicals, sawmills, foundries, meat packing, and to some extent shipbuilding, where it is customary for many employers to hire Negroes for skilled and semiskilled as well as for unskilled work, the industrial expansion has opened many job opportunities to Negro workers. However, there is a good deal of evidence to show that even in industries in which Negroes have by custom been accepted, many establishments which have never employed Negroes in the past were refusing to employ Negroes for skilled and semiskilled work. This policy of exclusion to a large extent has helped accentuate the acute shortage which has developed in some areas in the foundry industry, for example.

In Delaware a shortage of skilled and semiskilled foundry workers developed early in the defense program. While Negro foundry labor could have been supplied, in part from local sources and in part by clearance from other areas, most employers who in the past had not made a practice of employing Negroes, continued to refuse to hire them for skilled and semiskilled work. A similar shortage in Wheeling, West Virginia was reported beginning in November, when foundry workers were needed in steel mills, railroad shops and foundries. Here, too, the shortage

---

1/ Carpenters' unions in New York City, for example, were reluctant to refer Negro members to Southern States and in general confined them to Northern projects. There was a division of opinion on this policy among Negro members themselves, some of whom were reluctant to accept jobs in the South. Those who were willing to go were generally dissuaded by union officials. As a compensating factor, however, the exodus of white carpenters from New York City resulted in a somewhat wider employment of Negro members at home.

was due in part to the failure of certain employers to use available Negro foundry workers. The owner of one large foundry in this city toured eastern Ohio communities offering higher wages to employed white foundry workers, if they would come to Wheeling. A shortage of skilled and semi-skilled foundry workers was also reported in Louisiana, North Carolina, Georgia, Illinois, Michigan and Connecticut. This shortage is not only directly traceable to the failure of certain employers to use Negro labor, but in part, it is the result of the failure of employers to upgrade and promote Negro labor to the skilled occupations. While the practice of upgrading workers is a common method of overcoming labor stringencies, this practice is frequently not extended to Negro workmen even in those industries in which they are extensively employed.

Apart from the industries listed above in which Negroes have more or less of a foothold (usually in the less desirable jobs or in the unskilled occupations), most of the opportunities for work have come from a handful of individual establishments whose policy it is to employ Negro labor in skilled and semiskilled as well as unskilled jobs.

3. In Defense Industries.--In certain of the most important industries associated with national defense, particularly aircraft, tank and armament manufacturing, powder manufacturing, shell-loading, machine tool, and machine shop, in which acute shortages of skilled and semiskilled labor have developed, there is little evidence that employers who have in the past refused to hire Negro labor are now turning to this source of supply. A comparison of Negro and white placements made by the employment service between October 1941 and March 1941 in selected skilled and semiskilled occupations in important defense industries is given in Table III.

Table III

Placements of workers in selected essential skilled and semiskilled occupations important to national defense, by color, October-December 1940 and January-March 1941. 1/

Selected defense occupations	October-December 1940			January-March 1941
	Total	Non-White 2/	Percent nonwhite	Total	Non-White 2/	Percent nonwhite
Aircraft.....	2,269	1	.05	8,769	13	.1
Building Construction...	13,121	722	5.5	69,637	2,061	3.0
Electrical Equipment....	1,716	18	1.0	1,066	5	.5
Metal Trades 3/.....	24,524	231	.9	34,834	245	.7
Optical Goods.....	101	1	1.0	213 4/	1	.5
Shipbuilding.....	759	39	5.1	1,499	25	1.7

1/ The two quarters are not comparable, since a considerable number of occupations were added beginning in January.
2/ Nearly all "nonwhite" placements are Negro placements.
3/ Includes "foundry and forging, machine shop and machine tool, metal processing and forming."
4/ Includes instruments, watches and clocks.

Source: Division of Research and Statistics, Bureau of Employment Security.

Of 11,000 skilled and semiskilled jobs in aircraft, only 14 went to non-white workers; of nearly 60,000 placements in the metal trades occupations, including foundry and forging, machine shops and machine tool, and metal processing less than 500 went to non-white workers. Only in building construction and shipbuilding did Negroes receive a somewhat higher proportion of the skilled and semi-skilled placements.

Not only are non-white workers not receiving many skilled or semiskilled jobs in a great many defense establishments, but they are receiving very few jobs of any type, even unskilled. Table IV shows all male placements[1] made by the public employment offices between October 1940 and March 1941 in 20 selected defense industries.

Table IV

Placements of males by public employment offices in 20 major defense industries, October 1940 through March 1941

Industry	All male placements
	Total	Nonwhite
		Number	Percent of total
Total	154,673	6,151	4.0
Aircraft and parts	27,651	68	.2
Automobiles and automobile equipment	10,889	272	2.5
Clocks and watches	677	0	0
Electrical machinery	13,100	75	.6
Hardwood distillation, charcoal, and naval stores	158	21	13.3
Industrial chemicals	10,322	1,218	11.8
Industrial rubber goods	515	2	.4
Iron and steel and their products	30,103	1,472	4.9
Lighting fixtures	944	30	3.2
Machinery (except electrical)	29,674	624	2.1
Miscellaneous chemical products	1,665	89	5.3
Motorcycles, bicycles and parts	100	2	2.0
Nonferrous metals not elsewhere classified	5,982	112	1.9
Petroleum refining	4,998	482	9.6

1/ The number of "non-white" women placed in 20 selected defense industries between October 1940 and March 1941 was 146 compared with 23,675 white placements.

Table IV (Cont'd)

Industry	All male placements
	Total	Nonwhite
		Number	Percent of total
Primary alloying, and rolling and drawing of nonferrous metals (except aluminum).....	1,672	19	1.1
Professional and scientific instruments, photographic apparatus and optical goods.....	1,409	26	1.8
Railroad equipment	2,795	100	3.5
Ship and boat building and repairing.	10,674	1,500	14.1
Surgical, medical, and dental instruments equipment, and supplies	759	22	2.9
Tires and inner tubes.....	586	17	2.9

Source: Division of Research and Statistics, Bureau of Employment Security.

Only in shipbuilding, hardwood distillation, charcoal and naval stores, industrial chemicals, miscellaneous chemicals, and iron and steel products were non-white workers receiving a more or less proportionate share of the job opportunities. Of over 27,000 male placements in aircraft, only 68 or .2 percent were non-white. Of over 13,000 in electrical manufacturing, only 75 or .6 percent were non-white. Of nearly 30,000 in machinery (other than electrical) only 624 or 2.1 percent were non-white.

Compared with these percentages, it is estimated that Negro males in April 1941 formed about 12.4 percent of the total unemployed male reserve and about 12 percent of the skilled, semiskilled and unskilled workers,--the pool of manual labor on which manufacturing industries draw for workers. (See Table V)

Table V

Male Job Seekers Registered in the Public Employment Offices, by Occupational Group, by Color, April 1941

Occupational group	Men
		Nonwhite
	Total	Number	Percent of total
All occupations.....	2,991,642	370,258	12.4
Professional and managerial.....	116,128	4,933	4.2
Clerical and sales.....	245,184	6,113	2.5
Service.....	229,233	68,689	30.0
Agricultural, fishery, and forestry.	272,786	37,777	13.8
Skilled.....	671,086	26,515	4.0
Semiskilled.....	614,347	56,007	9.1
Unskilled.....	758,219	162,126	21.3
Unassigned 1/	84,659	8,098	9.6

Source: Division of Research and Statistics. Bureau of Employment Security.

The extent to which anti-Negro discrimination in employment is operating and the type of jobs in which Negroes are finding opportunities for employment is clearly revealed in Table VI, which compares placements between October and March in selected skilled and semiskilled occupations important to national defense, (Column I), in selected defense industries (Column II), and in all manufacturing industries (Column V), with placements in construction (Column IV) and service (Column VI).

Of 215,427 placements made during the six months in selected skilled and semiskilled occupations, Negroes received but 4,443 or 2.1 percent. In 20 selected defense manufacturing industries Negroes received but 7,382 jobs of 221,600 placements or 3.3 percent. In all manufacturing industries Negroes received 35,432 jobs of 539,355 placements or 6.6 percent. In the construction industries Negroes received a very substantial proportion of the job opportunities, 22.7 percent, but it must be remembered, most construction jobs are short-duration jobs. The service industry, traditional province of Negro employment, was the only industry in which job openings were expanding, relatively. In October 31.4 percent and in November 30.6 percent of the job openings went to Negroes, and thereafter the proportion of Negro placements in the service industries rose each month--a reflection of the exodus of white workers from the service field

1/ Includes unemployables, recent students, persons without work experience, and unspecified.

Table VI

Placements of nonwhite workers in selected occupations or industry divisions, by month, October 1940-April 1941

Month	Placements
	Selected skilled and semiskilled occupations 1/	Twenty selected defense industries 2/	All industries	Construction	Manufacturing	Service	All other
(Column)	(I)	(II)	(III)	(IV)	(V)	(VI)	(VII)
Total	215,427	221,600	2,676,976	565,600	539,355	881,380	690,641
Nonwhite	4,443	7,382	534,350	128,274	35,432	288,146	82,498
Percent nonwhite	2.1	3.3	20.0	22.7	6.6	32.7	11.9
1940
October	16,856	27,647	407,494	82,354	74,818	129,269	121,053
Nonwhite	287	1,503	78,685	16,077	5,665	40,611	16,332
Percent nonwhite	1.7	5.4	19.3	19.5	7.6	31.4	13.5
November	16,575	25,615	364,799	80,554	73,458	113,518	97,269
Nonwhite	415	758	73,363	20,440	5,593	34,787	12,543
Percent nonwhite	2.5	3.0	20.1	25.4	7.6	30.6	12.9
December	14,183	26,126	377,697	82,336	68,866	114,639	111,856
Nonwhite	432	1,063	69,527	19,331	5,209	35,004	9,983
Percent nonwhite	3.0	4.1	18.4	23.5	7.6	30.5	8.9
1941
January	3/ 44,706	30,743	363,163	93,182	69,993	124,447	75,541
Nonwhite	880	935	76,593	21,662	3,954	41,055	9,922
Percent nonwhite	2.0	3.0	21.1	23.2	5.6	33.0	13.1
February	44,546	31,278	344,335	88,096	72,647	111,434	72,158
Nonwhite	933	984	70,779	19,484	4,083	37,444	9,768
Percent nonwhite	2.1	3.1	20.6	22.1	5.6	33.6	13.5
March	39,305	37,085	376,308	68,849	84,411	127,061	95,987
Nonwhite	741	1,054	76,556	16,501	4,821	43,277	11,957
Percent nonwhite	1.9	2.8	20.3	24.0	5.7	34.1	12.4
April	39,256	43,106	443,180	70,229	95,162	161,012	116,777
Nonwhite	755	1,085	88,847	14,779	6,107	55,968	11,993
Percent nonwhite	1.9	2.5	20.0	21.0	6.4	34.8	10.3

1/ These occupations include most of the occupations important to defense production, but some of these placements were made in industries other than the "twenty selected industries" in column II. For a list of the twenty industries, see Table IV.
2/ The quarterly totals here would differ slightly from those in Table IV, which were preliminary.
3/ The number of skilled and semiskilled occupations was considerably increased in January and a few professional and technical occupations were added. This, in part, explains the great increase in placements beginning in January.

Source: Division of Research and Statistics, Bureau of Employment Security.

to the more desirable jobs and their replacement by Negroes, and of the greater reluctance of white workers to take jobs in the service industries. 1/

A study of the monthly State reports describing labor market developments from September to June revealed in spite of increasing difficulties in finding labor in certain occupations employers were averse to hiring experienced and available Negro workers. The most recent reports, those for April, May, and June indicate that a somewhat less restrictive attitude on the part of some employers has been noticed in Pennsylvania, New York City, Buffalo, Northern New Jersey, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and to some extent in Michigan, but it still cannot be said that color restrictions have been substantially relaxed.

Prior to March the placement data in Table IV indicate that only a handful of Negroes were hired in all the aircraft plants in the country. Since March a slight change is evident. A Cincinnati aircraft company announced that it would employ and train 1,000 Negro workers, more than half of whom will be used in the foundry division. An aircraft company in the New York metropolitan area, another in Buffalo, a third in St. Louis, indicated they had hired a few skilled Negroes and trainees. In Cleveland, as a result of a press campaign, an aircraft parts manufacturing company which will employ a total of 3,000 to 4,000 workers, announced that Negroes would be employed in proportion to their relative importance in the city's population. This will give employment to from 300 to 400 Negroes. An airplane instrument company in New Jersey was reported to have relaxed its former color restrictions at the skilled level. In the aircraft plants in Baltimore and in the Middle West, except in St. Louis, and on the Pacific Coast, there is no evidence that the policy has been substantially changed. In most of the other defense industries or establishments in which it has not been customary in the past to employ Negroes, particularly machine shop and machine tool, electrical machinery, tanks, munitions and ordnance, and rubber, instances in which Negroes have been hired are still rare.

1/ The placement figures in Tables III, IV, and VI do not, of course, reveal the extent to which industry is hiring Negroes or non-white workers outside of the employment service. Many employers, particularly the large employers who have extensive personnel departments of their own, do not generally use the employment offices to any great extent, and many more Negroes (as well as white workers) have been hired than would appear from the data. Employment service placements, however, are a sufficiently large proportion of all job openings filled to be representative of general conditions. The disproportion of Negro placements in skilled and semiskilled jobs in most of the defense industries, and in all manufacturing industries, which is reflected in these figures is unquestionably typical of hiring outside the employment service.

4. In Government Establishments.—Government-owned or operated shipyards are providing many employment opportunities for skilled and semiskilled as well as unskilled Negroes. In September 1940, the last date for which information is available, between 5,000 and 6,000 skilled and semiskilled Negroes were employed in the Navy yards, and the number has increased considerably since September. Government arsenals are also hiring Negroes, but not as extensively as the Navy Department. Outside of Navy yards the practice of government establishments appears to be little better than that of many private establishments.

Sources of Discrimination

The failure to use Negro labor cannot be exclusively attributed to employers. Instances have come to the attention of the employment service in which employers were prepared to hire Negro workers, but the policy was opposed by the officials or members of certain unions. This has been true of both A.F. of L. and C.I.O. unions. Frequently, too, unorganized workers are opposed to the introduction of Negro labor. In some instances the failure to employ Negroes is due to the arbitrary action of foremen and subordinates, and company officials are unaware of the situation.

Some employers explain their refusal to hire Negroes on the grounds that their white workers will refuse to work with Negroes and will either lay down their tools or quit to work elsewhere. Instances in which both organized and unorganized white workers have protested against the introduction of Negroes are pointed to, and sometimes the position is taken that the loss of white workers may be greater than the number of Negroes who can be added, so that the consequences of employing Negroes may not increase production, but reduce it. In answer it must be pointed out that there are many instances in which white and Negro labor works together in the same establishment, and frequently in the same shop and on the same job, and that employers who have consciously sought to enlist the active cooperation of white workers in the solution of this problem have often found it possible to overcome the traditional opposition of white workers. Often employers have met the problem by establishing separate departments or units for Negro workers.

To a large extent the opposition of white workers to Negroes in the past sprang from the fear of being displaced by Negroes who would work for lower wages. With the fixing of wage standards and the extension of unionism, Negroes can no longer be used to undermine labor standards, and this has removed the basis for much of the opposition to the introduction of Negroes. Union officials, particularly in a period of expanding job opportunities such as the present, have frequently cooperated with management in an attempt to work this problem out. Fundamentally, the problem of management and labor leaders is to interpret to white workers the consequences of discrimination: how it undermines national unity, delays the defense effort in a period of great national emergency, causes unnecessary in-migration which in turn causes rents to rise and the cost of living to go up, and all of the other ramifications which have been mentioned above.

Importance of Skilled and Semiskilled Negro Labor

It is true that Negroes have in the past found it almost impossible to obtain work in many skilled and semiskilled occupations and consequently there are only a few thousand Negroes available in the occupations now most in demand. However, other factors must be considered which throw a different light on their relative importance in the skilled and semiskilled labor supply.

First, a large number of Negroes have traditionally been employed as "helpers" in the skilled occupations, but the customary labor policy of not promoting Negroes has prevented them from rising to skilled and semiskilled jobs. As "helpers" many of them have gradually become qualified mechanics. The continued failure to upgrade and use these workers, therefore, becomes an important consideration when the country is straining every effort to find skilled labor.

Second, the difficulty which skilled Negro workers have faced in finding employment at the skilled level has driven them to take employment as laborers and service workers. During the recent press and radio campaign conducted by the employment service, workers experienced in defense occupations who were currently employed in other trades were asked to register at the employment offices. The Harlem office in New York City has reported that in response to this plea a surprising number of employed Negro laborers have come in to be registered, and have revealed former experience in skilled and semiskilled occupations in which there is at present an acute shortage.

Third, the practice of some employment offices of registering Negroes, not according to occupational background and experience, but according to job opportunities (which are almost inevitably in unskilled or service occupations), further tends to obscure their importance in the skilled and semiskilled occupations. The following examples of this are not uncommon. In the public employment office of a New England city, where the shortage of skilled machinists and aircraft workers has been acute for several months, one unemployed Negro, a graduate of Tuskegee Institute and trained in machine shop work, who had worked as a machinist at a government arsenal, was classified as a "handy man"; another who had graduated from an aviation course and had two years of experience as an aviation mechanic's helper was classified as a "porter"; a third who was an experienced single spindle drill press operator and lathe operator who had turned gun stocks for a government arsenal, and in addition had worked for many years on Cadillac motors, was classified as an "auto mechanic."

When all such factors as these are taken into account, Negro labor emerges as a much greater potential source of skilled and semiskilled labor than is apparent in the statistics of the Census or in the inventory of unemployed job seekers. When it is remembered that in many cases a handful of skilled workers, if available to employers, would enable them to hire a very much larger number of semiskilled and helpers, it cannot be said that the supply of skilled Negro labor is too small to affect seriously the production effort.

Examples of the Importance of Negroes in the Unemployed Labor Reserve

Although Negroes constitute but 12.3 percent of the registered job-seeking reserve for the nation as a whole, they are vastly more important in many of the major urban-industrial areas of the country. Philadelphia and Baltimore offer typical examples of the significance of Negroes in the unemployed reserve. Philadelphia is typical of a northern city in which Negroes, while at first glance they do not loom large in the population, are found on close examination to constitute an extremely important part of the available local labor reserve. Baltimore, on the other hand, with a large proportion of Negroes in the labor force, illustrates how a drain on the supply of white workers soon leads to a shortage of white labor locally available for employment or for training and makes the employment of Negroes the only alternative to large-scale, otherwise unnecessary, importation of whites.

Philadelphia

While in the country as a whole Negroes formed 11.3 percent of the gainful workers, or about one in nine, in Pennsylvania only 5.8 percent of the gainful workers were Negro, or about one in seventeen. 1/ However, the State-wide average obscures the Negro concentration in urban-industrial areas. In Philadelphia, Negroes constituted 13.4 percent of all gainful workers, or about one in eight, compared with 3.4 percent for the remainder of the State, or about one in thirty-three.

The incidence of unemployment among Negroes, however, is far heavier than among white workers. In April 1940 while Negroes formed about 15 percent of the gainful workers in Philadelphia, approximately 24.8 percent of the registered unemployed or about one in four were 1/ This compares with about one in twenty-three in New York, Michigan and Indiana, one in eighteen in Illinois and Ohio, about one in sixteen in New Jersey.

---

colored workers. By April 1941, that is to say, during the first year of the defense program, the employer preference for white workers raised the proportion of Negroes in the registered unemployed labor reserve to 29.8 percent. The number of registered white workers, both male and female, in this 12-month period fell from 64,100 to 42,600, while the number of registered Negro job seekers decreased from 21,100 to 18,100. 1/

The labor demand in Philadelphia from March 1941 through the end of the year is estimated at 168,000 openings: 89,000 in defense and nondefense manufacturing industries and 79,000 in miscellaneous nonmanufacturing occupations. Approximately 110,000 openings call for men, and 58,000 openings for women. It is estimated that the total labor reserve likely to be locally available during this period will be 102,000 workers: 61,000 men (42,000 white and 19,000 Negro) and 41,000 women. (29,000 white and 12,000 Negro).

Even on the assumption that all workers in the labor reserve in Philadelphia will be employable (regardless of age, citizenship status, color, experience, and so forth), it is likely that there will be a shortage of 66,000: 49,000 men and 17,000 women. Because not all unemployed workers are employable, the shortage is certain to be considerably more. In fact, the supply of locally available male labor is not even adequate to meet the demand for men by the manufacturing establishments, which is estimated as 70,000.

It is evident from these estimates that large-scale in-migration is inevitable. It is not likely that any great number of workers can be drawn in from the labor supply in the immediate area surrounding Philadelphia. Labor market surveys of the adjoining counties (Delaware, Chester, Montgomery, and Bucks, and Camden in New Jersey) indicate that the supply in these areas is barely adequate to meet the demand, and there will be no surplus of labor available for Philadelphia.

In spite of the fact that Negroes form such an important part of the local labor reserve there is little evidence that Negroes are sharing in the job boom. While certain Philadelphia establishments (foundries and shipbuilding for example) have always made it a practice to employ Negroes, and a few others have recently begun to hire skilled and semiskilled Negroes when white workers were not obtainable, most employers continue to refuse to consider Negro Labor in spite of an increasingly acute shortage of experienced labor. The reluctance to employ Negro labor extends to Negro trainees as well, and this of course has its effect on the willingness of Negroes to undertake training, as well as on the inclination of the vocational authorities to train Negroes in large numbers when there is so little demand for them.

1/ The figure of 60,700 job seekers in April 1941 is based on the active file count on April 30, 1941. This is 11,900 more than the inventory count on April 26, (see Table II) since it includes all registered workers, (those without jobs, those with jobs, and unemployables) while the inventory count includes only those actually available for referral.

What is happening in Philadelphia is typical of other areas. When the supply of white labor is depleted or so picked over that only the least employable remain, reliance is placed on in-migration or importation of white workers, and the local supply of Negro labor is more or less ignored. Negroes are left to wait for openings in those occupations in which they are by custom accepted.

Meanwhile the concrete effects of the refusal to employ Negroes is manifest in (a) the perpetuation of a heavy relief load, disproportionately Negro, in spite of an unprecedented expansion of local job opportunities; (b) the stimulation of in-migration, a considerable part of which is unjustified and unnecessary at this stage of the expansion; and (c) an exodus of labor from the rural to the urban areas which depletes the supply of agricultural labor. In the event that heavy in-migration overtaxes the housing facilities in the area, rents will begin to rise, which will necessitate demands for higher wages to meet the rising cost of living. Moreover, the unnecessary in-migration will compel the government to make even greater expenditures for housing than would otherwise be necessary. It is factors such as these which stimulate inflation and raise the cost of the defense effort. In the future loom the complicated and difficult problems of demobilizing the labor force in the post-emergency period.

Baltimore

All that has been said about Philadelphia holds true in Baltimore, except that the continued failure to utilize local Negro labor makes the problems in this city even more serious. About 22 percent of gainful workers in 1930 were Negro (compared with 13.4 percent of gainful workers in Philadelphia) while 32 percent of the unemployed job seekers as of April 1940 were Negro (compared with 24.8 percent in Philadelphia). By April 1941, Negroes formed 34.3 percent of the registered unemployed in Baltimore (compared with 29.8 percent in Philadelphia). Among male registrants, the reserve upon which the greatest demand is being made by local industry, Negroes constituted 39 percent (compared with 29.9 percent), and among male registrants in the age group 21 to 44, Negroes formed 42 percent of the total (compared with 33 percent).

The reluctance of certain of the major Baltimore manufacturers engaged in defense production to employ Negro labor in any capacity not only has exaggerated the shortage of skilled and semiskilled workers, but has resulted in an acute shortage of white males suitable for training in the national defense vocational courses. It has been stated that there are few white male workers, except 1941 school graduates, available locally for the training courses, in spite of a local need for about 17,000 trainees. Nor can the situation be materially relieved by recruiting from the balance of the State, since Negroes form much the same proportion of the unemployed reserve throughout Maryland. In the face of this, certain Baltimore employers have been searching the country for workers, and negotiations have been undertaken with other States with a view to supplying trainees for Baltimore employers, or directing white workers to Baltimore to be trained there. In either case, unnecessary migration with the attendant problem of housing and other social consequences, will have been caused.

Faced with the dwindling supply of white male labor suitable for training, the vocational training authorities have established a few courses for Negroes, although there is no employer demand for colored trainees. About 100 were enrolled in these courses, but some of these courses were not related to any local defense needs. If Baltimore employers could be persuaded to accept Negro trainees, it is estimated that from 3,000 to 4,000 male Negroes under 45 years of age would be available in Maryland from among the unemployed labor reserve alone, which would reduce the necessity for migration from outside the State by perhaps one-fifth to one-quarter.

One of the major consequences of the failure to train locally available unemployed Negroes is that vocational training facilities have remained partially idle in spite of an urgent demand for trainees. Facilities for training between 1,000 and 2,000 additional trainees were available in Baltimore during the spring of 1940, but remained idle largely because of the shortage of white applicants.

Another consequence of the failure to use local Negroes, which has been noticed in the Baltimore area, is the increased rate of labor turnover. Workers in large numbers have been recruited from all over the country. As opportunities opened in or near their homes, many of these trainees have returned to their own localities. It is unnecessary to point out that the use of local labor would have materially reduced the rate of turnover, and the cost of "breaking in" these workers.

Training of Negroes for Defense Work

The difficulty in placing Negro labor, has, of course, affected the vocational training program. While Negroes form about 11 percent of the total force of gainful workers, and about 12 percent of the unemployed reserve, of 115,000 trainees in the preemployment and supplementary vocational courses established under the national defense program, in December 1940 only 1,900 or 1.6 percent were Negro. By March the training of Negroes was somewhat extended: of 175,000, about 4,600 or 2.6 percent were Negroes. 1/ However, the training courses which are established for Negroes frequently do not offer training in the occupations for which there is the greatest demand, but in those in which Negroes traditionally find employment. It is not uncommon to find that while the local demand calls for machine shop, sheet metal, riveting and welding trainees, the courses opened for Negroes are in woodworking, bricklaying, and auto servicing, which may or may not be in demand.

There is abundant evidence that many local authorities if they are not dissuading Negroes from enrolling in defense training courses, are not encouraging them to enroll, in spite of the provision of the supplementary Appropriations Bill, which established the national defense vocational training program, that > "No trainee under the foregoing appropriations shall be discriminated against because of sex, race, or color; and where separate schools are required by law for separate population groups, to the extent needed for trainees of each such group, equitable provision shall be made for facilities and training of like quality."

In their attempts to coordinate training with employers' demands, local training authorities have hesitated to use their limited facilities to train Negroes where employers would not hire them. More recently, in the face of threatened shortages of trainees, there has been some tendency to provide training for Negroes, with the expectation that employers will increasingly tend to relax their color specifications as the labor shortage becomes more acute. On the other hand, in some areas training facilities are not fully utilized because of the shortage of white applicants for training.

There are, however, some communities where Negroes are being encouraged to enroll in the vocational courses. In Philadelphia, for example, the vocational authorities, the WPA and the NYA all favor a policy of encouraging Negroes to train in defense occupations, in spite of current difficulties of placement.

1/ The national defense vocational training program includes many types of training other than preemployment and supplementary training. There are the CCC, NYA, OSY (Out of School Rural and Non-Rural Youth), the regular public school vocational program, apprenticeship programs, etc. In some of these, notably the CCC, NYA, and the OSY, the proportion of trainees who are Negro is higher.

In the failure to train Negroes, despite current placement difficulties, there is the greatest danger of dislocating the labor market and intensifying unnecessary migration. For the absence of available Negro trainees as the labor stringencies become more acute will inevitably drive employers to other areas in search of labor. If, however, a supply of trained Negro labor were to flow from the defense training courses, employers would be more and more inclined to use the local Negro supply, as their difficulties of recruiting in other areas mounted. 1/ The official policy of the Director of Defense Training of the Federal Security Agency, as laid down on June 18, calls for the training of Negroes even where there are no immediate employment opportunities, but where it is probable that their services will be used at a later date.

Effect of Failure to Use Negro Labor

It has been said that the refusal to employ Negro skilled and semiskilled labor in manufacturing cannot seriously retard defense production, since traditional discrimination has excluded Negroes from many trades and consequently there are relatively few skilled and semi-skilled Negroes available who are trained in the occupations most in demand. While it is true that only a relatively small proportion of skilled workers are Negroes (see Table V), in many instances that have come to the attention of the employment service the failure to employ those who are available has not been without its direct effect on the defense effort.

The situation in the foundry industry, so vital to national defense, has already been mentioned. A shortage of power sewing machine operators, needed to sew uniforms, would to a considerable extent be ameliorated if Negro operators were more widely employed. A Chicago plant manufacturing gas masks refused to hire Negro power sewing machine operators in spite of the fact that there were no white operators available. Meanwhile several hundred Negro operators registered with the Chicago employment service, many of them highly expert, continue to be unemployed. In spite of a shortage of machinists in Ohio, machine shops continue to refuse to consider Negro machinists recommended by the employment service, and the same is true in other States. Aircraft manufacturers continue to comb the country for skilled and semiskilled workers, but most of them will not hire locally available experienced or trained Negroes whom the employment service could supply in small numbers. A vocational training instructor in New York City stated that white junior trainees with limited mechanical aptitude were being hired by aircraft manufacturers, who had refused employment to better qualified Negro trainees.

1/ It has been suggested that because of the slow rate of Negro placement it would, perhaps, be wise to give Negroes a somewhat longer and more thorough training in the vocational courses, which would further increase their value in the eyes of the employers.

The Metal Trades Division of the New York City Employment Service has repeatedly reported that the color restriction was one of the factors tending "to create what is generally referred to as a shortage." Until about April Ohio reported that "there is no apparent increase in the hiring of skilled Negroes," but since April there has been a somewhat greater willingness on the part of some employers to hire Negro labor. Indiana reported that the shortage of labor in some sections has led employers to give consideration to the possibility of using Negro labor, but there has as yet been no considerable increase in Negro hiring. Connecticut has reported that there is only a limited industrial market for Negro labor, but more recently the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association's Committee on Employment Problems is urging that opportunities be given "young trained Negroes" to prove their capacity and fitness to serve in such occupations as they have been trained for. Delaware reported that, in spite of a shortage of skilled and semiskilled workers, "white jobs" continue to be exclusively reserved for white workers. Maryland continues to report a shortage of white workers suitable for training. A long list of instances such as these could be supplied from the experience of many employment offices.

It is clear that such discrimination tends to (1) retard production, (2) intensify the shortages of labor, (3) increase labor turnover, (4) contribute to the competition for labor, (5) cause unwarranted and unnecessary migration which is dislocating the labor market, and (6) accentuate the shortage of housing in certain areas (which in turn causes rents to rise, and compels government expenditure for defense housing). If discrimination continues, it is likely to cause training facilities in certain areas to stand idle or compel the government at considerable expense to move large numbers of trainees and maintain them during the training period. Each of these manifestations has already appeared. That they will become even more extensive as the defense program develops cannot be doubted. The employment of Negro labor will not, of course, solve these problems, but it will help minimize them.

It must be remembered that current restrictions fixed by a great many concerns (both defense and nondefense) are not only operating against Negroes, but against aliens, Mexicans, Orientals, (both foreign-born and native-born) and in many cases against naturalized and native-born persons of foreign-born parents (particularly German and Italian, although discrimination against other nationalities is also evident). Restrictions because of religion are also widespread. While the restrictions against any single group may not appear to be of great consequence, it is obvious that the cumulative effect of these restrictions can assume serious proportions. The number of unemployed Negroes and aliens alone is estimated at about one million, or from one-fifth to one-sixth of the currently unemployed labor reserve. It is already possible to foresee a time when the local reserve of employable male labor in many areas will consist largely of these minority groups. The growing interest of the government in restrictive practices, therefore, does not flow from a desire to use the defense program to solve social problems, but from the hard-headed and practical recognition that the failure to absorb the local unemployed in local jobs on a systematic basis will increasingly complicate the task of mobilizing the nation's labor reserve to serve industry. The time is not far off when, as a result of the increasing shortage of male labor, we shall observe the spectacle of local Negroes who should have been employed locally, being transferred to other areas to make up a deficiency of labor, caused, at least in part, by the exodus of white workers at an earlier stage of the expansion.

There are signs that the discrimination against Negroes is beginning to relax, but by and large the instances of relaxation are still isolated occurrences. Negroes are still regarded as a supplement to the supply of white labor rather than as an integral part of the labor reserve. If, in the end, employers will be compelled by circumstances to use Negro labor just as they were in the 1917-1918 emergency, it would be rational policy to use such labor as the need develops, rather than wait until acute shortage compels it. Only in this way can the destructive effects of discrimination be minimized. Even under ideal conditions the problem of mobilizing the labor force on an orderly basis is an enormous task; in the present emergency, no unnecessary restrictions on the use of the labor supply ought to be allowed to impede it.

Negroes

THE TRUTH ABOUT COLUMBIA TENNESSEE CASES

ON THE NIGHT OF Monday, February 25, 1946, the Negro citizens of Columbia, Tennessee, courageously prevented a lynching.

For this service to the community and the state, 100 of them were arrested. They were illegally held incommunicado for periods ranging from three to eight days. They were denied the right to communicate with friends on the outside to arrange bail and counsel. They were denied the constitutional right of being represented by counsel at the preliminary investigation. Many of them were cruelly beaten while in custody. Two were shot and killed inside the jail by officers of the law who were questioning them. At least 15 of them have been charged with assault with intent to commit murder and others with minor offenses.

The fair-minded citizens of Tennessee should be grateful to the Negroes of Columbia that there was no lynching on the night of February 25. We think they would be, if they could know the facts. But they cannot know the facts, because the incidents which brought on violence have been misrepresented, the story of the lynch mob and its attacks on the Negro community suppressed, the circumstances surrounding the shooting distorted, and race relations in our state poisoned by stories about a "race riot" which never took place.

That is why we are publishing this pamphlet, presenting the results of our own investigation, to tell the people of Tennessee what their officials will not tell them—the story of what really happened in Columbia.

CLARK H. FOREMAN, President
Southern Conference for Human Welfare

What Happened in Columbia

IT STARTED in the Casner-Knott radio repair shop at about 10:00 o'clock Monday morning. There was an argument between a Negro customer, Mrs. Gladys Stephenson, and the white repairman, Will Fleming. Mrs. Stephenson had had a repair job done and she claimed she had been cheated on the job. Fleming was angered that a Negro would dare make such an accusation against him, a white man. He struck and kicked Mrs. Stephenson.

The woman's son, James C. Stephenson, 19, was there and saw what happened to his mother. He was a young veteran, just returned from overseas service in the Navy. He had volunteered. He was not afraid to strike back when his country was attacked. And he was not afraid to strike back when his mother was attacked, even though it was a white man who did it. He struck the repairman. Fleming, in falling, struck and broke a plate glass window.

The repairman was not seriously hurt. Nevertheless the crowd drawn by the incident jumped on the young veteran and his mother and beat them up. One man stamped on Mrs. Stephenson's face after she was knocked down. When the police came they arrested the victims, but not the men who did the beating and kicking. Nor did they arrest Fleming, whose brother, Flo Fleming, is the Democratic Party nominee for sheriff of Maury County.

All afternoon the word went around the town that a mob was forming to lynch the Stephensons. A man bought a rope in a hardware store on the square. He told the clerk he was going to use it on a Negro that night and, if he didn't, he hoped someone would use it on him.

Late that afternoon, a Negro property holder made bond for the Stephensons, though the authorities advised him against it, saying there might be trouble. The bondsman was just in time.

Between 5:00 and 6:00 that afternoon an armed mob stormed the jail and tried to kick the door down. They told the sheriff they had come for the Stephensons. The young veteran and his mother were gone and some time that night fled to safety.

Angered at having their intended victims snatched away, the mob turned toward the Negro community. But there again they were frustrated.

They Remembered the Rope

If you don't know much about lynchings, you may wonder why the Negroes did not rely on the police to protect them from the mob. They didn't because they remembered how a Negro had been hanged from the courthouse window years ago—and how the county authorities had left the rope hanging there as a symbol and a warning and pointed it out proudly to visitors. They remembered that a mob had gone from Maury County to Nashville after 14-year-old Cordie Cheek and brought him back and lynched him—after the Grand Jury had found him innocent on rape charges. They remembered that Negroes had identified members of the mob that murdered Cordie Cheek—but they were never arrested. And they knew that the mob was milling on the courthouse square, less than two blocks from the heart of the Negro business section, and that it had not been disarmed or dispersed.

They Waited . . .

So they did the only thing that they could do, which was just what you or I would have done if we had been in their position. They retired to their homes, got out their guns, most of them ordinary hunting guns, some of them war trophies, and waited.

All that night armed men roamed the streets looking for a Negro to lynch. They did not find one, because the Negroes kept to their homes. They did not dare invade the Negro community, because they knew the Negroes would fight back. Some of them, however, drove past the section in automobiles, firing into Negro homes as they went by. It was these auto raiders, not the Negroes, who fired the first shots. Because of them, to keep from presenting an easy target, the Negroes turned out their lights.

Twice that night white persons who invaded the Negro area were peppered with birdshot and driven out. On one of those occasions, the four men who stopped birdshot were police officers. Of course, the Negroes, waiting in the dark for a mob attack and seeing these men approach, had no way of knowing that they were officers. And of course, too, no more than two or three men out of the whole Negro community had fired at all. But the Columbia police cared nothing for such considerations. Negroes had fired on officers; that was excuse enough for taking vengeance on the whole Negro community.

Mob in Uniform

They phoned the Governor for reinforcements. Gov. McCord sent in during the night more than 100 highway patrolmen and more than 400 troops of the state guard. These forces took no action against the lynch mob. Instead they threw a cordon around the tiny Negro business section where the shots had been fired. The cordon included armed civilians—members of the mob.

At dawn the law enforcement officials moved in. They arrested every Negro trapped in the surrounded area, whether there was any reason to connect him with the shooting or not. Large numbers of those arrested were veterans, some discharged so recently that they were still in uniform. After these men had been captured, disarmed and lined up, they were kicked and cursed and beaten with blackjacks, fists and guns.

It was the armed forces of the State of Tennessee who did the real rioting. They broke the windows of the buildings and sprayed the interiors with machine gun fire. At the Morton Funeral Home they poured embalming fluid over the expensive casket furnishings, smashed lighting fixtures, broke the reading lamp over the pulpit, and marked "KKK" on a coffin in huge letters. At the Blair drug store, they destroyed the soda fountain, looted the stock and stole money from the cash register. Juke boxes all down the street were jimmied open with bayonets to steal the nickels. At none of these places was there any resistance. Not a business establishment in the area escaped damage.

Blair Barber Shop after it was vandalized by the state patrolmen.

The newspapers have deliberately left the impression that 400 guns were found in this raid on the Negro business section. They were not. After the raid was over, deputies made a house-to-house search of every Negro residence in Columbia. They claim to have seized 400 guns from the homes of a Negro population of 3,000. In the outlying sections, where the mob had not come close, these guns were found in trunks and attics. They were such squirrel rifles and bird guns as could be found by raiding the same number of homes in any community, white or colored. The house-to-house search was conducted without regard to either the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of Tennessee, both of which contain provisions against search and seizure without warrants.

Incommunicado

Sixty-eight Negroes were arrested that day and, in the days that followed, the number grew to 100. All of them were held for days, some for more than a week, while a "board of investigation" sifted the evidence to decide which ones should be charged with crime. While they waited they were not permitted to make bond, nor to obtain counsel on their own behalf. Z. Alexander Looby, Negro attorney of Nashville, and Maurice Weaver, white attorney of Chattanooga, were employed for them by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Officials refused Weaver the right to see the prisoners and to be present when they were questioned.

Some of these prisoners, including women, were beaten inside the jail.

Murder in the Jail

On Thursday, February 28, two of these prisoners, William Gordon and James Johnson, were shot to death in the jail. The official explanation was that Gordon had grabbed a gun from the confiscated weapons stacked in the room and fired it, giving Deputy R. T. Darnell a slight flesh wound in the left arm. No one has explained why prisoners were in a room where there were loose guns lying around, nor why the prisoners could not be subdued without killing them, nor what methods of questioning were used which could drive helpless prisoners (against whom there were no serious charges) to so desperate and hopeless an extremity. The official attempts to explain how it was possible for a prisoner to have on hand the right kind of ammunition to load such a gun have been notably unconvincing.

The most charitable interpretation it is possible to put on the circumstances of this horrible killing makes the officers guilty of incredible negligence and stupidity—and of killing prisoners who could have been subdued without killing, which is a very serious criminal offense. The explanation which fits the facts better and is easier to believe is much uglier even than that—though it is an old story in Southern police dealings with Negro prisoners.

This picture shows the brutal treatment which accompanied the arrests.

The people of Columbia are not responsible for this outrage. The lynch mob was largely drawn from outlying rural communities. It was the state forces sent in from outside that organized the armed invasion and pillaging of the Negro business section. Even the killing in the jail was done by state officers.

Our Shame and Our Duty

The Columbia case is a shame to the state and the nation. The Columbia defendants have been ruthlessly hurt and hounded for the offense of preventing a lynching. They are under the threat of long prison terms, for the crime of defending their lives in the only way open to them. The way in which the officials involved and the newspapers have blown up these courageous and guiltless acts into a "race riot", with dark hints of a planned Negro uprising, is a ghastly travesty on both truth and fair play.

Protect the Constitution

The Columbia defendants have been subjected to wholesale violations of their civil rights under the federal and state constitutions. They have suffered arrests without warrant, searches without warrant, holding incommunicado, denial of bail, denial of counsel, destruction and looting of property, theft of money found in premises which were vandalized, denial of due process of law, denial of equal protection of law, beatings and third degree, and the unjustifiable slaying of two of their number.

Even if our consciences would let us stand by idly while these rights are denied to a minority, the experience of other countries has shown that we cannot afford to—lest these rights be so undermined that ultimately we lose them ourselves.

Negro Veteran: Test Case

The significance of this case goes far beyond the fate of the individuals involved. Cases of violence against Negroes have been increasing rapidly since the war ended and, almost always, it is Negro VETERANS who are attacked. These men fought for democracy and have come back expecting to share in it. The Klan-minded element, a tiny minority of the white population, is trying to throttle these just aspirations in the only way they know—with violence and murder. A new pattern of race relations is being worked out. It MUST NOT be the pattern launched at Columbia.

What You Can Do

You can help prevent that by letting the Governor of Tennessee know that you do not want state forces used as substitutes for a lynch mob. You can help by demanding that the federal government intervene to protect civil rights when they are violated by state and local officials. You can help by contributing money toward the defense of the brave men on trial at Columbia.

In doing so, you will help to offset the harm which the Columbia case has already done to peaceful relations between the races. You will be keeping faith with the Negro and white veterans who fought side by side for democracy and the rights of minorities. You will be keeping faith with the soldiers of all races, colors and creeds who died side by side for the same cause.

LET'S SPREAD THE FACTS

We know you will agree with us that THE TRUTH ABOUT COLUMBIA must be told—as widely as possible—to protect innocent men from persecution and to prevent the recurrence of such tragedies throughout the nation.

We therefore appeal to you to help distribute this pamphlet in the thousands, to your friends and through your organizations. Prices are 1c each, $1 per hundred, $7.50 per thousand.

- -

ORDER NOW

Southern Conference for Human Welfare
212½ Union Street, Nashville 3, Tennessee

I ENCLOSE $.....FOR.....COPIES OF THE TRUTH ABOUT COLUMBIA.

Send to: Name.....

Address.....

.....

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE
FOR HUMAN WELFARE

FOUNDED IN 1938. "TO IMPROVE THE ECONOMIC, SOCIAL, SPIRITUAL AND CULTURAL CONDITIONS OF THE PEOPLE OF THE SOUTH WITHOUT REGARD TO RACE, CREED OR COLOR."

212½ UNION STREET
NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

Segregation On Common Carriers

By James Wallace

PUBLIC AFFAIRS PAMPHLET No. 128

OUR NEGRO VETERANS

BY CHARLES G. BOLTÉ AND LOUIS HARRIS

Negroes

Jewish Contributions to Negro Welfare

Themselves age-old victims of discrimination, Jews have always been acutely sensitive to the plight of other oppressed minorities. In America, as far back as the early part of the 19th century, they have shown a marked interest in the welfare of all other minority groups and a desire to help eliminate injustices against these countrymen. Indicative of this attitude has been the contribution of American Jews to the well-being of the Negro.

This report is an attempt to cite several such outstanding and recorded contributions to the civic, economic, educational, and social welfare of the colored people. It does not evaluate these benefactions, nor does it lay claim to completeness. It is based almost entirely upon the information culled from the bibliography attached to this report.

* * * * * *

The earliest recorded instance of Jewish effort in behalf of Negroes dates back to the opening decades of the 19th century. Judah Touro, a prominent Jewish resident of New Orleans, the nerve center of early slave traffic, was opposed to the scenes of enslavement which he saw about him. Emancipating his own personal servant, he not only trained him for business, but furnished him with money and valuable advice in business affairs. He also made possible the freeing of the slaves owned by a friend with whom he made his home, training them and furnishing them too with money to establish themselves. In all his benefactions -- hospitals, orphanages, etc. -- the underlying condition always was that no discrimination be made on account of race or creed.

Also violently anti-slavery were the German Jewish immigrants of 1848 who had but a short time back witnessed the inhumanity of oppression in their native land. They were very active in the "underground railway" and gave many champions to the abolitionist cause. Among them were:

a) Sabato Morais, of Philadelphia, and Rabbi Bernhard Felsenthal and Liebman Adler, of Chicago, who preached against slavery;

b) Rabbi David Einhorn, of Baltimore, who was compelled to give up his ministry because of his anti-slavery sentiments;

c) Michael Heilprin, a writer, who converted many leaders to abolition by his brilliant articles in the New York Tribune;

d) Leopold Blumenberg, of Baltimore, only seven years in the United States, who left a good business to organize the 5th Maryland Regiment of which he became major. He goaded neighboring secessionists by his anti-slavery activities and one night barely escaped being lynched by them.

Jews also aided materially in founding and supporting the anti-slavery Republican Party. Several were delegates to the convention which nominated Lincoln.

In modern times, the record of Jewish benefactions is more extensive and much more impressive. Many Jews have devoted much time and energy to the alleviation of Negro suffering and the elimination of injustice. In the defense of Negro rights, for instance, the extent of Jewish participation has been so great as to call forth the praise of Negro groups and the resentment of un-democratic groups in the South.

Following the race riots in 1908, a Kentuckian white, William English Walling, called for a body of citizens to come forward and defend the citizenship rights of American Negroes. Fifty distinguished Americans of all faiths and creeds affixed their signatures to the call. Among these were several prominent Jews: Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch of Chicago, Dr. Henry Moskowitz of New York, and Lillian D. Wald, pioneer settlement worker. This was the beginning of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People -- an organization which still functions at the present time.

Since 1908, many Jews have been actively engaged in the important civic-protective work of the N.A.A.C.P. Most noteworthy among them have been the Spingarn brothers, Arthur and Joel Elias. A professor at Columbia University, Joel E. Spingarn was president of the organization for almost ten years -- from 1930 to July 1939. At various times, he also held the positions of treasurer and chairman of the National Board of Directors. Upon his death in 1939, he was succeeded by his brother, Arthur Spingarn, who still retains that post. Author of The Negro and the War and Introduction to the African Saga, the incumbent president, who has been practicing law in New York City since 1900, formerly held the positions of chairman of the National Legal Committee and vice-president of the organization. When, in 1910, it became popular in the Southern communities to attempt to prescribe by law the places where colored people might and might not live, he carried the fight against this action to the highest court in the land, the U. S. Supreme Court, contesting its constitutionality. He won his case. In this particular phase of the organization's work, he was aided by another Jewish member of the Board of Directors and outstanding communal leader, Louis Marshall. Marshall appeared at Washington on various occasions to argue before the Supreme Court cases regarding the civil rights of Negroes, to whom he frequently gave counsel. He represented the N.A.A.C.P. before the Supreme Court in the famous Texas "white primary" case. The case arose out of passage by the Texas legislature of a law specifically excluding Negro citizens from democratic primaries in that state. In March, 1927, he won his case when the Court handed down a unanimous decision declaring the law unconstitutional. Marshall also supervised the legal action in the Virginia "white primary" case, which the N.A.A.C.P. carried before the High Court in 1929 and won. His efforts in behalf of colored people were recognized and appreciated when he was invited as guest speaker to the annual convention of the National Association in 1927. After his death the following tribute was paid to him in the foreword to the 20th annual report of the organization:

"The deaths during 1929 of the Association's two greatest legal champions, Moorfield Storey [non-Jew] and Louis Marshall, were staggering blows and the unique positions they occupied cannot be filled."

A tablet bearing the following inscription was also erected in the Temple Emanu-El in New York City by the Association:

In Memory
of
Louis Marshall

Who, believing that justice should know no color line, fought valiantly for the rights of the Negro. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People thus records its gratitude.

As in the normal life of any group, new leaders must be ready to take up the work of the departed. In the N.A.A.C.P., three able men -- all Jews -- filled the places of Moorfield Storey and Louis Marshall on the National Board of Directors. They were the then Lieutenant-Governor Herbert H. Lehman, Professor Felix Frankfurter, now Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, and James Marshall, son of Louis Marshall. Other past and present names connected with the Association have been:

a) Lillian D. Wald, one of the organizers and member of the Board of Directors in the 20's;

b) Herbert J. Seligman, Director of Publicity from 1921 to 1931 and one of the founders of the Urban League which attempts to ameliorate conditions among Negroes in urban communities;

c) Morris L. Ernst, Charles H. Studin, Benjamin Kaplan, and Arthur Garfield Hays -- all members of the Legal Committee of the Association.

There were other outstanding Jews who aided in the legal and civic defense of the colored people, but who were not affiliated with the N.A.A.C.P. It was Aaron Levy, a member of the New York Legislature in 1913, who introduced and succeeded in putting through the New York Levy Civil Rights Law, guaranteeing equal accommodations regardless of race, creed, or color. The late Judge Joseph B. David of Chicago resigned from the American Bar Association in 1909 because it refused to admit William H. Lewis, then assistant attorney-general of the United States and brilliant young Negro lawyer. Chief counsel in the fight to free the Scottsboro boys, sentenced to death by a hostile Alabama jury in 1931 on charges of rape, was Samuel Leibowitz, now Kings County Judge. Chosen by the International Labor Defense, he gladly gave his services without charge and helped in obtaining a reversal of the verdict. Jacob H. Schiff, outstanding Jewish philanthropist and communal leader, held a strong sympathy for the Negro and spoke in defense of his rights on various occasions. In the early part of the Wilson administration, he wrote to the President, protesting against the segregation of colored employees in the government departments at Washington. Though he was not a leader in the movement for equal educational opportunities for Negroes, he gave it his financial and moral support.

Instances of Jewish recognition of Negro talents are numerous. Only a few are listed. Joseph Schenck, the motion picture magnate, asked a Negro architect, Paul Williams of Los Angeles, to design his residence in California. Gimbel Brothers had the same architect design the Saks Fifth Avenue Store in Los Angeles. Benny Goodman pioneered and broke the custom of segregation by putting four Negroes in his nationally celebrated orchestra. Melvin Charlton, a Negro, has been pipe organist for over 25 years in a Synagogue in New York.

While on the subject of equality, it is worth noting that as recently as February 8, 1942, in a special message on the observance of Race Relations Week, the Commission on Justice and Peace of the Central Conference of American Rabbis issued a plea to men and women of all faiths to help eliminate the barriers standing in the way of Negro equality with other peoples and races in this country.

The Rosenwald Benefactions

It is a known fact that in his slow but steady rise from the low level of pre-Civil War enslavement, the Negro has made more progress in education than in any other field. He has given American culture and progress many scientists, educators, authors, and a host of other professional men. In this connection, it should be remembered that much of the impetus for his rapid strides along these lines was derived from the activities and benefactions of Jews. By far the outstanding contributor to the educational and general welfare of the colored people was Julius Rosenwald, creator of the Rosenwald Fund in 1917 for the betterment of race relations and the furtherance of education.

It is said that the men best known to the Negro in the South are Abraham Lincoln, Booker T. Washington, and Julius Rosenwald, or "Cap'n Jule," as he was affectionately called. Rosenwald, until his demise in 1932, was perhaps the foremost material benefactor the American Negro has ever known. The following quotation from the December 1926 issue of The Crisis, monthly publication of the N.A.A.C.P., best characterizes the regard in which he was held and the quality of his devotion to Negro problems:

"One of the outstanding developments in the U. S. is the work which one American citizen is doing for Negro education to balance the refusal and neglect of the South in furnishing school-houses for colored children. It is doubtful if a parallel case can be found in modern history, certainly not in the history of a so-called great and rich republic. Mr. Rosenwald's interest in Negro school-houses is a monument to the late Booker T. Washington..."

The first gift of any size made by Rosenwald was for the benefit of Negroes. In the spring of 1910, the Chicago Young Men's Christian Association, during a canvass to raise $1,000,000, approached Julius Rosenwald for a subscription. His first question was whether some of the proceeds would go towards a building for colored men, and on being informed that no such plan had been formulated, stated that he would contribute $25,000 only when the Association was ready to undertake the project. Encouraged by Rosenwald's offer, the Chicago Y.M.C.A. undertook to raise a fund of $100,000 for such a building. It was Rosenwald's instigation and initial contribution of $25,000 which resulted in a modern building costing nearly $200,000. At a later luncheon with Dr. J. E. Moorland, one of the colored International Secretaries of the Y.M.C.A., Rosenwald offered to duplicate his Chicago offer to any city in the United States within the course of the next ten years. That is, he was willing to contribute $25,000 to any city that raised $75,000 towards a Y.M.C.A. building for colored men. As a result, 20 such buildings were established for Negroes in 18 cities.

In 1912, Rosenwald took his first party to visit Tuskegee Institute. He and his family spent the night in the home of Booker T. Washington, then president of the institution, and a warm friendship developed between the two men which lasted until Washington's death three years later. It was at this first visit that the Jewish philanthropist made an initial donation of $25,000 to the Negro educator for the improvement of Negro education in the South. He became a trustee of Tuskegee at the same time -- a charge he held until his death in 1932, and subsequently held by his son William Rosenwald.

As a development of his own personal philanthropies, the Rosenwald Fund was established in 1917. The first, greatest, and most characteristic activity of the Fund has been its cooperation with Southern states and local districts in building schoolhouses for Negroes. From 1913, four years before the creation of the Fund which carried on this work until 1932, Rosenwald and the Fund spent over five million dollars towards the erection of schoolhouses which would be recognized as regular units of the public school system in the South. The Rosenwald contribution did not cover the entire cost of this tremendous building program. His gifts, however, stimulated more than six times his amount from public tax funds and voluntary contributions from whites and Negroes, which together with his own gift met the cost of the project. The project included 4,977 schoolhouses, 217 teachers' homes, 163 workshops, and many supplementary features, such as shop equipment, libraries, etc. The schools had a teacher capacity of 14,747 teachers and a pupil capacity of 663,615. They represented an investment almost twice as great as the value of all Negro public schools standing in those 15 Southern states when the work was started in 1913.

The following is a list of other contributions by Rosenwald and the Fund to Negro Welfare until 1936:

a) Contributions to Negro University programs.....$1,276,508

b) Grants to Negro colleges and high schools..... 822,083

c) Negro fellowships and scholarships..... 437,615

d) Grants to hospitals for Negro care, including grants to 14 Negro hospitals offering training opportunities for Negro medical students and nurses and a substantial sum towards the maintenance of the Provident Hospital and Training School as an affiliated unit of the University of Chicago Medical School..... 857,507

e) Other Negro activities, including the erection in 1929 of the Michigan Boulevard Garden Apartments for Negroes in Chicago -- one of the first low-cost housing projects..... $257,860

From 1936 until 1940, the Rosenwald Fund, under the chairmanship of Lessing J. Rosenwald, donated approximately another one and a half million dollars to Negro universities, fellowships, health, and race relations.

The efforts of other Jewish foundations and individuals may appear pale in the light of the above sums. They are not to be disregarded, however, for each in its own way has served a valuable function. Among the foundations established by Jews for non-sectarian purposes, from which the Negro too has benefited, are: the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation, which grants fellowships for general research; the New York Foundation, which maintains charitable and educational institutions; and the Samuel S. Fels Foundation, contributing to the prevention of crime and the training of youth for good citizenship. Governor Herbert H. Lehman contributes annually to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and is one of its life-time members. Abraham Flexner, one of the pioneers in modern medical education in the United States, when connected with the General Education Board, showed much interest in the social and educational problems of the Negro and interested many other non-Jewish philanthropists in them.

One other contribution should be added to the list, and that is, the Spingarn Medal. Donated in 1914 by Joel E. Spingarn, subsequent president of the N.A.A.C.P., the medal has been awarded yearly at the convention of the Association to the "black American citizen who shall be judged to have made in any year or years the highest achievement in any field of human endeavor." The will of Joel Spingarn in 1939 established a trust fund of $20,000 for the perpetuation of the medal. So high is the regard among colored people for the purpose of this award that it has been considered one of the factors which have made for a cultural renascence among American Negroes. (See The Crisis, August 1926, p. 181)

Some of the recipients of the Spingarn Medal have been: Professor E. E. Just, head of the department of physiology at Howard University Medical School; William E. B. DuBois, noted editor and author; George Washington Carver, the "wizard" chemist and head of the research department at Tuskegee Institute, and Robert Russa Moton, president of Tuskegee. The 1942 medal has already been announced, and the award will be presented in July 1942 to A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Union of Sleeping Car Porters.

H.C.
2/27/42

BIBLIOGRAPHY TO ACCOMPANY SOURCES USED IN MEMORANDUM

ADLER, Cyrus. Jacob H. Schiff; his life and letters. Garden City, N.Y., Doubleday, 1929. 2v.
v. 1, p. 314-18.

CENTRAL Conference of American Rabbis. Commission on Justice and Peace. Justice for the negro. Cincinnati, The Conference, 1942, 2 p.
Copies may be obtained by applying to Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman, St. Louis, Mo.

FLEXNER, Abraham. I remember. New York, Simon and Schuster, 1940. 414 p.
Chapters 14-16.

"JULIUS Rosenwald Fund." (In Crisis, v. 32, p. 79-80, December 1926)

JULIUS Rosenwald Fund. Reports. Chicago, The Fund, 1918-1941.
See especially 1936 and 1938 reports.

LEVINGER, Lee J. A history of the Jews in the United States. Cincinnati, Dept. of Synagogue and School Extension of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, 1935. 570 p.

NATIONAL Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Annual reports. New York, The Association, 1910-1941.

-- The Crisis. New York, Crisis Pub. Co., 1910-1942. Monthly.

-- NAACP Bulletin. New York, The Association, 1941-1942.
See also miscellaneous publications of the Association.

NEGRO year book. Tuskegee Institute, Ala., Negro Year Book Pub. Co., 1912-1942. See 1939 issue.

OVINGTON, Mary White. How the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People began. New York, The Association, 1939. 5 p.

SPINGARN, Arthur B. "A dangerous decision." (In American Hebrew, v. 115, no. 24, p. 756, October 24, 1924)

WERNER, Morris R. Julius Rosenwald. New York, Harper, 1939. 381 p.
Chapter 5, pt. 1.

Negroes

The Negro

His Future in America

A Special Section

THE NEW REPUBLIC

October 18, 1943 In two parts: Part Two

The National Council of NEGRO WOMEN

The National Council of Negro Women, Incorporated, was organized in December, 1935, as a non-partisan organization by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune and a group of women who realized the need for united and coöperative group action among Negro women. It is affiliated with the National Council of Women of the United States and, through this affiliation, with the International Council of Women of the World.

The National Council faces now the problems confronting six and a half million American Negro women and realizes as never before that our various racial groups must achieve a united front at home if democracy in action and practice is to be made effective in America and throughout the world.

Purposes

To disseminate information on the joint activities of Negro and white women and on those issues that vitally affect the lives of Negro women. To interpret the problems, the needs and aspirations of Negro women to themselves and to the community. To educate Negro women for, and to stimulate them to take full advantage of, all democratic rights and privileges. To build good will and mutual understanding through programs designed to promote better intra-racial, interracial, and international relations.

The National Council of Negro Women maintains regular contacts with Negro women in communities throughout the country by its national affiliates and their local branches organized into Metropolitan Councils. It embraces organizations from church, fraternal, industrial, professional, educational, and civic groups. Its membership is open to any woman who joins in its purposes and supports its activities.

Program

The National Council's general program covers public affairs, youth, family life, employment, religion, consumer education, etc. However, our major emphasis for 1944 will be as follows:

1. Wartime Employment Clinics: Jobs

Tens of thousands of Negro women for the first time in American history have, as a result of the war, been drawn into employment in many new occupations. This presents a crucial problem not only for the individual worker and employer, but for the community as a whole. Employers and employees alike are groping for ways in which to adjust themselves to these new conditions and relationships. Our Wartime employment Clinics are designed to help the worker, employer, and the community solve their common problems, both during the war and after.

2. Full Citizenship: Votes

Not since 1860 have the American people faced such a crucial election year as 1944. The ballot is the most powerful means by which the will of the people can be expressed. The National Council of Negro Women will use every resource at its command to have Negro women register and vote. At the same time it will educate Negro women voters to the intelligent use of their vote, so that national, state and local governmental programs will reflect the needs and aspirations of America's fourteen million Negroes. It will lend its whole strength to gain the full and free use of the ballot for every citizen and to eliminate every restriction to a complete participation in American life.

3. Interracial Good Will

These war years have brought home to all Americans the need of working together. But national unity is constantly under attack both by our enemies without and within. Irresponsible rumors, deliberate falsehoods, race prejudices—all methods of creating race conflict—are among the powerful weapons used by the Axis enemy.

The awakening Negro woman recognizes that she can take her place in American life only by joining hands with all citizens who are dedicated to the fight for democracy. To this end, the National Council works with every group to further the principle of mutual understanding and good will. Only through national unity and interracial good will can our nation wage a victorious war and build a lasting peace.

